Frigidity Causes 600 Snow Shovelers to Quit Work.

Low Temperature Diminishes the Gas Supply in Toledo.

TOWN OUT OF COAL, IN STORM

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 1.—A telegram from Aberdeen, Sask., on the Grand Trunk Pacific, says: "The worst storm of the season is raging and the town is completely out of coal. Traffic is also blockaded."

It is believed here that a number of places in that region are similarly affected, as the Grand Trunk Pacific has not run a train over that portion of its line for three weeks, owing to snow blockades.

New York, Feb. 1.—Swept by a biting northwest wind, New York city today experienced the coldest weather of the winter. With the temperature in some portions at zero, just before daylight, and the official thermometer on the weather bureau registering 5 degs. above zero, the suffering of the homeless during the night was intense.

Two thousand applicants for food and coffee were lined up at the Bowery mission during the night, which was the largest number fed at that place thus far this winter. In addition, 318 persons, including women, were given shelter at the city lodging house, and the pier of the charities' department, at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street. The street cleaning department had 800 men at work removing the snow during the night, but when the cold became intense, the men suffered so greatly that the work was discontinued.

Fifteen families were driven from their homes in a tenement house in East Seventy-seventh street by a fire today. Policemen, whose pity was excited by their sufferings from the cold, went through the adjoining houses in search of neighbors who would give them shelter.

The cold is general throughout the state. At points in the Adirondacks the mercury was as low as 32 degs. below zero, while in Central and Western New York the temperature was from 3 to 5 degs. below, with 15 to 20 below

BURNS IN FIERCE COLD

Firemen Are Frost-Bitten in Waging Valiant Fight.

Schenectady, N. Y., Feb. 1.—The Central Arcade, consisting of twenty stores on the ground floor and offices, society rooms and a printing plant above, was destroyed by fire early today. Two alarms were turned in shortly after 4, calling the entire department. The building is located between the New York Central tracks and the Erie canal and extends from Union to Liberty streets. There was no adjacent structures and therefore the fire did not spread beyond the building in which it started.

The building was worth over $100,000 and was partly insured. The stock in the various stores is a total loss and as yet no accurate estimate can be made, though it will reach over $50,000.

The Central Arcade was formerly the Clute Brothers' machine shop, where the famous United States Monitor, which defeated the Merrimac in Hampton Roads during the Civil war, was built.

The firemen fought the flames valiantly with the mercury several degrees below zero, and several were frost bitten.

HANDS AND FEET FROZEN, HE CRAWLS FOR SEVEN MILES

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 1.—Gust Johnson, a Finnish coal miner from Roslyn, Wash., was brought last night from Valley, Neb., to the county hospital here, suffering from frozen hands and feet. He slept in a hay stack during the blizzard Thursday night and next morning was so badly frozen he could not walk. He remained in the stack until Saturday, when he crawled on his hands and knees to Valley, seven miles. It is thought that one hand and one foot will have to be amputated.

BODY FOUND UNDER DOCK

Not Known Whether It Was Murder or Suicide.

The body of James Hargenson was found under Missabe Ore Dock No. 4, Thirty-ninth avenue west, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. His throat had been slashed several times with a knife. The case may have been either one of murder or of suicide. The police incline to the former theory, and Coroner McCuen to the latter. An inquest will be held this afternoon or tomorrow morning in an attempt to determine the cause of death.

Evidently the body had been lying at the spot found for several days. It was discovered by Mrs. Richard Mecklerbergh, 3224 Railroad street, as she was taking a short cut from her home to the house of a neighbor. She ran and told her husband, who reported the find to the police.

The corpse was partly covered with snow, and there were no tracks in the snow around it, indicating that it had been lying there since before the blizzard. The dead man appears to have been about 25 years of age. He was dressed in a lightweight black coat, a heavy woolen shirt, gray trousers, a heavy suit of winter underwear, two pairs of woolen socks, a pair of

SECRET WORK IN THE NAVY, ALSO

Washington, Feb. 1.—During the cruise of the battleship fleet, $12,301 was required for entertainment purposes, of which $4,801 was used during the cruise to San Francisco and the remainder was allotted for the return cruise to the East coast of the United States.

Other expenses which have been met out of the naval contingent fund include $1,666 for "salaries and expenses of secret operatives."

BILLEK EXPECTS A FULL PARDON

Respited From Gallows, He Enters the Joliet Pen.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 1.—Herman Billek, after two years' imprisonment in the county jail, in which he has been respited from death on the gallows, was taken to the Joliet pen today to begin a term of imprisonment for the murder of Mary Vrzal.

It was the first time in two years that Billek had been outside the jail walls. He expressed confidence before his departure that he soon would receive a complete pardon.

CHEERS FOR ESKIMO BOY

Expects to Work Later Among His Own People.

New York, Feb. 1.—Mene Wallace, the full blooded Eskimo boy who was brought to the United States twelve years ago by Commander Peary, was heartily cheered today by a big crowd of students on the campus of Manhattan college when he appeared to enter the preparatory class of the institution.

He has been granted a scholarship, but said today that he expected to earn his own living expenses by outside work.

His ambition is to return to his native land and help his people, and he will take up practical rather than academic work with that end in view.

His studies will be preparatory for entrance of the degree of civil engineer.

WANT THEM KEPT OUT

Foraker Tries to Have Aldrich's Substitute Bill Considered.

Washington, Feb. 1.—When the senate met today great interest was manifested in the outcome of Mr. Foraker's effort to have a day fixed for consideration of Mr. Aldrich's substitute bill providing for a court of inquiry to determine which of the discharged soldiers of the Twenty-fifth regiment of infantry should be reenlisted.

On the Democratic side there was united opposition to the passage of any measure looking to the re-enlistment of the negro soldiers. Democrats expressed the view that as several investigations have resulted in a failure to determine who are the guilty men in the regiment, although it was found that men of the regiment "shot up" Brownsville, it would be manifestly impossible for any court of inquiry to act intelligently on the subject unless additional evidence should be obtained.

As a consequence of the united Democratic opposition to any legislation at this session it was evident that there would be much skirmishing to delay a vote. On the Republican side

TWO HUNDRED LIVES ARE LOST

Canton, Feb. 1.—At least 200 lives were lost in a fire which occurred in a float of flower boats.

The charred bodies of 170 victims have already been recovered, but many persons are still missing.

NEW APPOINTEE MEETS REFUSAL

Harmon's Railroad Commissioner Is Opposed by Harris' Man.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 1.—John Sullivan of Hamilton, Governor Harmon's appointee to the state railroad commissionership, was sworn in today by Capt. Julius Armstrong of the adjutant general's office. He demanded possession of the office from J. C. Morris of Youngstown, the appointee of ex-Governor Harris, but Morris refused to vacate.

Sullivan said he would bring quo warranto proceedings.

MINERS IN A SQUABBLE

Man Who Denounces Lewis Is Forced to Desist.

Row Over Suspension of Van Horn and Associates.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 1.—The fortunes of war were with the administration party when the third week of the convention of the United Mine Workers of America opened today. The assembly was more turbulent than ever, but there was manifested among the delegates a determination to proceed to business without further controversies.

John Walker of Illinois attemped to take up where he left off Saturday, his denunciation of the action of President Lewis and the international officers of District No. 11, Indiana, for having disobeyed their mandates. A motion to extend the time of debate in favor of Mr. Walker was lost amid cheers, and he had to take his seat.

SECTION HAND IS NOW PRESIDENT

New York, Feb. 1.—William C. Brown, who began his railroad career forty years ago as a section hand on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul at $1 a day, today became president of the great system of railroads of which the New York Central is the chief line.

Mr. Brown was formerly vice president of the New York Central and was elected to the presidency Jan. 6 to succeed William H. Newman. He stepped into his office today without inaugurating any changes affecting the personnel of the road.

Owing to his recent announcement that the New York Central will expend on improvements in the next twenty years a sum of money equal to the original cost of the road and because of the presence of E. H. Harriman on the board of directors, the future course of the New York Central will be watched with interest by railroad men.

FIRE VICTIMS GO HALF MILE IN SNOW IN NIGHT CLOTHES

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 1.—The home of Nathaniel Workman in Bath county has been destroyed by fire, and two of his children, aged 9 and 7 were cremated. Workman and his wife were forced to go half a mile through snow and ice in their night clothes before refuge was found.

THEY INSIST ON FIGURES

Wisconsin Legislators Still Withhold Support From Stephenson.

Failure to File Expense Account Loses Him Votes.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 1.—Strong pressure is being brought to bear for and against the re-election of Senator Isaac Stephenson when the two legislative branches meet in joint assembly tomorrow noon. The primary investigation resolution which has not yet been disposed of is the cause of a number of the members withholding their support from Stephenson. The fact, too, that the senator has not filed his election expense account is costing him some votes.

It is believed if the legislature does not elect a United States senator tomorrow, the election will be delayed until after an investigation of the senatorial primary is made.

Some kind of action on the investigation resolution probably will be taken by the senate tomorrow, and it is likely the measure will be referred to a conference committee of both houss.

WIFE OF JUROR WITHDRAWS PLEA

Cooper Case Further Delayed by Issue Over Whitworth.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 1.—With deputies summoning a new venire of 500 to complete the jury that will try Col. Duncan Cooper, Robin Cooper and John D. Sharpe for the murder of Former Senator Carmack, Judge Hart today considered the request that Juror J. M. Whitworth be disqualified because of ill health.

The judge announced that he had another letter, the third, from the wife of Juror Whitworth and that this differs from the initial message that caused the institution of the present proceedings, Mrs. Whitworth withdrawing her demand that her husband be excused. She explained that she was "unnecessarily alarmed" by reading that a physician had been called to attend a juror and that, "without investigating" she had written the original letter asking for his discharge.

A recess was granted in order that the attorneys on both sides might examine the letter.

TROOPS SENT TO END OPIUM RIOTS, LEAVE.

Amoy, China, Feb. 1.—The troops which were sent to quell the opium riots in the Tungan district some time ago, have been withdrawn and the better class of inhabitants is returning to the villages. All efforts to arrest the leaders of the riot were unsuccessful. The trouble followed the announcement of an edict prohibiting the cultivation of opium poppies.

Panama, Feb. 1.—The charges made in the American congress recently by Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, against Domingo de Obaldia, president of Panama, and others, have brought out denials from the president and sixteen members of the national assembly.

The assemblymen have signed a statement asserting they were present at a meeting in the president's office where the contract for the exploitation of the timber industry along the Atlantic coast of Panama was discussed and that during the meeting neither President Obaldia nor anyone else said or implied that Charles P. Taft, William Nelson Cromwell or Roger L. Farnham had any direct or indirect participation in the business.

Among those signing the statement are Dr. Pablo Arosemena, Julio Febregar and other prominent opposition leaders of assembly. Concerning some of the charges President Obaldia gives out the following for publication:

"My attitude while in the Columbian congress of 1903 and my entire public life are beyond the reach of slanderers. The Amador-Arias government was not overthrown, but after the expiration of its constitutional term it was defeated in a free election.

"At the meeting in my office neither Mr. Ehrman nor any outsiders was present and no mention was made of Charles P. Taft, William Nelson Cromwell or Roger L. Farnham. The railway proposal was presented to the assembly by a Mr. Ward and was rejected. The assembly then enacted a law, authorizing the construction of a railway with national funds to become national property. Mr. Ehrman's timber contract also was rejected by the assembly, where a bill is now being discussed, regulating the foreign expleitation on the Atlantic coast between the river Conceptcion and Costa

FIVE-CENT FARE AGAIN

Cleveland Returns to the Old Street Car Ride Price.

Order of Federal Court Is Put Into Effect.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 1.—In accordance with instructions recently issued by Judge Taylor of the federal court to the receivers of the street railway system, the rate of fare was increased this morning on all lines except those where the franchises specifically provided that a rate of not more than 3 cents shall be charged.

Approximately two-thirds of the street car patrons are today paying a straight 5-cent fare, or eleven tickets for 50 cents.

Patrons of the 3-cent fare lines are compelled to pay 2 cents for a transfer, while passengers paying the regular 5-cent fare obtain free transfers to any line in the city.

Judge Taylor ordered the rate of fare increased because of the inability of the company to pay running expenses and to liquidate accumulated debts under the 3-cent fare, which rate has been effective on all lines in the city since April 29.

Culebra, Panama, Feb. 1.—William H. Taft and the engineers accompanying him, reached here from Panama today and made an examination of the fourteen miles of the Culebra cut.

The fact that the plans of the lock and dam at Gatun are satisfactory to the visiting engineers has created a local feeling of optimism, and the fears of delay in the completion of the work have been relieved.

The Clan Ranald was struck by a heavy sea and rendered unmanageable. Being driven ashore, she turned turtle.

Ten Days Overdue.

CARRIES CRUCIFIX TO ELECTROCUTION

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Salvatore Governale was put to death in an electric chair at Sing Sing prison today for the murder of two New York city policemen, George M. Sechler and Albert A. Silleck, April 14 last. The double murder followed a fight in Washington Square park, during which Governale fired a revolver at a fellow countryman. The policemen interfered and chased Governale into a hallway, from which he killed them.

Governale was brought into the death chamber accompanied by an Italian priest, and Dr. C. V. Mahoney of St. Augustine's Roman Catholic church of Ossining. The condemned man carried a crucifix and as he walked to the chair he repeated the prayer for the dying.

TAX MONEY IS DIVIDED

First Apportionment of Money Received Under New Law Made.

St. Louis county borrowers of money on real estate morgages have paid under the mortgage tax law since it became effective April 30, 1907, $38,467.70. Ostensibly, the money is paid by the person registering the mortgage. Under the surface, the provisions of the act allow the cost of registering to be added to the borrower's account and St. Louis county borrowers have paid heavy toll under the law.

The first apportionment of the taxes collected under the mortgage tax law has been made by the county auditor's office. The apportionment is supposed to be made yearly, but it has been delayed since the law became effective pending the decision of the supreme court as to the constitutionality of the law. Now that the supreme court has declared the act constitutional, the county auditor is safe in delivering the receipts from mortgage registrations to the different communities of the county.

The apportionment is made on the same basis as the apportionment of real estate taxes. As Duluth property is more heavily mortgaged than that of the outside communities, the city gets the biggest slice of the amount, receiving $12,832.62. The state receives $4,872.54 and the county $8,647.55. Cities and villages outside of the city of Duluth receive $1,694.57 and the towns $1,059.31. The independent school district of the city is given $10,349.57 and the other school districts of the county receive $4,011.54.

The mortgage tax law was passed at the 1907 session of the state legislature and an effort is being made at the present session, either to change it so that the burden will fall on the lender instead of the borrower, or to repeal it entirely. The tax is 50 cents on each $100 of principal named in the mortgage.

MAKE SOME CHANGES

Happenings Among Several of the Local Wholesale Houses.

Inventory Work Completed and Salesmen Working Territories.

Several changes in the operating force of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company have been announced recently.

Charles A. Campbell, for some time past the chief clerk and buyer at M. M. Gasser company's retail grocery, has joined the Stone-Ordean-Wells company, and will travel in the interest of the company's new "point system" of selling its goods through the retailers by an organized corps of junior salesmen. Mr. Campbell's work will be head of the organization of Jamestown, N. D., and other points in the Northwest for the selling of Nokomis coffees and teas and other goods. Under the plan now being carried out, the retailer gets his regular profit on the goods sold, the wholesale house paying the commission to the young sales people.

Charles Erickson, formerly the manager for T. J. Anderson's Cash grocery store in Superior, has entered the employ of the Stone-Ordean-Wells company as traveling auditor and general utility man. Lawrence Barrett, formerly on the clerk order desk at the Stone-Ordean-Wells company's house, has taken a position on the road for the company. Mr. Barrett has been succeeded at the city order desk by J. A. Wilhelmson, who was formerly with the Billings Sugar company, with headquarters at Billings, Mont.

Had Prosperous Year.

The Northern Shoe company of this city has completed its annual inventory, which has been in progress since the first of the year, and has sent out its traveling representatives to their respective territories. The company enjoyed a good business last year and its officers are optimistic over the outlook for the coming year. There is but once change in the sales force, Mr. LeMasurier resigning to enter business for himself. His territory has been taken by W. N. Donaldson.

New Sales Manager.

Since the first of the year W. H. Rattenbury has been the sales manager with the Kelley-How-Thomson company, wholesale hardware house. The company has been largely increasing its sales force and the wide territory covered has made the position of sales manager a necessity. Mr. Rattenbury was formerly the northwestern representative of the Crumden-Martin Woodenware company of St. Louis.

MAKE RANIER PORT OF ENTRY

Bede Expects Bill Will Pass During Present Session.

Washington, Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede today introduced a bill to make Ranier, Minn., a sub-port of entry, the proposed sub-port to be located on Rainy river at the point where the railroad crosses into Canada.

The bill has the approval of the treasury officials, and Mr. Bede expects to get it through at this session.

LONDON PRETTY GAY.

The Gentlewoman: There is no sort of doubt that London is a much gayer and more attractive capital than it used to be. We borrowed our idea of living at restaurants from Paris, and now we seem to have gone one better, for we can boast quite a bewildering number of gay places to dine and sup at.

Americans have discovered this; also that our London season is longer and decidedly more brilliant than that of Paris. Here, too, Americans have of late years been most warmly welcomed in social circles, far more so than they are in the best French society.

The consequence is that rich Americans swarm over in the season, and on the "cutlet for cutlet" principle do as much for London society as London society does for them. It looks, indeed, as if London were ousting Paris from the position of Mecca to the Americans.

TO TAKE WHEN SOAKED.

Youth's Companion: As the brisk philanthropist thrust her fare into the cab driver's hand she saw that he was wet and apparently cold after the half hour of pouring rain. "Do you ever take anything when you get soaked through?" she asked, pityingly.

"Yes, ma'am," said the cabman, with humility. "I generally do."

"Wait here in the vestibule," commanded the philanthropist. She inserted her house key in the lock, opened the door and vanished, to reappear a moment later.

"Here," she said, putting a small envelope in the man's outstretched hand. "These are two-grain quinine pills; you take two of them now and two more in half an hour."

COMPLETE REPORT OF THE TAX COMMISSION ISSUED

Advocates Gross Earnings Tax Upon Public Utility Corporations.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The completed report of the Minnesota tax commission, issued today for the first time, contains some interesting sugestions, chief among which is an illustration of the tendency of the principle of the output tax, which covers the tonnage tax scheme, to expand itself and search out new subjects. This comes in the chapter on the taxation of timber, wherein the commission asks consideration for an output tax on logs, the timber lands to be assessed nominally and the timber exempted from taxation until cut, and then taxed so much per 1,000 feet. Naturally this would be a state tax. This is exactly analogous to the tonnage tax, an dthe tax commission says that the plan has merit worthy of serious consideration.

Most of the report relating to the taxation of iron mines was given out in the preliminary report published several weeks ago. The commission proposes no definite tonnage scheme tax, and one of its members, Judge O. M. Hall, dissents to the recommendation altogether. As to the plan, that part of the report not hitherto published, says:

The Tonnage Tax.

"From the point of view of ease of administration a tonnage tax on the output of mines commends itself highly to taxing officials. Moreover, it establishes automatically a rough system of justice that is much nearer equality than any system of assessment is likely to develop. The objections urged against it are two in number: First, the establishment of a tonnage tax opens the way to reprisal by increasing the rate from time to time until it becomes prohibitive; second, the imposition of a tonnage tax by the state would deprive the local governments of their revenue, since they are practically dependent on the mines for their support. The answer to the first is brief and may be put somewhat dogmatically to this effect, that no legislature is going to pass a law making a rate which is unfair or prohibitive. The answer to the second objection is that no legislature will presume to take away from local governments their means of support. While these assertions appear to be without support so far as facts are concerned, yet past experience in tax matters would go to prove that not only is the rate likely to be somewhat less than the facts demand, but that the local governments will invariably be protected against any aggression on the part of the state."

The commission's assumptions, of course, are based upon a condition where the industry concerned is general in its extent, and where sympathy with and understanding of it is widespread. Whether they would apply to an industry segregated in one corner of the state, in a district almost foreign to those portions of the state holding the balance of political power, is another question. The commission, however, urges careful safeguarding of local interests in considering a tonnage tax. It also states that the increased assessments, and the increased knowledge of the extent and value of the ore bodies, "have in some measure modified the necessity of a tonnage tax."

Taxing Railroads.

As to the gross earnings tax upon railroads the commission submits figures showing that, upon a valuation basis, the railroads would be paying much more taxes under that system than they pay now under the 4 per cent gross earnings rate. The commission also advocates the extension of the gross earnings system of taxation to other public utility corporations in lieu of the present personal property tax.

Based upon a consideration of the laws of other states, the commission submits without definite recommendation, several schemes for raising state revenue out of corporation taxes. Business and manufacturing corporations, it is suggested, could be taxed upon their real estate for local purposes and upon stocks and bonds for state purposes. Mercantile corporations can be taxed on the gross business for state purposes, at a rate of not less than 4 mills for retailers and 2½ mills for wholesalers. This plan is not recommended by the commission, but is presented to the people of the state. Commercial banks should be taxed as they are at present in this state, and savings banks by a rate of 3 mills on their average deposits, less real estate and bonds held by the banks.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

YEAR'S WORK OF DULUTH'S HEALTH DEPARTMENT

The Zenith City Has a Very Low Death Rate.

Many Recommendations Made by Health Commissioner Patton.

Figuring upon the basis employed by most of the large cities of the country, Duluth's death rate for the year 1908, was only 7 to every 1,000 inhabitants, which undoubtedly is the lowest in the country.

Including deaths of hospital patients brought in from outside points, and deaths of babies under one year of age, two items excluded by nearly every large city, in their eagerness to make a good mortality showing, this city's rate stands at 11.20 per thousand, and exclusive of deaths from outside territory, is 9.32 per thousand.

One hundred and seventy-eight died under 1 year of age, which makes the first figure of 7 per 1,000 the rate, excluding outsiders and children under 1 year of age. These facts are brought out in Health Commissioner Patton's annual report, which was completed today, and which will be submitted to the common council this evening.

The report is the most exhaustive ever gotten out by the local health department, covering every point upon which anyone could possibly ask any information. It is long enough to fill a small book, but is arranged in so comprehensive a fashion as to be easily understood by the layman.

Milk Inspection.

The Herald already has covered much of the report, giving it by sections as compiled, from day to day, but there are some features in it which have not been brought out. One interesting portion is that pertaining to the milk inspection.

The report refers practically to the work of only the last eight months. The fight for pure and unadulterated milk is being continued with unabated vigor. There have been three general inspections of dairies inside the city, and two of outside dairies supplying Duluth with milk and cream, during the year. All the cattle in these numerous dairies were tested for tuberculosis, and the owners cheerfully submitted to the inspection, with two exceptions, and these exceptions, outside dairymen, are not allowed to ship milk or cream into Duluth.

Eight dairymen were forced out of business entirely through the filthy condition of their barns and premises, and four quit business because they said they could not conform with the requirements set down by the department. Twelve new dealers started business in 1908, and thirty new milk houses for storing and straining milk were built inside the city, and twenty among the outside dairies, after the agitation for more wholesome milk was started by Dr. Patton and Mayor Haven.

Formerly milk and cream on these premises were strained and stored in the barns.

A great many improvements along the lines of better ventilation in the barns and milkhouses, and better light for the cattle, as well as in methods and equipment, have been made during the last few months. Seventy-five narrow-mouthed cans are now being used by different milkmen, and it is hoped that this can will be universally adopted in the Duluth district. The mouth is only four inches across, and is slanted in such a manner as to prevent dirt falling in the pails when the cow is being milked.

During the last eight months of the year, 449 samples of milk and cream being retailed were taken, and twenty-six samples fell below the standard. The owners were warned in these particular instances, and subsequently responded to the requirements stipulated.

Notable improvements were made in the dairies all around, and the report calls special attention to a comparative statement of dairy conditions in this district in May and in the following December. In May the general average of equipment of stables, milk rooms, water supply, utensils, etc., was 5,266, and in December the average was 5,880, a gain of 614.

In May the general average on methods employed in cleanliness of cows, stables, milk, storing, etc., was 5,769, as compared with 6,795 in December, a gain of 1,026 points.

Contagious Diseases.

As already has been published, there were 569 cases of smallpox, 872 cases of diphtheria, and 120 cases of scarlet fever, a total of 1,561 contagious cases, during the year.

There were no deaths from smallpox, forty-two deaths from diphtheria, and four from scarlet fever. The large number of diphtheria deaths was due to the fact that in nearly every one of these cases the disease was not reported to the health authorities until it was too late for medical attendance to render any benefits. Of the diphtheria cases, 357 were of people more than 15 years of age, and there were four cases between 50 and 60 years of age, and two between 60 and 70 years of age.

Garbage Collection.

The report states that the present system of collecting garbage is far from satisfactory, and should be more closely brought under the supervision of the health department. Dr. Patton recommends that the city purchase a team and wagon for collecting garbage, and that if the scheme of municipal collection works out in a given district, it be inaugurated all over the city. He says that under a municipal system, the cost of burning the garbage at the incinerator would be reduced almost one-half. At present the average cost of burning is 18 to 20 cents a cubic yard.

The report says the present smoke ordinance is weak and inadequate, and recommends the adoption of a better measure along these lines. It should provide for the employment of a practical engineer or fireman and should provide for smoke consumers, where considered necessary.

Medical inspection in schools is also recommended.

It is recommended that the building ordinance be so amended as to make it against the law to maintain sleeping rooms beneath the level of the ground, and likewise empowering the health commissioner to close unsanitary buildings and require that they be vacated.

There were fifty-two deaths during the year due to accident. The total number of deaths from all causes was 882.

Of rooms disinfected there were 512, and school rooms fumigated, 526. The bacteriological labrotory carried on 8,582 examinations.

The meat and vegetable inspector condemned 14,813 pounds of meat and vegetables during the year. Of this amount, 13,024 pounds were vegetables, and the remainder meats.

The incinerator burned 14,620 yards of material, including 4,221 loads of garbage, 3,350 loads of refuse, and 295 loads of paper. One hundred and five dog carcasses were burned.

The report shows that the daily consumption of milk in Duluth is 5,002 gallons, and cream, 500 gallons. The annual consumption is: Milk, 1,560,624 gallons and cream, 156,000 gallons.

The total expenses of the health department during the year were $28,473.45. The expense to the city of contagious diseases was $13,860.05, and milk and cattle inspection, $2,697.41.

BROKEN DISHES IN HOTELS.

New York Herald: When the manager of the Knickerbocker hotel was asked yesterday evening what he thought of the breakage of dishes in a large hotel as an item of expense he threw up his hands and said: "It is a sad subject," and shook his head.

When he had consented to speak he said: "The actual breakage is not so great, but dishes—the finest china and glassware—become chipped, and then there is nothing to do with them but give them away to some private hospital or charitable institution. Few dishes are ever broken or injured in the dining room, but it comes when a waiter gets excited and falls head over heels down stairs with a tray full of china. I have seen a waiter break $40 worth at a jump in this way, but not here. I recall once in Philadelphia that a waiter was carrying a tray of cut glass decanters of rare old sherry for a dinner party, the sherry to be served with terrapin. He fell backward down stairs. He ran for his life and never came back.

THE EVE OF ELECTION

Eight Aldermen Will be Selected by the Voters.

Also Other City Officials —Five Charter Amendments.

Tomorrow, Feb. 2, is municipal election day in Duluth.

A city comptroller, municipal judge, city treasurer, eight aldermen, and a justice of the peace, are to be elected. In addition to these, the voters are asked to register an opinion upon five charter amendments which have been proposed.

With favorable weather prevailing, it is expected Tuesday's vote will run slightly over 7,000. Considering the fact that no mayoralty contest is on, and that there is only one contest of consequence for the higher offices, this is considered fairly good. The vote at the November election was about 12,000, but at that time county, state, and national tickets were in the field.

F. J. VOSS.

It is generally conceded that F. J. Voss will be re-elected to the position of city treasurer, on the Democratic ticket, but friends of Ben F. Howard, his opponent on the Republican ticket, are putting up an active campaign on his behalf, and say they will be able to poll a big vote.

Mr. Howard's chances, it is claimed, depend largely upon a small vote, and therefore backers of Mr. Voss are strongly urging that none of his friends neglect to vote. They say all they need to make Mr. Voss' election certain is a good turn out at the polls tomorrow. Mr. Voss' record in the important office of custodian of the city's funds, is his best campaign argument.

D. M. Robertson, Public Ownership candidate, is opposing W. S. McCormick for the position of city comptroller. Mr. McCormick doesn't appear to be worrying any.

Judge Windom has no opposition in his candidacy for re-election as municipal judge, on the Republican ticket. J. B. Flack has no opposition for justice of the peace in West Duluth.

Out of the eight aldermen to be elected, six will get into office only after an active campaign, for there are only two wards in the city where the candidates are running without opposition, the First and the Eighth. Watson S. Moore is Republican candidate for alderman in the First, and no one is opposing him.

W. B. Getchell is running for re-election on the Democratic ticket in the Eighth, and he has no opposition.

Nicholas Mueller, Democrat, and T. J. Storey, Republican, both want to be aldermen from the Second ward Mr. Mueller is the present alderman.

In the Third, F. J. Dacey, Republican, and C. J. Hector, Democrat, are trying for a position in the council. This is the first political experience for both men.

In the Fourth, a lively contest is on between A. J. Lyle, Republican, and Joseph Shartel, Democrat. The latter holds the position at present, but Mr. Lyle was in office for one term. He is putting up a hard fight to get in again.

In the Fifth ward, two men who have never held office before are running They are A. C. Parsons, Republican, and John McDonald, Democrat.

In the Sixth, Alexander Kennedy, the present alderman, is a candidate for re-elec'er on the Republican ticket. C. H. Hoar is opposing him on the Democratic ticket.

Lucien Merritt, Democrat, and William Jeffery, Republican, are engaged in a lively contest for the place of alderman from the Seventh. P. G. Philipse is the Public Ownership candidate from the ward.

The proposed charter amendments are the abolishment of the office of city engineer and the reorganization of the board of public works upon a new basis, very similar to the library and school boards, the board to consist of five members, to be appointed by the mayor, said board being empowered to employ a director of public works at salaries not specified; the establishment of a sinking fund for the water and light department, in order that the indebtedness incurred by the city in the purchase of the water and light plants can be better be paid off; that the city shall pay for all street improvements at intersections of streets and avenues; that when a property has once been assessed for any public improvement, no further assessments can be made against the property for improvements; that no property can be assessed for improvements for more than 25 per cent of its value within a period of five years.

THINK MORE; DRINK LESS

Frank M. Eddy Says Thoughtlessness Fosters the Liquor Traffic.

If Men Suffered as Women, Curse Would be Wiped Out.

With deep insight into human nature, droll wit, and kindly philosophy, ex-Congressman Frank M. Eddy addressed the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon on the liquor question. His subject was "Hobby Horses." He has three of them, Initiative, Thought and Investigation, but on account of limitations of time, he confined himself to one—Thought.

"Drunkenness is the result of thoughtfulness," was Mr. Eddy's summing up of the causes, which have made the liquor problem one of the great issues in the life of the people of all countries. "If I could teach the public to think, the problem of downing the liquor curse would be solved," he said. "The great glaring fault of this generation is thoughtlessness. It is not so much a desire for evil as failure to think."

Mr. Eddy discussed the problem purely from the material side. The foolishness and idiocy of drinking were the phases at which his arguments were directed. The man who doesn't know the liquor traffic is sinful, he said, is wicked enough to demand the attention of ministers of the gospel, whose particular business it is to teach mankind avoidance of sin.

"For I have found that many people would rather be considered very sinful than very foolish, and it is on this side of man's nature that he can be attacked very often successfully," he said. "If all the dogs of the world were suddenly endowed with speech, the first cur to open his mouth would say to his master, 'Why in the world do you buy whisky to drink when you can get water for nothing?' It is only another way of saying that if men had the small sense of animals and all the creeping things of the world, they would let liquor alone."

Mr. Eddy based his discourse on the contention that if every man would stop to think every time he raised a glass of liquor to his lips, he would set it down untouched. Let him ask himself what benefit he will derive physically, mentally, financially, politically and spiritually, and the desire to drink will be conquered.

At the outset of his address, the speaker he has no quarrel with the individual makers, sellers, or consumers of intoxicating liquors, but with the saloons themselves. He said he never could understand why laws should be enacted for the protection of a traffic so infamous. He cannot understand now, he said, why the state should sell the privilege of ruining men at $1,000 and then take $20 to care for the ruined man at an inebriate farm. "I am always confronted with the sad fact that more laws are made for the protection of property than for the protection of man," he said.

The liquor habit is a disease contracted by voluntary action, said the speaker. "You would think me crazy to ask a man to leave his business and go out and contract a case of typhoid fever," he said. "Yet I am called a fool for warning men not to leave their business and forfeit their happiness and the happiness of their families and the comfort of their homes to contract the much more deadly disease. It is this great suffering that comes to the wives and children that is the greatest curse of the traffic. If men had suffered from it as much as the women have, they would have blown the accursed business from the face of the earth long ago."

MISSION OF THE CHURCH

Rev. J. S Kirtley Tells How First Church Was Formed.

Is Christ's Means for Keeping Alive His Teachings.

"And the Lord added to them day by day those that were being saved," was the theme chosen by Rev. J. S. Kirtley for his morning sermon at the First Baptist church.

"The history of the disciples from the beginning was that, as fast as they became disciples, they 'got together,'" said Mr. Kirtley. "You cannot imagine them doing any other way. They would, at once feel a hopeless breach between themselves and the un-Christian life going on about them, both among the Jews and the heathen. They would also find new bonds between themselves and those who led them to become disciples—the bonds of a new life, new hope, new mission, new dealing.

"Love and gratitude to them, a desire to know more of Christ and a passion for imparting what they had to the non-Christians, would bring them together. Even if Christ had not arranged for it, they would have been brought together by irresistible inner impulses. If He had not planned for any organization, they would have organized themselves.

The history of the disciples also discloses the fact that Jesus had planned for it and was guiding them, with His invisible, yet invincible hand. If He expected to do anything more than merely save them; if He expected to conserve what He had already done; if He expected them to do any thing for Him; if He expected them to do anything for each other; if He expected them to do anything for the salvation and betterment of mankind, He would foresee the need, provide for it and guide them unerringly in getting together in the right way. It would have been unnatural in them not to do so; it would have been improvident in Him not to plan and guide in it, according to His ideals. Their own impulses would have brought them unerringly together, but would not have made them unerring in their organized relations and activities. Christ did not have an institution ready made to which he fitted them as they became followers, but He shaped the growth of an institution out of the nature of their lives and their mission. Life is not the product of organization, but organization is the product of life and expresses life. As Joseph Cook used to say, 'The wing of an eagle is never enfolded in the egg of a vulture.'

"Tell it to the church' was what Christ said. Men, chosen by Him, instructed them in living and working together and the people themselves came to ratify the divine call of their leaders."

There were no grades of these churches. They were independent of each other's control; but not of each other's co-operation. There was no ecclesiastical body governing the churches. It was an ideal thing adapted to the most complex conditions of the highest civilization in the most distant centuries, the mightiest power binding the disciples and the groups of disciples together, the power of God's spirit in regenerated men and women. It is too ideal, too good, for regenerated human nature. It is exactly correlated to converted people, but a miserable failure for unconverted people. When it has welcomed people, who are not really christians, it has had to devise all sorts of abnormal and unspiritual offices and agencies to handle them. If all the churches would strictly require evidences of conversion in every one before offering membership and the ordinances, we should see again a pure Christianity that would soon conquer the world in the name of Christ.

"Jesus had given a name to this organization and that was the Greek word for assembly or congregation, just the word that Greek speaking people had been giving to any assembly from a town meeting to a mob, but it soon came to be regarded by the people as pre-empted by Jesus and thel let Him have it for His congregation of people, who went on growing and developing it according to their own life and mission, under the hand of Jesus.

"The people of God thus associated form Christ's great instrument in bringing on His reign on earth. Each body is calling men to accept Christ and come into the company of His people and co-operate in securing further conversions. Each one of us can think of some body of believers who were the instrument of our salvation, the means of our education and the opportunity for co-operation in work. It appeals to our gratitude, loyalty and spirit of conquest for the Savior."

HEALING TOUCH OF FAITH.

Pastor Comments on Increasing Belief in Efficacy of Prayer.

"There is today an ever-increasing belief in the mysterious and occult," said Rev. George R. Gebauer at the First Unitarian church yesterday.

"Many indeed hold that we have at last found the fountains of health and eternal youth through praper, faith and enlightenment. That accounts for the immense crowd that went to hear Bishop Fallows last Sunday night. They came to listen to reports about signs and wonders. Doubtless some were somewhat disappointed, for the good bishop had nothing startling to tell. The Emanuel movement, which he represents, does not make the claims of the Peruna company. It is very modest. It draws distinctions between functional disorders and organic disease; between the curable and the incurable. He believes that under certain conditions faith and prayer and a little ointment may not hurt, but it is inwardly convinced that they cannot help. But certanly Christ promised his disciples that they should do as great works and greater than he did, and if the gospel of John is canonical scripture, then to that extent at least Mrs. Eddy stands upon solid Bible ground.

"But the question naturally suggests itself, What about Christ himself and His healing power? Was it absolutely unconditioned and absolute? Even scripture does not claim it, for Christ admits that his disciples may do greater things than he did. Besides there are plain indications that His power was limited. The gospel story tells us very naively in Matthew 13-58: 'And he did not many great works there on account of their unbellef.' It appears then that two factors are necessary for psychic healing; the power to provoke faith and the power to apply faith. The first comes from the healer the second from the patient. Where provocation does not meet with this receptivity, but scorn, cure is out of question. Where this receptivity is strong cure at least is possible. But that the patient may be strong in his faith, there must exist an expectancy or belief which supports him. This the Christian Science healer realizes. He endeavors to create a favorable social and mental atmosphere about his patient. He will get him into a posture which will induce in him, if not absolute faith, then at least submission. He will endeavor to bar out, if possible, all antagonistic social influences. If he fails in this, his work of healing will largely be in vain. It was the same with Christ, even if we admit that his method varied considerably from the science healer. He found the greatest success where people expected him to do wonders. He failed where people, as on the return to his own home, doubted his ability to cure disease.

"Where faith is all dominating, there even the word of the master was not needed, as in the case of the woman, who suffered with an issue of blood and was healed by touching in faith his garment."

The funeral of Mrs. Jessie McNamara was held at the home of her son, Simon C. Chalmers, 625 East Third street, at 2:30 p. m. Saturday.

Rev. A. Milne conducted services, and Miss Alice Sjosellus sang "Nearer My God, to Thee," and "Lead, Kindly Light, accompanied by Miss Margaret Clark.

NEW DOCK AT KNIFE RIVER

Duluth & Northern Minnesota Will Build Big Structure.

The contract for the construction of a steel and concrete dock, to cost not less than $50,000, has been let by the Duluth & Northern Minnesota railroad to the Barnett & Record company. The dock will be used by the railroad for the shipment of lumber and ties, and for receiving coal for the use of the road. About 20,000 tons a year will be received at the dock.

The Duluth & Northern Minnesota railroad is owned by the Alger-Smith Lumber company. It is believed, in the face of what has already been done, that the Alger-Smith company intends to put in a very large dock and terminal system at Knife River. The company has applied for permission to cross the tracks of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad at Knife River, and the Iron Range road has been invited to pick out an interlocking system that will be satisfactory to the officials of that road.

Construction upon the dock will begin at once.

AEROPLANES FOR ARMY.

House Provides $500,000 for Airships—Senate to Follow.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Airships are to form an important branch of the American military service, provided the senate agrees to an action taken by the house Saturday afternoon.

The house voted $750,000 for army purposes, $500,000 of which, it is understood, can be used for construction and maintenance of airships.

The vote was accompanied by a number of short speeches, most of the members taking the patriotic view that, inasmuch as the other first-class powers are going ahead with aerial craft as a military adjunct, the United States should not lag behind.

Both Democrats and Republicans spoke and voted for the appropriation, and men of both parties were against it. But it carried by a handsome majority, and it is believed the senate will agree.

WOMAN KILLED BY ACCIDENT

Shot to Death By Brother of Chicago's Mayor.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 1.—George Busse, brother of Fred A. Busse, mayor of Chicago, accidentally shot and killed Mrs. L. C. Tuckerman, 32 years of age, wife of a fruit dealer at Milton, N. Y. The bullet struck Mrs. Tuckerman in the heart and she died instantly. The shooting occurred in the Walton apartment building at 305 North Clark street last night. Mrs. Tuckerman was visiting her father, Gen. A. C. Girard, U. S. A., retired, who occupies an apartment in the building.

George Busse, in his apartment across an archway, was demonstrating the use of a revolver to Miss Berthan Lambke, his housemaid, so that she could employ the weapon in case of burglars. Suddenly the revolver was discharged, and the bullet went through two windows and, crossing the archway into the Girard apartment, pierced Mrs. Tuckerman's heart. Mayor Busse was present at the shooting, and as soon as he learned of the fatal consequence, notified the police.

Mrs. Tuckerman was in a bathroom dressing. When struck by the bullet, which crashed through the window at her side, she staggered into a hallway. Gen. Girard and Mrs. Tuckerman's 6-year-old son Alfred rushed from an adjoining sitting room. "Oh, father, I've been shot and I'm dying," said Mrs. Tuckerman, and expired.

A moment later there was a loud pounding at the door of the Girard apartment, and Mayor Busse and his brother George came in. Mayor Busse's wife and his mother followed. The mayor summoned a physician and notified the police by telephone. The woman died before the physician arrived. No arrests were made. Gen. Girard expressed himself as satisfied that the shooting was accidental.

The publicity given a message from the pretender, Don Miguel, requesting his adherents to abstain from anti-patriotic demonstrations today and to attend masses for the dead had a quieting effect.

NOTES FEELING OF CONFIDENCE

Fred Bayha Finds Heavier Purchases at Furniture Centers.

Fred Bayha of Bayha & Co., the big housefurnishing store, returned Saturday evening from a two weeks' visit at Chicago and other Eastern markets, where he has been buying goods for the big store for the spring and summer trade.

The store enjoyed a good business last year, the volume of trade greatly exceeding that of any previous year. Mr. Bayha has bought more heavily than ever for this year's trade. He has been able to secure a large list of attractive articles for Bayha & Co.'s patrons at a cost that will assure them of splendid values at low prices, a fact that the people are not apt to lose sight of during the coming months. Mr. Bayha says the conditions in the furniture market were such that he was able to buy more goods and, in many instances, better values this year than ever before.

That business conditions everywhere are fast bettering themselves is the opinion of Mr. Bayha, based on his experience with other buyers from all over the country, who are visiting the furniture manufacturing centers now on a similar errand. Mr. Bayha says there is a tone of confidence in good business conditions the coming year as the retailers, without exception, are buying more heavily of furniture and housefurnishing goods than they did a year ago.

WANTS $500 FROM ESTATE

Mrs. Margaret Scrivens Sues Her Husband's Administrator.

Claiming that she has a right to the immediate payment of $500 from the estate of Thomas Scrivens, whose widow she says she is, Mrs. Margaret Scrivens has brought suit for that amount in district court against B. G. Segog, administrator of the estate. She also seeks to secure possession of a trunk and some small articles of jewelry formerly possessed by Thomas Scrivens.

In his answer to the suit, Mr. Segog claims that the $500 maintenance awarded by the probate court was later rescinded, and a stay in the execution of the order given. He says he has a right ot prosecute his search for other heirs before paying anything out of the estate.

Thomas Scrivens died at Superior Feb. 21 of last year, leaving considerable property. Mr. Segog was appointed administrator of the estate, and Mrs. Margaret Scrivens of Fall River, Mass., who claims to be the widow of the dead man, put in a claim for the estate. Mr. Segog is not satisfied with the proof of her marriage and he also thinks there is another heir. The matter is hanging fire in district court while he searches for the missing heir and further proof of the justice of Mrs. Scrivens' claim.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

A mass meeting of the women of Duluth will be held Friday morning of this week at the club room of the library at which the speakers will be Mrs. Perry Searkweather of St. Paul and Dr. F. J. Patton of this city.

The meeting has been planned by the Women's council, and every club woman and every woman interested in the welfare of the school children and the bettering of conditions for employed women is urged to be present at the meeting, which will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Dr. Patton, who is greatly interested in the proposed medical inspection of the public school children, will present that matter; the proposed Duluth survey will also be discussed at length, the value and help in developing the city which such a survey would be will be pointed out and the need of visiting district nurses will be spoken of. Dr. Patton has been much interested in these matters, and he has been always willing and helpful in his aid to any efforts made by the Women's council. He has studied these features at great length, and the council members are anxious that a large audience of Duluth women be present for this exceptional opportunity to learn of the detail of these intended improvement in conditions.

Any woman who did not hear Mrs. Perry Starkweather of St. Paul in her toast here at the civic banquet, can ill afford to miss the opportunity of hearing her at this meeting. Mrs. Starkweather, who commands attention in those who have a most lazy and indifferent interest in the work which she advocates, is in charge of the women's department of the state labor bureau, and her efforts are entirely for the improvement of the conditions for working women of Minnesota, the removal of the child woman from the industrial world, and the arousing of interest in these questions. She is a speaker of pleasing address and great wit, and, if for nothing else but delightful entertainment, might be listened to with profit. But a wandering attention at the beginning of her talk is compelled into a voluntary interest before she has spoken but a short time, and few of her hearers can go forth without an added interest and feeling of responsibility of the labor conditions of this state.

The meeting promises to be one of the most important of the month. The women of the various clubs and organizations represented in the council are greatly interested, and it is expected that the room at the library will be filled with a large and interested audience.

EXIT DIRECTOIRE.

A New Style Just When One is Tolerable.

It is reported that one of the big firms in New York recently wired its buyer in Paris not to purchase any more directoire gowns, but to send costumes with waistlines. This is taken as an indication that the directoire style is doomed and will pass from the realm of fashion before the year is over, at least so far as this country is concerned. The passing of the directoire style would be cause for sincere regret, as it is undeniably beautiful and artistic. The only trouble with it is that it requires an almost perfect figure, slender and graceful, and looks incongruous and even ridiculous on a fat and shapeless woman.

But, after all, the same objection may be made to any style, as on that is becoming to a fat woman with curves all over, is almost certain to be unbecoming to the slender and willowy woman. Whatever style may follow the present directoire model, there will be thousands of women to whom it will be becoming. Of course, the fat women deserve some consideration, as they are sorely handicapped by their excess of fish. It is a great deal easier for a woman of fine figure to dress becomingly than for one not thus favored by naturo.

Tight sleeves will remain in fashion until spring, but the summer models in lingerie frocks, which have already come from Paris, show three-quarter length loose sleeves, not puffs; a long stole effect in the front of the gown and a semi-fitting princess gown without the directoire girdle. The latter may be added, however, if desired. ne of the new effects, which will be trenendously popular for the whole year, consists in draping the goods in unusual ways and the use of scarfs and scarf-like effects. Even on fitted dresses the blouse is draped, and a high-priced novelty is the jeweled breastplate, to which the material is attached, hung about the neck by a chain.

Constipation Should not be neglected. It leads to more serious troubles. It shows that the important functions of the liver are imperfectly performed. The best medicine to take for it is the mild, gentle and purely vegetable cathartic

Scandal.

A woman to the holy father went:
Confession of her sin was her intent;
And so her misdemeanors, great and small,
She faithfully rehearsed them one and all;
And, chiefest in her catalogue of sin,
She owned that she a talebearer had been,
And bore a bit of scandal up and down
To all the long-tongued gossips in the town.
The holy father, for her other sin,
Granted the absolution asked of him;
But while for all the rest he pardon gave,
He told her this offense was very grave,
And that to fit penance she must go
Out by the wayside where the thistles grow,
And gathering the largest, ripest one,
Scatter its seeds, and that when this was done,
She must come back another day
To tell him his commands she did obey.
The woman, thinking this was penance light,
Hastened to do his will that very night,
Feeling right glad she had escaped so well,
Next day but one she went to the priest to tell;
The priest sat still and heard her story through,
Then said, "There's something still for you to do:
Those little thistle seeds which you have sown,
I bid you go regather everyone."
The woman said, "But, father, 'twould be in vain
To try to gather up those seeds again;
The winds have scattered them both far and wide,
Over the meadowed vale and mountain side."
The father answered, "Now I hope from this
The lesson I have taught you will not miss;
You cannot gather back the scattered seeds,
Which far and wide will grow to noxious weeds,
Nor can the mischief once by scandal sown
By any penance be again undone."

THE EVENING STORY

THE TEMPTATION OF FATHER GRAY

By Clarence L. Gilbert.

Father Gray was unusually tired: It had been a trying month, with the special services and the resulting numberless private conferences he had been called upon to grant in order that the full benefit of the services might he reaped. It is no small thing to hold three regular services a day besides the duties an honest priest must ever perform to his parish—the calls on the sick and afflicted, the marriage and the funeral rites. And when added to all this one is compelled to hold himself ready at all times to receive the half-converted, and pour into troubled and doubtful souls the spiritual inspiration they lack—well, it takes considerable out of him.

So Father Gray was particularly tired, and even while he bravely told himself that it was all nonsense and a weakness of the flesh, and that he was as well and strong and fresh as ever to go about his Master's business, yet his tired head persisted in laying on his arm on the table, and to his overwrought senses there stole that delicious calm which is the balm to tired nerves and brain and muscle.

But it was not to be that he should enjoy this relaxation long. A knock came on his study door, and in response to his droway invitation to enter there appeared the sweet, calm face of Sister Margaret, and with her there was a shrinking young girl, with frightened eyes and pale face crowned with a wonderful mass of glorious brown hair. She was a beautiful girl, and Father Gray remembered to have seen her at several of the special meetings.

He remembered particularly well, because the face had strangely reminded him of some part of his past life—before he was Father Gray and simply Henry Gray, before the great trial which had come to him had moved him to renounce the world and devote himself to the service of the Master and His church—and humanity. As he looked into the eyes of the girl the reminder came more strongly than ever, and the blood ran through his veins as it had not done for years.

The past—the happy past, with its human joys and hopes and promises rose before him.

He shook the mood from him roughly, and in reply to the greeting of the sister and the statement that the girl had been awakened by the meetings and sought advice from him, replied:

Then Sister Margaret withdrew, leaving the girl, pale and trembling, alone with the priest. With the gentleness and sympathy which had made him a success in the ministry he set the girl partially at ease and drew from her the confession she had come to make.

"Oh, father!" she cried, clasping her hands before her and gazing into his face with distress written all over her face, "I have a great—a very great sin upon my conscience. I want to do the best and wisest thing to undo the wrong I have inflicted upon others, but the way is so dark and I am so weak I do not know what to do. You have been such a comfort to me at the meetings, and you seem so good and wise, that I thought you could advise me. I am willing to suffer myself for my sin, but I want to do the best thing for those I have wronged."

"Go on," he said gently.

"Many years ago—dear me, it seems ages ago—I did something in a fit of temper which ruined my sister's happiness for all her life, and the happiness, I fear, of a good man. Oh, father, I was only a child, and did not know. I loved my sister so dearly that I was madly jealous of her. She was twelve years older than I and a beautiful young woman. She had many admirers: I didn't mind most of them, because she laughed at them, but there was one whom I grew to hate with that passionate jealousy which a child sometimes feels. In my great love for my sister I saw clearly that I was second to none of the others in her love, but I was most distinctly second to Henry. For none of the others would she abandon any of the plans we would make for our amusement, but for Henry she would abandon everything and forget me entirely.

"I brooded over this until I was mad with insane jealousy. And then, one day, when he wrote a note and asked her to go out riding with him, as he had something in particular he wanted to say to her, and she joyously abandoned a picnic we had planned and sent me down to the parlor to entertain him until she finished dressing, I—led to him and told him that after she had received his note Claude Belknap—an avowed admirer — had come and asked her to take a boat ride, and she had torn up his note and gone with Claude.

"Oh, I was cunning beyond my years, and I told him with the convincing, artlessness of a child—and I was mad, yet, heaven help me! I was glad to see the pain in his face. He scribbled a note to her that he was compelled to leave that night on a trip of many months in the West and begging her to come to the train, as it would be the last opportunity he would have to see her until his return and that the trip would mean a great advance for him——so great an advance that their fondest dream could be realized."

"Yes," said the priest, thickly, looking at her with unseeing eyes.

"God help me, I tore up the note," went on the girl, wringing her hands, "and told Nellie that Henry went away in anger because she was not ready, saying that he wouldn't wait around for any girl—especially when there were so many girls sitting around waiting for a fellow to take 'em riding."

"Merciful heaven! no, you didn't do that?" cried the priest, with something very like passion in his voice.

"I did, I did," replied the girl, sinking on her knees and covering her face with her hands. "And that is not the worst of it. He went away and she heard from him no more. Probably he was heartbroken at Nellie's supposed heartlessness."

"Yes," murmured the priest, sadly, "he was heart-broken."

"I haven't thought so much about him," went on the girl, "although at times I have thought what a brutal wrong I did him."

"Yes," murmured the priest, "a brutal wrong."

"But you see I have seen Nellie all the time," went on the girl, "and as I grew older I realized what I had done to her. She never smiled after that in the old happy way. At first she was very angry and soon after he went away she married Claude Belknap. I felt from the first that I had done a very wicked thing—"

"But it was not until a year ago, when I went home from boarding school, that I awoke to a full realization of what I had done," continued the girl. "Then, being a woman myself, I learned that Nellie did not love her husband and never had loved him, and that she still loved Henry as she always had, and that she considered her married life a profanation. Oh, father! I will never forget the hopeless voice in which she said to me: 'Mary, Mary, never marry for any reason but honest love. I have never loved Claude, and the days are full of remorse and the nights full of torment. If I were not sure that he—my lover—was unworthy of my love and that he basely deserted me, I believe I should go mad.' And this, father, almost on the eve of my own marriage to a man whom I love dearly and who loves me. So you see I understood fully.

"I did not know what to do," she went on, creeping forward and laying her hands appealingly on the priest's knee. "I would have told her and endured her contempt and hatred, but I feared that it would make her more unhappy, as she said it would if she knew that her lover was true to her. And then I thought of Henry and what he must have suffered and the false position he occupied in her heart and mind—and I have nearly gone mad. Tell me, oh! tell me what to do. Give me some heavy penance, only show how I can undo what I have done. I cannot marry and be happy with this sin against two loving hearts on my conscience."

The priest sat very still with closed eyes for a very long time, while the girl watched him with staring, fearful eyes. Little did she dream, however, the struggle going on back of those closed eyes and that peaceful face. Little did she dream of the tumult surging in the heart beneath that priestly robe. Finally he opened his eyes, took both her hands in his., which trembled a trifle in spite of his most desperate efforts, and said to her in a voice steady, gentle and full of paternal kindness:

"Daughter, you can do nothing. You have acted wisely in not telling your sister. It would lead only to misery—perhaps sin. Your penance is that you must ever bear the burden of your guilty secret. I would that I could absolve you from it, but even a priest cannot wipe out memory and conscience. Depart and be as happy as you can, and try to atone for the two lives you have ruined by making all with whom you come in contact as happy as possible—and pray always and unceasingly for forgiveness for yourself, and also that your sister may find strength to bear her burden —yes, and that the man whom you wronged also may find strength to bear his."

The girl arose and went from the room sobbing like a child.

When the door closed the priest sank to his knees, and great sobs shook him as he prayed, as he never prayed before, for strength to bear his new trial and temptation. And his long years of self-discipline and self-control stood in good stead in driving back from his heart and mind the face of a rosy-cheeked girl which persisted in returning again and again. Finally he arose—the battle won, and no one in the vast congregation he addressed a half hour later would dream that the calm, grave priest who told of Christ's great love and forgiveness, had within the hour been buffeted by the fiercest passions and nearly swept from his anchorage.

Verily, he who controlleth himself is greater than he who taketh a city.

GOVERNMENT WELCOMES AID OF JEROME IN LIBEL SUIT AGAINST WORLD

New York, Feb 1.—Henry L. Stimson, United States district attorney for the southern district of New York made public a letter in reply to one written by District Attorney Jerome on the subject of beginning an action for criminal libel in the state courts against the publishers of the New York World, because of published charges regarding the Panama canal purchase. Mr. Stimson tells Mr. Jerome to go ahead, and assures him "that such action on your part, will in no wise be regarded as an interference, but on the contrary, we shall regard it as our duty to co-operate with you in all proper and lawful ways."

Mr. Jerome had asked if action in the state courts in behalf of Douglas Robinson, the president's brother-in-law, who is a resident of this city and was mentioned in the article, would be an unwise interference with the actions began under federal jurisdiction.

Mr. Stimson answers this question negatively, but he does not state that the federal inquiries or prosecutions will cease in the event Mr. Jerome begins an action. It is apparent from the letter that while the federal authorities concede to Mr. Jerome the right to appear as the protector of Douglas Robinson's good name, they reserve to themselves the privilege of acting in defense of the reputation of "A gentleman who occupies the position friend of the war department," in any federal jurisdiction where the case applies.

Reference to Taft.

The reference to the "Gentleman who occupies the position of head of the war department," is taken to mean President-elect Taft, who was secretary of war at the time of the Panama canal purchase, and is the first intimation that the government may allege that he is the person who has been libelled through the articles complained of. Mr. Stimson's letter says:

"I have received your letter of January 26 and have given it careful attention. The series of publications in the New York World to which you refer, have for some time been under my consideration. The publications, which I concur with you in considering libelous, appear to have been circulated by the newspapers in question in a number of distinct and independent jurisdictions and to contain charges reflecting upon the personal character of a number of men, of whom some are in public life, and some are private citizens. In each of these jurisdictions, under well-known principles of law, each of these publications would constitute a separate offense, and as it happens, in this case, each one is characterized by distinct and peculiar features.

"Your letter makes clear the offense against the laws of New York state, constituted by the attack upon the reputation of Mr. Robinson, circulated among his friends and neighbors in New York county. The circulation of similar charges of personal corruption or dishonor against a gentleman who occupied the position of head of the war department among the officers and men of the army, resident upon the military reservations and in my district, or among the residents of the District of Columbia, where the war department is situated, may well engage the attention of the officials whose duty it is to enforce the law in those localities.

"But, while these alleged offenses thus possess features which are distinct and to a certain extent peculiar to these different jurisdictions, they all relate to the same general subject matter, the Panama canal purchase, and a prosecution for any one of them bears a necessary relation to, and may be to some extent practically affected by, the result of a prosecution for any other. In such a situation, I conceive that it is the duty of all prosecutors not to allow any conflict of jurisdiction to jeopardize an ultimate conviction, but to take up the work in a spirit of harmonious co-operation, with the common aim that the offenders shall be eventually tried and punished in the forum where that end can be most suitably and efficiently accomplished. In accordance with your request, I have conferred with the attorney general, and I am asked to say that his views upon the situation fully coincide with my own.

"In answer, therefore, to your query as to whether a prosecution on your part as to the alleged libel of Oct. 3 upon Mr. Robinson would be regarded as an interference with matters upon which the federal courts have jurisdiction, and in which acts have already been taken by the federal authorities, I beg to assure you that such action on your part will in no wise be regarded as such an interference, but, on the contrary, we shall regard it as our duty to co-operate with you in all proper and lawful ways.

Settled For All Time.

"In all these several jurisdictions the truth of the alleged libels would in the present case constitute a complete defense to the prosecution. Should such a defense be attempted, it is manifestly of the utmost importance that this question as to the truth or falsity of the publications should be presented to the courts in the light of the fullest possible evidence, and be settled for all time beyond possibility of a doubt.

"You may, therefore, be assured of my cordial co-operation in bringing to light all facts relating to this transaction, and I am happy to offer you access to all sources of information on this subject under my official control. In the same way, I should be very glad to be furnished by you with any evidence which your investigations upon the subject may disclose."

NEGROES DEMUR, BARRED FROM LINCOLN DAY CELEBRATION

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 1.—The Springfield Law and Order league, an organization of negroes, yesterday met and adopted resolutions condemning the Lincoln Centennial association for excluding negroes from the celebration to be held in Springfield in memory of the one hundredth birthday of Abraham Lincoln, declaring such action in violation of the very principle for which Lincoln fought. The negroes resolved to hold a celebration of their own.

DIRECTORY OF AMUSEMENTS

"Peer Gynt."

Many out-of-town theatergoers have been planning a trip here to see Louis James in "Peer Gynt," which will be at the Lyceum on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and Saturday matinee.

"Peer Gynt" has been recognized by all readers of good literature as the masterpiece of that wonderfully versatile writer, Henrik Ibsen, the man who makes men think.

Wehn Richard Mansfield produced "Peer Gynt" for the first time in English, the extravagantly massive manner in which he embellished the theme, was such as to call forth commendation from the entire press of the world, for up to that time, "Peer Gynt" had only been seen in a few of the capital cities of Europe and the production was very mediocre. When Mr. Mansfield died and his estate was disposed of, Louis James was approached to take up the burden just laid down by Mr. Mansfield and continue in the great part. This he has done, with the result that he has presented to the cities heretofore debarred from that boon, the privilege of witnessing a production that is today one of the most massive, imposing and magnificent before the American public.

The dances and ensemble are staged with a fidelity to locale and time, that discloses the master hand in charge.

THE MUSIC OF OLD NORWAY

Fully fifty persons sat in the hall leading to the auditorium yesterday afternoon, on the occasion of the fourteenth concert given at the Masonic temple under the auspices of the Scottish Rite Free masons, and every available foot of space was occupied in the auditorium. All were well pleased with the program of Norwegian music, the feature of the performance.

The Normanna Singing society, under the leadership of Olaf Halten, with thirty-one singers, pleased every one by their rendition of the several vocal numbers. With voices under perfect control, well balanced, rich and full, and an artistic conception of the subjects, they sang with feeling and captivated even those who could not understand the words but who followed the sentiment through the medium of that universal language, music.

An encore was demanded for each piece, which was generously responded to, and to the last there was a triple recall when "My Country 'Tis of Thee," was given with a vim and a go only obtainable from those who sing as they feel.

The organ music consisted of two Norwegian pieces, both by Grieg, the famous Norwegian composer and the recognized chief exponent of that music, the "Triumphal March," and the latter being especially pleasing and characteristic. No. 3, for the organ, was German's suite of Dances, composed as the incidental music for "Nell Gwyn," which called on the power of the instrument to respond to the demands of dance music in "Presto" time. Selection from the opera of "Norma" were well received, but the most brilliant piece was the overture to Wagner's opera of "Rienzi." The full organ capacity was in service most of the time, and the auditorium reverberated with the magnificent chords and other passages of that great work composed in the early days of Wagner's career, before he had broken away from the Italian style.

On next Sunday it was announced that Italian music of the later composers such as Leon Cavallo, Mascagni and Massenet would form the program.

WANT THEM KEPT OUT.

the substitute bill was made a party measure and it is expected it will receive the full Republican vote.

Interstate Liquor Bill.

Representative Landley of Kentucky today introduced the interstate liquor shipment bill prepared by the Anti-Saloon league to obviate the objection of unconstitutionality urged against the Littlefield bill. The objection to the Littlefield bill was that it made interstate shipments of liquor subject to state laws immediately upon crossing the boundary, which was claimed by its opponents to be an attempted delegation of congressional power and therefore unconstitutional.

The new measure provides for direct exercise of congressional power by itself prohibiting the shipment or transportation of liquor to any state, territory or district of the United States, or part of same, where such shipment could not legally be made within the same. It is designed to protect both prohibition states and dry territory within local option states.

In Memory of Powers.

The house convened in special session Saturday for the purpose of eulogies on the life, character and public services of the late Representative Llewellyn Powers of the Fourth Maine congressional district, who died July 28. The speakers paid a high tribute to the accomplishments of Powers as a public servant. Representative Allen of Maine was speaker pro tem for the occasion.

With the convening of a new congress scarcely more than a month distant, the selection of the standing committees of the next house, and particularly the award of chairmanships, has become the subject of keen speculation at the capitol and the source of some anxiety.

The understanding is that the rule of seniority will be followed in selecting heads of committees, but there may be some exceptions. In cases in which the chairmen of committees in the present congress were re-elected, it is expected that they will be retained in their present places, with the possible exception of Mr. Fowler of New Jersey, chairman of the committee on banking and currency. There are, however, some important committees whose chairmen will not be members of the next house, and the selection of their successors is causing no little speculation. Among these committees are those on the judiciary, of which Mr. Jenkins of Wisconsin is the chairman; interstate and foreign commerce, Col Hepburn of Iowa, chairman; rivers and harbors, Senator-elect Burton, chairman and postoffices and postroads, Mr. Overstreet of Indiana, chairman. These are four of the most imortant committees of the house, and the chairmanship of each is highly prized.

First After Burton.

The name of Representative De Alavas Alexander of Buffalo is strongly mentioned in connection with two of these committees. He will be the ranking member of the committee on rivers and harbors after Chairman Burton of Ohio assumes his senatorial toga, and he is also third on the judiciary committee, Mr. Parker of New Jersey being second. With the renewed agitation in the Middle West for waterway improvements, there has sprung up a keen desire to keep the chairmanship of the rivers and harbors committee in that territory. For this reason Mr. Alexander's appointment as chairman does not appeal strongly to the Western representation, which sentiment also appeals to Mr. Lawrence, the next member.

The Western members want Representative James H Davidson of Wisconsin, who ranks after Mr. Lawrence, and comes from a state that loses the important chairmanship of the judiciary.

Unless Hepburn decides to contest for his seat in the house and the chairmanship on the committee or interstate nd foreign commerce is left vacant on that account, there will be a big problem to be solved in that committee. The ranking member below Hepburn is James S. Sherman, vice president-elect. Next comes Messrs. Wanger of Pennsylvania and Mann of Illinois, respectively. The latter's activity on the floor of the house and in this committee is being urged as a reason why he should be given the appointment. In this connection the suggestion has been made that Mr. Wanger be appointed chairman of the postoffice and postroads committee to succeed Chairman Overstreet of Indiana, retired.

May Urge Stafford.

Mr. Wanger is now chairman of the committee on expenditures in the postoffice department, the only one of this class of committees that is active. Representative Stafford of Wisconsin may be pressed for the postoffice chairmanship, although J. J. Gardner of New Jersey, who outranks him on that committee, is said to be satisfied with the chairmanship of the committee on labor. Representative Sherry of Connecticut, the oldest man in the house, and chairman of the committee on alcoholic liquor traffic is among the other members of the postoffice committee mentioned as possible successors to Mr. Overstreet as chairman.

It is generally conceded that Mr. Perkins of New York will succeed Mr. Cousins of Iowa as chairman of the committee on foreign affairs.

LOSS OF LIFE WAS SMALL

While accidents on the Great Lakes during 1908 were sufficiently numerous, says the Marine Review, the total losses appear to have been slight. The subtraction from the available tonnage of the lake fleet was insignificant The only important loss in the ore fleet was the steamer D. M. Clemson, which disappeared on Lake Superior ealy in December. Twenty-three lives were lost in the wreck of the Clemson. Had it not been for this unfortunate disaster, the loss of life during 1908 would have been very low. It is low as it is, numbering thirty-three altogether.

Next to the Clemson, the most important losses were the steamers North Star, the Neshoto, Pascal P. Pratt, Chauncey Hurlbut and Peshtigo. Following is a table giving the vessel losses, together with the cause and where lost:

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 1.—Car ferry No. 15 of the Pere Marquette line, which has arrived here, had one of the worst trips ever experienced by Capt. McIsaac in his long service on the lakes. It took fifty-five hours to cross the lake during the storm, while it usually takes twelve hours to make the trip. The crew of forty-five men is worn out by the hard work on the long trip. Much of the time was spent in beating up and down in a course of about twenty-five miles outside Milwaukee harbor.

GOMPERS SAYS HE WILL NOT CEASE TO TALK.

New York, Feb. 1.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, said last night that no court injunction would check his speech. He made this statement in an address before the Central Federated union, where he received a flattering reception. The labor leaders who gathered around him said that if necessary they would all go to jail with him.

"I shall not quit talking," said Gompers in his address, "despite any injunction. I have reverence for the courts, but no respect for some of the judges. With these only are we contesting."

SENATOR NELSON'S GREAT REPORT.

The judiciary committee of the United States senate has filed a report upon the proposed act to amend the Sherman anti-trust law which seems destined to prove one of the really great papers of state. It has already been characterized as "probably the most important legal document that has emanated from the judiciary committee in years." The report was prepared by Senator Nelson of Minnesota and condemns and rejects with the most incisive logic and the most robust language the proposal to amend the anti-trust law.

Proposals for the amendment of the law have come from the most widely varying sources. The bill now condemned by the judiciary committee of the senate has the approval of Seth Low, Samuel Gompers and President Roosevelt. It has been urged by the National Civic Federation, by representatives of great business enterprises and by prominent labor leaders. The most strenuous efforts were made at the last session of congress to secure the bill's enactment into law and its advocates have been active at the present session.

Notwithstanding the formidable array of forces urging an amendment of the law, there seems to be throughout the country a profound conviction that the law should not be tampered with and in this conviction The Herald has shared. This feeling and the warnings of publicists have thus far stayed action upon the proposed amendments. The efforts and arguments of great business interests and of great labor leaders have been looked upon as an unwarranted attempt on the part of special interests to secure special privileges while the indorsement of the National Civic Federation and of President Roosevelt is a mystery which no one has yet explained.

Now comes the sweeping condemnation of Senator Nelson's report from the senate judiciary committee. The report declares that "to amend the anti-trust act as suggested by the bill would be to entirely emasculate it, and to all practical purposes render it nugatory as a remedial statute." The amendment proposed to grant immunity from criminal prosecution and also from civil prosecution to certain persons and associations within the discretion of the interstate commerce commission and the head of the bureau of corporations. The treatment of this proposition by Senator Nelson is one of the striking features of this notable document. The report declares that such a privilege as that contemplated by the amendment would restore the "dispensing power" enjoyed and so tyrannically used by the English kings prior to William and Mary and shows that one of the provisions of the Declaration of Rights granted by William and Mary was that "the dispensing power as lately exercised and assumed had no legal existence." The report unsparingly condemns what it characterizes as an attempt to "confer a power upon the mere head of a bureau that the parliament of England was unwilling to confer upon the king, and which was regarded as a menace to liberty."

The report also deals most frankly with the feature of the proposed bill which would authorize certain "reasonable restraints of trade," in other words, the boycott, and declares that such a provision, injecting into the anti-trust act the question whether an agreement or a combination is reasonable or unreasonable, "would render the act as a criminal or penal statute indefinite and uncertain, and to that extent utterly nugatory and void."

The report goes to the very vitals of the underlying fundamental principles of the present day question of the relations of government to commercial life. The principles involved have already been an issue in a national campaign and the report will unquestionably form the basis for a discussion of the most widespread interest and of the highest importance.

PALACE OF THE STATES.

F. W. Fitzpatrick, formerly of Duluth, whose proposal for a new department of the national government, and for a new cabinet officer to be known as the secretary of public works, is receiving considerable attention throughout the country, has come forward with another scheme which is almost Utopian in its attractiveness,—and probably also in its impossibility.

Mr. Fitzpatrick's proposal is for a "Palace of the States," a grand, elaborately complete and tremendously big building at the national capital to be used as the headquarters of the various states and to be erected by funds furnished by the states. The building would have exhibition rooms for each state, postoffices for each state where visitors from that state could get their mail together with all the news of the hour from the home state, information bureaus for visitors, offices for every senator and congressman, committee rooms, caucus rooms, etc.; in fact, a "species of headquarters for the transient and permanent people in Washington from the several states." It is designed also to make the building a grand convention hall, where the largest gatherings from the states may be held, a fitting place and ample room for the inaugural ball, "hall of vast dimensions where national ceremonies could be carried on with the pomp and dignity they deserve, and minor halls for conventions of any size and number that could simultaneously convene."

Such a structure would have to be built at the expense of the states, and Mr. Fitzgerald estimates that $200,000 from each state would do it. The city of Washington could chip in a million for approaches, of course, and the national government, which would use the building for many functions, would naturally be a liberal contributor. The project was first broached about ten years ago, was revived three years ago and is now under discussion again.

Such a building would without question be very valuable to the states and to the nation. It would also in the end save money, for without it, the states and the national government will spend more money for separate buildings which will not be nearly so satisfactory from either the practical or the artistic standpoint. But that the building will ever take on form anywhere but on paper may be doubted. The plan involves the consent of all, or practically all of the states, and that consent can never be secured. The objection will be raised that it is just a Washington scheme to beautify Washington, if Washington wants it let Washington build it. We could as easily secure the consent of all the counties of Minnesota—and the money—for a grand county building at St. Paul, or the consent of the range towns for a range building in Duluth. Local jealousy of the big center would inevitably defeat such a project.

If the former Duluthian will confine his energies to his proposal for a department of public works he will probably accomplish more for the good of the nation. His palace of the states is too ideal to command the pocketbooks of forty-six separate and self-centered states.

PUBLICITY IN POLITICS.

The demand for a law to compel newspapers to disclose their ownership is in line with the effort to secure the largest possible publicity in regard to all matters of general public interest, and particularly with regard to all that has to do with politics.

It is only within the past two or three years that we have wakened to the fact that the evil of politics is all done in the dark. Political moves that must be made in the open light of day, where every citizen may see them begin, carry on their operations and come to an end, cannot be evil; they must be honest; they must be in the interest of all, not for the benefit of the few at the expense of the many. So we suddenly awoke to the fact that secret political contributions to political campaign funds are evil, allowing great interests, with their ample means, to place public officials under the heaviest obligations to them and making it inevitable that the public official shall consider that obligation even before he considers the duty which he is elected to perform. So satisfactorily has publicity in campaign contributions worked that we are beginning to look about us for other things to uncover. Among these is the ownership of newspapers and the legislature of Minnesota and other legislatures are now considering bills providing that know. Hence the attempt to compel by law the disclosure of the ownership of newspapers.

The end sought is most desirable. The newspaper is a semi-public institution. Through its news and editorial columns it forms the opinions of the voter. It is more powerful in political campaigns than all other influences combined. It is certainly highly desirable that the public should know whether the newspaper is honest in the convictions it expresses, or whether the newspaper is making its arguments and coloring its news with an end of its own in view. Is the newspaper honestly devoting its tremendous influence for the public welfare, or is it using its great power to profit particular individuals? That's the question. The public has a right to know. Hence the attempt to compel by law the disclosure of the ownership of newspapers.

Will the proposed laws accomplish this desirable end? It is to be feared, nay it is practically certain, that they will not. Cases at law have developed the fact that the stock of many newspapers is held in the names of persons who are not the real owners. More than once has it been discovered in Minnesota, that the real owner of a newspaper was nowhere to be discovered in the investigation of the newspaper's books. Besides, he who has title to a newspaper may be in the grip of a mortgagee or he may be compelled to defer to the opinion of a bondholder. Again, will the filing of affidavits be any more conclusive of newspaper ownership than the filing of affidavits, under the corrupt practices act, of the expenses of candidates?

The agitation for publicity in politics, however, is a most healthful one. The Princeton Union suggests, apparently in a spirit of levity, that the newspaper be compelled also to disclose the voluntary contributions made to it by politicians and corporations. The suggestion is of the very best. It is exceedingly desirable that the public should know such things. There is yet no practicable plan by which it may be done, however. The public conscience is being aroused to the necessity of publicity. The difficulties in the way are great, but the benefits to be received are immeasurably greater and there is every indication that the demand for publicity in all matters political will continue to grow and that results will be achieved which will be most salutary.

THE PLEA FOR STATE DEVELOPMENT.

The striking thing about Governor Johnson's 1909 message to the legislature is the earnestness, vigor and convincing logic with which he argues for state development.

The message may be divided into two parts, the plea for state development and the usual recommendations to the legislature. The latter include an exhaustive discussion of the status of Minnesota's railway legislation and litigation, which, next to state development, is the most important matter the people of Minnesota have to consider at the present time. But in a larger sense the whole message is an ardent plea for the realization of the unrivaled resources of Minnesota and it is this singleness of purpose, rising above all party standards, which is winning the message commendation on all sides. Even the Duluth News Tribune calls it Rooseveltian and the St. Paul Dispatch says: "Governor Johnson in his recommendations completely sinks the party leader in the public servant."

In this plea for state development Governor Johnson is a public servant rendering the state the greatest possible service. It is because of this plea that the message is so unusually long, for the governor sets forth a longer and a grander list of resources than that of which any other state in the Union can boast. So concisely does he present the state's wealth of territory and resources that the message will be a mine of information in which writers and speakers, legislators and public officials, and every possible exponent of state development will dig for facts. Inspiration is there, too, and a prophetic vision of Northern Minnesota as the theater of "a development which during the ensuing decade and generation may be the most notable on the American continent."

Partizanship, though much derided, has accomplished many good things, but there is real statesmanship in Governor Johnson's action-compelling plea for the development of the state's resources.

Cuba ought to postpone its domestic quarrel at least until after the wedding ceremonies with Liberty are duly celebrated.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Dr. Sinclair of Coleraine, who was a guest at the St. Louis Saturday, stated that a great number of university men are coming to the iron ranges. The latest acquisition at Coleraine is "Mose" Strathern, center rush for four years on the University of Minnesota football team, and chosen for the All-Western team two out of the four years he was a member of the Gopher team.

Strathern is located at Coleraine, at the hospital there, and according to his friend, Dr. Sinclair, is proving just as good a man in the field of medicine as he was on the gridiron.

Dr. Sinclair, who is a graduate of Michigan, says the range is a great field for the college man with a technical training, and that each year the number of college men on the range is being increased. They find that the opportunities for the right kind of a man are unlimited. It is the same way with the mining engineer, according to the doctor, and the number of college men to be found in the mines of the range is showing an unusual increase.

"They have the best spirit that I have ever seen, up here in this part of the state," said Dr. Sinclair. "They will stand by their own interests, and although different parts of the range will have differences of opinion, and will express these differences of opinion in no uncertain manner, when it comes to some question involving the good of the range as a whole, you will find that the people of the range are united more closely than a bunch of Irishmen would be against the hated enemy, the Orangemen.

"It is one of the best spirits I have ever seen in any part of the country, I have heard lots of the spirit of the West, and of how the people in that part of the country boast of their cities and country, but if they can beat the spirit and loyalty that is prevalent on the Minnesota iron ranges, they will have to be very enthusiastic and loyal."

"I don't think that the present trouble in Cuba will ever amount to much, and even if it should come to a matter of a ragamuffin armies, the whole affair will be a huge joke to people who have any sense of the ridiculous and the exaggerated 'honor' of the Latin countries," said Alvin J. Kratz, a commercial man who has visited Central America.

Mr. Kratz was at the Lenox yesterday, and in the course of a conversation over the ridiculous revolutions that are of common occurrence in South America, stated that most of the battles were fought with a goodly space intervening between the range of the bullets.

"For instance, here is a good instance of the way they carry on their battles, or, we should say, near battles," said Mr. Kratz.

"There was a revolution in Guatemala. A ragamuffin army, one of those nondescript forces that would be the laughing stock of any American, marched up to the operator of one of the railroads. The station was away from any village or city, and, with a show of bravado, the members of the army marched up and surrounded the depot. Then they demanded that the operator send a message. The message was to be sent clear over to another part of the state, in a roundabout way, and was to the leader of another force of soldiers, the force that the revolutionists were after. The message read that a great force of men was about to attack them, and was signed by the leader of the ragamuffin army.

"The message was sent. It was received by an American operator at the other end of the line, and that chap marched boldly out to the fastness of the royal troops, or whatever they were, and delivered the message of the leader of the ragamuffin troops.

"When they read that message the members of the royal staff were panic-stricken. They held a hasty conference and lost no time in beating a retreat. A few days later, when the leaders of the resovlutionists felt sure that the state troops had vacated the place, they marched their force into the retreat and celebrated the victory.

"However, it was only a few days later when a like message was received by the revolutionists which informed them that a superior force was about to attack them. They, in turn, beat a hasty retreat and once more the loyal state troops held the mountain stronghold.

"That is an example of the way they fight in Central America. If they have a revolution in Cuba it will be upon the same order. There might be one or two fatalities, but the death list would not be serious.

"One time down in Central America the troops of the man who aspired to become president, attacked the town. At least from the noise of firing, we had reason to believe that they were attacking the town. We trembled that night, and in the morning went out to see the carnage. One mule was the result of the firing. The armies were not nearer than a mile to each other."

THE WEATHER.

The mild spell following Saturday's cold snap came as predicted, but it will be short lived. The weather man predicts a return of zero weather tonight. Yesterday and today were ideal winter days, with the mercury not too low for comfort, and the bright, snappy weather made walking yesterday a popular form of amusement.

A year ago today the weather was mild, and it was snowing.

The sun rose this morning at 7:33 and will set this afternoon at 5:10, making nine hours and thirty-seven minutes of sunlight.

"Barometric depressions were central this morning north of Lake Superior, and in the Puget Sound region caused light rain or snow in the Ohio valley, eastern lake region, British Columbia, Idaho, Washington and Oregon during the past twenty-four hours, besides somewhat milder temperature near Lake Superior and over the Upper Mississippi, Upper Missouri and Red River valleys and North Pacific districts. The Northwestern cold wave and high pressure area has advanced to the Ohio and Lower Missouri valleys, its influence causing low temperature in those districts as well as in the Atlantic and gulf states. Freezing weather prevails southward to and including the gulf and Central Florida. An area of high pressure has advanced over Saskatchewan. The easterly movement of this high area will be attended by colder weather at the Head of the Lakes tonight."

DULUTH'S HUSTLERS.

Montevideo, Minn., Leader: We greatly admire the hustling qualities and public-spirited enterprse of the citizens and business men of Duluth. They are wide-awake, broad-guaged and enthusiastic in their support of any and every enterprise that gives promise of real benefit to their city and community, and they have a faith that not only can, but actually does remove mountains. With them "nothing is too good for Duluth," and they act on that principle and go after the very best, in any way that fetches it, by anything in the way of united enthusiastic effort can. They can look a big proposition, involving millions, squarely in the face without flinching, and at the same time give due consideration to the many lesser things that are of real consequence and have a bearing on the future prosperity and greatness of the city. We presume they possess the usual amount of personal ambition and are not at all forgetful of themselves and of their personal opportunities, but those we have met are certainly auie to look way beyond self and to take thought of others as well. Whether it is the enlargement or improvement of their vast shipping service, the extension of a network of railroads in a dozen directions to secure and hold the coming wholesale and jobbing trade, the opening up of stock and dairy farms on their stripped lands, the improvement of the country roads so that the truck farmers as well as the owners of fine horses may "get there," or any of a hundred things of real importance, the people of Duluth are disposed to "sit up and take notice," and then get a move on, and do things for the public good. Not satisfied with what they alone can do, they have now joined in a move for a St. Louis county citizen's club; a consolidation of all the public-spirited clubs and associations of the entire county, and, by the way, the county is big, and there are a lot of them, and through this new organization they now expect to do still greater things for the county, the city and the northern part of the state. It is such public-spirited enterprise as this that makes its mark in the world. It is an inspiration to meet these men and to note how they do things. Duluth is most fortunate in having a large number of men of this class, and because of this, as well as because of her splendid resources and her most favorable position at the Head of the Lakes, she is destined to become one of the greatest and most prosperous of all the great inland cities on this continent.

"Tell Me So!"

I know that somewhere in your loving heart
There is a sheltered nook, reserved for me;
A little kingdom, where I reign supreme,
However small my tiny realm may be.

I know that in the music of your soul
There chimes with mine a chord so sweet and low;
The echoes flood our hearts—but, dearest one,
'T'would be so sweet to hear you tell me so!

Perhaps you feel that I should be content
To know that I loved, but in my heart
I long to hear the happy story told,
For tender words are Love's divinest part!

For if we parch with thirst, what if the streams
Shall flood their banks, in wild tempestuous flow,
If not one drop shall reach our fevered lips?
Ah, darling, if you love me—tell me so!

Our lips will soon be closed by angel hands,
For, after all, there is not far to go,
And life will end in silence, hard and cold,
So, darling, if you love me—tell me so!

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Albert Lea Standard: According to Governor Johnson Minnesota is It, and whenever people hear him make an address like that in Albert Lea, Friday, they all fervently affirm that he is also.

Moorhead Citizen: France does not allow her president to appear in public on horseback, for fear that he will captivate popular favor or, on the other hand, make his high office ridiculous. But if France had a Roosevelt for president she would not have much chance to dictate about his horsemanship stunts.

Stillwater Gazette: The question of tonnage tax is one of the most important to the average Duluth and range resident. The question of opening of navigation or the future crops are insignificant to the Northern Minnesota citizen as compared to that tonnage tax that has been battered around, turned over, turned down, turned loose, yanked here and there, until there is mightly little left of the original, but if you desire an argument all you need to say to a Duluth resident is to declare for a tonnage tax. Then there is something doing for fair.

Red Wing Daily Republican: The Republicans in congress have finally called a halt on further personal abuse of President Roosevelt. It is about time. If there is nothing of value to the country that the congress of the United States can do, they had better adojurn. If there is, they had better get down to business and do it. Bitter attacks upon its chief executive will never make the country better, richer or happier.

Mankato Free Press: Governor Johnson has received a letter from J. M. Hawthorne, a former St. Paul attorney, now of Seattle, saying that the Minnesota club of the coast city is undertaking the erection of a monument to James J. Hill on the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon exposition. The grounds belong to the state university, and the plan of the promoters is to have the monument a permanent fixture. The base will be of St. Cloud granite, to be surmounted by a life-sized statue of the railroad man. Mr. Hawthorne is chairman of the committee, and former Governor D. M. Clough is a member.

Anoka Union: Minding other people's business is a trait well developed in President Roosevelt.

Lake Crystal Union: State Senator Works has introduced a bill in the legislature to pension the soldiers who fought the Indians during the massacre in '62. This seems to be all right.

Austin Transcript: Prominent criminologists and alienists throughout the country are interested in the experimental work of Dr. Henry Upson of Cleveland, Ohio, who believes that criminal instincts as well as many nervous disorders and even insanity, are caused in numerous instances by defective teeth. Important, if true.

Princeton Union: Will Secretary Wilson please tell us whether his recent decision affects only the variety of bleached flower known as the peroxide blonde?

OPENING NEW MINE.

Pearson Mining Company Starts Operations Near Nashwauk.

Nashwauk, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Pearson Mining company is opening up a new property known as the Pearson mine, located about three-quarters of a mile north of the La Rue mine.

Owing to the great depth of the surface, the property will be developed underground.

A. P. Stillman of Hibbing, who, with Joseph Sellwood of Duluth, is chief owner in the mines, will personally superintend development work. The ore will be sent to market over the new division of the Great Northern, now under construction, connecting Hibbing and Nashwauk.

Development is being pushed as fast as possible, so as to get the ore into shipment as early as possible after the spring season opens up.

The dimensions of the ore body in the new property have not been made known to the public, but it is understood there is a big deposit in sight. All the mines in the Nashwauk district are preparing for a busy season.

RANGE KNIGHTS PLAN MEETING AT HIBBING.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—There will be a meeting here Feb. 10 of many members of the Knights of Pythias of the range towns. Representatives will be present from the lodges of Eveleth, Virginia, Aurora, Biwabik, Chisholm and Bovey. Grand Chancellor Deforest Ward will be the guest of the local chapter.

Two district meetings are held yearly. The summer meeting was held at Eveleth.

DISORDERLY HOUSE IS NOT TO BE TOLERATED.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The mass meeting of the Adams location and city people, at Missabe Mountain township hall, yesterday afternoon, discussed thoroughly the matter of the building on the location of a disorderly house. Judge Moylan, the chairman, explained the call for the meeting. Most of the ministers were present and spoke. All were in favor of getting the house out of the way, at least out of sight and hearing.

After much discussion a committee composed of Messrs. Furlong, Ryan, Trevarthan, Williams and Judge Moylan was appointed to see Mr. Hill, the owner of the house and to ask him to stop building, and at least move his building to some place on the eighty acres that he is supposed to have bought. The committee reported that Mr. Hill was in Minneapolis and would not return for three weeks, and that his representative, a Mr. Williams, said he had nothing to do with it. The Missabe Mountain township board was requested to have an injunction served on the owners, through the county attorney. President Springer of the board, who was present, said he would write to the county attorney, and that if nothing came from that he would go to Duluth personally and see that official.

VIRGINIA HAS GOOD SERVICE

That Is Conclusion of Conference With Mesaba Telephone Officials.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the Mesaba Telephone company is giving Virginia a good telephone service and is charging only reasonable rates was the conclusion arrived at Saturday evening at a conference in which President Osborn of the city council, F. E. Lister of Eveleth, district superintendent for the Mesaba Telephone company, and Manager Godfref of the local exchange took part.

Some one raised the point at the last meeting of the council that the telephone company was discriminating against Virginians in its rentals. For example, the quarterly telephone rate at Bovey is $3.75; in Virginia it is $4.75.

Mr. Lister came here Saturday evening to explain why this was so. In Bovey, he said, there are only 120 subscribers, and they are connected with a magnetic switchboard, which cannot make long distance calls. The Virginia exchange, he went on to say, has 475 subscribers and free service is given them to Sparta, McKinley, Eveleth, Gilbert and other places, all together having over 500 'phones. The Virginia office has long distance connections and is open twenty-four hours per day, seven days of the week. Bovey's telephone office is closed at night.

"I see the justice of your statement," President Osborn said, "and am now satisfied that the Mesaba Telephone company is dealing with us fairly."

The subject will be dropped at the council's next meeting tomorrow night.

MONEY MISSING AFTER EMBRACE

When Mioli Grew Affectionate His Friends Lost Money.

Mioli Vignjiol was arrested Saturday afternoon charged with robbing Frank Kolish of $77, while the two were in a Bowery saloon. Yesterday, the alleged thief was identified by George Kosovitch as the man who was with him when $45 was stolen from him a week ago.

When searched at the police station, $305 was found sewed up in the lining of one of the prisoner's coat sleeves. He claims to have earned the money by working in the woods.

At the time of the $77 theft, Vignjiol and Kolish were drinking together in a Bowery saloon. They had several drinks, and then walked together to the rear of the building. Kolish claimed the other man placed his arm affectionately around his shoulders, and that afterwards the money was missing. The police were immediately notified, and the arrest followed.

The money disappeared from Kosovitch's pocket a week ago in almost exactly the same manner. The two were drinking together, and the money was gone after Mioli left.

SEVEN CAUGHT IN GAMBLING RAID

Police Break Up Poker Game in the Torrey Building.

The police Saturday night raided a room in the Torrey building, and arrested seven men, charging them with gambling. All the men were released on bail. Capt. Fiskett with seven officers made the raid. No money was in sight on the table, but it is claimed the men were playing poker, and that there was a banker who exchanged the chips for good coin of the realm, and later exchanged them back again, in cases where the players were lucky enough to have any chips left.

The men appeared in court this morning and entered a plea of not guilty. C. E. French is charged with conducting the place. The other names, some of which are fictitious, are Thomas Jones, George Flynn, Henry George, Eli Brusso, Thomas Smith and David Low.

Their hearing was set for Feb. 8.

presented a resolution calling upon President Van Horn of Indiana, either to retract his characterization of the international board as "wooden" or withdraw from the convention. Mr. Van Horn poured oil on the troubled waters by explaining he had meant the board was helpless with the organization's constitution and that he had not charged its members with lack of intelligence or integrity.

On the question of accepting the report of the committee approving the action of the president and the international board, in suspending Van Horn and his associates, it was obvious that the yeas had it, but the anti-Lewis faction demanded a roll call and succeeded in mustering the fifty delegates whose votes were necessary to make the demand legal.

There was a storm of disapproval and the charge was freely made that there was an organized effort to impede the progress of the convention. The roll call proceeded in disorder and with frequent bickerings over alleged attempts to pervert the intention of delegates, especially those who do not well understand the English language.

woodsman's rubbers, and heavy mittens. The man in life must have measured 5 feet 5 inches tall and weighing about 130 pounds. He was not identified until this morning, when Andrew Whalen, timekeeper on the docks, recognized him as a former employe of the company.

The fact that he wore heavy mittens, and the further fact that no blood was found upon them, leads the police to discredit the suicide theory. The body was lying face downward, the hands crossed before the breast. No knife or other weapon that might have done the cutting was found near the remains.

Coroner McCuen advances the theory that it was a case of suicide. He says this theory is not by any means disproved by the fact that no knife was found near the body, and asserts that with the wounds inflicted the man could have walked a considerable distance before falling. He believes that if given medical attendance immediately after being wounded, the man could have been saved. No vital part of the throat was severed, said the doctor, and he also stated it was possible that the man froze to death before he had a chance to die of his wounds. He thinks the direction of the wounds, from left to right, with a downward motion of the arm, supports the suicide theory.

DIDN'T KNOW

Coffee Was the Cause.

Many daily habits, particularly of eating and drinking, are formed by following our elders.

In this way ill health is often fastened upon children. A Ga. lady says:

"I had been allowed to drink coffee ever since I can remember, but even as a child I had a week stomach which frequently refused to retain food.

"The taste of coffee was in my mouth all the time and was, as I found out later, the cause of the stomach rebelling against food.

"I now see that it was only from following the example of my elders that I formed and continued the miserable habit of drinking coffee. My digestion remained poor, nerves unstrung, frequent headache, and yet I did not suspect the true cause.

Another trouble was a bad, muddy complexion, for which I spent time and money for creams, massaging, etc., without any results.

"After I was married I was asked to try Postum, and would you believe it, I an old coffee toper, took to Postum from the very first. We made it right—according to directions on the pkg. and it had a most delicate flavour and I at once quit coffee, with the happiest results.

"I now have a perfectly clear, smooth skin, fine digestion and haven't had a headache in over two years.

"There's a Reason."

GREAT WESTERN FOR GRAND TRUNK

Report That President Wilson Is Purchasing Former's Stock.

Montreal, Feb. 1.—The Grand Trunk railway has commenced negotiations with the Great Western, with a view of purchasing the latter. The purpose of the Grand Trunk is to counteract the purchase of the Wisconsin Central by the Canadian Pacific. To successfully compete with its rival, the Grand Trunk has decided it must have a line from Chicago to St. Paul and thence to Winnipeg.

The Canadian government is understood to have promised assistance in the matter of finding a part, at least, of the necessary cash. Should the Grand Trunk manage to put through this deal, railway men point out that, after the completion of a national transcontinental road, it will be in a more advantageous position than that enjoyed by any other railway on the continent. In addition to having its tracks directly into Canada paralleling the Canadian Pacific railway, it would have its own lines from Montreal to Chicago and from there another route by way of St. Paul, connecting with the main line again at Winnipeg.

A large part of the Great Western stock is held in London. Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, the president of the Grand Trunk, has been in Canada for the last ten days conferring with the government at Ottawa and working for the purchase of sufficient stock of the Great Western to give him complete control when the road is re-organized.

RAILROAD CASE WILL BE ARGUED

Dispute Between Soo and Terminal Roads Before District Court.

Arguments will be made before Judge Dibell at the special term next Saturday in the condemnation proceedings brought by the Duluth Terminal railroad to secure a right of way for an approach to the Interstate bridge. The appointment of commissioners to appraise the property to be condemned is opposed by the city of Duluth, which claims that the Duluth Terminal must first secure a franchise from the city before attempting to condemn a right of way over city highways.

If the condemnation proceedings are successful, the franchise secured by the Soo road from the city council for the construction of an approach, will be nullified. In the meantime, the Soo road is going ahead on the work under its franchise and the approach will be constructed immediately, it is expected, regardless of who wins.

Prescription For Stomach

Digests Any Meal in Five Minutes.

(Medical News.)

This simple but powerful prescription will enable those with "finicky" stomachs to eat what they please, when and where they please, without any distressing after effects. Says a noted medical man: Always prescribe the following for indigestion, acute or chronic dyspepsia, sour stomach, constipation, depression, languor, blues, wind and gas on stomach and bowels, heart palpitation and biliousness. The results are prompt and lasting from these harmless but powerfully blended essences. Take a six-ounce bottle and get two ounces of essence of pepsin. Mix and shake well; then take one or two teaspoonfuls after each meal. One spoonful before eating will give a good appetite. One or two at retiring will relieve constipation. Give it to children who have stomachache, bad breath or bowel trouble. It may be taken freely, being entirely harmless.

ENGLISH SPARROW CLUB.

Forest and Stream: In Essex, England, the Elsenham Sparrow club flourishes. It holds a meeting and dinner once a year, at which time the members give an account of their efforts toward keeping down the sparrow pest. Its president, Walter Glibey, describes its work as follows:

"All the farmers and most of those who have gardens in the parish, which covers 1,830 acres, and some tenants o fneighboring farms belong to the club, which was established seventeen years ago The rules are very simple: Each member undertakes to kill one sparrow for each acre of his holding between Sept. 1 and May 1 and sends the heads to the local linkeeper who keeps a record of them. If the member's tally falls short of the total he ought to send he is fined one penny for each head lacking, the money going to a fund which is spent in refreshments at the annual supper of the club held at the inn. The sum raised by fines, however, is, I am informed, practically nil.

"Two sparrows an acre were killed annually during the first two or three years of the club's existence, and the average number of heads now sent in is about 3,000 a year. In addition, the members kill a large number of young sparrows during the breeding season, but of these no record is kept."

FATTENS ON MOTOR FINES.

Motor World: Local activity in the suppression of automobile speeding has been the cause of bringing into the little township of Abington, Pa., the tidy sum of $800 since the first of May. During that time no less than sixty fines have been administered, ranging from $10 to $55, fifty-seven cases have been dismissed, fines suspended in twenty cases and warning given in no less than 162 other instances.

SOCIAL EVIL DISCUSSED

Ministers Hear Report On the Campaign Against Vice.

Letters From Other Cities Are Received and Read.

At the meeting of the Duluth Ministerial association held this morning in the Y. M. C. A. building, the red light district was the subject under discussion.

Some two months ago a committee was appointed to find out by communicating with other cities, how the evil is being handled throughout the country, what success is being made, and what method has been found most successful in conducting a campaign against it.

At the meeting this morning, the committee reported by reading letters from New York, London, Eng., Chicago and many of the larger cities throughout the country.

The general impression given by the letters seemed to be that the evil could not well be done away with altogether, but that it could be placed under control and modified greatly.

The most interesting of the letters was, perhaps, the one from Des Moines, Iowa. In that city an organized crusade to rid the city of the evil entirely, is being waged with great success.

The ministers are greatly interested in the experiment in Duluth, and will aid in the movement in any way possible. Many of them seemed to agree that it would not be possible to do away with it entirely, but that it would be possible to greatly reduce it.

They are well satisfied with the way things are going on in the city at the present time.

The meeting was not an open one, nobody not a member of the association was admitted.

FIRE HITS CASS LAKE

Three Buildings Burned and Fire Probably Under Control.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The worst conflagration that has occurred here since the fire of 1902, broke out last night in Henry Mullen's saloon. For a time it looked as if the entire town would go, as the wind was blowing a heavy gale.

The firemen, with a half dozen streams of water in operation, were soon on the scene. They battled the flames all night and at 1 p. m. today they are apparently under control.

Three buildings have already been burned. They are: Mullen's saloon, the Globe restaurant, and the Old Log Cabin saloon building. The Tedford hotel was for a time entirely despaired of, but it is safe with a little damage. It is hard to tell what the loss will be, but it will reach the $20,000 mark. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

COPPERS' BALL AT THE ARMORY

Expected That the Big Event Will be Largely Attended.

This will be an evening of joy for Duluth's policemen, and for the policemen's friends, or such of them as dance. It's just as well that all their friends do not care to dance, for, of course, the Armory wouldn't hold more than a small fraction of the crowd if they did.

The "copper" annual ball is the big attraction in Duluth tonight. It is the event of the year in big dances. Everybody buys a ticket, to show their good will towards the members of the Police Relief association, into whose treasury the profits go, and hundreds who do not care to keep time to the music on the floor, visit the Armory galleries to watch the gay throng underneath.

The sale of tickets has been large, and all indications points to a huge success for tonight's affair. It will be the best of the good ones. Flaaten's full orchestera will furnish the music. Chartered cars will run until the early morning hours, carrying people home, both to the East and West ends.

NEW HOUGHTON CHURCH DEDICATED ON SUNDAY.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new Presbyterian church on College avenue was dedicated yesterday, three services being held, Dr. Willis Craig, president of the Chicago Presbyterian seminary, and Dr. William Bryant, a former pastor of the church, now general missionary for Michigan, taking part in the ceremonies which were largely attended.

The pastor of Grace M. E. church and many of that church's congregation participtaed in the morning services.

There has died in the workhouse at Dorchester, England, a woman named Harriett Hammett, a native of Tolpuddle, who was admitted to the workhouse in 1844. As her age at death was 69, she must have donned workhouse garbs when 5 years old. The only home she ever remembered was "the house."

The first attempt to steer a balloon was made in Paris in 1784.

ARE AFTER TEAMSTERS

Men Who Are Cruel to Horses Will be Punished.

Humane Society Places Special Officer at Fifth Avenue.

Cruelty to overloaded horses on Duluth hillsides must stop.

This is the edict that has gone forth from the local branch of the Humane society. There will be arrests in future wherever occasion demands, and stiff punishment where extreme measures seem necessary.

Saturday the society had a special police officer detailed to watch teams and teamsters on the Fifth avenue west hillside. He was instructed to see that horses were not inhumanely treated while toiling up the avenue.

Numerous cases where the horses were doing more than should have been required of them were brought to his attention, and a few words of well meant and beneficial advice to the drivers followed. They promised to do better in future, and were told that if they did not do better they would be arrested and filed.

In three cases men were arrested for cruel treatment to animals doing their best to toil up the steep grade with heavy loads. After being thoroughly frightened, and warned not to repeat the offense, upon pain of severe punishment, the teamsters were released. They promised to be good.

Complaints have been numerous lately of horses being inhumanely treated on the hill avenues. It is particularly hard upon the animals in winter time, when the pavements are slippery. Many of the horses are poorly shod, making their work all the more difficult. They do their best, but when they are overloaded, and poorly shod into the bargain, they often cannot accomplish as much as is expected by inhumane drivers.

The public generally, and particularly that portion of it which is interested in the humane society, has interested itself in the welfare of the poor horses, and everything possible will be done to alleviate their sufferings. The work has the sympathy of the police court judges, and in every instance where it is proven that a man has really been cruel to the animals intrusted to his care, a fine and a lecture have been forthcoming.

KIERAN TELLS ABOUT FINANCES

Funding Company Took Catholic Life Insurance as Collateral.

New York, Feb. 1.—Business methods followed by the Fidelity Funding company were described today by Patrick J. Kiernan, former president of the now bankrupt concern, at a hearing before Referee Peter B. Olney to determine whether the company is amendable to the bankruptcy law. Receivers for the company have already been named.

Kiernan said the company loaned money to Catholic churches and institutions, took mortgages on the property and also took as collateral, life insurance policies on members of the congregation, assigned to the company.

On being requested to give one actual transaction, Kiernan told of the application of St. Joseph's congregation of Milwaukee for a loan of $150,000.

"We gave them immediately $75,000 for which we took their notes," he testified. "These notes were sold to the First National bank of Milwaukee. Later we took a mortgage on the property, called in the notes and issued our own bonds on the mortgage, which we deposited with the Western Trust & Savings bank of Chicago, as trustee."

Interest was charged at from 4 to 4½ per cent on the mortgages, the witness said, but at 6 to 8½ per cent on the notes, this latter to cover the cost of the first premiums on the life insurance policies. These policies were always insisted upon, he declared.

Asked as to the company's working capital, Mr. Kiernan stated that when he went with the company in 1905, its original working capital of $20,000, had been lost in the business. "Inside of a year, however," said the witness, "we had $60,000 working capital."

The Rev. A. A. Nellis, pastor of the Second Baptist church, Auburn, in a recent sermon on the obligation of the church to the community, said that one obligation that should not be shirked was to pay taxes. There is no good reason for church exemption, he believes, and the church should not be a tax dodger.

OVERSTUDY THE CAUSE

West Duluth Boy's Ambition Results in Mental Breakdown.

Will be Examined Before the Probate Court for Insanity.

Carl W. Johnson, an 18-year-old West Duluth boy, fired with ambition to be something in the world, is believed to have broken down under overstudy. His father, Charles A. Johnson, appeared in probate court this morning and filed information of insanity. The boy will be examined this afternoon.

One day a doctor, the next a lawyer, then a traveler, the boy passes from one state of being to another in his diseased mind, according to the information filed by the father. He talks constantly, cannot sleep, and has strange hallucinations as to his position in the world and his condition of life.

The breaking down of his mind has been gradual, it is said, but he was not in very serious condition until last week, when it was necessary to confine him to his home. The father decided it was necessary to turn him over to the care of the state, and if he is adjudged insane this afternoon he will be sent to the state insane asylum at Fergus Falls.

Making Fill of Slag.

About twenty acres of river front have been filled in with slag at the Zenith Furnace company's plant. The slag, when run off from the furnace, goes through water and is granulated and then deposited in the river by troughs. When the company enlarges the coke oven plant, the slag will be used for dock filling. The high wind on Friday damaged the roofs of the casthouse and the coal shed at the furnace to the extent of about $300.

BIBLES IN 500 LANGUAGES.

More Are Sold Than Ever, Despite Growing Disbelief.

Despite the fact, which officers of the American Bible society freely acknowledge, that the reading of the Bible has much decreased among native born Americans, more Bibles are sold and read and more money is given for the work of the society than when everybody believed the Bible literally, says the New York Sun.

Last New Year's Mrs. Russell Sage offered the society $500,000 if it could raise an equal sum during the calendar year. The money is rolling in, and the society sees the million in hand by Jan. 1. The day after Mrs. Sage's offer was made public a New York business man called up the office and said:

"You can put me down for $50,000 if you won't give my name."

A couple of years ago another New York business man entered the office and said: "I believe in the Bible. I am also very much interested in the Mohammedan races. I will give you a piece of property if you will dedicate it to the end of time to the circulation of the Bible among the Mohammedan races." The offer was accepted and the property, a New York office building worth $100,000 was turned over to the society.

The distribution of the Bible to the inhabitants of the earth's surface is practically a work of the last century only. At the beginning of the nineteenth century the Bible existed in only fifty languages. Today in round numbers it exists in 500. The Bible went into more languages during the nineteenth century than in the eighteen previous centuries.

A few weeks ago an item appeared in the papers to the effect that the American Bible society had completed the publication of the Bible in Chamorro, the chief language of the island of Guam. Thus the natives got their first printed book, their first alphabet, a written language and a literature all in one.

All over the world men are doing the same thing. Scores of the world's languages have been supplied with an alphabet and a written form by the translators of the Bible.

Last year, for instance, the society printed a Bible for Pleasant island. Few persons would know where to find Pleasant island on the map. It is a mere dot in the Pacific, 300 miles south of the Caroline islands, with a population of 1,500; the sort of island one reads about in shipwreck stories.

For ten years one lone missionary and his wife have been living there. He learned the language by ear and then set it on paper phonetically. Then he translated the New Testament into it. Then he begged and entreated the Bible society to publish his Bible. The society replied: "We can't afford to publish the Bible in a language spoken by only 1,500 people."

Then the tribe pledged itself to pay for the work if it could have time. So the society sent the missionary a printing press, and he and his native helpers set up and printed the work. Then he sent it to San Francisco, the society paid for binding it, and one more little South Sea island has a written language and literature.

Philologists of the future will study extinct languages by means of these Bibles. Already it is said that Mme. Matteo de Turner's version of the gospels in Quichua is the only key to the languages of the Incas.

Americans have translated the Bible or portions of it into thirty European tongues, forty-three Asiatic, eleven African, nine Oceanic an dtwelve American. American women have made translations into fifteen languages the names of which are unknown to the educated public.

In many cases the Bible is all that will preserve native American language from extinction. Only last year the society published the four Gospels in the Winnebago tongue. There are only 2,000 Winnebagos left. Their children are all learning to read English. In another generation the tribe will be extinct or assimilated. But some one offered to pay for the work for the sake of a few old Indians who would never learn to read English, and it was done.

Two copies of the Gospels in the Seneca language were sold within the past year, one in Arapahoe, four in Dakota, fourteen in Muskogee, twenty-five in Ojibway, 146 in Cherokee and 242 in Choctaw.

Down in Oklahoma the rich Indians, the Cherokees and Choctaws, take a racial pride in preserving their language from oblivion through the use of it in their church life. Although most of the adults read English now, they prefer to use the Bibles in their tribal tongues, and only a few weeks ago a letter reached the Bible House asking if a new edition of the Cherokee hymn book could not be got out form with the Bible.

A notable instance of this tribal pride came within the past year in an order to print the Creek Bible, the expenses to be paid by the Creek Indians of Oklahoma and some of their white neighbors. Mrs. A. E. W. Robertson, a Congregational missionary, made a version of the Scriptures in the Creek or Muskogee language the labor of many years. The order came to publish it after her death.

The board wrote, "Why do you go to such an expense as this when your children all read English? It is foolish." The reply came back, "We want it as a monument to Mrs. Robertson and the Creek language."

One year after its organization, in 1817, the society began the translation of the Gospels into the Delaware and Mohawk tongues. In August, 1908, an order came into the Bible House from a New York Indian for a copy of that old Mohawk Gospel.

It is an historical fact that in 1832 a little party of Indians entered the city of St. Louis, having walked 1,500 miles from a region now included in Idaho. They said they had heard that the white man had a book which was given directly by the Great Spirit and they had come to learn about it. They were directed to Capt. William Clark, the explorer and Indian commissioner. He had no Bible to give them. The story when published resulted in the sending of Methodist and Catholic missionaries to the Nez Perce Indians and in the printing in 1871 of a Nez Perce Bible.

A Cherokee worked out a Cherokee alphabet in 1821, and by 1831 the society had published most of the Bible in that language. The greatest of all the Indian translations was the complete Bible in Dakota, the tongue of the Sioux, published in 1879.

Often the translator has had to create words as well as alphabets. How shall the dweller in some low lying atoll know the word mountain? How write "Lamb of God" for Esquimaux, who know no lambs? "Little seal," the translator had to put it at last.

"Bad to eat" was as near as the translator into Mosquito could get to sin. "Nice smell" had to serve as native Australian for frankincense. In Uganda the translator had to wait five years before he could catch a word that meant plague. Then one day he heard a man bewailing the influx of rats, such as "dibeti" they were. Out came the notebook, down went the long sought word.

How translate the Gospel into a language that has no words for city, marriage, wheat, barley; in which pig, rat and dog exhause the zoological terms; in which the word for five is "my hand," for six "my hand and one," and so on.

Then the revision. An American translated the Gospel of Matthew into Micmac for the Nova Scotian Indians. After all his long toil and faithful proofreading up from the South came the printed word and he read the puzzling sentence, "A pair of snowshoes shall rise up against a pair of snowshoes." One letter wrong has changed "nation into "pair of snowshoes."

But if for some races the translator had to create a written language, for others he worked in fear of a criticism more learned than his own. The story of the Arabic Bible, the greatest story of modern translations and the greatest of all Bibles in a non-Christian tongue, reminds one of Aldus and his Venice print shop.

The first task was to create a type which should pass muster with the fastidious and artistic Mohammedan scholars, who to this day prefer manuscript books to printed voulmes. Including vowel points 1,800 different types are necessary to print an Arabic alphabet.

The creation of the steel punches with which to strike the matrices to cast the type in a form to disarm all criticism, and their eventual casting at Leipsic, whither they were transported overland from Syria, took five years. The whole work proceeded at the same rate. Every proof was corrected by the 100 leading authorities in the world, Syrian, Arabian, American and European.

No Occidental can conceive the complexity of a page of Arabic proof, or the sight destroying labor of reading it. Men grew gray and lost their eyesight putting the work into type. From the moment of its inception to that of its final electrotyping in ten different forms seventy-six years passed, and the American Bible society had spent $100,000 on the work.

The result is the standard Arabic Bible which circulates all along the North African coast, across the Sahara to Timbuktu, and south to Niger and Bombasa. It is called for at the Cape of Good Hope, in Persia, central Asia, India, China, Malaysia, the Philippines, Yucatan and Brazil. Imported from Beirut it is the Bible used by Syrians in New York and Chicago.

One of the heroic tales of the society's annals is that of Bishop Schereschewsky, who, striken with paralysis, pounded out a Chinese translation with two fingers on the typewriter. For twenty years preceding his death he was practically confined to an armchair. During this time he translated the whole Bible from the original Greek and Hebrew into the Easy Wenli dialect of China.

He was unable to speak plainly enough to be understood by a Chinese scribe. He could not hold a pen, having only one finger on each hand under control. So he made the translation with these two fingers on the typewriter, and it was then copied by hand into the Easy Wedli dialect by a Chinese woman, Mrs. Wei. His original typewritten manuscript is now preserved in the Lenox library as a monument of one of the most stupendous literary undertakings ever made.

In ninety-one years of existence the society distributed 50,426,782 copies of the Bible. Last year it distributed 2,000,000. These Bibles are paid for in queer circulating medium sometimes.

Within its history the society has accepted dried cocoanuts, salt fish, knives, spoons, rugs, beads, cowrie shells, grass mats, bracelets, porpoise teeth, rice, sugar cane and South Sea island money for Bibles. In little native boats the colporteurs creep down among the islands. By dog sledge and komatik in Alaska, by buffalo cart in Borneo, camel in the Gobi desert, mule train and llama pack in the Andes, by elephant and straw thatched cart in Siam and native junk on Chinese rivers, they push their wares. One white man and his wife floated 3,000 miles down the Lena river on an open raft with half a ton of Bibles, selling them to the Yakuts in their own language.

Colporteurs distributed Bibles in twenty-seven different languages in the United States last year. They found negroes in the South who had never heard of such a book. They were kicked down stairs in tenement houses by free-thinking immigrants. The society's colporteur among the Persian Russians of the Chicago stock yards is Paul Glaser, who was a member of the first Russian Duma in 1903, and by reason of this fact was banished to Siberia—where he did not go.

MISSING WEDDING RING.

Westminster Gazette: The curious incident at the wedding of Earl Poulett and Miss Storey of the ring falling on the ground and being for some time the subject of a fruitless search, suggests the query as to what would have occurred if the missing ring had not been found. In such cases any ring sent temporarily for the purpose would have been an effective substitute, and another wedding ring could afterward have been procured.

In one distinguished and historic English family the same ring has been used for several generations at the marriage of its members, for which subsequently ordinary wedding rings are substituted.

France's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has taken action against a cinematograph compan yfor an act of unprecedented brutality to a horse. In a series of pictures called "The Lover's Revenge," a carriage drawn by a horse was seen to rush over the edge of a cliff and be dashed to pieces. The pictures had not been faked. An old blind horse harnessed to a carriage was really driven over the edge of the cliffs near Boulogne to obtain them.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

LEAGUE IS NO DREAM

Kuehnow Returns From St. Paul Meeting Full of Enthusiasm.

At the meeting of those interested in forming a new league to include Eau Claire, Winona, Superior, Wausau, La Crosse and Duluth, held in the Ryan hotel in St. Paul Saturday, and at which meeting Duluth was represented by A. W. Kuehnow, it was decided to form the league with the six clubs before mentioned, and to try to draw in clubs from St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Plans for the organization were outlined and a constitution similar to that of the Wisconsin-Illinois league was decided on. The season will open May 13, and will close Labor day, Sept. 6. The salary limit for players will be $1,200 and a maximum of twelve men to a team.

If the league is able to get into St. Paul and Minneapolis, no dates will be allowed to conflict with the association games. Each team will be required to put up $500 deposit as a guarantee to play out the entire season.

Mr. Kuehnow returned from the meeting Sunday and is enthusiastic. He said: "The new league will be a big hit. All the towns entered will play fast ball. They are forced to, for the towns are used to the best article. Duluth will not be far behind, for we have some of the best in the business.

"We want Minneapolis and St. Paul and I think we now stand a fair chance of getting them. If this happens, we will be in fine shape, and Duluth will at last come into her own as a baseball city."

SPORTSMEN HAVE MUCH HARD LUCK

Weather Has Been Hitting Every Branch of Outdoor Athletics.

Are the members of the Duluth yacht club and horsemen of the city, to have no luck with the weather this year?

It begins to look that way, for up to date they have had hard luck with their events planned for Saturday afternoons. First it is too warm, then too cold, and then a blizzard comes along and spoils it all.

For a number of Saturdays there was no wind. Ice boats cannot sail without wind. Then there was too much wind.

One Saturday the ice track is flooded with water, and the next is so cold that the horsemen refuse to expose their horses to the cutting air.

Lovers of both sports are anxious to pull off their events, but it begins to look as though the weather man had it in for them both.

FITWELLS TO REORGANIZE

Semi-Professionals Will Be Composed of Last Year's Men.

Thursday evening the members of the Fitwell baseball team will meet to elect officers for the coming year.

Last year the team had a successful season and this year the same men will be in the lineup and they hope to make an even better showing than they did last summer.

Most of the Fitwells have from time to time received offers from outside clubs for their services for next year, but they have been induced to stay, and it is likely that when the umpire calls "play ball," in the first 1909 game, the same men will be found wearing the Fitwell uniforms.

Frank Schaffer, last year's captain, will probably be elected to the same position, and Dick Jacobs will manage the team during the battles of 1909.

The players who compose the team are: Schaffer, Deetz, Fenton, A. Olson, E. Olson, Sterns, Bennett, MacAuley, Winters, Robinson and Wentland.

RUDD PERFORMS IN MINNEAPOLIS

Duluth Man Turns Somersault for Mill City Ski Enthusiasts.

Minneapolis, Feb. 1.—John Rudd of Duluth, yesterday opened the eyes of Twin City lovers of winter athletics by his marvelous somersaulting on skis at Keegan's Lake. Twice Rudd dashed down the incline, shot out over the brow of the ravine and each time somersaulted in the air, alighting in safety and completing the slide down the ravine side in excellent form.

Rudd was the only Duluth man at the tournament, but his sensational work was the talk of the day. In the tournament jumping, only three men were able to make three jumps each and keep their feet. Two tied on their average score, both Minneapolis men. The scores of these two for their three jumps were: Ole Larson, 104, 108 and 102, O. O. Jonnum, 104, 106 and 105.

The judges met last evening to consider their decision. Although their verdict was officially withheld, it is understood Larson is to get first place, as Jonnum lost character to a considerable degree on his third jump.

EVENSON WINS AT HIBBING

Duluth Man Takes First Place in Ski Tournament.

Hibbing, Feb. 1.—John Evenson of Duluth took first prize in the professional class, and George Jacobson of Duluth took first place in the amateur class, in the ski tournament held here Sunday.

Evenson made the longest standing jump of the day, 115 feet.

The tournament was not as big a success as was anticipated by the range enthusiasts who framed it up. The Coleraine jumpers who had announced their intention of entering, changed their minds at the last moment and went to the St. Paul meet. This cut the number of entries in half, and was a big disappointment.

The slide was in excellent condition, but a stiff wind blew directly against the jumpers. There were but eleven entries in each class.

Evenson took first with 382 points; August Norby of Superior took second with 353 points; John Mangseth was third with 349; Elling Deison of Superior took fourth, and Martin Burke of Hibbing took fifth.

In the amateur class George Jacobson was first with 265 points; Edward Bergslein of Superior, second; and George Persgard of Duluth was third. Ole Flerling had bad luck, falling twice. His longest jump was 107 feet.

New Pole Vault Record.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—Claire S. Jacobs, of the University of Chicago, established a new world's indoor pole vault record of 11 feet 8⅜ inches, at the fifteenth annual handicap track meet, given by the First Regiment Athletic association Saturday night. All the events of the meet were not completed until long after midnight. The university of Notre Dame won the meet with the total of twenty points. Central Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, was a close second with nineteen, and the University of Chicago third, with nine.

CURLERS AT BANQUET

Visitors From Virginia Entertained by the Duluth Club.

Local Men Win From Range Rinks by Fifteen Points.

It was a merry party of curlers that sat down to the festive board at the Duluth Curling club Saturday evening. It was the occasion of the visit of the Virginia curlers, and the Duluth men fairly outdid themselves in the matter of a feed and program.

Piper Mowbray furnished the bagpipe music, and John Tresise rendered several imitations of Harry Lauder's style of singing Scotch songs.

There were several short talks, every one of which was greatly enjoyed, and the speakers were cheered to the echo. A German telephone conversation over the telephone by one of the Virginia men brought forth shouts of laughter from the Duluth curlers. There were several other good things on the program and everybody seemed to have a good time.

The Virginia men were not in it when it came to curling, but proved good losers, and had what they came to Duluth for—a good time.

The Duluth curlers were 15 up after the final games had been played.

Following were the rinks that played in the afternoon:

BILL ROPER TO COACH TIGERS

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 1.—While no official announcement has been made by the Princeton football authorities as to who will be placed in charge of gridiron affairs next autumn, it is an established fact among persons high up in Tiger athletics that the selection has been made and that the identity of the mentors of the 1909 pigskin combination will shortly be made public. From good authority comes the information that Bill Roper, '01, and head coach last year; Howard H. Henry, '04, and Phil King, '06, will be the trio to direct the Tiger gridiron machine through the 1909 campaign on the chalk-barred field.

Princeton undergraduates, alumni and supporters will receive this news with delight, as these men are three of the greatest players who ever wore the orange and black on old Nassau's football field. Unlike past years at Princeton, no one man will be placed in full charge. Instead of a head coach, enjoying undisputed authority over his charges, three head coaches will oversee the Tigers next season.

The advisability of creating a precedent in Princeton football history by installing a trio of head coaches, each vested with equal power, is a question that can be argued almost unceasingly. It has been tried at a few minor institutions and failed. However, judging from the caliber of the men who will be placed in charge of Princeton football affairs, there appears to be every reason to believe that the Tiger season will be attended with great success.

Under the fire of unceasing criticism from graduates and undergraduates alike, the powers that be in Princeton athletics have evidently realized that radical action must be taken if the tide of Yale football victories is to be swept back upon the aggressive Bulldog.

Roper, Henry and King are unanimous in their opinion that the Princeton football men should be called out much earlier in the season than has been the case in past years. The Tigers commence work about two weeks later than other colleges, owing to a faculty edict that forbids their reporting before that time. Two weeks' start in early season training is a far greater advantage than it appears to be to laymen, and for that reason the new guardians of Princeton's football affairs will try to influence a change in the date when the candidates are to be called out.

PAPKE WANTS ANOTHER CHANCE

Dethroned Middleweight Boxer Says He Will Get Title Again.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—In a letter to a friend in Chicago, Billy Papke, the Illinois thunderbolt and ex-middleweight champion, says he is not dead, but just merely sleeping. Papke's brother Ed is now his manager, and the Illinois fighter says he will be ready to come back in the rope arena in February. He is sure, he says, that he can whip Ketchel and Kelly again and retain his lost title.

"Ketchel is on top now," says Papke, "but all I ask is the time to get into shape for him," Bill writes. "I'll show him some fighting that will carry him off his feet. I can beat him as surely as anything. I will put him out of business for fair the next time we meet, if he is ever able again to do anything near my weight.

"As for Hugo Kelly, he never will have a better chance in his life to beat me than he had at Los Angeles. He didn't and couldn't beat me then, and his chance has been thrown away. No man living will ever catch me in such shape again.

"Five days after fighting Ketched for the middleweight title, I tackled the man that is generally supposed to be even a tougher nut than the champion. When it was all over and I came to my senses, I had to feel of my head to make sure that it was still up there between my shoulders. It was one of the greatest chances a man ever took, and gasp for breath sometimes when I think of it.

"They have been after me every day since I have been here to make a fight, but until now I have stalled them off. I have made up my mind, though, that I will be ready the latter part of February, and they are looking about for a good man to meet me. I believe they have selected Joe Thomas, the California light heavyweight. It doesn't matter much who they got, so long as he is someone who is near the weight.

"After that I will try to get Ketchell again, or some other good man. It may be Kelley, as I consider I have a score to settle with him."

SOME AUTO DON'TS.

Don't sound your horn at street crossings. Trolley cars are easily frightened.

Don't order your chauffeur not to take your car out in your absence. 'Twill save you discharging him for disobeying orders.

Don't, when you're outside of a hospital zone, apply a match to your gasolene tank to see if it's leaking.

Don't stop when approaching a railroad crossing; you might awaken the gate tender.

Don't turn out for another automobile. All opportunities to test the stability of various makes of cars should be welcomed.

Don't drive recklessly; the wheels are tired enough as it is.

Don't try to climb trees with your machine; if you must branch out leave your climbing proclivities in the trunk.

Don't waste time going around a stone wall; go over it or through it.

Don't carry more than six persons in a two-seated runabout. Some of them are bound to scratch the varnish in falling out.

Don't mix highballs and high speed; remember the adage, "The higher the fewer."

Don't worry about the rent if the gasolene bill is paid.

Don't allow pedestrians to become imbued with the idea that streets were originally made for them.

NEW RINK IS PLANNED

Curlers Hope to Build New Home Before Next Year.

Are Likely to Be Ejected From Present Quarters Any Time.

When another year rolls around the members of the Duluth Curling club may find themselves in a fine new home.

At the meeting held Saturday night the president of the club was authorized to appoint a committee of five, who were to look over several locations that have been submitted, and report their findings.

One location that has been submitted is near the site of the Country club, another on East Fourth street, and still another in the West end.

"A corporation will be formed to build the rink, buy the property, and attend to all the details, renting out the rink to the club. This corporation will be independent of the club altogether. The club is not at this time able to erect a rink of its own, but the members hope to be able in a few years, to purchase the rink from the building corporation.

The rink now occupied by the curlers is satisfactory, and they would be only too willing to stay at the present location but for the fact that the land is owned by the Duluth & Iron Range Railroad company, and they are subject to ejectment on thirty days' notice.

The bonspiel has been secured for Duluth for next year and if present plans go through, they will be established in their new rink by that time.

DORANDO PIETRI GETTING CHESTY

Marathon Runner Will Not Race Johnny Hayes at Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—With all arrangements for their third Marathon meeting completed, Dorando Pietri, the little Italian runner whose latest easy conquest was Albert Corey, yesterday announced flatly that he would not again compete with Johnny Hayes, the New York professional.

Promoters J. J. Callahan and L. M. Houseman had engaged the Halstead Street pavalion for Feb. 20 and 21, secured the signatures of Hayes and his manager, Charles Harvey, and only awaited the Italian's acceptance of the terms. A stormy scene followed, and the local men charged Dorando with being afraid to again meet Haynes, but this taunt failed to change his decision.

"I am not afraid of this man Hayes, declared the Italian, heatedly, through his brother interpreter. "I lost the London race to him by a fluke, as you call it here. I beat him and decisively in New York. Why should I run him again? Let them bring this man Longboat here, who beat me twice when I was not in condition.

"I will race Longboat or no one, and if my managers do not like it I will release them from the contract and tour on my own account.

SWEEPING CHANGES

Prize Money Greater and Chances of Getting Prizes Increased.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Since action of the National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice in making such sweeping change in the conditons for the national match, the rifle world has been earnestly discussing the probable effect the changes made will have on this event. The national match was established by congress in 1903 and a magnificent trophy was provided for it to which the National Rifle association added the Hilton trophy and the Soldier of Marathon. Congress annually appropriates the money for the prizes which accompany the trophies, and the match is shot under the direction of the war department. Each state and territory and each branch of the regular service is entitled to representation by a team of twelve shooting members, together with coaches, range officers, substitutes, etc. Last year there were fifty competing teams and the services of approximately 100 army officers and 700 enlisted men were required to handle the match.

Heretofore there have been six prizes which went to the six leading teams, but this year the national board, with the approval of the secretary of war, has decide dto change the rules so as to make three great contests in one. For this purpose the teams will be divided into three divisions on their record at Camp Perry last year. In the first division will come the United States infantry, United States navy, United States cavalry, United States Marine corps, Wisconsin, Massachusetts, Naval Academy, Pennsylvania, District of Columbia, Washington, Illinois, Iowa, Oregon, Maine and Ohio. In the second division will be Oklahoma, New Hampshire, Colorado, California, New York, Maryland, New Jersey, Minnesota, Kansas, Missouri, Hawaii, Indiana, Michigan, West Virginia and Kentucky. The third division will include Wyoming, Connecticut, Georgia, Rhode Island, Arizona, Alabama, South Carolina, Nebraska, Tennessee, Delaware, North Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, Arkansas, New Mexico, Utah, Mississippi, Louisiana, North Carolina and the remaining states and territories which were not represented last year.

The prize for the first division will be the national trophy, for the second division will be the Hilton trophy and for the third will be the Soldier of Marathon, in addition to which there will be three or four money prizes in each division. All teams will be eligible to win the national trophy, but only the teams in the second and third divisions will be eligible to win the Hilton trophy, while none but teams in the third division can win the Soldier of Marathon. The same rule will probably be applied to the money prizes so that the teams in the third division can compete for any of the prizes offered, those in the second division will be restricted to the prizes for the second and first divisons, while the teams in the first division will be eligible for only the prizes in that division. If the plans laid down are carried through, there will be about $4,300 in prize money for this match, the prizes being graded downward so that the highest prizes for the second and third divisions will be slightly less than the lowest prizes for the first and second divisions respectively. The prize money last year amounted to only $875. In addition, the members of the winning teams will receive appropriate medals.

This action of the board cannot fail to hearten those states who, for one reason and another, have felt that they were out of the race before they started. Under the new plan no team will be assured of a trophy or prize until the last shot in the match is fired, and the increased prize money and increased chances will have a wonderfully stimulating effect on the preliminary practice as well as on the match.

Another important change will be the substitution of the B target for the silhouettes in the skirmish run. The silhouette group consists of two figures representing a man kneeling and a man prone, the latter exposing the head and shoulders. Hits on the prone figure count five and on the kneeling figure four, and shots striking elsewhere count nothing. The B target is divided into a bull's-eye, with a ring and parallel lines, the shots counting five, four, three and two, so that the contestant will have a chance to benefit from what is known as a "close hold." The change in this rule will undoubtedly profit the state teams and greatly tend to equalize the difference between them and the service teams.

For years the claim has been made by the manufacturers of ammunition, and by many marksmen, that the government ammunition is inferior to the private product. For the 1909 matches the ordinance department will invite proposals from each ammunition company to furnish 1,000,000 rounds under certain specifications, among them being one that the ammunition must be machine loaded. The ordnance department will also manufacture 1,000,000 rounds under similar specifications. An exhaustive test will be held in the spring, and the ammunition which is adjudged to be the best will be adopted whether of private or government manufacture, and will be issued for the preliminary practice as well as for the match.

There will also be some important changes in the matches of the National Rifle association, which will probably be shot just in advance of the national matches. The officers of the United States Marine corps have joined to present a magnificent trophy for a new match to be known as the marine corps match. It will be an individual match with sighting shots and twenty shots for record at 600 and 1,000 yards, open to everybody, any military rifle, any military sight and any ammunition. All the money for entrance fees less 30 per cent, is to be distributed as prize money. Another trophy has been offered by Frank Stanton of Atlantic mine, Michigan, for a new long distance match at 1,200 yards, the first in this country. At the recent annual meeting of the National Rifle association steps were taken calculated to greatly extend its influence and membership. Additional directors were provided by adding the adjutant-general of each state and territory, one from each state association and three to be appointed by the secretary of war, repreuenting the infantry, cavalry and general staff, and two by the secretary of the navy, representing the navy and marine corps. Provision was also made for annual members at $2 each, to receive all publications of the association.

On invitation of the governor of Ohio, the national matches will be held on Ohio range at Camp Perry during August next.

Dairymen to Organize.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—A meeting of dairymen from Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana who supply milk to Chicago, began today to form a tri-state organization. One object is to fight discriminating legislation.

"The Blood is The Life"

Science has never gone beyond the above simple statement of scripture. But it has illuminated that statement and given it a meaning ever broadening with the increasing breadth of knowledge. When the blood is "bad" or impure it is not alone the body which suffers through disease. The brain is also clouded, the mind and judgement are effected, and many an evil deed or impure thought may be directly traced to the impurity of the blood.

Foul, impure blood can be made pure by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It enriches and purifies the blood thereby curing, pimples, blotches, eruptions and other cutaneous affections, as eczema, tetter, or salt-rheum, hives and other manifestations of impure blood.

In the cure of scrofulous swellings, enlarged glands, open eating ulcers, or old sores, the "Golden Medical Discovery" has performed the most marvelous cures. In cases of old sores, or open eating ulcers, it is well to apply to the open sores Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve, which possesses wonderful healing potency when used as an application to the sores in conjunction with the use of "Golden Medical Discovery" as a blood cleansing constitutional treatment. If your druggist don't happen to have the "All-Healing Salve" in stock, you can easily procure it by inclosing fifty cents in postage stamps to Dr. R.V. Pierce, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post. Most druggists keep it as well as the "Golden Medical Discovery."

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

S.S.S. FOR RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood, which gradually gets into the circulation because of indigestion, constipation, weak kidney action, and other irregularities of the system which are sometimes considered of no importance. This uric acid causes an inflamed and irritated condition of the blood, and the circulation instead of nourishing the different portions of the body, continually deposits into the nerves, muscles, tissues and joints, the irritating, pain-producing acid with which it is filled. Rheumatism can only be cured by a thorough cleansing of the blood, and this is just what S. S. S. does. It goes down into the circulation, and by neutralizing the uric acid and driving it from the blood, effectually and surely removes the cause. S. S. S. strengthens and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, causing pain and agony thoughout the system, it becomes an invigorating, nourishing fluid, furnishing health and vigor to every part of the body and relieving the suffering caused by this disease. S. S. S. being a purely vegetable blood purifier, is the surest and safest cure for Rheumatism in any of its forms. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write.

SHUT OUT BAD SEED

Farmers of North Dakota Favor Passage of Pure Seed Bill.

State Has Been Dumping Ground for Poor Quality in Past.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The pure seed bill now before the legislature is attracting a great deal of interest, especially among the farmers.

It was prepared by Prof. H. L. Bolley of the North Dakota Agricultural college and was introduced by Senator Cashel of Grafton. The measure applies to everything from garden to corn and other seeds.

North Dakota has been made the dumping ground for a poor quality of seeds in the past. In some instances seeds have contained the most virulent noxious weeds, which contaminated the land and entailed heavy cost for eradication. Among the features of the bill is one for a seed inspector. The better class of seedmen are reported to be behind the measure.

After escaping the federal officials for several months, James Goodheart, accused of being an accomplice of Charles McCarthy in the robbery of the mails at the Northern Pacific depot here last summer, has been arrested in Los Angeles and will be brought back here. His partner in the crime is serving time in the Leavenworth prison.

DEATH ENDS HER SPREE.

Inmate of East Grand Forks Resort Takes Her Life.

East Grand Forks, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fay Kirk, an aged inmate of a local resort, wound up a spree Saturday afternoon by drinking carbolic acid which proved fatal, death resulting after she had been removed to a hospital. She is said to have relatives in Sioux Falls, S. D., and came here about eight months ago and has been a resident of the district down the river since that time. She has twice before attempted to kill herself by taking poison, but each time it has proved unsuccessful. About a month ago the woman was taken sick and since that time has been despondent, fearing that she would never recover. She left a note with the address of persons living in Sioux Falls, S. D., but whether they are parents or other relatives is not stated.

FREEZES WHILE DRUNK.

North Dakota Farmer of Mature Years Perishes During Storm.

Milton, N. D., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Alarmed ove rthe failure of his father to return home, a few weeks ago, a son of Henry Stevenson started a search Saturday, and in the afternoon found the body lying near some buildings two miles south of Milton. Stevenson had been frozen to death.

Stevenson had been here on Thursday, and when left for home he was very much intoxicated. When he failed to return to his home there was no alarm, as he had often stayed in Milton for a couple of days when intoxicated.

It was evident that Stevenson had made an effort to get into the vacant building, but had fallen in a snow drift and perished.

Stevenson was about 60 years old. His wife died a few months ago and he has been drinking heavily since then. He is survived by five children.

It is expected that there may be some developments concerning the sale of liquor to Stevenson

SCHAFER FOUND GUILTY.

Jury Convicts Alleged Horsethief at Devils Lake.

Devils Lake, N. D., Feb. 1.—After a trial lasting for twelve days, the jury in the case of Harley A. M. Schafer returned a verdict of guilty as charged in the complaint at 8:35 o'clock Saturda yevening. The maximum penalty under the verdict is five years.

The crime for which Schafer was found guilty was the stealing of the Murdock horses and there is still another charge of horse stealing against him, which, according to Judge Kneeshaw, will be tried after the other cases on the calendar for this term.

It is understood that Schafer's attorneys will fight the case to the bitter end to prevent his serving time in the penitentiary.

The famous Wright murder case is next o nthe calendar and will be called today. Mrs. Mary Wright is accused of murdering her stepdaughter, Beulah Cox, near Derrick, N. D., last fall. The circumstances surrounding the case and the fact that circumstantial evidence will be introduced, has made the case the most sensational in the state since the famous Barry trial. The state claims to have found new evidence against Mrs Wright in the different stories she told of the death of the girl, while the defense has a number of subpoenas from their old home to show that the girl was troubled with heart failure. The theory of the defense is that Beulah Cox died of heart failure. The theory of the state is that the girl was smothered to death with a pillow.

LEAVES BIG FAMILY.

Marinette, Wis., Feb. 1.—Bert Gohaski, an old resident of Beaver and for many years a resident of Milwaukee, is dead at Beaver. He leaves a family of thirty children.

Mr. Gohaski was born in Poland in 1810 and came to Milwaukee in 1860.

He was married three times and his thirty children are all living. His grand children and great grandchildren total hundreds and are all residents of this county.

Veitch is Reappointed.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor John Burke has reappointed Andrew Veitch a member of the North Dakota sanitary live stock board. The appointment is for five years. Mr. Veitch has served on the board since it was organized and he has made good in every way. His reappointment is a recognition of his faithful services.

Stave Plant Operating.

Ontonagon, Mich., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Operations for the season at the local stave plant are in full swing. About thirty-five men and ten boys are employed when it is working at its normal capacity. Messrs. Dickerson & Johnson, lessees of the plant, have a large quantity of logs on hand and contracts have been made for a sufficient amount to keep the concern operating steadily. Both are experienced stave men and are confident that their venture is going to prove successful from the start.

BUTTERMAKERS MEETING.

Annual Gathering of Wisconsin Association at Eau Claire.

Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—The program for the eighth annual meeting of the Wisconsin Buttermakers' association, to be held in this city, February 9 to 12, has been issued.

The headquarters will be at the Eau Claire house. The machinery exhibit will be at Fournier's; the butter exhibit at the cold storage rooms of the Eau Claire Creamery company. The secretary's office will be on the main floor Eau Claire custom house, where membership can be secured.

The premium fund this year consists of $300, donated by Eau Claire, and proceeds of last year's sale of exhibit, $775.82; total, $1,075.82. An engraved gold medal will be presented to the exhibitor of best butter; silver medal for the second best; pro rata premiums for all butter over ninety points. Special premiums are to be arranged for later.

COURT NAMES COMMISSION.

Men Who Will Lay Out a Tri-County Judicial Road.

Detroit, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Taylor has appointed as a commission to lay out a judicial road between Becker and Mahnomen and Clearwater counties, Messrs. M. J. Kolb and John A. Vomeka, of Ogema, C. H. Fletcher of Waubon, J. J. Lynch and Theodore H. Beaulieu of White Earth.

A report from White Earth says the commissioners will begin their work at once, starting from the northwest corner of the town of Walsworth and running a straight line to the northeast corner of the town of Savannah, a distance of forty-eight miles.

The promoters of the new road expect to secure an appropriation of $1,200 from the state for a bridge across the White Earth river, at the north end of White Earth lake. Thereby six miles of the new road will run through the reservation, and it will doubtless prove to be a valuable factor in opening up that section of the county. It is understood that Major Howard will at once put a crew of Indians at work breaking and clearing out the line of the road where it lies within the reservation.

MENOMINEE BAND WILL ATTEND YEOMEN MEETING.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—Amsden's Third regiment band of Menominee will be one of the two musical organizations to represent the upper peninsula at the annual conclave of the Brotherhood of American Yeomen, which is to be held at Minneapolis, commencing June 6. The band will compete with many others for a costly trophy, to be awarded by the lodge.

There is a strong possibility that the entire Third regiment, Michigan National Guard, as well as the Menominee band, will represent the state at the inauguration of President-elect Taft.

RURAL 'PHONE ALONG WALKER-AKELEY ROAD.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 1.—(Special to The eHrald.)—A rural telephone line will probably be established this spring along the old Walker & Akeley logging road grade from Hines, seven miles eastward, according to Charles S. Carter, of the lumber firm of Kaye & Carter of Hines.

Enjoy Your Meals

By Simply Eating a Little Pleasant Tablet After Each of Them.

A TABLET DIGESTS A MEAL.

When digestion is perfect the fluids necessary to this process come naturally to the aid of the stomach. They are of right proportion and do their work speedily and well. When indigestion and dyspepsia are prevalent, these same juices come slowly if at all, are weak and insufficient or are filled with strong acids and alkalies.

When such a condition exists each meal is a hardship upon the digestive organs. The meal should strengthen the juices, but on the contrary it weakens them, so that man by the very act of eating causes conditions to arise which of themselves bring him pain and loathing for the next meal.

By eating one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets you mix the tablet with your saliva and it goes into your stomach a strong, vigorous fluid, many times more powerful than the natural digestive juices. These tablets are made up from natural vegetable and fruit essences and are composed from Hydrastis, Golden Seal, Lactose, Nux, Ascetic Pepsin, Bismuth and Jamaica Ginger. There is the formula and one grain of it will digest 3,000 grains of food in any stomach. Beside digesting the food it will give the blood the power to enrich the digestive fluids so after a time nature will take care of itself. Though you have no stomach trouble one of these tablets after each meal is a powerful assistance to nature and is an excellent habit to make.

Go to any druggist and ask his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. We will abide his answer if he be an honest man. They sell for 50c per age. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart building, Marshall, Mich.

Claims Women Can Rely on New Treatment

Relieving Constipation and Purifying the System.

The wonderful new treatment for constipation is claiming the attention of the public and physicians alike. It is asserted that there has always been difficulty experienced in formulating a physic for women, owing to their sensitive organism, but that the new treatment called cascaroyal pills can absolutely be relied upon to produce no drastic cramping, griping or pain; and only pleasant action is known to follow their use. One physician asserts that many of the distressing ailments of the fair sex are due to the effects of neglected constipation. Every woman who has pimples or a sallow complexion, headache, indigestion, nervousness and periodical delay and distress will doubtless welcome this new cascaroyal pill compound of castor oil, cascara, wild lemon, black cherry, sulphur, etc., and sugar coated too, so that there is no nausea to overcome. Many women, and men, too, in this locality are convinced that there never was anything so good and pleasant to relieve constipation and rid the system of poisons due to it. Every drug store can supply Blackburn's cascaroyal pills in ten and twenty-five cent packages. Any one can get a free package by addressing the Blackburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio. It gives a pleasurable action of the bowels for both adults and children, very different from any other medicine.

DULUTH BOY HELPED IN RESCUE WORK AT MESSINA

In Charge of Party That Recovered American Consul's Body.

Herbert Lee Spencer Gives Graphic Account of Earthquake.

A few of the horrible details of the earthquake at Messina are described in a letter from Herbert Lee Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Spencer of Duluth, who is an ensign on the battleship Illinois and was detailed to work among the ruins, in an effort to rescue the American consul and his wife.

Ensign Spencer is a graduate of Annapolis and has been with the fleet in its great encircling tour of the globe.

The following is his letter:

"Messina, Jan. 18.

"We are now at anchor in the harbor of Messina in company with a number of ships from other countries, and I have just returned from a mission I pray God I may never experience again, and I will write you a few details, horrible as they are.

"At Port Said, we expected to go to Naples for ten days, but just before sailing our orders were changed and our division of the fleet was ordered to proceed to Algiers by the way of Malta. While at sea en route to Malta, we received a wireless message from Admiral Sperry directing the Illinois to detach itself from the fourth division, and proceed with all speed to Messina and rescue, if possible, the American consul and wife from the ruins of the American consulate, so we immediately changed our course for the Straits of Messina and the earthquake city, where we arrived yesterday afternoon.

Villages in Ruins.

"All the way through the straits we could see the ruins of villages and towns. Mount Etna was still sending forth clouds of smoke, which settled over the straits in dense volume.

"Our orders were to proceed at once to the work of excavating the ruins of the consulate. We landed 200 men from our ship, provided with picks, shovels and other appliances. I was in charge of one of the divisions. We proceeded immediately to the place where the consulate buildings had stood, guided by the American charge d'affaires, and we found the consulate a heap of tangled steel girders, beams and stone.

"On our way to the consulate we passed along a street literally filled with debris from fallen buildings. The odor of purifying bodies was most offensive. I am told 80,000 persons were killed by the earthquake, and that most of them are still buried in the ruins. There is hardly a building in the city left standing. Think of a city the size of Duluth suddenly shaken into a confused heap of brick and mortar, with practically everybody buried beneath.

"Reaching the consulate, we immediately began the work of excavation, one division beginning at the side of the wrecked building, the other at the top, digging down. We had the faint hope that possibly Mr. and Mrs. Cheeney might still be living, although fifteen days had elapsed since the disaster. We were cheered in this hope while excavating by numerous people carried on stretchers still living, and we redoubled our exertions.

"In the afternoon of the second day we came across a clock that had stopped at 5:20 a. m., which, of course, marks the time when the disaster occurred. We had dug down from the top a distance of about twenty feet, lifting up great steel beams and blocks of stone, when we came across a body which at first we thought might be that of the consul, but it was not.

"The body was in bed, with the bed clothes wrapped tightly about it, and in a most horrible state of decomposition. Nearly all bodies recovered are found in bed, the earthquake having occurred so early few were astir.

"A little later, I found a small leather case, with the letter 'V' on it, with various dates of class reunions at Yale. Mr. Cheeney was a graduate of Yale, Class of '96, and this little case was made to hold some sort of a class souvenir. A little later in the afternoon we came upon the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Cheney, locked in each others' arms. The earthquake had evidently aroused them from their slumbers and their first thoughts were of each other as their arms were clasped about each other in the embrace of death.

"The bodies were in an advanced state of decomposition, and it was with the greatest difficulty was could keep the men at work. It was only possible to remain in the excavation for a short period of time, and then only by the use of strong disinfectants. The dirt and debris had to be removed by hand from about the bodies, and I assure you it was a most gruesome task.

A Horrible Sight.

"At length the body of Mrs Cheney was sufficiently loosened from the plastering and dirt that encased it, that a rope was placed about her waist and the body raised. The remains of the consul were in a more advanced state of decay and it was with the utmost difficulty that we kept the body intact while hoisting it out of the pit we had dug, but we succeeded and placed the remains in caskets after disinfecting the same as carefully as circumstances permitted.

"Of course, we could not tell whether death was instantaneous or not, but they could not possibly have lived long after the building collapsed. We took the caskets on board one of our supply ships, the Culgoa, which is to leave for Naples tonight. The bodies were identified beyond question. Mrs. Cheney had a locket about her neck and she also had on her wedding ring.

"Next to the consulate was the ruin of a building of some sort. While at work, we could see the head and part of the body of a woman protruding from under a mass of fallen stone, which had crushed her. But I must not write you more of the horrors I have seen here the last two days. Language cannot portray the spectacle, and I feel now as it it would take a life time to efface from my memory the recollection of these dead faces that one sees on every hand.

"I had no idea that buildings could be so effectually wreck as they are here. Block after block of what must have been large business buildings are now a confused mass of rubbish, with no resemblance to their former shape, and to think there are hundreds and perhaps thousands of people still living underneath these ruins. It is too horrible to think of.

"This afternoon a rescuing party passed us with a woman and her small baby that were taken out alive. For fifteen days the poor creature had lived without food, but I must desist. It seems too bad that something more effective cannot be done for the relief of the situation here, but I suppose those in control of affairs know what they are about.

"We leave this afternoon for Malta and Algiers. On Feb. 1 the fleet unites at Gibraltar, and then we begin the start for Hampton Roads, where we arrive Feb. 22. A division from the Illinois will be sent from Hampton Roads to Washington to take part in the inauguration parade, and then we proceed to Philadelphia, where the Illinois is to be placed in reserve, and I will, doubtless be transferred to some other ship. I am in hopes that I may visit home before another assignment to duty is made."

TAKE NOTICE

PLAY RAG TIME AT GIBRALTAR

Bands on Yankee Warships Enliven Coaling Up Job.

Gibraltar, Feb. 1.—For one hour this morning the American battleships that arrived yesterday were exchanging salutes with the shore and the foreign warships in the harbor which were admitted Sunday. The Connecticut saluted the port and the flag of Vice Admiral Sir James Goodrich, the commander of all the naval establishments at Gibralter, with twenty-one guns and when these had been returned, gun for gun, from a shore battery, and the British battleship Albermarle, other salutes were fired to and answered by the Russian, French and Dutch warships in port.

The colliers took up their positions alongside the Minnesota, Vermont and Kansas, and before the sound of the saluting guns had died away, the bands on board these ships were playing ragtime to liven up the dirty and arduous work of coaling. Each ship requires from 12,000 to 16,000 tons of fill her bunkers for the homeward journey.

The Rhode Island and the New Jersey came into port at 10 o'clock this morning, and were followed an hour later by the fourth division, the Wisconsin, Illinois, Kearsarge and Kentucky, which anchored outside the breakwater. The third division, consisting of the Louisiana, Missouri, Ohio and Virginia, brought up the rear.

Claiming that Walter Baker, Jr., stepped into a hole in the floor of the Red Cliff Lumber company's mill at Oneota, having his foot badly torn by a conveying chain, which was not properly protected, Walter Baker, Sr., is suing the Red Cliff Lumber company in district court for $1,999.

The case was taken up before Judge Dibell this morning. The boy, who is about 19 years old, was employed by the Red Cliff company. He was injured June 19 of last year while engaged at his regular work. It is claimed that the hole was negligently allowed to remain in the floor, to the menace of the workmen, and the boy was injured on that account.

READY FOR CACKLERS

Annual Show of Poultry Association Will Open Next Week.

Promises to Surpass Twin City Exhibit This Year.

The thirteenth annual show of the Duluth Poultry association, which will open at 316 East Superior street, Monday, will be the greatest show of its kind ever held in Duluth or the northern part of the state.

From the entries received by Secretary J. B. Greenfield, which include poultry raisers in Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin and every part of this state, it is certain that the show will be much larger than the show of last year. There are many more entries to be received before the show opens, and the officers of the association are of the opinion that the Duluth show will surpass in the quality of fowls shown, the annual show held in the Twin Cities.

As a matter of fact the prizes offered by the Duluth Poultry association are more valuable than the prizes offered by the association that holds an annual show in either St. Paul or Minneapolis. For this reason, Mr. Greenfield says many of the chicken fanciers from the vicinity of the Twin Cities will exhibit their fowls at the Duluth show this year.

When the Duluthy Poultry association was organized, thirteen years ago, there was hardly more than a half dozen pure bred chickens in this part of the state. One could drive over this section of the state without seeing anything but the ordinary barnyard chicken. There was no pretense of raising any special breed of fowl. Now there is a vast difference in the conditions. Some of the best chickens in the state are owned in the vicinity of Duluth, and for this improvement in conditions the members of the poultry association proudly claim no small portion of the credit.

The importance of the poultry industry to the farmer can be readily seen when it is understood that by scientific breeding, the quality and quantity of eggs can be increased wonderfully.

Mr. Greenfield says the average hen will lay about seventy-five eggs a year. The attention to good breeding, good care of the chickens, and selection of the best breeds for this part of the country, has increased the average for the district near Duluth to an average close to 200 eggs annually.

The business men of Duluth have never been asked to contribute toward the success of the poultry show. This year circulars are being sent out asking various business men to contribute a dollar, which will admit them and their families to the show as often as presented at the door. The way the business men have responded to the request of the officers of the association, assures the success of the show.

Besides the various breeds of chickens shown at the show, there will be an exhibition of wild ducks, stuffed birds and animals and an elaborate display of eggs, which will be very interesting to many housewives and others, in view of the high price of eggs in the local market. The show will be the most complete and comprehensive ever held by the association.

James A. Tucker, with a national reputation as a judge of highly bred fowls, has been selected by the officers of the association to act as judge. Mr. Tucker has judged poultry shows from Florida to Maine, and any chicken owner that has chickens scored by Mr. Tucker may be sure that he has received an expert opinion upon their worth. The officers have secured Mr. Tucker at a very heavy expense, but believe that their efforts will be repaid by the good that will come from his thorough knowledge of fowls.

Wagon is Struck.

Double-truck car No. 196 this noon ran into one of the Pittsburg Coal company wagons at the corner of Second avenue east and Superior street, but did no damage, aside from smashing the fender and breaking the whiffle trees. The car struck the rig on the slant, at one of the front corners, and the driver sat down rather violently upon the stone pavement, but, aside from a general shaking up, he was not injured.

Guardian Must Account.

A hearing will be held in probate court this afternoon, at which Morris Harley will be called upon to account to Max Ruben for money entrusted to him as Ruben's guardian. Ruben, who is about 18 years old, had a claim against the Interstate Hotel company and it was settled for $200. The attorney received $50 and Harley, the guardian, received the other $150. Harley claims he doesn't owe the boy anything. The boy figures he has $26 coming, as Harley only paid him $69 on orders from the court.

Appeal Is Dismissed.

A dismissal of the appeal of Mrs. Delime Burnett from the judgment of the probate court, in the matter of the guardianship of Corinne Columbe, now Reinhart, was filed with the clerk of the district court this morning, indicating an adjustment of the difficulties which existed between Mrs. Reinhart and her mother, who was also her guardian. A difference of opinion existed as to the amount Mrs. Burnett had in trust for Mrs. Reinhart and Mrs. Burnett was not satisfied with the final decree of Judge Middlecoff.

Orchestra Assured.

A meeting of those interested in the plans for the forming of a symphony orchestra in Duluth, was held at the rooms of the Commercial club this noon. Those who have been working for the success of the movement find that there is a general desire to have a representative orchasera in this city, and it is probable that at the next meeting of those who have active charge of the arrangements, that some definite announcement can be made. The success of the movement is practically assured, and Duluth will have an orchestra that will be a credit to the musical talent of the city.

WILL GROUNDHOG SEE HIS SHADOW?

Little Fellow Is Supposed to Look for Spring Tuesday.

Tuesday is ground-hog day.

Webster says its real name is Candlemas day, and that it is a religious festival, celebrating the purification of the Virgin Mary.

There are many, however, who also believe that it is on this day that the ground-hog comes forth to look for his shadow. If he sees it, he goes back to sleep for another six weeks, but if he does not, spring is surely here, or he says out in the open.

H. W. Richardson of the weather bureau says that it's likely to be bright Tuesday, and if the shaggy little fellow comes out as per schedule he will, according to the old adage, trot back for another six weeks' nap.

WAS ANOTHER BRANDT.

West Fourth Street Man Did Not Swear Out Saloon Warrants.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In the News Tribune of Friday, Jan. 29, under the heading "Says They Didn't Spring the Lid Open," that paper drags me into a controversy with the hotel, saloon and restaurant men, who had warrants sworn out for their arrests on the charges of keeping open on Sundays and after hours.

In the first place I did not sign the warrants, and did not have anything to do with them. No one could hire me to play the role of a spy for such a purpose. The name of J. P. Brandt is signed to the twenty warrants, but no address is given. It says in the article in the News Tribune, "John J. Brandt, 114 West Fourth street, signed the warrants." I do not often read the News Tribune, so did not learn until Staurday what had been said falsely about me. I ask that this communication be published so that the twenty persons for whom the warrants were sworn out will know that I am not to blame. I would also like to know from what source they got my name and address.

Williams, Duluth; N. B. Arnold, Eveleth; Robert Stratton, Hibbing; J. W. Osborne, Ely; Henry Oldenberg, Carleton; Clarence B. Miller, Duluth and H. H. Phleps of Duluth, who is also chairman.

Every one seems to be heartily in favor of another judge for the range districts and how best to secure one will be the subject under consideration tonight.

Denfeld Will Address Club.

COPPER SHAVE A GOOD RALLY

North Butte, Amalgamated and Other Leaders in a Reaction.

A reaction favored the distracted bulls in the copper stock market today, and a rally brought prices from a weak and indifferent opening to a stronger close. Buying was quite active during the latter part of the session and North Butte, Amalgamated and other leading issues responded, giving the list a better tone than it has had for several days.

North Butte opened at $72, went off to $71.25, reacted to $74 and closed at $73.50 bid and $74 asked. Amalgamated opened at $73.12½, went as low as $72.75, rallied to $74 and closed at $73.75 bid and $74.25 asked.

Carman sold at $2.12½ and closed at $1.87½ bid and $2.25 asked; National at 67c, advanced to 72c and closed at 67c bid and 70c asked. Butte & Superior at 90c and closed at 90c bid and 92c asked; Dennarizona at $3.50 and closed at $3.50 bid and $3.75 asked; Butte-Ballaklava at $15.75 and closed at $16.12½ bid and $16.37½ asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.50 and closed at $1.37½ bid and $1.50 asked; Cactus at $1.12½ and closed at $1.12½ asked, and Superior & Boston at $13.25 and $13.12½ and closed at $13.25 bid and $13.50 asked.

Walker's Copper Letter, in Saturday's Boston Commercial said:

"The copper market is lower. It is stated on what appears to be reliable authority that lake can be purchased for 14¼ cents and electrolytic for 13⅞ cents per pound. The largest producing and selling interests continue to hold their copper at 14¾ cents for lake and 14½ cents for electrolytic, however, and it is unanimous opinion among them that they will soon sell all they care to at these prices. They also believe that copper will sell above 15 cents before the end of the year. The decline in the stock market and the circulation of extravagant misstatements as to the accumulated surplus of copper, are chiefly responsible for the present hesitancy on the part of consumers.

"It is an undeniable fact, however, that American mines will produce at least 100,000,000 pounds more copper this year than last. It is also true that the demand for electrical wire continues very poor, being something like 50 per cent of the normal. The financing of large enterprises now under way should soon bring an improvement in this department of the trade, however, and the demand from wire-drawing concerns should quickly absorb the existing surplus of copper."

NEW BROKERAGE OFFICE.

Ralph G. Hubbell Has Charge of Piper, Johnson & Case Branch.

Piper, Johnson & Case, the well known firm of grain and stock brokers, opened a Duluth office today at 18 Third avenue west. The local branch is in charge of Ralph G. Hubbell, who has had long experience in the business. The new firm offers quotations from the New York and Boston stock markets, the Chicago grain and provision markets, and the local copper curb.

NO FIRE IN COLD TOWN

Populace of Lancaster, Ohio, Seeks Desperately for Fuel.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 1.—With the thermometer 10 degs. below zero today, Lancaster, twenty-five miles from here, is practically without fire. The natural gas main from the West Virginia field has broken across the Ohio river and the city is without a supply.

Lines of people are going to the local yards with buckets, baskets and wheelbarrows or anything else they can get hold of, but the coal supply will soon be exhausted. All the factories and schools have closed.

At Upper Sandusky, the natural gas has been reduced to the lowest pressure and the water pipes have frozen. The schools have been dismissed.

GNAGG'S SUNDAY CALM.

He Looks About at Home and Talks Housekeeping.

Mr. Gnagg, lounging around the apartment after breakfast on Sunday morning, renews Mrs. Gnagg's sense of responsibility by the following comment, says the New York Sun:

"Say, you'd traipse through and stick around these rooms for a thousand years, wouldn't you, without ever noticing or caring that every blamed one of the pictures on the walls hangs crooked?

"You're a mystery to me. You baffle me. I can't understand you. I never have understood your system, and I never will understand it. Now just look at that picture over by the window; why, it's almost upside down.

"Huh? The wind blew it out of position? Of course the wind blew it out of position. I didn't say, did I, that Bluebeard, or Cinderella, or Mother Goose or Little Boy Blue or somebody sneaked here in the middle of the night and turned that picture upside down, did I? And if the wind through the window blew the picture upside down, I suppose it wouldn't take your life's blood or anything like that, would it, to just reach up and fix the picture in position again? Every picture in the place is turned and twisted around the same way.

"Oh, there may be one or two of the pictures that aren't altogether upside down, but pretty near all of them are that way. I shall be obliged to you if you'll refrain from picking my words to pieces and pinning me down that way. If I had to look at those twisted pictures all day long I'd go crazy, but it doesn't seem to bother you at all.

"How'd this patch get on this lace curtain here? Huh? Oh, say, don't try to be humorous with me like that.

"I know very well, or surmise at least, that you put the patch there. But you understand perfectly well that I'm asking why the curtain ever needed to be patched at all.

"How's that? One of my poker guests held his cigar too close to the curtain one night a month or so ago, soon after you put the curtains up, and burnt a hole in it? Well, well, you certainly are a quick thinker, and ingenious, too.

"How pat you had that answer, didn't you? Of course you had to get in that crack about one of my poker guests. That was to be expected. Of course nobody else on earth could have made that hole in the curtain except one of my poker guests, as you say with that fancy sneer.

"Pretty quick yarn that, if you're asking me. But kind of diaphaneous at that. Burnt a hole in it with his cigar, did he? Well, why didn't I see him do that?

"Where did I happen to be when that was coming off? Up on the roof? In the basement with the jacks down in the bascbent with the janitor's young 'uns? Pretty likely story, I don't think. And if he set the curtain afire with his cigar how was it that the whole business didn't catch fire and burn the place down?

"Pretty bum looking rug this in front of the gas logs. By the way, didn't I give you the money some time ago to get another rug in place of this? Oh, I knew blamed well you wouldn't remember it. Of course you wouldn't.

"But I remember perfectly well handing you a $15 note and asking you to go down town and get another rug in place of this frazzled old wornout thing. Of course it's pure flippancy on my part to mention that circumstance to you now. You couldn't be expected to remember it.

"All that a married woman should be asked to do, anyhow, is to eat and sleep and buy millinery and go to the theater eight or ten times a week, and so on. She shouldn't be required to do anything in the make good line. It would be a shame and a scandal to dream of asking the woman who bears your name and keeps you tied down and sewed up to make good. I'm an idiot for even expecting such a thing.

"Look at the dust on this piano. Looks as if it had been left in the backyard of a Pittsburg nail factory for ten or fifteen years, doesn't it? What? Do you mean to tell me that you dusted that piano only yesterday afternoon, and that these antique layers of dust and grime have accumulated since then?

"Oh, say, now, don't carry the thing so far, you know. I'm a poor credulous soft mark and I'll swallow almost anything in reason, but please don't try to get away with such whoppers. Dusted it yesterday afternoon, did you. Dusted it yesterday afternoon, did you, and here—just look at the muck adand here—just look at the muck adhering to the end of my finger—the piano looks as if it had been nestling in the open air at the foot of Mount Vesuvius in eruption for a dog's age.

"No doubt about it, you must think I'm an awful muff to believe such terrific ones as that. Of course, it's perfectly manifest to any human being with the intelligence of a mollusc that that piano hasn't been touched with a dust rag since the last time Bryan ran for president, but what's the use of my saying anything about it? The only thing for me to do is to dust it myself, I s'pose. Then I'll know it's done.

"Say, when were these diningroom windows washed last, anyhow? Just look at 'em! There's muck and dirt and gum on 'em an inch thick. Don't you sort of feel once in a while as if you'd like to look out of the window? I do anyhow.

"How's that? Oh, you don't have to get sarcastic, you know. Nobody has ever said that you ought to wash the windows yourself. But I dare say it wouldn't be cruel and inhuman to expect you to have somebody else wash them, would it?

"I wonder why I'm going down into my jeans and digging up $6 a week for a maid, anyhow? Would you feel like having a lunacy commission appointed over me if I suggested that it wouldn't kill that mulatto maiden if she'd wash the windows about once every Fourth of July and Christmas, anyhow? Now, don't you tell me to "sh-sh-sh!" I'm not afraid of her hearing me. Let her hear me.

"I'm not buckling ton any Ethiopian that I have to shell out my good money to, and if she's rubbering on my words from the kitchen you'll notice that my knees are not shaking if you're a good noticer. If you're afraid to tell her that I want these windows washed the very first thing tomorrow morning after I get out of here then I'm not afrai dto berak that hideous news to her.

"Look a-here, how long ha sthis hot water spigot in the bathtub been out of whack like this? I though I'd been hearing water dripping in the bathroom for five or six months past of nights. How's that? It only began to leak that way yesterday, and you told the janitor about it right away, and he said he'd get a new washer for the spigot at once?

"Oh, of course, you'd say that. You've got the little old answer ready to rap out almost before I get through talking, haven't you?

"All the same I've heard that water running from the leaky hot water spigot in the bathtub for months and months, and it has often kept me awake nights. I suppose you think it's up to me to keep an eye out for all these things and to run around like a chicken with its head cut off attending to them? It's not enough for you, I suppose, that I have to work like a dog downtown year in and year out to keep out of the poorhouse. You'd like me to assume all of the responsibilities of housekeeping besides, wouldn't you?

"Just look at the condition of the medicine cupboard in this bathroom—bottles scattered around every which way, no corks to half of 'em and the whole thing looking like a steamboat burnt to the water's edge. Here's a bottle of carbolic acid without a cork. It's a wonder I don't pick that up for my mouthwash some time and burn my face off.

"How's that? I lost the cork out of the carbolic acid bottle last week, did I? Oh, I did, did I? Of course I did! Everything that's crummy and out of whack and frowsy looking around here I'm responsible for.

"Sure thing. I might have known you'd pull that on me. But I'll tell you one thing, I'll expect to see these bottles in here fixed up in some kind of decent array when I get back here tomorrow evening. I can stand a lot of dirt and disorder, but there's got to be some kind of a line drawn.

"Say, look at the condition of this spare room, will you? Just come over here and take a peek through this door. I suppose you haven't so much as looked through this spare room door for six months or so. Just look at things scattered all around every which way in here and green mould on everything.

"How's that? I got the spare room in this condition when I was rummaging around for an old document at the bottom of one of the trunks last Sunday afternoon? Oh, of course I did it! I'm the guilty wretch, always and forever. And so I was in here rummaging around, as you call it, only last Sunday?

"Ha, ha! You've got the magnificent chronological mind, all right! As a simple matter of fact, it was 'way back early in June when I was in here conducting a careful and tidy search for that document you're alluding to, and I've never been in this miserable kennel since.

"Say, look at the strings dangling from that mandolin hanging in that cosey corner. Is that your idea of what they call artistic negligence? Well, if it is, permit me to take issue with you on that point. It looks sloppy and ornery to me.

"Look at the rip in the end of this sofa pillow. First thing you know the feathers'll be dropping out of the thing and scattering all over the place. What? It's not stuffed with feathers?

"Well, you don't have to pick me to pieces there either. Whatever it's stuffed with will be dropping out in a litter all over the plant, and you could save that, couldn't you, with about four little stitches? Or are you too tired? Or perhaps you'd like me to put on a thimble and thread a needle and sew up the sofa pillows after a day's work, hey?

"How long's the front left-hand castor been off the chiffonier? Oh, it only came off last evening when I was kicking the chiffonier around looking for a dress shirt, hey? Great! You grow in imaginativeness all the time!

"So I was kicking the chiffonier around, just like that, last evening, was I? Strange what a dope-fiend or somnambulist I've become all of a sudden without being in the least aware of it! To listen to you, folks 'd suppose that I spent about three-fourths of my time kicking the furniture around. I tell you what, you're too good for matinees. You ought to be out under the main tent with that imagination of yours you sure ought.

"What's this under the couch, my Gladstone bag? Sure it is! Great place to keep an expensive Gladstone bag, a gift to me from my brother, isn't it? Gladstone bag always look better when they're covered with dust and lint and feathers and sweepings.

"Might just as well keep it there indefinitely. Helps the leather to have it kicked around that way. And I love to tote a gummy old bag around! It gives me a certain tone and individuality!

"Oh, well you're the prize housekeeper, and no mistake. You're sure a wonder at the housekeeping thing. But of course allowances must be made for you. You haven't any time worth mentioning—only twelve or fourteen spare hours or so a day. It 'd be a shame to ask you to fatigue yourself. Let things go. Let 'em rip. I don't care. It's all right.

RELIEF FOR BOARDERS.

Plan to End Monotony of Boarding-house Meals.

New York Sun: "We may get good food where we live and plenty of it, and," said the veteran boarder, "we may have variety, something different every day; the trouble is that we always have the same thing on the same day, and so the effect produced is one of unending monotony.

"I have a plan to propound that would do away with this monotony, and I want to say further that I offer this plan not as a joke, but in great faith and all seriousness because I believe the general adoption of my plan would conduce to the happiness of many.

"It is a familiar boarding house practice to make a tabe schedule running a week, a calendar week, repeating it ad infinitely. We may have corned beef for dinner on Sunday, corned beef Monday, mutton Tuesday, and so on, something different daily, but when Sunday comes around again along comes with it the roast beef. And therein lies this arrangement's fatal defect. We can never look forward to any novelty; it is always the same old thing.

"My plan consists simply in making a schedule that will include either more than seven or less than seven days; in other words, a schedule that will not week after week correspond with the days of the calendar week, but that will be constantly shifting. The whole secret lies there.

"Suppose for the regulation cast iron schedule of seven days with each item on it coinciding always with the same day in the week, we substitute a schedule of six days, or one to run eight; and let us take for purposes of illustration [one of eight. Now, although you should keep the eight-day scedule in use continually, repeating it time after time without change, yet it would automatically produce an unending variety.

"Try the old weekly schedule you get roast beef on Sunday, and you keep on getting it on Sunday week after week interminably. And now let us see what would happen with an eight-day schedule started in on a Sunday.

"You would get roast beef on the first Sunday, but not on the next; you wouldn't get roast beef again until a week from Monday; and the next time the roast beef would come would be a week from the following Tuesday. The roast beef day would be constantly changing.

"You might say 'What of that? Wouldn't you soon come to know that the roast beef day came a day later every week and so come to look for it just the same?' In answer to that I would say that you might, but you wouldn't be likely to, for most of us are unlikely to trouble ourselves over details that we can avoid. But if one did set out to follow those roast beef day variations and to make himself miserable he would soon be utterly lost in trying to follow all the variations."

Both the American and Foreign Markets Have a Rise.

May Flax is More Than a Point Higher in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 1.—The fact that world's shipments were larger than expected and La Plata offerings liberal could not offset the light receipts in the Northwest or the higher cables, and wheat had a bulge of more than a point in most of the American markets today.

The Duluth car inspection today showed only one car of wheat—a consignment of No. 1 northern—as against 80 cars a year ago, and receipts at Minneapolis and Winnipeg were light as compared with last year. The domestic situation was very strong, the stiffness of the cash market contributing to the firmness of the options.

Cables were very firm. Liverpool closed ⅝d to ½d higher, Paris unchanged to ⅛c higher, Antwerp ⅝c higher, Berlin ⅛c higher and Budapest ¼c lower.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 2,000,000 bu, and is now 44,875,000 bu, against 38,890,000 bu a year ago. The May option closed 1⅜c higher in Duluth, 1½@⅝c higher in Chicago, 1⅛@¼c higher in Minneapolis, 1c up in New York and ¾c higher in Winnipeg. The July option closed 1⅜c higher in Duluth, ⅞c up in Chicago and New York, 1¼c higher in Minneapolis and ¾c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅝@¾c higher in Chicago and unchanged in Liverpool. May oats closed ¼c higher in Chicago.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week a year ago, are shown as follows:

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"When—The fast of the larger world's shipments than expected, heavy increase in the amount on passage, liberal shipments from Russia and cheaper La Plata offerings all tended to make selling pressure, yet values at the opening were steady and ⅛d lower. Following the opening and during the morning the market was well supported and values showed a gain of ⅜d. Shorts were nervous and covered freely. Of the world's shipments total this week the continent took 6,000,000 bu against 5,088,000 bu a week ago. There was a heavy decrease in merchants' stocks, and there was a good outside demand. Leading bull houses supported freely. At midday, the market was firm and ¼d higher than Saturday.

"Corn was steady and unchanged. The market was wholly neglected."

Primary receipts of wheat were 339,000 bus, last year, 708,000 bus. Shipments, 107,000 bus, last year, 249,000 bus. Clearances of corn yere 286,000 were 300,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 397,000 bus, last year, 1,007,000 bus. Shipments, 385,000 bus, last year, 510,000 bus. Celarances of corn were 286,000 bus.

Wheat trading was fairly good during the session in Duluth. May wheat opened unchanged at $1.07⅛, advanced to $1.08½ and closed there, a gain of 1⅜c over Saturday. July wheat was inactive and closed 1¼c higher than Saturday at $1.09¼ bid.

Durum wheat closed 1⅜c higher and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax trading was fairly active and prices advanced. May flax opened ½c higher at $1.57½, advanced to $1.58⅝, declined to $1.58⅛, reacted to $1.58⅝ and closed there, a gain of 1¼c over Saturday. July flax was inactive and closed 1¼c higher than Saturday at $1.58⅝ nominal. October flax sold at $1.34½ and closed there, a gain of ½c over Saturday.

Oats closed ¼c higher and other clarse grains were unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 1.—Although weekly statistics were of a bearish nature the wheat market opened firm today owing to a fair demand by commission houses and bull leaders. Weather conditions in this country were favorable for the fall sown crop, world's shipments were liberal and the amount on passage increased 6,400,000 bushels compared with the previous week. At the start prices were a shade lower to ¼c higher, May opening at $1.07½ to $1.07⅝. Later May touched $1.07⅞. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 121 cars against 408 cars last week and 403 cars a year ago.

The market gained in strength as trading advanced, a big decrease in the visible supply of wheat in the United States being responsible for much of the bullish sentiment. May advanced to $1.09⅛. The market closed strong at the top with May up 1⅜@1½c, at $1.09⅛.

Local receipts of corn were exceedingly small, 48 cars, and this light movement created moderate firmness in the market for that grain. Pit traders and leading longs were active bidders but offerings were meagre. Prices at the opening were ⅛c to ⅛@¼c higher. May opened at 63c to 63⅛c and sold up to 63¼c. None of the arrivals today were of contract grade.

Additional strength developed later in the day insympathy with the upturn in wheat. May advanced to 63⅝c. The close was firm with May up ⅝@¾c, at 63@⅝c.

Oats were firm on buying by cash interests. At the start prices were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher. May opened at 52@52⅛c and sold at 52⅛c. Local receipts were 60 cars.

Trade in provisions was dull. Notwithstanding a 10c to 15c advance in live hogs the market showed only moderate firmness. Prices at the opening were unchanged to 5c higher.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Shows Tendency Toward Price Maintenance, as Mouth Opens.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 1.—The new month came in wit nthe wheat market showing tendency toward price maintenance. By noon the market was up, prices inclined to hold steady at the advance encouraged by a Liverpool market that opened ⅛d lower but was ⅛d higher later. Local elevator stocks stood evened up for two days. Minneapolis got only 114 cars against 308; Duluth 1 against 8; Winnipeg 62 and 158. The market was strong as the session drew on and May advanced more than a cent from Saturday's low. Just before the close May sold to $1.09. Chicago May at that time sold ⅛c over Minneapolis. May opened $1.08; high, $1.09; low, $1.07⅞; close, $1.09. July opened $1.08⅛; high, $1.09½; low, $1.08⅜@⅝; close, $1.09¼. Poorer quality of a large proportion of the receipts made the cash market slower. No. 1 northern sold at 1⅜c to 2c over May and No. 2 at May price to ½c under, but there was less in proportion than last week at the top prices. Close: No. 1 northern spot, $1.10¼; to arrive, $1.10¾; No. 2 northern spot, $1.08¾; to arrive, $1.08¾; No. 3 wheat, $1.08¾@1.07¾. No. 3 yellow corn, 57¼@57½c, No. 3 white oats, 49½@49⅞c. No. 2 rye, 70¾@72¼c.

Barley receipts, 50 cars against 52; shipments, 14. The market was slightly firmer and demand both locally and in outside market a little better. Feedstuffs later advanced ½c. Close, 57@59½c.

Flax receipts, 8 cars against 58; shipments, 1. There was a good demand at Duluth May price to ½c over. Close, $1.58⅜.

Millstuffs shipments, 436 tons. Millers report a good market and bran in bulk saleable at $21.50@22.00.

Flour demand has improved a little, both local and country millers finding it better. Prices are firm. Shipments, 49,448 barrels. First patents, $5.40@5.60; second patents, $5.20@5.40; first clears, $4.00@4.10; second clears, $2.95@3.05.

THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

According to announcements made in The Herald Saturday, fish prices were slashed this morning. The general reduction was brought about by A. Booth & Co., whose affairs are now in the hands of Receiver W. J. Chalmers. Mr. Chalmers announced that the Booth concern was overstocked and ordered a reduction in fish prices at all the company's branches. The cut here took effect today, reductions being from 2 to 4 cents from Saturday's quotations. The new quotations are given below.

Pork loins are higher, but the rest of the market remains unchanged.

RULES FOR JAP CHILDREN.

An English newspaper published in Japan printed at one time an interesting synopsis of the rules which the public schools of that country were teaching their pupils on the subject of the treatment of foreigners, says the New York Sun.

This synopsis is reprinted in a recent book, "The Empire of the East," by H. B. Montgomery, and s accompanied by some interesting facts concerning the schools of Japan. The rules are as follows:

Never call after foreigners passing along the streets or roads.

When foreigners make inquiries answer them politely. If unable to make them understand inform the police of the fact.

Never accept a present from a foreigner when there is no reason for his giving it, and never charge him anything above what is proper.

Do not crowd around a shop when a foreigner is making purchases, thereby causing him much annoyance. The continuance of this practice disgraces us as a nation.

Since all human beings are brothers and sisters there is no reason for fearing foreigners. Treat them as equals and act uprightly in all your dealings with them. Be neither servile nor arrogant.

Beware of combining against the foreigner and disliking him because he is a foreigner; men are to be judged by their conduct and not by their nationality.

As intercourse with foreigners becomes closer and extends over a series of years there is danger that many Japanese may become enamored of their ways and customs and forsake the good old customs of their forefathers. Against this danger you must be on your guard.

Taking off your hat is the proper way to salute a foreigner. The bending of the body low is not to be commended.

Hold in high regard the worship of ancestors and treat your relations with warm cordiality, but do not regard a person as your enemy because he or she is a Christian.

Beware of selling your soul to foreigners and becoming their slaves. Sell them no houses or lands.

Aim at not being beaten in your competition with foreigners. Remember that loyalty and filial piety are our most precious national treasures, and do nothing to violate them.

Negotiations for the erection of a memorial to John Bunyan in Westminster Abbey, supported by peers, bishops, statesmen and literary persons, have issued in a proposal by the dean and chapter that the tribute shall take the form of a window to be placed in the north aisle of the Abbey. The archbishop of Canterbury promises to preside over the committee.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Market Opened Narrow, Rose Sharply, But Soon Declined Again.

New York, Feb. 1.—Prices moved irregularly today in the opening dealings in stocks. Business was small and changes generally were narrow. Westinghouse Electric declined 1⅜ and American Smelting large fractions. Canadian Pacific rose 1.

A brisk rise, in which a number of stocks rose sharply, was succeeded by a decline to the lowest prices of the hour. Denver & Rio Grande had an early rise of 1½ and Reading, Anaconda, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Central Leather, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred and United States Rubber first preferred. Among the losses were: Toledo, St. Louis & Western 2½, Erie first prefererred 1¼ and Amalgamated Copper, 1.

The sag in prices carried down Chicago Great Western "A" preferred 1⅜ and Northern Pacific; Minneapolis & Sault Ste. Marie, Iowa Central preferred and American Linseed Oil 1. Prices then took an upward turn, Reading rising to 133 and Chesapeake & Ohio, American Car and Tennessee Copper gaining 1 and United States Rubber 1½. Bonds were irregular.

The market closed barely steady and very dull. Highest prices in the final hour showed gains for Mackay companies of 2½ and the Harriman Pacifics, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis, Wabash preferred, American Smelting, American Malting preferred, American Hide & Leather preferred and American Sugar 1. Lackawanna sold at a decline of 7 and United States Pipe 1. Realizing of profits made some inroads upon the gains.

FEBRUARY 1, 1909.

Buy Calumet & Sonora stock at this level for it should only be a short time before it will be listed on the Boston stock exchange. At the mine they have opened up some big deposits of very high grade ore and with the listing should easily cause an advance of at least $20.00 a share in this issue.

Butte-Montana should soon be one of the heaviest trading stocks in the country. Big things are taking place in this one, and you will soon find out how correct we were when we advised the purchase. At this mine they have also opened up much high-grade ore on the 1,200-foot level.

Calumet & Corbin closed $2.87 bid. Here is a stock that should sell at $6.00 or $8.00 a share, for it is being bought up as fast as offered.

Copper Queen is another that should be bought at present prices.

Black Mountain should not be overlooked, for when they get this one running just right, it will be a regular bonanza.

Superior & Globe is getting more active. The Copper country has started to bid for it.

WEST END

LARGE ATTENDANCE.

Many Turn Out to Religious Mass Meeting in West End.

The religious mass meeting held in the Swedish Mission church yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the four Scandinavian churches in the West end, was very largely attended.

All the pastors were present, but the principal speaker of the afternoon was Rev. A. Edstam of the First Swedish Baptist church, who leaves in a month to take a pastorate at Worthington, Minn.

The meetings will be held all this week. Tomorrow evening, at the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church, Rev. C. O. Nelson, past of the Swedish Mission church, will be the speaker.

Will Go Over a Year.

The chances are that the plans for a ski slide in the West end will go over until another year. The agitation in favor of it stirred the enthusasts very late in the season, and their ardor was suddenly dampened by the prolonged warm and wet spell. The projectors feel that the winter is too far advanced to make any action worth while now.

It is certain, however, that the West end ski runners want a slide in their section of town, and it is a certainty that next season will see a fine slide just beyond Lincoln Park.

West End Shortrails.

Miss Emma Forsell has returned to her home at Bayfield, Wis., after a visit in the West end with her sister, Mrs. Gust Elmquist of West third street.

The Bema club will hold its regular meeting tomorrow evening in Dr. Oredson's office, when short speeches will be made by the members.

The warming house at the skating rink on the bay at Twenty-first avenue west has been repaired by the boys of the Adams school alumni. The skating was enjoyed by a hundreds yesterday and Saturday night.

The Tabitha society of Bethany Swedish Lutheran church will meet Thursday evening with Mrs. Gust Miller of West Second street.

Miss Anna Hedeland has returned to her home in Minneapolis, after a visit in the West end wiah friends and relatives.

The Ladies' Aid society of Bethany Swedish Lutheran church will meet on Thursday fternoon with Mrs. M. Peterson of West Fourth street.

The reopening of the Virginia & Rany Lake Lumber company's mill in the West end has been delayed by the work of repairing the smokestack, which was blown out of plumb by the wind Friday.

Edward Strand, who has been quite ill at his home, 2430 West Superior street, is improving.

Edward Thompson, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. D. W. Martin, has returned to his home at Minneapolis.

BINNS NO "TIN" HERO.

Says He Will Spurn Offers to Appear in Vaudeville.

New York, Feb. 1.—When the White Star liner Baltic left her pier Saturday afternoon on her voyage to England, she carried with her Captain Sealby and the wireless operator "Jack" Binns, of the steamer Republic, heroes of the disaster off the Nantucket shoals a week ago today. On her also was the entire engineering force of the Republic and about 250 members of the Republic's crew.

Only four of the cabin passengers of the Republic sailed on the Baltic to renew their interrupted trip. One other such passenger sailed on the steamer New York, which also took five of the Republic's steerage passengers.

Operator Binns said that he had received several lucrative offers to appear on the vaudeville stage in this country, but had refused them. "I don't want to appear as a tin god," said Mr. Binns. "I think that when my money and the leave of absence expires I will go right to work again as a wireless operator. I guess I'll turn out more of a man in the long run for doing so."

Senator-elect to Speak.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 1.—(Special to The Herald.)—United States Senator-elect M. N. Johnson has wired his acceptance of an invitation asking him to speak here at the Lincoln centennial celebration on Feb. 12. The program committee for the celebration, consisting of Prof. Squires, Prof. Stout and A. J. Pierce, have arranged a number of excellent numbers for the big celebration which will be held in the afternoon in either the Metropolitan or Empire theater buildings.

NEW BANK MAKES BOW

The Duluth Savings Bank Has Shed Swaddling Clothes.

Enters Field as a Full Fledged National Bank.

The Northern National bank, formerly the Duluth Savings bank, began its career as a national bank this morning, under the authority of the comptroller of the currency of the United States.

The Duluth Savings bank was organized six years ago last November. The capital of the bank was $100,000. Under the conservative management of its directors, who are also the directors of the Northern National bank, the bank has shown steady growth since its organization. It was this increase of business and the widening of the field of banking business in Duluth and the surrounding territory, that led the directors of the bank to organize the bank as a national institution.

The Northern National bank has a paid in capital of $250,000 and a surplus of $250,000. This is an increase of $150,000 over the capital of the Duluth Savings bank, and an increase of $10,000 in the surplus.

The new bank will be under the same officers and directors as controlled the Duluth Savings bank, with the addition of two new directors, Marshall W. Alworth and David O. Anderson.

With an increase in the paid in capital and the surplus of the new bank, there will be increased strength to the bank and additional security to the depositors. The bank will have a savings deposit department, 3 per cent been paid upon savings deposits. The new bank will also enter the field for commercial business.

The same conservative policy that established the growth and excellent business reputation of the Duluth Savings bank, will be followed with the affairs of the new bank.

At the organization of the Duluth Savings bank in November, 1902, John R. Mitchell was president of the bank; John G. Williams, vice president, and J. W. Lyder, Jr., cashier. The following men constituted the board of trustees: John R. Mitchell, John G. Williams, James H. Pearce, Francis W. Sullivan, J. W. Lyder, Jr., Louis S. Loeb and Dr. J. J. Eklund.

John R. Mitchell is at the present time president of the Capitol National Bank of St. Paul, one of the largest banking institutions of that city. J. L. Washburn of Duluth succeeded Mr. Mitchell as head of the Duluth Savings bank and is the president of the new institution.

The new Northern National bank begins its career with every prospect of a successful future.

BRANDENBURGH'S BAIL FORFEITED

Magazine Writer Fails to Appear When Court Summons.

New York, Feb. 1.—Broughton Brandenburgh, the magazine writer, who was indicted on a charge of grand larceny, as a result of his sale to a newspaper of an article alleged to have been written by Grover Cleveland, failed to appear today before Justice Dowling to answer to the indictment.

His bail of $1,500, which was given by a bonding company, was forfeited and a bench warrant for Brandenburgh's arrest was immediately issued.

He Had Been Out of Work for Some Time.

New York, Feb. 1.—With the gas turned on, Frederick Vahey, 40 years old and his wife, Marie, were found dead from asphyxiation in the apartments in Jersey City. There was no note left by either of the couple to indicate that their death was other than accidental.

Vahey, who was a mechanic, had been out of work for some time.

WARDEN, UNDER ARREST, DEFIANT

Michigan Pen Official Declares He Will Not Resign.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 1.—"Resign? Not in a thousand years. I am going to defend my position and fight for my honor," declared Warden Allen N. Armstrong, of the penitentiary, today.

The prison board of control and Governor Warner met this afternoon to consider the situation arising from the warden's arrest Saturday on charge of bribery.

The warden's friends intimate there may be sensational developments and there is much talk of politics.

PULLED GUN ON CABMAN

During a dispute over a matter of $1 in the cab fare, Annie Sanford pulled a gun on a cab driver in Superior in the cold gray dawn of the morning of Nov. 16 last. That was the immediate cause of Annie's arrest, but today she is on trial in district court on a charge of grand larceny in the first degree, a conviction carrying with it a penalty of from one to ten years' imprisonment in the state prison.

In Annie's possession when she was arrested that night was found, it is claimed, property taken from Ole Olson in the Lake Avenue hotel, 228 Lake avenue south, during the same morning. Whereupon she was brought to Duluth, held to the grand jury and indicted on the charge on which she is being tried today.

According to the story of the theft as it is alleged by the state to have been committed, Olson was the cook in the Lake Avenue hotel and Mrs. Sanford and her husband, Percy Sanford, roomed at the place. Olson had a room adjoining the kitchen and on the night of Nov. 15 he went down to it about midnight.

When he entered the kitchen, he said, Mrs. Sanford followed him and asked him for something to eat. On account of the lateness of the hour he refused to give it to her, going to his room and lying on the bed with his clothes on. He had $30 in money, a gold watch and a revolver. He slept on until morning, and when he awakened his money, watch and gun were missing.

In the meantime, about 3 o'clock in the morning, it is alleged, the Sanfords hailed a cab and went to Superior. They had trouble getting across the bridge, the woman urging speed all the time. When they arrived at their destination, the cabman wanted to charge $6. Annie held out for $5, and to emphasize the justice of her claims, it is said, she pulled a gun. A policeman happened along and took her in, and while Ole was sleeping peacefully, oblivious of his loss, it is said the property that was his found in the woman's possession, and she was in custody in Superior.

Court Acts to Restrain Massachusetts Savings Institution.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 1.—An injunction to restrain the Greenfield Savings bank of Greenfield, Mass., from conducting business, was issued today by Judge Sheldon of the supreme judicial court at the request of Bank Commissioner Jay.

The bank, according to its last statement, had deposits from 7,000 depositors, amounting to $3,069,318. Its assets totaled $3,182,779. Its surplus was $107,785.

CANNOT COLLECT THROUGH COURTS

Supreme Tribunal Rules on Debts Due to Trusts.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The case of the Continental Wallpaper company vs. Lewis Veighl & Sons of Cincinnati, was today decided by the supreme court of the United States in Veighl's favor.

The suit was brought by the company on a debt of $57,000, the payment of which was resisted on the ground that the paper company is a trust.

In effect the decision holds that an admitted trust organized contrary to the Sherman anti-trust law, cannot use the court to collect debts.

GOES AFTER THE CORPSE OF WIFE

L. C. Tuckerman and Daughter Start on Sad Journey.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Feb. 1.—Heartbroken over the tragic death of his wife, who was shot by George Busse, brother of Mayor Busse of Chicago, in that city last night, Lucius C. Tuckerman of New York and Milton-on-the-Hudson, came to this city today and after taking his 10-year-old daughter Marion from school, started with her for Chicago.

The Tuckerman family was well known here. Mr. Tuckerman purchased a 300 acre fruit farm at Milton about three years ago and had lived there the greater part of the time since. Mrs. Tuckerman had a wide circle of friends throughout this section and in southern Ulster county, around Milton, where she was active in charitable work. Her daughter Marion had for some time been attending Lyndon school, here.

Madison, Ind., Feb. 1.—Dee Brown last night shot Henry Lochard and his wife and was killed himself by Lochard. Mrs. Lochard will probably die.

FRANCE MAY COMPEL WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Paris, Feb. 1.—The French government, as a result of the use made of the wireless telegraphy following the sinking of the steamer Republic off Nantucket Jan. 23, is studying the entire question of wireless communication with the idea of introducing a bill to oblige French navigation companies to install wireless apparatus on all their ships above a certain tonnage.

BUZZARDS AND AEROPLANES.

Chicago News: It is contended by the Wright brothers that the buzzard has attained perfect flight, the secret of which should be the principle of the aeroplane. To an interviewer at Le Mans, France, Wilbur Wright said the other day: "My impression of flight in its most perfect form is flight without the use of a motor. At the present time it is essential to employ some method of propulsion through the air because we do not know enough about the science of flying to do otherwise. Some day we shall learn more about the subject and then will come the great buzzard flying, the great revolution I refer to. If you watch the buzzard flying, and there are many of them in our district in America, you will see that under most conditions he expends exceedingly little energy. He does what we would like to do. He takes advantage of the rising currents of the air in order to mount aloft and then, when he has attained a considerable height, he planes forward with outstretched wings, covering many miles sometimes before he is near the ground.

"Then, if he wishes to go still ferther, he again profits by a rising eddy of wind, and again lets himself glide downward, when the moment has come. His output of force is practically nil; he merely balances himself. We already know that the wind travels in eddies, or spirals, which are coneilke in form, and on which all manner of objects are carried upward. These currents of air are just the thing which disturbs us when we fly under present conditions, because we have to pass through them and counteract their influence by mechanical means. When the art is developed they will aid us rather than annoy us.

"It is when there is almost an absence of wind that these spirals become more pronounced. When the wind is very strong they do not take the same form, and consequently are not of the same value for lifting purposes. The buzzard does not go out in high winds. When we study the question we find that most birds remain under shelter when the wind attains anything like a considerable force, and that is why we claim that, with one of our present machines and with reasonable practice, we can remain out flying as long as the birds."

GARDENS ON ICEBERGS.

Philadelphia Bulletin: "We passed many icebergs coming home from Europe," said a Philadelphian, "and on one of them a garden bloomed.

"It was a beautiful sight. The great berg shone like an enormous emerald in the sun, and in one level recess, fenced in by pale green peaks a yellow garden gleamed.

"The captain said that iceberg gardens are not uncommon. Moss, it seems, is brought on to the bergs by animals' feet. The moss grows, it decays, it forms a soil for the pollen of buttercups and dandelions that is blown through the air during the brief Arctic summer.

"Soon the incredible spectacle, presents itself of a great, cold berg adrift in the salt se awith yellow flowers springing from the hard, cold ice."

THE LURE OF THE STORES

Just now the stores are "calling." It's the "merging of the seasons." It's good-bye to the new stocks — and good-morning to the almost-things—and the buyers "take their profits" when the Finger of Urgency is laid upon the merchant. The advertisements—spokesmen for all merchants who have any message for you, or invitation to extend to you—are filled with information, with persuasion, with friend-making facts. If you can, after reading the ads, willingly stay away from the stores these days—then you must be immune from the lure of self-interest and the beckoning smile of opportunity.

RESOLUTION BY BRADY ON THE TAFT INAUGURATION NOT TREATED SERIOUSLY

Object Was to Heap Coals of Fire on Republicans.

House Committee on Workingmen's Compensation Act Appointed.

Claim That Inspection Board Unfairly Treats Velvet Chaff Wheat.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house refused to deal seriously this morning with Representative Brady's proffer of partisan friendliess in the shape of a resolution, referred to yesterday in The Herald, providing for sending the governor, the governor's staff and five senators and seven representatives to Washington, March 4, to witness the inauguration of President-elect Taft. The resolution showed that, though its source was Democratic, its object was to heap coals of fire on the heads of the Republicans who have been playing politics, because it stated that since Taft is elected, he is no longer a partisan, but is president of all the people.

Representative Bendixen attempted to dispose of the resolution by the customary notice of debate, but that was too sudden work, and it was not permitted. Instead, Representative Adams offered an amendment, which was adopted, providings that instead of seven house members the whole house should go. Then the resolution, over Brady's valiant and thunderous "no" was sent to the rules committee.

Speaker Rockne appointed the committee to draft a workingmen's compensation act, according to the terms of the resolution emanating from the Republican steering committee, which calls for immediate action, instead of submitting the matter to a commission to report two years hence, as the governor's message suggests. The committee follows: Stuart, Wells, F. B. Wright, Nolan, Grant.

The forestry committee recommended for passage the completed forest protection bill, including the new provisions as to burning timber slashings, which appear to be practical and are not violently opposed by the lumbermen.

The house adopted a resolution by Representative Holmberg providing for a committee of five to see if the state inspection department has not dealt unfairly with what is called velvet

BIGELOW IS DEFEATED

Calumet & Hecla Company Is Victorious in the Osceola Suit.

Court of Appeals Sustains the Decision of Judge Knappen.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 2.—The claim of Albert S. Bigelow that the attempt of the Calumet & Hecla company to vote a large block of stock in the Osceola Consolidated Mining company, a year ago, was an act in restraint of trade, was denied by the United States circuit court of appeals today, the decision of the lower court in dismissing his suit being affirmed.

Bigelow, who is a resident of Boston, and a stockholder in both companies, brought two suits, but they had been dismissed by Judgee Knappen of the western district of Michigan, and his decision to that effect was today sustained. Justice Horace H. Lurton read the decision of the court of appeals, which was very voluminous and exhaustive. It was held that no unlawful act or intent had been shown that the proposed voting of Osceola stock, legally held by the Calumet & Hecla, was strictly according to the laws of Michigan, and that neither the [illegible] nor the Sherman anti-trust law had any bearing on the present case. In brief, the act complained of was an attempt to handle two contiguous mines in a manner for mutual benefit, and in no sense had it been shown, declared the court, that there was any restraint of commerce between the states, or any act tending to a monopoly in a product of the mines.

The specific complaint was that one Michigan mine proposed to control a second Michigan mine contiguous to it, and the specific relief sought was an injunction against the exercise of the power to vote the block of stock that would tend towards such control. The court declared that there had been produced no evidence of unlawful act or unlawful intent, and affirmed the action of the lower court in dismissing both suits brought by Bigelow to enjoin the Calumet & Hecla company from voting its stock at the meeting of the Osceola company.

BUYING OF DYNAMITE

By the State, to be Loaned to Settlers, Is Proposed.

Bill to Repeal the Entire Anti-Pass Law Is Introduced.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Purchases of dynamite by the state, to be loaned out to homemakers on state lands for use in eliminating stumps, is provided in a bill introduced in the house at last night's short session by Representative J. J. Opsahl of Bemidji.

The bill provides for an appropriation of $100,000 to be spent in buying dynamite, which is to be furnished at cost to people who have bought state lands from which the timber has been removed. It is merely a loan, however, as the cost is to be assessed to the land and repaid in three annual instalments.

While the proposal may sound somewhat strange to people in the southern part of the state, who have no conception of the problem presented by an area of splendid soil covered with gnarled old pine stumps, it contains nothing startling to those familiar with conditions in the timber country, where there are thousands of acres of the most fertile soil in the state that

HELEN MALONEY AGAIN MARRIED TO MR. OSBORNE

First Ceremony Opening Chapter in an International Romance.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 2—Miss Helen M. Maloney of this city and Herbert Osborn of New York, were married today by Father Stephen M. Lyons, in St. Catherine's Roman Catholic church, Spring Lake, N. J., where Martin Maloney, father of the bride, has a summer home. Announcement of the marriage is made by Mr. Maloney as follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. Martin Maloney announce the marriage of their daughter, Helen, to Mr. Arthur Herbert Osborn of New York. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. Stephen M. Lyons, pastor, at St. Catherine's church, Spring Lake, N. J., Tuesday, Feb. 2, at 8 a. m., in the presence of the family.

"The above action on the part of Miss Maloney and Mr. Osborn is taken with the full sanction of the church."

The marriage marks the culmination of a chapter of what may properly be termed an international romance. It began in October, 1907, when the social world was startled by the announcement that Helen Maloney had eloped from her father's palatial summer home at Spring Lake, N. J., with Samuel R. Clarkson, of London, who had been a guest in the home of Mr. Maloney, who is one of the wealthiest men of this city and prominent socially.

Mr. Clarkson occupied a good social position in London and it was understood that he was a suitor for Miss Maloney's hand. For a time after the elopement the young couple was missing, but Mr. Maloney finally located

MACK TESTIFIES IN LIBEL SUIT

Is Asked If Canal Bonds Were Offered Democratic Committee.

New York, Feb. 2.—Norman E Mack of Buffalo, chairman of the national Democratic committee, was the first witness today before the federal grand jury investigating the Panama canal libel case against the World. Mr. Mack was asked whether Panama canal bonds were offered to the national Democratic committee.

STILL HOLD HIM OFF

Stephenson's Foes Keep Him From Election by Three.

Stringer Beats Hopkins in One of the Springfield Ballots.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 2.—Today's joint ballot for United States Senator resulted in no choice. Stentaor Stephenson received sixty-three votes, lacking three of a majority.

The primary investigation resolution is due to come up in the senate today as amended in the assembly, but as the upper body is not likely to agree to the amendments, the resolution probably will go to conference. There is also a report that the senate may have an investigation of its own independent of the assembly.

Governor Davidson has issued a statement saying he is not an aspirant for the senatorship. Advance sheets from Senator La Follette's magazine are given out, in which La Follette editorially advocates a delay of the election until the investigation shall be concluded.

No Choice at Springfield.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 2.—On the twenty-third ballot for United States senator today, the total vote in the joint session of the legislaure was: Hopkins, 74; Foss, 17; Stringer, 76, Shurtleff, 15; Mason, 3; McKinley, 1; Lowden, 1; Calhoun, 2; Sherman, 2. On the twenty-fifth joint ballot, the vote was: Hopkins, 73; Foss, 17; Stringer, 69; Shurtleff, 15; Mason, 1; McKinley, 1; Lowden, 1; Calhoun, 1; F. E. Theman, 6; J. W. Eckret, 1; Sherman, 2. No choice.

At the conclusion of this joint ballot, the joint session arose. The joint balloting will be resumed tomorrow noon. No change of moment occurred in the three ballots taken today.

DOUMA DISCUSSES AN ALLEGED SPY

Russian Body Resumes Sittings and Socialists Make Queries.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 2.—The duma resumed its session today after the holidays and the day was marked by interpallation from the Constitutional Democrats and the Socialists addressed to the minister of the interior and dealing with the cases of Azef and Lopukine. Azef, who has been known as the head of the Russian Socialists recently declared to be in reality a government spy, and Loupkine, formerly director of the police in the department of the ministry of the interior, was arrested a few days ago on a charge of high treason in connection with the Azef revelations.

AMERICANS ARE SCORED IN THE JAPANESE DIET AFTER A PEACE SPEECH

COUNT KOMURA.

Komura Tells Legislators Empire Is Friendly to World.

California Anti-Jap Lawmakers Refuse to be Deterred.

Tokio, Feb. 2.—Foreign Minister Komura, addressing the lower house of the diet today, declared that Japan is confident the anti-Japanese measures pending in the California legislature will not lead to international complications. He said Japan is relying upon the justice of the American people, and the friendly disposition of the United States government.

The foreign minister's speech was received with applause by the government side of the house, but Count Hattori, an opposition member, immediately began a bitter and sensational attack upon the foreign policy of the government. He said Japan had no determinal foreign policies and that this was shown by the present attitude toward America, where Japanese were denied an equal opportunity and were even abused by Americans.

The opening sentence gave the keynote of the entire speech of Count Komura when he said:

"The foreign policy of this empire should have as an object the maintenance of peace and the development of natural resources."

With regerence to Great Britain, he said that events of far reaching importance in the relations of the two countries with other powers happily and uniformally contributed to the consolidation of the general peace of Eastern Asia, which was one of the principal objects of the agreement. The alliance, he continued, had steadily gained strength and solidity, and today stands on an enduring foundation.

The relations of Japan with Russia, he went on, were constantly increasing in intimacy and both nations were scrupulously observing the spirit and letter of the compact governing their attitude in the Pacific, while the policies of both governments were yielding momentous results. Thus, in his opinion, there was every reason to expect

McLAURIN ON NEGROES

Southern Senator Has His Say on Brownsville Case.

House Committee on Secret Service Matter Is Relieved.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The senate today agreed to vote on the Brownsville bill, Feb. 23.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Again today Senator Foraker attempted to get consideration for the Aldrich substitute bill providing for a court of inquiry to pass on the qualifications of the discharged negro soldiers of the 25th regiment charged with having "shot up" Brownsville, but postponed making a motion for that purpose in order that Senator McLaurin might speak on the Brownsville affair today.

> The senate passed without amendment a house bill declaring Feb. 12, 1909, the centenary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln to be a legal holiday and recommending general observance of the day.

Unless the senate comes to their rescue, the West Point cadets will not be able to attend the inauguration on the fourth of March at the expense of the government. The cadets

CAPTAIN DENIES HE WAS DRUNK

Navy Officer Will Now be Tried by Court-martial.

Gibraltar, Feb. 2.—The captain of one of the battleships composing the fleet under Rear Admiral Sperry is today under arrest on board his own vessel and will be tried by court-martial on a charge preferred by one of the rear admirals of the fleet that he was under the influence of intoxicants at a reception given on shore a few days ago. This captain was relieved from duty by the rear admiral immediately after the reception and the executive officer was placed in command. The ship was brought into Gibraltar by the executive.

Admiral Sperry, after considering the report of the rear admiral, decided upon a court-martial and appointed the members. The head of the court is Rear Admiral Seaton Schroeder, and Maj. Dion Williams of the marine corps, is judge advocate. The court will meet on board one of the battleships tomorrow.

The captain in question denies the charge. His defense will be that he was under a heavy strain during the last run of his vessel on account of rough weather; that on the day of the reception he had been on the bridge since 4 in the morning; that he did not drink anything during the day and partook sparingly of the wine served at the dinner which preceded the reception. He says, fatigue was responsible for his appearance.

JOSTLE PAY ALL AWAY

Weekly Salary Total of Peck Company Employes Extracted.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—William Johnson, Pleasant avenue, politely pardoned two strangers who with unavoidable rudeness jostled him as he was making his exit from the Northwestern National bank yesterday afternoon. A convulsive clutch at his pocket soon afterward caused him to withdraw the pardon and to set detectives and plain clothes men on the track of the jostlers.

As cashier of the O. H. Peck company, Fifth street south, Mr. Johnson had just cashed the weekly payroll for $403.75, put the proceeds in his left coat pocket and was about to push his way through the revolving door to the street.

Just at that moment there was a congestion at the door. It stuck a fraction of a moment, and this compelled Johnson to halt suddenly and two men directly behind him bumped up against him. Suave apologies and pardon followed, but Mr. Johnson missed the wallet almost immediately.

Detectives were at once sent in search of the strangers. How the wallet was extracted is a mystery to Mr. Johnson, who says that his hand was over his pocket at the time the collision occurred. No trace of the missing men has been discovered.

DON'T FORGET TO VOTE TODAY.

MONTANA BARELY GETS INTO ELECTORAL COLLEGE IN TIME

Butte Mont., Feb. 2.—Mr. Taft did not really need Montana's vote and if the state had known how much trouble it would have had in representing the electoral college, it might have remained out of the presidential game altogether. The three electors met in good season and did their part, but as the final hour for presentation of the returns at Washington drew near, complaint was made that the vote had not reached the national capital. Inquiry developed that the returns had been sent by registered mail to Vice President Fairbanks. Reference to the statutes showed that failure to deliver the vote within the time limit might call down a fine of $1,000. Charles S. Warren, the official messenger was suffering with a broken arm. He did not feel much like traveling, but he felt still less like paying a $1,000 fine. Apprehending that the letter to Fairbanks had miscarried, he put a copy of the returns in his pocket and started to Washington. Then came word that Mr. Fairbanks had received the certification by mail. And finally, there came a message to Butte from Gen. Warren saying that he had reached Washington all right, but had failed to provide himself with the proper credentials and would probably be unable to collect his mileage from the punctilious custodians of Uncle Sam's loose change.

Cincinnati, Ohio., Feb. 2. — The grand master of Ohio Masons, Charles S. Hoskinson of Zanesville, has tendered to W. H. Taft the rare honor of being made a Mason at sight. Taft has accepted and will return to Cincinnati on Thursday, Feb. 18, when the grand master will convene a distinguished company of Masons in the Scottish Rite Cathedral and exercise the high prerogative which belongs only to a grand master of Masons. There is but one other instance on record in the 100 years' history of Masonry in Ohio, Oct. 18, 1892, Asa S. Bushnell of Springfield was made a Mason at sight by Grand Master Levi C. Goodale of this city.

Some months ago, before Taft's nomination, he expressed a desire to become a Mason, to Past Grand Master William B. Melish and Grand Secretary Jacob H. Bromwell, who, with Past Grand Master Levi C. Goodale, united in a petition to Grand Master Hoskinson to honor Taft by making him a Mason at sight. This petition sets forth the high character of Taft and his distinguished services to the nation and the fact that his years of enforced absence from his home in Ohio in the performance of public duties at home and abroad had prevented him from complying with the usual requirements of the grand lodge for the initiation and advancement of candidates.

RAINY LAKE MEETING.

Directors of the Road to the Border Will Gather in Duluth.

The annual meeting of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railroad, now the property of the Canadian Northern Railroad company, will be held tomorrow. The meeting is of special importance at this time, as since the last meeting of the board of directors the road has gone into the control of the Canadian interests.

The directors of the road will be well represented. It was stated at the Rainy Lake office today that only routine business matters would come before the directors.

Welch Promoted.

The annual meeting of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad scheduled to be held today, was postponed to a future date because of the absence of many of the directors of the road. Many of the directors are out of the city at the present time, so it was deemed advisable to defer the meeting until the majority of the directors could be present.

TO BE PLAYED IN BONSPIEL STYLE

Games for the St. Louis Trophy Will Begin Thursday.

Play for the solid silver loving cup, donated by the St. Louis Hotel company, will begin at the curling rink Thursday evening.

There will be two draws each night. One set will play at 6 o'clock and the other at 8. Ten heads will constitute a game, except the semi-final and final games. These contests will be the regulation 12-head length.

On account of the fact that only ten heads will be played, the handicaps will be reduced one point, except in the semi-final and final games, when the regulation handicap will be allowable.

The event will be played off in regular bonspiel style. The rinks will either have to play or forfeit, and no substitutes will be allowed.

This is the first year the cup has been played for in bonspiel style, and among the curlers the event is creating a good deal of interest.

In addition to the cup, the hotel company will this year give to the winning rink four pairs of curling stones.

There are thirty-eight rinks entered in this event, the largest number of rinks ever entered in a single event in the history of the club.

CAUGHT IN MACHINERY

New Duluth Man Seriously Injured in Box Factory.

Sustains Several Crushed Ribs and Breast Bone —May Recover.

Frank Napravick, aged 46, was seriously, perhaps fatally, injured yesterday afternoon at the New Duluth box factory, where he became entangled in a revolving balance wheel.

Napravick was carrying a piece of pipe near the engine when it caught in the balance wheel, throwing him into the moving machinery. When the engine had been stopped, and the man released, it was found that he had sustained a broken breast bone, and several crushed ribs, which had injured his lungs.

A physician was called from West Duluth and the injured man was carried to St. Mary's hospital, where, this afternoon, it was reported that there is a chance for his recovery.

Napravick was the victim of another accident last summer, from which he had lost two of his fingers.

VOTING FOR BARNES.

Many West Duluthians Writing His Name on the Ballot

A great many friends of L. A. Barnes, in spite of his repeated refusals to run for alderman of the Eighth ward, are placing his name on the ballots at the polls today.

Mr. Barnes was urged first to be a candidate on the Republican ticket, but declined. Later he was waited on by a committee appointed at a mass meeting, and asked to run on an independent ticket. He declined also to do this.

In the face of this, there has been a movement on foot today in West Duluth to elect Mr. Barnes. W. B. Getchell, present alderman from the Eighth ward, is the only candidate on the ticket, and he will doubtless be elected, as in order to vote for Mr. Barnes his supporters have to write his name in.

The fight in the Seventh ward between Candidates Merritt and Jeffery is a very close one, and is causing considerable comment. Both candidates claim victory.

The voting in both the Seventh and Eighth wards this morning was good, considering the light registration.

SUPERIOR NEWS

HUDNALL IS BLAMELESS

Coroner's Jury Says His Shooting of Repa Was Justified.

The coroner's jury yesterday afternoon returned a verdict exonerating Senator George B. Hudnall from all blame for the fatal shooting of Tilke Repa in the early morning of Jan. 28.

The inquest was held in LeSage's undertaking rooms, Superior, where it was brought out that though Repa, in his prowlings about the senator's home, had no intention of burglary, Hudnall had good cause to believe that he had, and therefore was justified in shooting him.

According to the testimony of Thomas Matlak, who was a friend of Repa, he had visited him at the hospital following the shooting, where he had learned the reason for Repa's strange actions during the morning when he was shot. The day before that Matlak had cashed a check for Repa. At the hospital Repa told him that he had become lost on his way to the hospital to visit a sick friend, and that he thought that two men were following him. He ran behind what he thought to be a small church, which in reality was Hudnall's barn. He tried to enter and failing, tried the house, but also failed to gain an entrance there.

When the senator called to him, he thought that it was one of the men whom he supposed were pursuing him, and so was still trying to seek safety in the house, when Hudnall fired. The first shot knocked out two teeth and the second brought him to the ground.

During Senator Hudnall's testimony, he broke down several times. He testified that he and his wife had retired rather late that evening, owing to a surprise party given in their honor. He had been asleep but a short time, when he was awakened by the maid, who told him that some one was trying to break into the house. Fearing that he might be going into danger, Mrs. Hudnall loaded his shotgun for him with buckshot. Turning out the lights he descended into the cellar in the dark. A man was crossing the yard, and he shouted to him to stop, but as the man paid no attention, he discharged his gun without taking aim.

The senator explained that he was greatly excited on account of having checks in the house amounting to $10,000, which he was afraid the stranger might be after.

Following the shooting, Hudnall telephoned central, telling her to call the police and a doctor, as he had just shot a burglar. He also telephoned Dean Foster, a neighbor, and with his aid tried to make the wounded man comfortable until the arrival of Dr. C. S. Knox. There was also testimony by Mrs. Knox and H. J. O'Brien, who attended Repa at the hospital. Dean Foster stated that he was on the scene soon after the shooting, and that he helped place the wounded man on a mattress.

Police Sergt. O'Brien, who was called to the house, said that no weapons had been found on Repa, and that he had in his possession only a few trinkets, a key and $9 in money.

COURT ON THE RANGE

New Bill Drafted by Committee of Bar Association.

At meetings last night and today of the committee of the St. Louis County Bar association appointed to consider the question of petitioning the legislature for a fourth judge for the Eleventh judicial district, and also for legislation providing for terms of court on the range, a bill was drafted, which it is believed, will solve the different problems, which have confronted the committee.

The bill, which will be sent to the St. Louis county delegation at St. Paul tonight, provides for a fourth judge for the Eleventh judicial district, but the most important provision is that looking to the holding of terms of the district court on the range. It provides that faur terms of court each year shall be held at Virginia and all civil and criminal matters arising nearer to Virginia than to the county seat, shall be tried at the terms of court there.

The bill goes into detail regarding the division of jurisdiction between the two districts. It provides for a grand jury and petit jury at Virginia and for the trial of civil and criminal matters of all kinds there.

The bill is in the nature of a compromise between the advocates of a fourth judge for the Eleventh district and the range forces, which sought to have a superior court established on the range. Under its provisions the demands of the range towns have been modified considerably, but in substance they will get what they want. The superior court plan, for which the range people were working, provided for terms of court at Virginia, Hibbing and Ely at different times during the year. The court was to be separate and distinct from the district court, with concurrent jurisdiction. Under the plan as proposed by the bar association, the range court will be merely a division of the court at the county seat.

The new bill is expected to meet with the favor of the range people, and with a united delegation and a united county behind it, there is every likelihood of it going through the legislature. N. B. Arnold of Eveleth and J. W. Osborn of Ely attended the meetings of the committee, and the bill is perfectly satisfactory to them. Robert Stratton of Hibbing, who was also a member of the committee, was not present at the meetings, but he is expected to fall in with the other range members in support of the bill.

AUTO ISSUE IS CONTENTION BONE

House Members Wrangle Over Wish of Mr. Taft.

Washington, Feb. 2.—The question of purchasing automobiles for the White House was a bone of contention in the house of representatives today, when Mr. Tawney of Minnesota called up the urgent deficiency appropriation bill and moved that the senate amendments be disagreed to, and a conference asked.

In deference to the wish of President-elect Taft, the bill as it passed the house carried an appropriation of 12,000 for automobiles, but the senate struck out the provision.

Mr. Bartlett of Georgia wanted the amendment voted on separately, remarking that he was in favor of it.

Mr. Clark of Missouri, the minority leader, and Mr. Sims of Tennessee supported his contention, with the result that the opportunity that he desired was afforded.

"The incoming president," said Mr. Tawney, with a significant smile, "desires to abandon the use of horses for reasons which you can all understand."

THINKS HORSE WAS POISONED

Ole Steinberg of 2318 West Second street, is looking for the man who poisoned one of his horses, in his barn Sunday night.

Steinberg found his faithful steed stone dead in the barn yesterday morning. There were evidences of a death struggle, in which the other horse had been a damaged but innocent bystander. When the horses were last seen the night before, the dead one was in high spirits and gave no sign of indisposition. Mr. Steinberg believes it was poisoned.

A CASE OF SUICIDE.

Coroner Decides Inquest Unnecessary Over Man Found at Docks.

Coroner McCuen is completely satisfied that James Hargenson, found dead under the Missabe ore docks, Sunday afternoon, committed suicide, so he decided after an autopsy yesterday afternoon, that an inquest was not necessary.

The dead man's throat was cut, but the autopsy brought about the conviction that the gashes had been inflicted by the man himself. The fracture of the skull is thought to have been caused by a fall from the dock. The nature of the wounds in the neck was such as to make the theory that the man was able to walk after he had cut himself, plausible.

The body still lies at Forward's undertaking rooms.

F. L. Leckie and G. W. Corell of Cleveland, attorneys for large shipping interests of Cleveland, are at the Spalding hotel today. Both Mr. Leckie and Mr. Corell say that the feeling at the lower end of the Great Lakes is that the present year will be a good one for the shipping interests, but they also state that little can be forecasted of the business of the lake boats at this time.

The gentlemen state that there is an optimistic sentiment among the vesselmen of Cleveland; that business is good at the lower end of the lakes, and that present indications lead to the belief that the coming season will be a prosperous one for the shipping interests of the Great Lakes.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

Miss Laura Frankenfield, one of the young women of the stage who calls Duluth her home, and who has this year appeared with success with Louis James in his production of Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," arrived in the city this morning to be the guest of her mother, Mrs. H. Frankenfield of 305 East Third street, while the company is playing the engagement at the Head of the Lakes.

Miss Frankenfield has for years been deeply interested in the great Norwegian dramatist, and appeared in "Ghosts" with her own company two seasons ago. The opportunity to appear with the great production of the Ibsen drama was one over which the Duluth friends rejoiced, and her success during the tour has been gratifying to many here.

"We find so often the extreme opinions in regard to Ibsen," said Miss Frankenfield today, in speaking of her work. "People are apt to be very, very enthusiastic, or very, very much put out. There is always a certain part of your public which wants the theater for amusement, entirely. It does not think and it does not want to be made to think, and Ibsen, whether you like him or whether you do not, almost insists upon making you think something. For that reason he is always popular with a large number of players. The inspiration of working out the interesting problem of human life, which he is presenting through the actor, must keep him studying and thinking. However, I am beginning to question a little whether Ibsen is to become a permanent part of the drama in America. I am thinking that perhaps he is a fad. I hope not, but, as someone said, Ibsen is, maybe, not exactly normal and sane in his attitude to life. He is pessimistic always, and optimism is, I am sure, a characteristic of the American. Ibsen struggled for so many years before he received recognition, he had so many discouragements and so little approbation, that he always gives us the sad part of life in his dramas, which are, nevertheless, wonderful in their message. I am not sure that that is the greatest way to reach people, even to teach them needful lessons. In 'Peer Gynt' there is less of this than in any of his plays. Although the course of the hero's life is run without the uniting with the love that eventually saves him, yet in the end he does achieve the love, and that is really very optimistic for Ibsen. If he unites lovers just before the final curtain, that is so contrary to his usual way that one can really consider it a happy, happy drama.

"'Really, in 'Peer Gynt' is something that should interest the person who doesn't want to be made to think and wants merely amusement. There is an interesting story, a fascinating character and a splendidly mounted play. But, nevertheless there is, in my mind, just a slight question of Ibsen's permanent place in the drama in America."

It is an easy matter to induce Miss Frankenfield to talk about Ibsen and the rest of the company, but finesse and diplomacy are needed in superlative degrees to get her to talk the least bit about Miss Frankenfield. She is happy at being at home, and is anticipating with pleasure the two weeks which will be spent in the state. The company will go from here to the Twin Cities, where Miss Frankenfield lived for several years and where she graduated from the Minnesota university. Her Duluth friends are planning a number of affairs for her during the week and several will be given in Minneapolis. The largest local affair will be the Twentieth Century reception Thursday afternoon, at which Mrs. Louis James will also be an honored guest.

PLEASING CONCERT.

'Cello and Piano Numbers Given at Flaaten's Hall.

Flaaten's hall was well filled last evening with an appreciative audience that listened with pleasure to the concert presented by Carlo Fischer, 'cellist of Minneapolis, and Theodor Fossum, pianist of this city. Mr. Fischer, who has not been heard in Duluth for several years, was received with enthusiasm and recalled after each number. He is one of the leading artists of the state and has been identified for years with the musical progress of Minnesota. Each phrase in every number from the delightful piquancy of the van Goens' "Scherzo," to the beautiful legato passages, "The Swan Song" by Saint Saens, was played with the tone and exquisite feeling of the real artist. Mr. Fischer's other numbers were "Kol Nidrel," by Max Bruch; "Cantabile," by Gui, and two movements from a Grieg sonata by Mr. Fischer and Mr. Fossum. The Saint Saens number was played in response to an encore, and Mr. Fischer announced that he would like to play "Valse Brillante," a composition by Ernest Lachmund of Duluth, which he named as a brilliant and beautiful piece of music but that, owing to press of work, he was unprepared in that number. Local musicians were interested in the tribute to Mr. Lachmund's composition.

Mr. Fossum, who has recently returned from study in Berlin and Paris, and who made his formal appearance in Duluth last evening, appeared to a disadvantage, because of the piano upon which he played. Depth of tone was an impossibility upon the instrument, and the vibration caused from some outside irritant was not pleasant. However, in the numbers which he presented, Mr. Fossum showed a clear cut technique and sureness, with a brilliance of interpretation. His numbers were Bach "Variations Over An Italian Theme," and the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 31, No. 3, "Papillons," by Schumann, and a group of four Norwegian numbers by Agathe Backer Crandahl that were played with a charming spontaneity.

Hammered Brass.

The popularity of hammered brass ware is growing daily. There is really nothing that is quite as good looking for the den or library as one of the massive jardinieses of beaten brass for a tall plant or potted plant.

There are oblong trays for the desk, round ones for card receivers, quaint little ones for violets and small blossoms, and a substantial looking tobacco jar with a heavy cover.

A little lantern that would look exceedingly well in a hallway has the framework of a beaten brass and the sides of amethyst glass. This is suspended by a heavy chain of brass. Holding an electric light it would cast a sofe and pleasing light.

TO LEARN TO THINK

Is Primary Object of University Training.

Thinking leads to faith, or to that kind of doubt which is as humble as faith. It is the ignorant and unthinking mind, with its triviality, its uncertainties, and its double vision, from which we have most to fear, says President A. R. Hill of the University of Missouri in Leslie's Weekly. The true scientific spirit fosters love of truth and discourages love of gain, and is thus essentially idealistic. And when I refer to thinking and to scientific training, I must not be understood to speak of the study of material objects and of physical science only, for our primary relation in life is not to things, but to persons, and the study of languages, history, political and social institutions, and philosophy may exemplify and inculcate the scientific spirit as freely as the study of the physical and biological sciences. To train men and women to think, and to think truly, the university must present such a range of subjects that students may share in the world's best inheritance in each of the great realms in human thinking, and acquire a true view of the whole field of knowledge. And all this work should be carried on in an atmosphere permeated with ethical and esthetic ideals, and students of all departments should be in constant touch with the best in the realms of literature, music and the fine arts.

the EVENING STORY

UNDER THE CANVAS

By H. W. Stone.

"It was Marenes & Hoyt's Consolidated Shows in 1895," said the old circus man settling himself comfortably back in the luxurious seat in the smoking compartment of the Pullman. "We got out two weeks ahead of the season and the way the public took to the pine boards that year made even the old timers sit up and take notice.

"They hadn't begun to 'Loop the Gap' in those days and the show that could bill the country with a trained lion act came pretty close to holding a 'no draw' hand.

"I had Helena and her lions safe under a two-year contract when our foreign agent wrote to me about a Frenchman who had loomed up over there with a thriller. The thrill came when he hobnobbed at close quarters with his twenty man-eaters.

"I figured it would be a shame not to let our poster artists have a chance at that, and after imagining some other fellow's name posted up alongside, I decided our folks could stand for two lion acts, that is, when the other fellow didn't have any. So I sent along a contract and it came back signed.

"When I got Martelli and Helena in my office before we left our winter quarters that spring I was just a wee bit interested to see how they were going to hitch.

"But nature had been awfully kind to Helena, and although I never felt quite sure enough of my own judgment to choose a wife, I'd go on the records as declaring that woman a "home run" when it come to the looking-glass.

"Martelli was a Frenchman, the kind that never bothered to frappe his absinthe but just took it straight. Those kind of fellows don't ever get much below the surface, you know, when it comes to a woman, so as far as Martelli was concerned I wasn't calculating on having any trouble.

"I watched 'em pretty close, though, when we opened at the Garden, but to all appearances things were rosy; and it was just six weeks later when any fears I had about those rival acts were put at rest. We were showing in Chicago at the time and one evening I espied Helena and the Frenchman having supper together at one of the restaurants, seated well back among the palms where nothing much reached them except the strains of music from the stringed orchestra.

"That looked pretty safe to me and as there is quite a difference between the show business and cutting coupons for a living, I soon lost track of them beyond the fact that they were a couple of the best advertisers we ever had with out tents.

"Two days before we struck Montgomery on our last big swing up the coast, Martelli came to me and arranged for a monthly draft which he always sent to his mother over at Marseilles. He didn't appear as chipper as usual and I noticed a worn expression about his face which seemed to indicate sleepless nights and trouble of some kind. I asked if the constant traveling had a bad effect on his lions, making them harder to manage, but he told me his lions were all right, and after thanking me, walked away. I wondered then if the lines were tangled anywhere, but those devils are as full of whims, you know, as a circus elephant is of peanuts, so I wasn't surprised to see him the next day with a smile on his face and, for all I could see, as well as ever.

"We showed to big receipts at Montgomery in the afternoon and long before the evening performance began another big crowd had gathered on the grounds.

"I had been on an inspection tour and stopped behind the fly just as Helena came out prepared to go on. A couple of minutes later Martelli came along and we three spoke together until her five lions were carried out in their small cages which were placed inside the large steel inclosure in the middle of the arena. Then the band struck up, and Helena with a playful goodbye drew aside the curtain and skipped lightly out to her lions.

The music had stopped and as Helena swung open the door that let the first lion out into the inclosure, you might have been in a church instead of a circus tent for all the noise that was made. With a crack of her whip the second lion sprang out and took its place. She moved quickly about, breaking the deathly silence by cracking her whip and calling each lion by name as she freed them from their small quarters. Four were out, and hundreds of eyes were watching her as she sprung the lock on the last cage. With another crack of her whip the door flew open and from where I stood I saw she hesitated, while her eyes sought those of Martelli's in a swift glance. At the same moment an angry roar rang out through the tent, and I saw the fifth lion spring from his cage.

"The horror of the next fifteen minutes I shall never forget. Helena was knocked to the floor, and with a savage snarl the lion leaped upon her. For a moment I was dazed, but the shrieks of the women and the noise of the panic-stricken crowd rushing to the exits aroused me, and I rushed forward.

"I hadn't advanced a dozen steps when I saw Martelli opening the door into the inclosure.

"'For God's sake, man, look out!' I cried.

"But he sprang inside and closed the door after him. He had heard my warning and turned for an instant. His face was perfectly white and his dark eyes glistened like a crazy man's. In two bounds he reached the lion, and, ducking a blow from its paw that would have hurled him across the cage, fell upon the prostrate form of the woman. Before our men could come to the rescue with their red-hot irons, the five lions, their savage natures aroused, were battling with all their terrible ferocity over the victims."

The old fellow stopped at this point in his narrative and a nervous shudder shook his entire frame.

"Man, it was frightful—frightful!" he cried. "I couldn't describe it! In less than half an hour the boys had three lions safely back in their cages, while two lay dead upon the floor of the inclosure."

The old showman paused again and smoked for some moments in silence.

"It seems a shame to spoil a pretty little story," he continued, "but since that fellow Ibsen shows up life as it really is, I might add that love was responsible for that trouble down there in '95.

"The fact of the business is, Martelli had loved and lost. When once convinced of the uselessness of his wooing, he had looked for a way to end it all. Would he finish himself and leave Helena to marry another? Never! It was jealous love that he offered her and the thought of another man drive him to his act. With his innate cunning he found the way. What could be better than the lions? By simply transferring one of his own into one of Helena's single cages his purpose would be accomplished. He knew the lion would be carried into the arena for Helena's act, and without a doubt would attack her, and he, to all appearances, could rush to her rescue, but really to die with the woman he loved in his arms."

"Murder and suicide!" I exclaimed. "But why was the truth never known?"

"It was better as it was," the old fellow replied, in a lower, sadder tone. "It wasn't until the second day after that our head menagerie man made a discovery and told me that one of the dead lions belonged to Martelli. Only two others knew the truth, and I immediately sent for them. There was no justice to be satisfied, at least not for this earth, and as I waited for the boys I couldn't help thinking about Martelli's mother, alone in the world, trying to bear up under her grief brightened only by the trought that her boy had been killed while trying to save another's life."

GROUNDHOG DID NOT SEE SHADOW

Superstitious People May Derive Some Comfort From the Fact.

Today is the day the ground hog emerges from his winter quarters, casts his eye about on the frozen ground, and if it falls upon his shadow, returns to his warm bed and takes another six weeks' nap before he will be able to come out for the fine days of spring.

But the ground hog, if there be such an animal tucked away in Duluth or immediate vicinity, saw no shadow today. The dark surface of the earth, guiltless of the snowy whiteness which said surface should have at this time of the year, lay before his gaze and a leaden sky threw no glaring light into his blinking eyes.

Mr. Ground Hog probably returned to his hibernation, but not for the allotted six weeks, according to the superstition. He will be out again soon—perhaps. At any rate, those who retain the traditions of their fathers enough to put stock in the superstition, may take to themselves the encouraging belief that the winter is nearly over—which it very probably is not.

Commercial Club Members Will Meet Monday to Consider Change.

There will be a special meeting of the members of the Duluth Commercial club Monday, Feb. 8, at 12:45 p. m., for the purpose of considering and acting upon two amendments to the articles of incorporation.

The amendments are that membership shall be conditional on election, by the board of directors, for residents of the city of Duluth and that the annual dues of each resident member of the club shall be $25 and $10 for non-resident members of the club.

PRETTY GIRL TELLS OF DOWNFALL; WHITE SLAVE PROMOTER SENTENCED

HENRY LAIR GETS TWO YEARS.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 2.—A pitiful story of a beautiful girl snatched from the streets of Paris and lured to the United States, resulted in the conviction of Henry Lair, charged by the government with being a promoter of the white slave traffic in this country.

Lair was sentenced by Judge Landis to serve two years in the government prison at Leavenworth, Kan., and to pay $2,500 fine, the sentence following a hearing on Lair's plea of nolle contendere. The next case to be tried is that of Leulen D'Arvaille, Lair's supposed wife, who was indicted with him on charges of importing French girls to this country in violation of the immigration laws.

Marie Peurey, 19 years old, was the chief witness for the government. When 14 years old, she said, she was met on the streets of Paris by Jules Du Four, who later introduced her to Louis Paynt, now in the government prison at Atlanta, Ga. Paynt induced her to come to America, and brought her to Chicago, where she fell into the hands of Lair, who had come from San Francisco. It was by informing the immigration officers that she was finally rescued, and started the federal authorities to break up the syndicate.

Du Four, who met the girl in Paris, is a brother of Alphonse Du Four. The latter, with a woman known as Eva Du Four, forfeited their bonds following indictment in Chicago, and fled to France, where, it is said, they were convicted by the French authorities.

HIGHEST COURT REFUSES TO HURRY BANK GUARANTY RULING; PLAN IS PROPOSED IN IOWA

Washington, Feb. 2.—The supreme court of the United States has again refused to advance on the docket the case of the Noble State bank of Noble, Okla. vs Governor Haskell and other members of the Oklahoma state banking board, involving the validity of the Oklahoma bank guaranty law.

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 2.—Senator Jamieson, who was elected to congress in Representative Hepburn's district, together with Senator Ream, is completing a draft of a bill for a state guarantee for bank deposits.

The bill will be introduced at once. It is a Democratic measure, and while its chances for being passed are thought to be slim, it is bound to create tremendous interest in Iowa.

Senator Jamieson states that he will not rest until the guarantee bill is on the statute books.

MOTHER OF GIRL, IN HORSEBACK RIDING INCIDENT WITH MISS MUNSEY OF DULUTH, WRITES A DENIAL

"EXONERATES" PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Washington, Feb. 2.—For the first time making public a disclaimer of published reports that President Roosevelt, while riding in Rock Creek park, near this city, struck the horse ridden by a young woman who happened to ride near his party, the White House today gave out a letter received from the young woman's mother. It is dated at Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 27, and reads:

"My daughter, Miss May Rhoades, whose horse, it has been widely reported you struck while riding in the park last Thanksgiving day, most emphatically denies any knowledge of such an occurrence, and as it is deemed of such importance as to be referred to in congress, may I be permitted to ask you why you do not deny this story? Very sincerely,

"ELIZABETH RHOADES."

LINER TRAVELS 1,200 MILES; RUDDER BROKEN.

New York, Feb. 2.—The American line steamship St. Louis, which lost the two lower sections of her rudder in heavy seas, 1,200 miles from Sandy Hook, reached her dock late yesterday, twenty-four hours behind her schedule. She steamed her way in by her twin screws at reduced speed and two tugs acted as rudders for her coming up the bay.

TRAIN JUMPS THE TRACK.

Several Hurt When Milwaukee Passenger Went Into Ditch.

The first engine held to the rails, but the second engine, baggage, mail and smoking cars, went down the embankment to Root river, where the water is four to five feet deep. The accident was due to spreading rails. There were about thirty passengers on board. No persons were killed but several were injured, the most seriously being: J. J. McCaffery, captain of police, Winona, Minn., back injured; George West, Spring Grove, Minn., serious scalp wounds; Martin Loftus, Chicago, head cut; J. H. Hanson, Winona, Minn., hip injured; A. G. Eddy, route agent, United States Express company, La Crosse, Wis., hand smashed and leg strained; J. P. Hurtgen, La Crosse, scalp wounds.

All of this can be avoided by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this liniment prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend makes the danger of child-birth less, and carries her safely through this critical period. FIFTY SUBPOENAS OUT FOR OIL TRUST CASE WITNESSES AT CHICAGO

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 2.—Fifty subpoenas, issued by Judge K. M. Landis in the district court for District Attorney Sims, have been given the United States marshal for service on witnesses to appear for the government at the second trial of the $29,240,000 case against the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. The trial will begin before Judge A. B. Anderson of Indianapolis Feb. 23, Judge Anderson coming to Chicago at the request of Judge Landis, who declined to direct the second trial. According to report, one subpoena was issued for J. A. Moffatt, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. Those of the Standard Oil company officials who so far have been served are G. W. Stahl, treasurer; John C. McDonald, auditor, and Edgar Bogardus, traffic manager. Other witnesses who are to appear are George Roberts and C. Crossland, expert rate clerks for the interstate commerce commission; Secretary Kilpatrick of the railroad and warehouse commission; F. H. Holland, rate clerk for the Chicago & Alton railway, and J. R. Howard, ex-auditor of the Chicago & Alton road. Bogardus, Holland and Howard were witnesses at the previous trial.

Asks for Oil Trustees.

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 2.—In a brief filed at the state supreme court by attorneys for the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the court is petitioned to appoint two trustees who shall control the oil business transacted by the oil company in the state. The company did not even ask that the aggregate fines of $150,000 against the three subsidiaries be remitted, but confined itself to the larger propositions.

After setting forth the many reasons why the big refinery at Sugar Creek should not be excluded or the sale of oil outlawed, the brief says:

"This respondent is willing to place itself and its business under the vigilant eye of the state and subject to the supervision and control of this court, if it will aid in the solution of a difficult situation. If some such arrangement be acceptable, the owners of the majority stock of the Waters-Pierce Oil company will place that stock in the same position.

"It is therefore proposed, in lieu of the judgment of ouster against the Indiana company, that:

"A new Missouri corporation be formed which shall take over all the Missouri property of the Indiana company and succeed to all its business in this state. All the stock of the new company, less enough to qualify directors, shall be issued, to, and for four years standing, in the name of two persons as trustees; one selected by the state and the other by the Indiana company, both selections to be approved by the this court."

REFUGEES FROM ITALY

Father and Son From Messina Pass Through Duluth.

They Will Find a New Home in Northern Minnesota.

On their way to Eveleth, where they hope to find shelter with friends, Tony Maesni and his young son, direct from the scene of the great Italian earthquake at Messina, Italy, passed through Duluth this morning.

Although they were unknown to the Italians of Duluth, the news spread through the Italian colony that some of the earthquake sufferers were at the union depot, and several of them made their way to that place, where they talked over the disaster.

Maesni could not speak English, but according to the story told his American countrymen, Southern Italy is all in confusion. He said that the people are discouraged, and that in his opinion the cities destroyed will never again be the beautiful places they were.

When asked if he had suffered any loss during the earthquake, he stated that his wife and a small daughter were killed in the earthquake.

For days, he said, he haunted the places where the refugees were being cared for, searching for his wife and little daughter, hoping that by some streak of luck they had escaped and that he would eventually find them.

Maesni said that thousands of his countrymen were moving to America. He said that because of the generosity of the American people much suffering had been prevented and that the Italians appreciate the help received from this country.

Maesni has a cousin whom he last heard from near Eveleth and he and his son came to America to begin anew.

The father and son expected to leave this afternoon on a Duluth & Iron Range train for Eveleth.

A Common Cold.

We claim that if catching cold could be avoided some of the most dangerous and fatal diseases would never be heard of. A cold often forms a culture bed for germs of infectious diseases. Consumption, pneumonia, diphtheria and scarlet fever, four of the most dangerous and fatal diseases, are of this class. The culture bed formed by the cold favors the development of the germs of these diseases, that would not otherwise find lodgment. There is little danger, however, of any of these diseases being contracted when a good expectorant cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It cleans out these culture beds that favor the development of the germs of these diseases. That is why this remedy has proved so universally successful in preventing pneumonia. It not only cures your cold quickly but minimizes the risk of contracting these dangerous diseases. For sale by all druggists.

WOMEN WORK FOR LINCOLN

Huge Humane Plant May Live Forever in His Name.

New York, Feb. 2.—Solely through the efforts of a dozen earnest women, more than $93,000 has since Christmas time been received toward making the Lincoln hospital and home in this city a perpetual monument to Abraham Lincoln on the hundredth anniversary of his birth. With more than four times that sum still to be added to the half million fund needed for this living memorial, these women managers of the institution are now hoping that their project will succeed. Relying on a ready response from the women of the land, as well as from each admirer of the martyred president and friend of the race he emancipated, they declared today that the measure of the country's offering should only be limited by the extent to which their simple story became known.

Forty-four hundred white and colored patients have in the last year alone occupied the beds of this second largest hospital institution in Greater New York, the records show today, while almost a 150,000 days of expert treatment have been furnished free to poor and friendless members of both races alike. In the last ten years more than 1,500,000 days of free treatment have been given to the needy patients of this institution, which it is proposed to endow to Lincoln's memory.

Twenty-one young colored women, trained as nurses according to the best professional standards, are today leaving the Lincoln hospital and home to carry on its work in many sections of the country. From the training school of the institution at which these girls have just been graduated a hundred such negro nurses have in the last ten years been sent to give the profession and their own people throughout the country the benefit of their experience. With scores of these Lincoln graduates being spread over the country year after year, the medical authorities here believe great good will rsult in helping solve the problem of national health.

Many of the former patients and poorer friends of this work, which it is proposed to make live in Lincoln's name, have today volunteered to aid the New York women who have undertaken the direction of the national memorial movement. Graduate nurses working in the great winter resorts and among the colored people of the South are this week circulating dime coin cases to be filled, each with a dollar in silver, and returned to swell the half million dollar fund on Lincoln's birthday. Substantial checks and bills of all denominations are already beginning to be received by Samuel Sloan, who has been placed in charge of the memorial fund at 475 Fifth avenue in this city. The committee who have undertaken to accomplish this national Lincoln project are: Miss Mary W. Booth, Mrs. Arthur C. James, Mrs. A. D. Juilliard, Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, Mrs. Frank H. Platt, Mrs. Samuel C. Van Dusen and Mrs. Samuel Sloan, Jr.

C. R. Kluger, the Jeweler, 1060 Virginia Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "I was so weak from kidney trouble that I could hardly walk a hundred feet. Four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cleared my complexion, cured my bacakche and the irregularities disappeared, and I can now attend to business every day, and recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to all sufferers, as it cured me after the doctors and other remedies had failed." Sold by all druggists.

need only to be redeemed from their burden of stumps to be made richly productive. The bill may not go through, but it will at least call attention to the fact that while the natural wealth of the soil of Northern Minnesota is as great as that of any in the world, the problem of winning that wealth from the handicaps nature has set upon it is so different from what has prevailed in the prairie country that it ought to be reasonably clear that Northern Minnesota is a region that needs help and encouragement from the state, and that ought not to be harassed and plundered and neglected. The bill was referred to the house committee on public lands.

Representative Kerry Conley of Rochester offered in the house a resolution providing for a committee of five, to be appointed by the speaker, to investigate the taxation of iron properties, on the ground that "it is evident that some mine owners have not been paying their full share of taxes." The object is to see what can be done about collecting back taxes for the years prior to two years ago, when the valuations of the iron mines were raised to their present figures.

Representative Congdon of Duluth gave notice of debate, putting the resolution over until today.

Representative Lennon proposed a resolution providing for a committee of five to investigate the charges made by ex-Labor Commissioner W. H. Williams, at the time of his discharge from his position with the state, relating to "misconduct and inefficiency" of employes under his charge during the past two years. Representative Dorsey, Democrat, put the resolution over by giving notice of debate.

On motion of Representative Spooner, the special order on his state prison bill was continued from Wednesday until Thursday, and the special committee appointed to consider differences of opinion about the method of reaching the desired result was given until Wednesday instead of Tuesday to make its report.

Out at Morris, Stevens county, there is an Indian school which the government conducts with a few pupils. Attempts are now being made by Representative Spooner and others to have the Federal Government abandon this school, turn the pupils over to another one, and give the buildings to the state for a state agricultural school. Negotiations to this end are progressing nicely with the government, and at last night's session of the house Mr. Spooner offered a bill formally accepting the school if the government decides to give it to the state.

Representative T. J. Brady of St. Paul last night introduced his promised bill repealing the entire anti-pass law adopted two years ago. He was against it at the time of its passage, and announced at the opening of this session that he purposed bringing in a bill repealing it.

The game laws now permit the killing of one male moose during the open season, but prohibit the killing of cow moose. Representative Opsahl of Bemidji last evening introduced a bill changing the law so as to eliminate the reference to sex, leaving sportsmen, if the bill becomes a law, the right to kill moose of either sex. The bag is still limited to one animal, however.

Representative Opsahl also introduced a bill requiring the treasurers of independent school districts to make and publish annual financial statements. At present the state, the county, the city, and most villages and townships give publicity of their affairs, either through publication of financial statements, official reports of proceedings or both, but school districts are not required to give the public any official information as to what is going on. In Duluth, for instance, the school board spends more money than the county and nearly as much as the city, yet there is no way of bringing before the public official statements of how it disposes of its funds.

A convention to revise the constitution of the state is proposed in a bill by Representative Kneeland of Minneapolis, introduced in the house last night. The bill must pass both houses by a two thirds' vote, and then the people must vote on whether or not the convention is to be held.

Representative Selb of St. Paul offered a bill requiring all banks, trust companies, etc., to make annual publication of their accounts with depositors who have failed to call for their money. Most banking concerns have unclaimed deposits, but there is now no requirement as to publicity.

An amendment to the constitution authorizing the legislature to build state terminal elevators is proposed in a bill offered in the house last night by Representative Bendixen. If the amendment were adopted, the legislature could, by a two-thirds' vote of both houses, buy sites and erect state terminal elevators at a cost of not more than $1,000,000, issuing bonds for the purpose, if deemed advisable.

Representative Nagel having withdrawn his anti-cigarette bill, Representative Brady of St. Paul, who has no use for the weed in that particular form, offered another one in the house last night. It prohibits making, selling or giving away cigarettes or the materials with which the hand-made kind are prepared.

The session last night was brief, lasting about twenty minutes, after which an adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock this morning.

Representative R. H. Jefferson of Bingham Lake, the originator—on the floor of the house—of the tonnage tax legislation of two years ago, and co-author with H. O. Bjorge of the tonnage tax bill on which the final fight was made, is in St. Paul, consulting with Mr. Bjorge and renewing his acquaintances of two years ago. Mr. Jefferson was defeated for re-nomination, and is not, therefore, a member of the house this time.

Representative L. H. Johnson of Minneapolis is considering the introduction of a novel proposal along the line of liquor regulation. He thinks malt liquors and spirituous liquors should be placed on different planes, so he proposes two licenses, a high one for the ardent beverages and a low one for the cooling and moderating drinks that come—presumably—from malt.

The house committee on labor will have a public hearing Wednesday afternoon on all pending labor bills.

OLDEST WOMAN POSTMISTRESS QUITS

Greenville, Pa., Feb. 2.—Mrs. Mary McCoy, aged 86 years, said to be the oldest woman postmistress in the United States, has resigned her position at Sheakleyville, Pa., which she filled for forty years. Mrs. McCoy was appointed by President Johnson and in the early years of her service carried mail from Meadville, in addition to performing her other duties.

BIG CROWD AT ANNUAL BALL

Another policemen's ball has been added to the long list of successes credited to the Duluth Police Relief association. The annual event was held at the Armory last night, and was in every way a huge success. Everybody had a wonderfully good time, and the bluecoats fairly bubbled over with cheerful, smiling, hospitality. Their one worry seemed to be the fear that their guests would not have a better time than they had ever had in their lives before.

The dance was the twentieth annual affair. Flaaten's full orchestra furnished the music, and more than 400 people were there to enjoy it. Besides the dancers, hundreds of people visited the balconies at one time or another during the evening, and watched the gay whirl of dancers underneath. It was a sight well worth witnessing, the enjoyment was infectious, and even the watchers became imbued with it.

The hall was very prettily decorated in the national colors. Bunting was draped from the sides and corners to the center of the big hall, and flags were placed at intervals around the walls. Punch was served in one corner during the evening, and supper was served on the balcony. Both these places of attraction proved popular with the crowd. A special car service had been arranged for as late as 2 o'clock, so those who wanted to get home late could do so with the assurance that they would still be able to get home without walking, or engaging the services of a cab.

The committees having the affair in charge are entitled to a great deal of credit for the manner in which the ball was carried through.

CANADIAN NURSE NOT BARRED OUT BY LAW.

Washington, Feb. 2.—An important immigration case was decided yesterday by Secretary Straus of the department of commerce and labor. Ethel Wright, a Canadian woman 25 years old, applied for admission to the United States, that she might enter the nurses' home in Chicago to study nursing. With other student nurses at the institution she was to be allowed a small compensation. A special board of inquiry rejected her application and denied her admission. Miss Wright appealed her case to Secretary Straus and he has directed that she be admitted.

HELPING THE HUNTER.

The greatest obstacle to preserving wild game in this country is the sportsman. His greed is so great for the pleasures of the chase that he cannot hold his desires in check even for a few years. His influence it is that stands most in the way of the adoption of a policy which will insure wild game forever, and good hunting forever, in America.

The Canadian government has recently taken steps which are causing much grumbling among sportsmen, but which will with a few years insure them a perpetual supply of game and make hunting one of the chief attractions of the Canadian Northwest. Within the past month the governor general of Canada has issued a proclamation setting aside 450 square miles as a permanent park and feeding ground for elk, deer, mountain goat, mountain sheep and other animals. Sportsmen are forbidden to shoot or hunt within this sanctuary for a period of ten years and the prohibition will probably be made permanent. The game preserve is located in Alberta on the continental divide, some seventy-five miles north of the international boundary line. It is estimated that in its confines are about 1,000 mountain goats, 200 mountain sheep, 5,000 mountain elk, 2,500 mule deer and other wild game. A few more years and this game would have been entirely exterminated, but in the ten-year period in which protection is to be maintained it is estimated that the herds will be restored to their original numbers and that the overflow from the park into the outside country will furnish all the sport that can legitimately be desired.

Attempts have been made to secure similar reserves in the United States but thus far without success. Practically the only protection now afforded to wild game in the United States is that given by the states and by the national parks. Moose were nearly exterminated when Maine, Minnesota, Montana, Wyoming and Idaho interfered and established the closed season, with the result that moose have been multiplying slowly in these states in the past few years. The largest number are in Maine, which has the most rigid game laws, although some 200 moose are shot by sportsmen each year in that state. The United States is protecting some 25,000 elk in the Yellowstone National park, and the number is gradually increasing. So fierce has been the war on antelope in Montana, however, that unless the legislature of that state interferes very soon with a closed season or the national government provides a better feeding ground there will be no antelope for sportsmen to shoot at in another half decade. Outside of the Yellowstone park, elk have very little protection, and reserve feeding grounds need to be provided for them by the nation if the sportsmen are to have the pleasure of hunting them in the future.

The application of the Canadian policy in this county, by the national government, would keep our wild game for us. Reserves that are permanent ought to be provided. While the animals will for the most part keep to these reserves, the overflow into the adjoining country will be sufficient to give sportsmen each year a splendid opportunity to hunt big game. The co-operation of sportsmen, themselves, to this end will accomplish it. Without their co-operation it may be accomplished but not until some of our big game has been permanently destroyed.

A GRUNTING ENIGMA.

The people of this country do not know what to make of E. H. Harriman; he is the most sinister figure in public life today.

On a trip through the South a few days ago Mr. Harriman was shown about the city of Atlanta by Mayor Maddox. The mayor was quite as disgusted with his guest as the country appears to be and has applied to him the not at all pretty name of "a grunting enigma." "To all my remarks," declares the mayor, "Mr. Harriman replied in Indiana-like grunts, and only twice during the day did he show any signs of humor."

More on account of his gloomy and sour reserve than on account of his dominance of transportation facilities even, is Mr. Harriman regarded with distrust. Harriman is not frank and open and apparently does not even care to appear to be. Therefor he is distrusted, and in proportion to his vast powers, profoundly distrusted.

The power of James J. Hill in railroad matters is scarcely less than that of Mr. Harriman. Mr. Hill, too, is distrusted and many hard things are said of him. But James J. Hill's most active enemy does not deny the good that he is doing, does not deny the great interest that he takes and the powerful impetus that he is giving to the development of the resources of the country, does not deny that Mr. Hill is more than a railroad genius, that he is in fact a statesman and a great man. Harriman, too, may have great abilities, but he prefers to use them in the dark. He employs them in secret for secret purposes merely, and purposes that will not bear the light of day do not bode any good to the general public.

Mr. Harriman last week became a director of the New York Central railway, and in spite of the law's delays and the vigorous opposition of the government has thus finally secured control of the long heralded line of railway from coast to coast. This in itself is not evil, but the public has reason to distrust the effect of every such acquisition by so sinister a power as Harriman.

The practical acquisition of the New York Central by Harriman is declared to be an epoch in the railroad history of the United States. Mr. Harriman and his power, defying regulation, is a greater epoch although a passing one. Harriman himself, by the mystery with which he cloaks himself, is contributing more to his ultimate downfall than anything else. The suspicion with which he is regarded is making the country all the keener to investigate the problems of the control of the railways.

No man who occupies the semi-public position that E. H. Harriman occupies has any right to be a "grunting enigma," or any other kind of enigma for that matter, and the people of this country are pretty plainly determined that the time shall come when no man in such a position can possibly be an enigma.

WHAT'S THE MOTIVE?

The demand for a tonnage tax upon iron ore is pretty general in all parts of the state except in those sections where iron ore is mined. Without giving any particular thought to the matter, other sections of the state think of the "tonnage tax" as a great blessing, and without giving any particular thought to the matter they condemn as selfish, tax-dodging and slaves to the steel trust anybody and everybody who opposes this method of taxation.

The Herald has entire confidence in the justice of the men of Minnesota, whether they live in the Red river valley, in Southern Minnesota, or upon the iron ranges—when they stop to think. But The Herald charges, and it believes with good reason, that there is very little thinking about this tonnage tax matter on the part of the people of the state. It is a matter of feeling, not a matter of intelligent conviction.

Are there any good reasons for this belief on The Herald's part? We think there are. Here are some of them: The press of the non-iron producing sections of the state breathes an impatient demand for a tonnage tax, but in the long list of The Herald's Minnesota exchanges those newspapers which have so much as attempted to advance any argument in favor of a tonnage tax can be counted upon the fingers of one hand, and when the counting is done there will be fingers to spare. Again. The original demand was for a straight tonnage tax—5, 10, 25 cents per ton, anything so long as it was a tonnage tax. This was soon abandoned for it was discovered that a straight tonnage tax would cripple the cities and villages and schools in the iron country. Tonnage tax advocates admitted that they had been moved by feeling, not by reason. They then proposed a tonnage tax, a part of which would be returned to the communities of the iron ranges. Soon, again, they discovered that such a tax would be unjust in taxing equally ores of very unequal value. Again the tonnage tax advocate finds himself driven from one position to another. Every position he finds to be untenable, but he hastily fortifies himself in another and renews his demands. In other words, he is attempting to get something which he thinks is desirable but for the acquisition of which he has not yet been able to advance a reason.

The Herald asks the people and the press of Minnesota to take thought about this matter. Let us be perfectly honest with ourselves; do we want a tonnage tax because it looks good to us or because we know that it is a just tax? If the latter, if we know the tax to be just, let us print that knowledge, let us give our reasons.

The Herald does not think that it is quite honest or quite right for the people in Steele county, or Chippewa county, or Kittson county to think that they have established the justice of the tonnage tax by asserting that the iron mines can be made to pay all state taxes, by saying that opponents to the tonnage tax are selfish taxdodgers, by asserting that the people of St. Louis county are the servile tools of the Steel corporation. The people of St. Louis county are not opposed to the tonnage tax because they want to escape just taxation for themselves or for others. They are opposed to it because they know that such a method of taxation will inevitably cripple their schools, make taxation for local government purposes uncertain and dependent upon the charity of the state, and increase taxes upon property other than iron ore to the point of confiscation. The people of the iron ore section of the state know what they are talking about ;the rest of the state is just guessing.

If the people of Minnesota will honestly ask themselves what their motives are in this matter, it will be a matter soon settled. Do we know what we are asking for? Or are we moved by greed? Do we want to get what belongs to us? Or are we carried away by our desire to "soak" a trust? Are we convinced by facts that we can name? Or moved by prejudice?

SPEAKS FOR MINNESOTA.

Another exponent of the resources and advantages of Minnesota has arisen to speak in the first publication of a little magazine called "The Northwest," the first or February number of which is just out. The publication is devoted to subjects such as naturally suggest themselves in Minnesota and contains articles on Minnesota immigration, deer hunting in the north woods, the protection of game and Minnesota's productiveness. It is beautifully and profusely illustrated. Julius H. Block, Frank Eddy, Carlos Avery, S. G. Iverson and other prominent Minnesotans are contributors to the first number. The new venture on the sea of journalism is launched at St. Paul by "Billy" Cowles and a number of newspaper men.

All the paragraphers are experiencing a Rainey season.

Nevada has trained its pea shooter on the president and is popping rebuke pellets at him.

Illinois is having trouble finding the man it wants for senator. Why not take J. G. Cannon off our hands?

Investigation is a legislative term, which being interpretated means, "An easy way to avoid action."

Reciprocity would not help Canada any, says T. J. Drummond. Certainly not. She would get the Northern league pennant just the same anyhow.

We shall have to admit Carnegie's claim that he and Schwab were a great team, although neither of them drives well to harness and both balk at the bit.

The net meaning of the report of the state tax commission appears to be that the whole subject of taxation is a matter for experiment, as most of the recommendations of the commission are based upon the belief of what will "probably" be beneficial.

The first international conference upon the subject of conservation of the natural resources of the North American continent will be held at Washington upon the call of President Roosevelt Feb. 18. Canada and Mexico will be represented and it is hoped to agree upon a definite plan of action which will yield results in this very important matter. Two conferences have already been held in this country and both Canada and Mexico are now earnestly considering the matter.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Some day, and that not very far distant, the population in this county north of a line about fifty-eight miles from Duluth, will outnumber the population here in this city, and, in fact, the entire population south of that line," said N. B. Arnold at the Lenox last night.

"I was very much surprised upon looking up some figures the other day, to discover the rapid growth of the range district. Between 1900 and 1905, four of the range towns increased approximately 15,000 in population. Take the figures for Duluth for the same period and you will find that the population of this city increased 12,000. This shows, in my opinion, that the great growth of the future is going to be upon the ranges. The people are coming there more rapidly than they are to any other portion of this county, and the future years will witness an even greater increase in the population in the range districts than in Duluth, according to the opinion held by many men who have studied the conditions there.

"The figures also show that the county increased 25,000 in population, outside of the increase of Duluth, during the five years between 1900 and 1905. The greatest growth of the county was not achieved in Duluth here, but in the outside districts, and most of that increase came in the range section.

"I am one of the people who believe that the range districts will show a good increase of population during the present year. The methods that are being pursued to bring farmers to the northern part of the state, will, I believe, be successful. Then the improvement of business during the present year, for there is every prospect that the business of the mines will show a great increase, should bring more people to the iron ranges. Mining men have informed me that the prospects for a good year in the shipping of ore, are very bright. With a good business year upon the ranges, and with the co-operation of the various commercial clubs of the county in an endeavor to improve the farming conditions, there is no reason to doubt but that there will be many people come to St. Louis county to make their home. The people are just beginning to discover that there is a fine dairying country up here in this part of the state.

The question is, did W. T. Bailey meet the real Lord Beresford, or did he meet the phony Edmond Burke, who started work at the Leavenworth rockpile yesterday.

The question was brought up by one of Mr. Bailey's friends at the St. Louis hotel yesterday. Mr. Bailey, who is a guest of the hotel for the time being, who is a resident of this city, was in Europe two years ago. He had a most enjoyable trip. He was entertained by many hospitable and charming people. Particularly charming was Lord Beresford, who entertained the Duluth man during his stay in England.

Now some eminently practical friend of Mr. Bailey's, wants to know whether Mr. Bailey is positive that he was not entertained by the man who yesterday started work for the United States government, breaking rocks in a great big yard, upon whose edge ugly and spiteful looking men parade around with nasty looking weapons.

This man, who says he is a friend of Mr. Bailey's, after reading the account of the elegant manners and lubricated tongue of the phony Beresford, just popped the question right out in the lobby of the hotel: "I'll bet a Stetson hat that Bailey met this guy, and ever since then he has been harboring the delusion that he met the real Lord Beresford."

But it is not easy to impersonate a lord in England, where every newsboy knows his Burke's peerage, so Mr. Bailey is safe.

"There will be the erection of the $60,000 government building, and then, besides, there will be several large brick stores erected this spring. plans are completed and the work will start very soon. We look for a large increase in population and the addition of some modern brick buildings."

Ah! Ha!

Charleston News and Courier: The coming year (1909) should be a great year for baseball—as it will have two nines of its own.

THE WEATHER.

The weather man hopefully predicts snow flurries for tonight. It is not often that Duluth lacks good sleighing up to the first of February, but there hasn't been a full-fledged snow storm yet this winter. But then there is all of March to come, and it's a dull year when Duluth can't furnish a record-breaking snow storm in March.

The lowest temperature recorded last night was 14 degs. above zero.

A year ago today it was mild and cloudy. The sun rose this morning at 7:32 and will set at 5:12, making nine hours and forty minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Temperatures have moderated from the Mississippi river eastward to the Atlantic coast and in Pacific districts, due to barometric depressions central off Newfoundland and in the Puget sound region. During the past twenty-four hours these disturbances caused rain or snow in Pacific coast states and scattered snow flurries over Eastern North Dakota, Upper Michigan and Western New York. The barometer continues high over the lower Mississippi valley, while the high pressure central Monday morning over Saskatchewan has advanced to Manitoba. This latter pressure movement was attended by colder weather in Alberta, North Dakota, Manitoba and Western Ontario. Indications favor snow flurries and moderate temperature at the Head of the Lakes tonight and Wednesday."

Root's Brilliant Record.

Boston Transcript: Secretary Root made a brilliant and impressive termination of his duties as a member of the cabinet, by the agreement reached with respect to the Newfoundland fisheries question, which for years has been a source of friction between that country and his own, and if the action taken is ratified it will go to The Hague, where it belongs. It has been rare in the history of the government when a secretary of state has terminated his service with so clear a docket as that which Mr. Root turns over to his successor. He has come nearer to putting this country on an arbitration basis with the rest of the world than it ever was before, and he has strengthened friendly relations between the United States and the other powers in general. He has done all that the limitations of his position permitted him to do for the promotion of good understanding, and if some of the arrangements that he has negotiated fail of ratification, the fault will not be his. The peculiar and valuable quality of his service was first shown in his attitude toward the South American republics. He not only formulated a policy calculated to win their friendship and confidence, but he made his message doubly impressive and effective by delivering it in person. There has been, because of his good offices, a closer drawing together of the governments and peoples of the Western hemisphere than ever before, and this is true to the north as well as to the south of us. As secretary of state his record has been not merely brilliant, but what is a great deal better, it has been one of the highest usefulness and benefit, not only to American interests, but to othes countries as well. It is a fortunate day for New York when a man of such trained statesmanship and large achievement once more fills a place that was intended for statesmen.

Jeff Davis' Nightmare.

Louisville Herald: Jeff Davis, painting sanguinary pictures of another Gettysburg, entertained the senate Tuesday. It is said that as he drew his rhetorical explosion to a climax only sixteen auditors remained. Unquestionably the rest of the senate had been scared out of the chamber.

Just what Jeff Davis was talking about it is impossible to discover from a persual of his reported utterances. He seems to have been suffering from some kind of a nightmare, in which he beheld this unhappy country ground beneath the hoofs of the golden calf. According to Mr. Davis the country resented this uncomfortable and humiliating position, and was about ready to rise in its might, grab the calf by the horns, throw it and jump on it with both feet.

Rivers of blood ran through the excited senator's oration. Niagaras of gore thundered and splashed. Despite the sentiment concerning Roosevelt that prevails in some quarters, Jeff wished to Gawd that there was a Caesar in the White House. What he expected the reincarnation of the late lamented Julius to do if he should establish himself in Washington we are not prepared to say. Mr. Davis' reading of history has apparently induced the belief in his mind that Julius was mixed up with some Roman Wall street magnates, and that Brutus was a high financier who jabbed his onetime friend in the ribs because the latter was blocking a deal to fleece the people.

As an interpretation of history this is all very interesting. On such subjects Jeff may be an authority; but when he assumes the mantle of a prophet and predicts bloody revolution we refuse to take him seriously.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

•••At a meeting of citizens at the Dramatic Temple, it was decided to organize the Duluth chamber of commerce with the following directors: W. G. Peck, H. H. Hanford, F. W. Eaton, P. M. Graff, C. H. Graves, H. W. Pearson and J. H. La Vaque. O. H. Simonds was elected president. C. P. Bailey and M. H. Bywater were appointed a committee to prepare statistics. A. C. Arveson called attention to the need of an engineer for the harbor. Col. Graves offered a resolution to ask St. Louis county to grant $60,000 to any railroad company building a line from Duluth to the Red river within three years, but it was laid over until the next meeting.

•••C. P. Trucks has been appointed night operator of the St. Paul & Duluth at Rice's Point, in place of H. L. Heisler, resigned.

•••The Catholic church society has decided to build a Catholic school in Duluth, and committees have been appointed to devise ways and means of raising the necessary money.

•••The select school at Rice's Point has been reopened by Mrs. Nolan.

•••Prof. Whiteside's brass band is practicing every Monday evening and is making good progress. The band expects to be able to parade the streets next summer and furnish music of which the city will be proud.

•••A "pink tea" social was given by the ladies of the Congregational church last evening and netted about $170.

•••Z. D. Scott and family are spending a short time in Washington.

•••John T. Condon is getting up a neat little card for the special use of those who "skip" the town. It is to be handsomely decorated, and in the center is a place for the names of those who "skip." The list so far contains the names of Patterson & Dean, H. O. Sprout and Prof. Willis, but there is room for more.

•••Miss Newman is about to start for Chicago to purchase a spring stock of millinery for Mrs. C. H. Foster.

•••Morris O'Meara leaves tomorrow for Eau Claire, Wis., where he will remain with friends for about one month.

•••Julius Howard has gone into partnership with Joe Lloyd in the grocery business. They will erect a building 20 by 50 feet alongside Howard Bros.' feed store.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Brainerd Tribune: Minnesota politicians in Washington have already agreed upon Rip Brower as the Republican candidate for governor in 1910, and Congressman Hammond as his Democratic opponent. But strange as it may seem, the Washington politicians do not select the candidates for either party.

Little Falls Transcript: If the legislature, which is about to authorize county boards to appropriate $500 for county exhibits, will make the sum $1,000, and include in the bill the proviso that parties handling the exhibits must be chosen at regular elections by a vote of the people, it might serve to smooth out the Morrison county situation. That the county should have its regular exhibit is the wish of all, and it would be greatly regretted if the local situation became so tense that developments would endanger the placing of Morrison's products before the visitors of the state fair.

Norman County Index: The present legislature will give women the right to vote, or its members who oppose the manifest destiny of the weaker sex will find two years hence that they will have a fight on their hands the like of which never happened before.

Two Harbors Iron News: It is small wonder that many thousands of American farmers have been attracted to the Canadian Northwest to establish farms. The Canadian government not only advertises for settlers, but it does things to assist them in developing the country after they do settle. In Minnesota the state government utterly neglects the pioneer and compels him him to do everything that is done, even refusing to bear its proportion of the cost of building roads adjoining its own lands. There is now some state aid given in road building, but it is not one-tenth what it should be. As long as this niggardly policy is continued it is useless to bewail the departure of so many American farmers to the Canadian Northwest.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The election of a Democrat to the United States senate by a Republican legislature in Oregon, in obedience to the expressed preference of the people, is an innovation, and a warning which Republicans would do mighty well to give heed to.

Wheelock's Weekly: The state university needs money, a great deal of money; but it can't have all the money there is in sight.

Morris Sun: Last season a farmer at Clear Lake, this state, raised ten acres of what was pronounced very fine tobacco, and now it is predicted that Central Minnesota will yet make a success of tobacco raising. Many people in this part of the country have raised a few tobacco plants at different times, just to satisfy their curiosity, but this is one of the first instances where it has been raised on such an extensive scale. There is a good profit on tobacco, something over a hundred dollars an acre being realized by the farmer mentioned above, and if tobacco can be raised that will command a price on the open market, there is no reason why its cultivation should not be attempted by others.

Eveleth News: The St. Paul correspondent of the Duluth Herald believes there is no question but that a law will be enacted, compelling lumber companies to burn their slashings. The only question is when shall they do it? Early spring is the proper time and that under close supervision of fire wardens.

Kanabec County Times: The state fair management has discovered the value of advertising in the country papers, and has concluded to double the space generally used, this year.

Clear the Way.

Men of thought, be up and stirring,
Night and day;
Sow the seed—withdraw the curtain—
Clear the way!
Men of action, aid and cheer them,
As you may!
There's a fount about to stream,
There's a light about to beam,
There's a warmth about to glow,
There's a flower about to blow;
There's a midnight blackness changing
Into gray;
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

Once the welcome light was broken,
Who shall say
What the unimagined glories
Of the day?
What the evil that shall perish
In its ray?
Aid the dawning, tongue and pen;
Aid it, hopes of honest men;
Aid it, paper—aid it, type—
Aid it, for the hour is ripe,
And our earnest must not slacken
Into play;
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

Lo! a cloud's about to vanish
From the day;
And a brazen wrong to crumble
Into clay.
Lo! the right's about to conquer;
Clear the way!
With the Right shall many more
Enter smiling at the door;
With the giant Wrong shall fall
Many others, great and small,
That for ages long have held us
For their prey.
Men of thought and men of action,
Clear the way!

—CHARLES MACKAY.

The Gargoyle.

The Gargoyle often makes its perch
On a cathedral or a church,
Where, 'mid ecclesiastic style,
He smiles an Early Gothic smile.
And, while the parson, dignified,
Spouts at his weary flock inside,
The Gargoyle, from his lofty seat,
Spouts at the people in the street,
And, like the parson, seems to say
To those beneath him, "Let us spray."
I like the Gargoyle best; he plays
So cheerfully on rainy days,
While parsons (no one can deny)
Are awful dampers—when they're dry.

Brooklyn Eagle: First Comedian—What's the difference between a beautiful young girl and a codfish?

Second Comedian—Give it up.

Husband—Oh, do, doctor. You see my wife has a book on "What to Do Before the Doctor Comes," and I'm afraid she'll do it before you get there!"

Philadelphia Inquirer: She—Anything that is worth winning is worth working for.

He—Yes, but the question is, will your father thaw out, or will I have to keep on working for you after I've won you?

Louisville Courier-Journal: "Do you think that most men nowadays worship money?"

"No, I won't go as far as that," answered the home-grown philosopher, "but I will say that the love of money is seldom platonic."

"In a moment of weakness?" exclaimed the judge. "Goodness, man; what would you have taken if you had yielded in a moment when you felt strong?"

Success: Katy, aged 5, and a resident of America's seat of culture, ran to her father one morning, exclaiming: "Father, Brother Howard swore."

"Swore, did he?" inquired the parent, grimly, reaching for the slipper. "What did he say?"

"He said 'ain't,'" responded Katy solemnly.

Ohio State Journal: Pretty nearly all Ohio is now eating about sixteen buckwheat cakes for breakfast and charging whatever physical ills are suffered to the coffee.

Northern Democratic Senators.

Boston Transcript: Senator Teller of Colorado may well feel strangely out of place on his return to private life March 4, when he will be succeeded by Charles J. Hughes. Mr. Teller began his official career as senator, March 4, 1876, and with the exception of three years' service as secretary of the Interior, under Arthur, has served continuously in the senate. His case is somewhat peculiar, as he had never held office of any kind before. Until his famous bolt, in 1896, he was a Republican, but in the last thirteen years has been a Free Lance Democrat, and he occupied a seat on the platform at the Denver convention. His successor is also a Democrat. His party associates from the North will be Shively of Indiana, and Chamberlain of Oregon, new men, and Newlands of Nevada, who has been re-elected. The number of Democratic senators will thus be raised after March 4 from 31 to 33.

There is a certain sectional significance in the success of Shively and Chamberlain. The opposition party will be less that of a section than heretofore, a circumstance not to be regretted. The senate Democracy has suffered from the absence of men from progressive states of the North. Of the two new Democrats, Governor Chamberlain is perhaps more representative of the school of thought typified by Johnson of Minnesota than is Mr. Shively, though the latter is now credited with having discarded some of his Bryanite ideas. He can be a useful senator if he will.

The defeat of Senator Hemenway is a loss to the public service, since he was an expert in the computation of expenses and revenues. Senator Fulton is not a man of weight belonging to that Oregon school which now promises to pass into a desuetude entirely innocuous.

RECTOR URGES SALOON LICENSE

Two Thousand Circular Letters Advocate a "Reasonable Law."

New York, Feb. 2.—Two thousand letters, headed "Grace Church Rectory, Riverhead, Long Island," were sent out yesterday by Rev. William M. Wasson, rector of the church, in the interest of saloons and their licensing. He wants the people to join in the Riverhead License league.

"The sole object of the league," says Mr. Wasson, "is to convince our fellow citizens that the licensing of the liquor business and its proper regulation under a reasonable and practical law, is a far better plan than that of no license, which has always caused law-breaking, perjury, hypocrisy and all manner of corrupt and corrupting practices."

He wants to form an organization to carry the town for license next fall.

MEDAL FOR CAPT. HALL

Delegate From Alaska Wants Congress to Honor a Hero.

No Change in Secretaryship of the Senate Is Probable.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Once a year for several years past, there comes to Washington, a little sawed-off, wiry man, who would not attract the slightest attention in a crowd, but who has a record that any man might envy. He is Capt. Hall of Nome, Alaska. He was born in Ireland, he is an American by adoption, by instinct, and by desire. Capt. Hall has done great things for the country of his adoption, and during that sad incident in Samoa, when so many lives were lost in Apia bay, Hall was the hero. Grabbing the life line he swam through that terrible surf for miles in an effort to carry a communicating line from the shore to the doomed vessel. Had it not been for the fact that the line was broken, he would have accomplished his purpose, but when he had covered miles of the distance he discovered that instead of a continuous line to the shore, he was carrying but a few yards of a rat eaten rope which had parted. But that is ancient history. Tom Cale, the delegate from Alaska, has a bill in congress to give Hall a congressional medal of honor, and if any man ever deserved it, it is Capt. William Hall, that little sawed-off Irish American sailor, miner and explorer. Hall has papers which demonstrate that the officers of the American navy and of the American revenue marine service appreciate the great service he has done in the past, and if congress could see these papers and could digest them for minutes, there is not the faintest question of doubt as to the fate of the Cale bill. It would be passed in a minute and signed in another, by the president.

Since he was here a year ago, Capt. Hall has traveled more than 36,000 miles. Besides trolley lines, steamboats, steam cars, and sail boats, he has used kyaks, dog sleds, reindeer sleds, skin canoes, rafts, and shanks more in completing this long journey. He has visited in his fifty years of life, practically every quarter of the globe. He speaks virtually every dialect of the south seas, from Hawaii to the Gilbert islands, and is particularly well versed in the affairs of Samoa, in which kingdom he spent upwards of twelve years of his life.

Today he is an explorer, and when in Washington last week he exhibited a couple of the most curious little mummies that he picked up in Northern Siberia that were ever seen here. He started west again on Thursday in order to catch a steamer for Japan from San Francisco on Feb. 5, and he will probably land once more in Northeastern Siberia before he returns, and when he comes back, if congress does the right thing, as they should do, there will be a medal of honor awaiting him, which shall have been earned as effectively as any that has ever been presented by either the Carnegie fund or the general government for particularly valiant and meritorious services.

There has been a great deal of talk in the last few days about the possible retirement of Charles G. Bennett from the secretaryship of the United States senate. This talk is based upon the supposition that Mr. Bennett's political future depends upon Thomas C. Platt, who is to retire from the senate March 4. Nothing could be farther from the truth. Mr. Bennett is a gentleman who has made his own position in the senate and he has done well. No man who ever occupied that position has thrown greater credit upon the office than the former member of congress, Charles G. Bennett. He has dignified the office, he has simplified the method of business, and he has produced absolute order out of a very chaotic position.

Besides this, the office of secretary of the senate is not considered among the spoils for which the victory in any political side must contend, but even should it be otherwise there is no question but that a large majority of the senators would, if given an opportunity, emphatically vote to retain Mr. Bennett in his present position. He is a gentleman of executive ability, strength of character, suavity of manner, and, withal, has proved himself just the right man for the place, and all indications are that he will remain there for many years to come.

It is not much more than ten years now since W. J. Buchanan, then of Sioux City, Iowa, was brought into the lime light in connection with one of the great expositions, of which this country has witnessed in recent years. As general manager or commissioner general of the Pan American Exposition in Buffalo, Mr. Buchanan made a reputation for himself which extends from Maine to California and as a diplomat, representative of the United States in Central and South American countries, to which positions he was appointed respectively by President McKinley and President Roosevelt, he extended his reputation and it was not long before he was regarded as one of the very best all around diplomats that this country had ever known. Not long ago President Roosevelt called upon Mr. Buchanan to proceed to Caracas and clear over affairs between this country and Venzuela. At the time of the departure of Mr. Buchanan on this mission the relations between Venzuela and the United States government were strained almost to the breaking point, but Mr. Buchanan being a suave diplomatic gentleman, thoroughly understanding the character of the South American people, has, it is reported, succeeded substituting diplomatic molasses for diplomatic vinegar with the result that all the troubles between the countries are, it is confidently believed, soon to be adjusted to the entire satisfaction of both.

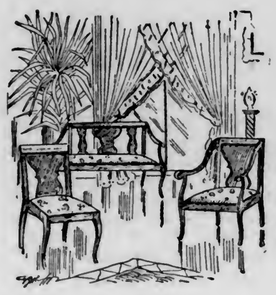

Mr. Buchanan is expected back here within the next month and it is also expected that shortly after Mr. Taft takes the office as president, some sort of a treaty or agreement will be signed, which will not only re-establish the entente cordiale between the United States and the irascible South American Republic, but will also produce the much desired results of settling all differences between that revolution-ridden country and the European powers with which Venezuela has been at constant odds for the last two decades.

CANADA WILL SEND AMERICAN COIN BACK

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 2.—There is a large amount of United States silver coin in circulation in Canada. As it displaces Canadian coin and deprives the government of this country of the coinage, it has been decided by the government to co-operate with the banks in collecting American coin as fast as it comes in and sending it back to the United States.

Knights of Green Cloth Said to Continue Busy in Eveleth.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Civic league last night discussed many important questions. C. W. Stark will be in Hibbing the first Sunday in the month and that after that he will be able to come to Eveleth to work for the anti-saloon league. Messrs. Williams, Johnson and Rev. Wargelin were appointed to make arrangements for a mass meeting on Feb. 14.

The gambling question was discussed and it developed that the games are still going on in town. The league decided to do something about stopping this gambling. There are rumors that the gambling instead of being curtailed is increasing.

The building of the house of ill-fame on the Adams location was discussed and it was decided to back up the doings of the mass meeting that was held Sunday afternoon at the township hall. A letter will be sent to the proprietor of the house telling him of such action. When the league promised to give the owner until April 1, to move out of his present location they had no idea that the house would be put up right in full view of the town. They intend to do everything possible to drive such a house away.

GILBERT ANNEXES SPARTA ADDITION

Much New Property Is Added and Long Disputed Question Settled.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.) — The Gilbert village council last night took in the Sparta addition that has been in the minds of the Gilbert property owners for some time. This will make one town of the Sparta and Gilbert parts.

A large number of prominent Sparta people were present and took part in the discussion, among whom were Messrs. Rublnstein, D. M. Monser, Carlson, Pete Cosgrove, Falk and others. The Sparta people are bringing $25,000 from the Steel corporation. A fire department and a water works system will be put in by the Steel corporation.

Most of the property owners were in favor of the annexation, which has been hanging fire for some time. The joining together of the two separate sites adjoining each other will tend to make the people of each part more friendly than otherwise and the town therefore being one, will have more hands pulling upward for the benefit of the town. With the opening up of spring weather many new buildings will be put up and the moving from present Sparta will begin in earnest. Local townspeople think that the town of Gilbert will now become one of the good towns of the range.

THREE COUPLES WEDDED.

Austrian Population of Eveleth Afforded Unusual Spectacle.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—A triple wedding was solemnized yesterday morning at the Holy Family church when Anton Calgpug and Juliana Zylinska, John Kovach and Mary Jevinskar, and Louis Oberstar and Mary Sterle were united for life.

The church was packed with friends of the couples, anxious to witness an unusual spectacle.

Father Bilban performed the ceremonies and the couples took hacks for a local photograph gallery, where they were photographed. After this, they had big feasts at the various homes, and again the Austrian settlement had a chance to enjoy itself with the merrymakers. Only a week ago, two couple were married at once in the same church, and the Austrians then had a fine time all day, dancing, singing and feasting.

VIRGINIA COUPLE WEDS.

Moving Picture Man Takes Bride in the Range City.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—David E Larson and Miss Helen Erickson were married this afternoon at the Presbyterian church by Rev. Henry E. Neff.

After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Andrew Erickson, where a wedding dinner was served to a large number of invited guests. Both young people are well known in Virginia, the bride having lived here from childhood, and the groom for the past six years, coming here from St. Paul. Mr. Larson operates the moving picture machine at the Bijou theater.

They will go to housekeeping in a new home recently purchased by Mr. Larson in the Smithside addition.

L. D. ROSE FOR MAYOR.

Socialists of Two Harbors Propose Him for Mayor.

Two Harbors, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Milwaukee will not be the only city boasting of a Rose as mayor, not if the hopes of the local members of the Public Ownership or Socialist party are realized, as they last night named L. D. Rose, a well known believer in the party's principles, as their candidate in the coming municipal election.

Other nominations made by the Socialists were: William Roleff, alderman, First ward; C. E. Bergren, alderman, Third ward; Martin Peterson, Louie Anderson and Alex Halliday, aldermen-at-large. Nominees for the offices of alderman in the Second ward, assessor and justice of the peace were chosen, but on account of the candidates not having an opportunity of signifying their acceptance, their names were not made public.

In the last election, out of the total vote cast, 889, the Socialists balloted 320 votes.

LAKE COUNTY REPUBLICANS

Form Organization and Will Seek to Secure Big Membership.

Two Harbors, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Lake County Republican club was organized at a meeting held last night in the Y. M. C. A. Charles Cotter, chairman of the Republican county committee, was chairman of the meeting and M. M. Hanna was chosen secretary.

An organization was effected by the election of the following officers: M. M. Hanna, president; J. M. Doodsill, vice president; Wm. Tracy, secretary; A. E. Haugan, treasurer.

An effort will be made to secure a large membership. A committee was selected for the purpose of formulating by-laws and a constitution. A report will be made at a meeting to be held the evening of Feb. 8.

PROPOSE MORE WARDS

Among Recommendations of Virginia Charter Commission.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The charter commission will meet in the municipal courtroom this evening, when a review of the past findings of the commission will be made and action taken. Among the more important matters which the commission will recommend will be the incerase in the number of wards in the city from four to six, place the mayor and aldermen on a salary and cahnge the time of the municipal election from November to February. The commission has nearly completed its labors and expects to submit its findings to the council in about two weeks.

COOK VISITS VIRGINIA.

Rumors Started About Extending His Road to Duluth.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The visit of President H. H. Cook of the Rainy Lake road here Sunday revived rumors that the road will be speedily extended to Duluth, but if Mr. Cook came here on any preliminaries connected with that proposition he did not disclose it.

EVELETH BUSINESS MEN TO PLAN FOR BANQUET.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The monthly meeting of the Business Men's association will be held Thursday night at the city hall and the committee on taxation will have something to report that will be of interest.

A committee will be appointed to make arrangements for the annual banquet which is always ahield about this time. The Glade hotel will be used this year instead of the Monitor hall, as there are more accommodations at the hotel.

EVELETH GETTING GOOD.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mike Smolki, who was arrested on Thursday for assaulting S. Milavetz, pleaded guilty to assault and battery and was fined $10 and costs.

The city has been very quiet lately. Very few cases of any kind were in court last week, and the calendar for this week is also very small at present.

MAY SECURE COURT.

Hibbing Commercial Club Thinks Superior Court Scheme Winner.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Robert Stratton, who represented the Commercial club in recommending to the legislature the enactment of a law that will permit the establishment on the range of the desired superior court, told the club last night that the prospects of the request being granted seem good.

He urged that as many members of the club as possible visit St. Paul and push the matter with the legislature.

Mr. Stration stated that he had received a letter from J. B. Cotton, attorney for the United States Steel corporation, stating that the corporation is not opposed to a superior court.

The road commission was taken up and after some discussion it was voted to oppose all changes in the present manner of road construction in St. Louis county, it being apparent that in no county of the state, considering the development of the county, had there been better progress made in this respect.

The civic improvement committee was instructed to take up with the telephone company the matter of laying underground conduits on Third avenue before the paving is completed.

HOLD-UPS ARE PUT TO FLIGHT

Three Montenegrins Face Revolver When Trying to Rob Man.

Aurora, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Three would-be hold-ups were badly fooled near here yesterday when they tried to rob William Wilkins.

Wilkins, who is preparing to move his household to the Adriatic mine, eight miles north of town, had been to the mine making preparations. In the early morning he had started for town and was about a half mile this side of the Stevens mine when three Montenegrins suddenly faced him with drawn knives and commanded him to halt. The morning was foggy and Wilkins did not see the men until they were nearly upon him. Wilkins drew his revolver and faced the men and walking backwards about a hundred feet, he turned and ran for town.

At the Meadow mine he stopped a Finnish watch and jewelry peddler and advised him of the affair and told him not to go to the Adriatic. The two came to town and reported to the police, but no clew has been found yet. Wilkins is thought to be contemplating the purchase of a $300 boarding house at the mine and the men probably imagined he had the money on him.

MORE JAIL ROOM WILL BE SOUGHT

Virginia Council to be Asked to Make Several Improvements.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the council meeting tonight it is expected that several important matters will come up.

A report of the committee on city property will be made in regard to the building of an addition to the old fire hall in the rear of the city hall so as to make additional jail accommodation. The committee will probably recommend that the building be enlarged by an addition of fifteen feet, two stories high, the lower portion to be used for jail purposes and the upper story for rooms for the judge, jury and vault. The present jail apparatus will be transferred to the old fire hall, and the rooms made vacant converted into offices for the city clerk, assessor and treasurer. The plans for this remodeling will be drawn by Radcliffe & Price of Duluth.

The resolutions passed recently by the council authorizing of lots 4 to 29 in block 43 for park purposes, and for the appointment of a board of appraisers for this property, have been signed by Mayor Hawkinson, and this fact will be announced at the meeting tonight.

The matter of selecting an official city paper and the opening of bids for the city printing will also come up.

President Osborn, one of the committee selected to look up the matter of local telephone rates, will report that Virginians have no kick coming in this regard, and the matter will undoubtedly be dropped.

Fire Chief Thayer will recommend the appointment of two additional firemen, and suggest a number of other important improvements which he thinks ought to be made for the benefit of the department.

CANDIDATES ARE SCARCE.

Little Interest in Aurora and Township Election.

Aurora, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—With election only a few weeks away for the town of White and the village of Aurora, few candidates have become known.

J. W. Lang, the present village treasurer and town clerk, will run again with probably no opposition. J. J. Hudson is a candidate for re-election for supervisor and so far has no opponent. J. T. Vickers, chairman of the town board, is also a candidate for re-election. In the village it is stated that President Olson will not be a candidate, and no other has been mentioned for the office. C. G. Vanderpool bids fair to succeed himself as village recorder. The present councilmen, M. Levin, G. J. Roop and W. J. Rashleigh, will probably be up for re-election, but it is stated that Capt. Thomas J. Nicholas of the Mohawk mine, will enter the race.

DIES FEEDING CHICKENS.

Tragic End of Mrs. M. Ponti at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dropped dead while leaning into a barrel to secure food for her chickens was the fate of Mrs. R. M. Ponti, whose funeral was held here yesterday morning from the Catholic church, Rev. Dean L. Beuchler officiating. Mrs. Ponti was 40 and leaves a husband and five children.

She was stricken with heart disease last Thursday while feeding the chickens and when found her head and shoulders were in the feed barrel.

VIRGINIA IN BRIEF.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Herman L. Garber of the firm of Garber Bros., has gone to St. Paul to purchase machinery for their dyeing plant.

C. V. Younger, formerly clerk in the B. Lewis store, will go on the road for the Lewis Knitting works of Janesville, Wis., leaving for that place this week. His place at the Levin store will be taken by A. L. Hawkinson.

J. H. James of Duluth has accepted a position in the Ed Finch buffet, corner of Chestnut street and Wyoming avenue, taking the place of Oscar Enderich, who has gone to Eveleth to manage the Finch buffet at that place.

Mrs. R. R. Bailey has returned from a visit to Hibbing, where she was the guest of Mrs. E. M. Smith.

Frank Burg, traveling engineer for the Duluth, Missabe & Northern railway, spent yesterday in the city on his way to the North.

LIKES GRUB AT THE JAIL

Fred Emerson, Who Ran Away, Returns and Is Locked Up.

Week of Freedom Was Marred by Guilty Consclence.

Fred Emerson, the man who broke away from the keepers at the county jail a week ago while he was cleaning out the basement, and was successful in eluding the officers for more than a week, turned up at the jail building last night and asked to be taken back.

He said that he had been in Superior since he ran away from the hospitality of Sheriff Bates, and that he couldn't stand it any longer. There were policemen behind every telephone pole; he seemed to be watched wherever he went; people seemed to point at him on the street; everyone seemed to know that he had escaped from jail and he had a feeling of unrest that he could not escape.

Emerson has sixty-five days to serve on an eight-five-day sentence for petit larceny, and says that there is no danger of his going away again until after the sentence is served out.

In the meantime the discovery was made that Miss Maloney had gone through a marriage ceremony with Arthur Herbert Osborn of New York, then a student in Princeton. The ceremony uniting Miss Maloney and Mr. Osborn was performed by Justice of the Peace Boyd at Mamaroneck, N. Y., on Dec. 28, 1905. Miss Maloney took the name of Helen Eugenie of Pittsburg, and Mr. Osborn used the name of Herbert Ogden of Pittsburg.

All of this made a newspaper sensation when it became known, but the Maloney family maintained silence. It was known, however, that Mr. Maloney, who had been highly honored by Pope Leo, who conferred upon him the title of marquis, took up the question of the annulment of the marriage both at Rome and at the archdiocese of the Catholic church in this city.

Finally the matter was taken to the New York courts, where action was started looking to the annulment of Miss Maloney's marriage to Osborn. The annulment was granted on the ground that they had never lived together. Miss Maloney was a witness in her own behalf, Mr. Osborn putting up only a passive defense. Miss Maloney testified that she never considered that the marriage joined her and Mr. Osborn together as man and wife, and that she went through the ceremony as a precautionary measure to save herself from the attentions of titled foreignets who were regarded favorably by Miss Maloney's parents.

Patteway, who has already been convicted of robbing the Merchants National bank of $600, but that case having been appealed, the state decided to try him on another charge, that of robbing the Guarantee Clothing store of a considerable amount of goods, which, it is claimed, were found in his possession.

CORNER IS SCORCHED

Building at Lake Avenue and Superior Street Damaged by Fire.

Water and Smoke Destroy About $15,000 Worth of Property.

Fire caused about $15,000 damage to the buildings at the southeast corner of Superior street and Lake avenue shortly after 11 o'clock last night. The flames, which started from an unknown cause in the basement of the Olympia candy store, were confined mostly to that and adjoining basements. The losses are covered by insurance.

The most likely theory presented is that the blaze started from an overheated stove in the basement of the Olympia. The fire spread rapidly through the basement and into the basements of adjoining stores, and it looked for a time as if the whole corner would go up in smoke, but prompt and effective work of the firemen soon checked the flames.

Estimates of losses are given as follows. Mars & George, proprietors of the Olympia, $9,000, insurance, $7,000. Zenith Music company, 6 East Superior street, F. G. Bradbury, proprietor, $1,500, fully covered by insurance; St. Paul restaurant, 8 Lake avenue south, $800; H. Krojanker, furrier, over the Olympia, $1,000, insured. The corner building itself was damaged to the extent of about $3,000. Most of the loss was of stock owned by the different companies named.

Because of the central locality from which the alarm was turned in, all the fire-fighting apparatus from the downtown departments was called to the scene. Thousands of people were attracted to the scene, and watched the efforts of the firemen.

Outside the basements, most of the damage to stock was from smoke and water. The Olympia is the only place where the fire itself did any damage. Street car traffic along Superior street was delayed about an hour by lines of hose crossing the track, and the electric wires supplying current to the block on the south side of Superior street, between Lake and First avenues east, were cut, leaving the buildings without light for nearly two hours.

AMERICANS ARE SCORED IN THE JAPANESE DIET AFTER A PLACE SPEECH

Touching on the relations of Japanese with France and Germany, he said that they were on an equally satisfactory footing and that the declaration of Chancellor von Buelow in the Reichstag clearly manifested the frank and friendly attitude and complete accord of Germany and Japan in the Far East. He expressed the sincere hope that the good relations with Germany should continue. Concerning China, Komura said:

Sympathy With China.

"It is evident that in view of our important and close relations the two nations should draw ties of sincere friendship and mutual consideration. It is gratifying to note that some long pending questions have been satisfactorily adjusted recently, and the solution of other problems is not altogether impossible if they are treated in a spirit of conciliation and accommodation. Japan is watching naturally with keen interest and sympathy the progress of reforms in China, and it is our earnest hope that the statesmen of China will preserve domestic order and tranquility. We have invariably made it a guiding rule to observe the open door principle with equal opportunity to China, and we are firmly determined to adhere to that principle with unswerving loyalty."

The foreign minister dwelt at length upon the relations between Japan and America. He said:

"The friendship of Japan and the United States is traditional, and it is absolutely essential that both maintain unimpaired those sentiments of amity and extend and strengthen them by every means. Notwithstanding the perfect accord which has always existed regarding the aims of the two countries in the Far East and in the Pacific, it appears that doubts have been entertained in some quarters concerning the sincerity of the intentions.

"In order to remove this misunderstanding the two governments have deemed it advisable to exchange diplomatic notes, officially announcing a common policy, which I am convinced will be largely instrumental in preserving the repose of the Orient."

"With regard to the question of legislation unfavorable to the Japanese now pending in California, the imperial government is relying on the sense of justice of the American people, together with the friendly disposition of the federal government, and is confident that the question will not lead to international complications.

Sure of Peace.

"Japan, therefore, being on cordial terms with all the powers including those which have not been mentioned, it must be admitted that the maintenance of peace, which is the one principal object of our foreign policy, is now practically assured; and we are enabled to devote our endeavors to the development of our natural resources. The first point claiming our attention is the problem of emigration.

"In view of the new international conditions assigned to Japan, it has become necessary that our people, instead of scattering in foreign lands, shall concentrate in the Far East, thus securing a united effort looking to legitimate activities and avoiding everything likely to obstruct the development of international commerce and industry.

"These considerations have led the government to follow an avowed policy with respect to emigrants to Canada and the United States, enforcing in perfect good faith the restrictions placed on emigration."

Count Komura concluded his speech by announcing that the imperial government had decided to notify the various powers next year of the termination of existing commercial treaties, to be effective one year after such notice was given. He said that it was the intention of the government to negotiate new treaties, "unhampered by any unequal engagements." The new compacts, he continued, will be based entirely upon the principle of reciprocity, with a view to the free development of international commerce.

Count Hattoris, in his speech, said recent events had proved that the anti-Japanese sentiment in America has not subsided. He attacked particularly the recently concluded agreement between Japan and America, saying he believed the Japanese foreign office was forced by the American government to sign the agreement in order to prevent competition by the Japnese on the Pacific coast. He declared Japan's dignity had been injured thereby, and he passionately urged the government to enforce the principle of equal opportunity which alone would solve the question of the responsibility of Japan in foreign countries. He said that even the president of one country had denied Japanese the right to travel, a right which was theirs by treaty.

Count Hattoris' speech was greeted by continued cheering by the opposition.

Foreign Minister Komura replied with a few words, saying that he had outlined the policy of his government and that he had nothing to add and nothing to retract. The house then adjourned.

Nevada Denounces Japs.

Carson, Nev., Feb. 2.—A strong resolution declaring for drastic anti-Japanese legislation criticising Theodore Roosevelt and designating the Japanese as parasites of the world and a menace to the civilization and progress of the Pacific coast, was reported favorably by the committee of the whole in special session of the Nevada legislature and will be voted on late today as a special order.

The resolution is directed to the California legislature and declares in favor of that body's passing measures which will prevent the influx of Japanese.

It further recommends that California legislature pay no attention to what is termed the coercion and interference on the part of President Roosevelt, in the anti-Japanese movement.

Californians Determined.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 2.—While the letter of President Roosevelt to the governor regarding the Japanese matter made a deep impression upon the legislators, the two leading anti-Japanese members of the assembly declare they will push their measures to a vote as soon as possible.

Assemblyman A. M. Drew of Fresno, the famous raisin producing section, where there are many Japanese, who had already amended his anti-alien bill as requested by the national administration so that the clause discriminating against the Japanese was eliminated, took exception to the letter enclosed by the president, written by Secretary of State Root, in which it was said the Federal government was opposed to all legislation directed against aliens, Japanese or others.

Mr. Drew declared that it was to the interest of California to protect her soil from an invasion of aliens, "from the far shores of the Pacific, who would always remain citizens of their mother country and whom Americans did not welcome."

TONE UP THE STOMACH

Get Rid of the Gas, Headaches and Dizziness.

The symptoms of stomach trouble vary. Some victims have a ravenous appetite, some loathe the sight of food. Often there is a feeling as of weight on the chest, a full feeling in the throat. Sometimes the gas presses on the heart and leads the sufferer to think he has heart disease. Sick headache is a frequent and distressing symptom.

A very delicate stomach requires easily digested food but nature never intended that the food should be digested before it is eaten. The stomach must be strengthened to perform its own work and what it needs is not food already digested but a tonic. The processes of digestion are controlled by the blood and nerves, and medical science has produced no better digestive tonic than

ANNIE'S STORY WAS TOO THIN

Jury Convicts Colored Woman of Theft From Hotel Cook.

Mrs. Annie Sanford's story of the causes leading up to a cab ride to Superior at 3 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 16 last, didn't hold water with a jury in district court yesterday afternoon, and she was convicted of grand larceny in the first degree.

The woman claimed that the money, watch and revolver, found on her at Superior, were given her by Ole Olson, the cook in the Lake avenue hotel, but Olson claimed that she gave him a drink from a black bottle, he went to sleep quickly, and when he awoke, the money, watch and gun were missing.

Mrs. Sanford claimed that she went to Superior early in the morning on that day to collect a debt of $9. She paid the cabman $5 for taking her and her husband across the bay. The jury was out but a few minutes, returning with a verdict of guilty.

BAD WRECK AVERTED.

Great Northern Passenger Train Has Close Call at Bena.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—What might have resulted in a serious wreck to the westbound Great Northern passenger train happened Sunday afternoon as the train was slowing up for Bena.

Just before the train stopped in front of the depot, a journal on the front end of the smoking car broke off even with the wheel, dropping the trucks to the ground. Had the train been running at a high speed a serious wreck would undoubtedly have occurred.

The smoker was left behind and the train proceeded on to Bemidji, arriving here about twenty minutes late.

LIGHT VOTE BEING CAST

Little Interest Being Displayed in the City Election.

The Polls Will Remain Open Until 7 P. M.

A very light vote was cast in all precincts of the city this morning in the municipal election. Only about half of the normal registration is on the books, and the vote for the day will be light, as it always is in a year when there is no mayoralty contest.

Little interest has been stirred up during the quiet campaign. The contest between F. J. Voss and Ben Howard for city treasurer, has attracted considerable attention in some quarters, and there is some interest in the charter amendment providing for a commission to replace the board of public works and the city engineer. Chan Smith has also made a determined fight for his charter amendments touching on special assessments for improvements.

The ward candidates are hustling to get out as large a vote as possible under the registration, as some of the contests will be close, it is expected.

The polls will close at 7 p. m.

M'LAURIN ON NEGROES

have been one of the big attractions of the inaugural ceremonies for many years. By a point of order an item providing funds for the cadets' trip to Washington was stricken from the military appropriation bill.

On account of the time consumed with bills under suspension of the rules, the consideration by the house of the appropriation was not completed.

Under suspension the house passed the Payne bill prohibiting the importation of opium, but refused to pass the senate bill for pensions for federal judges. The bill for the exportation of aliens convicted of a felony was also denied of passage.

The special committee of the house appointed to investigate and report on the use of appropriations for the secret service in the various departments has complained to the house that it is loaded down with too much work.

Chairman Olmstead asked that its task be reduced in order to allow the committee to report at this session. The house granted the request by passing unanimously a resolution by Olmstead, redefining the scope of the investigation. Under the new resolution the committee will not have to report to the house the names of all persons engaged in secret service work in the departments and the daily duties performed by each of these employes.

Mr. Olmstead calculated such information would fill a book of 7,500 pages.

The secretary of the treasury has submitted to the house the estimates of appropriations required by the various governmental departments for the remainder of the fiscal year. The total amount of the estimate for deficiency appropriations is $9,334,948. In addition $1,326,705, payable from the postal revenues, is asked, for the postal service.

New State Land Grants.

A discussion of the various grants of land, which it is proposed to give to Arizona and New Mexico in the statehood bill, took place before the house committee on territories yesterday. Assistant Attorney General Woodruff, for the interior department, gave figures concerning the present and possible future value of the lands in question. He declared that the 3,000,000 acres, which it is proposed to give to each of the territories upon becoming states, if sold now, would bring in the neighborhood of 25 cents an acre, if buyers could be found.

He declared it as his belief that these same lands would be worth nearly $5 an acre within a few years.

An opportunity will be given the house to act on the Shirley bill amending the bankruptcy laws of the United States. By a vote yesterday, next Saturday was set for consideration of the measure. On Feb. 9 consideration will be given the bill for a civil government for the canal zone.

The navy department was yesterday directed to send to the senate a statement of the amount of money expended since May 12, 1908, on various vessels of the navy, and also to state what amount is required annually "to keep in repair and in good condition a first-class battleship." It is required also that there will be stated the cost of coal consumed last year, together with the names of those from whom it was purchased. This resolution was introduced by Mr. Clay, who declared that he wished to obtain the information in order that he might understand the estimates upon which the naval bill was based.

Postal Savings Bank Bill.

Senator Carter, in charge of the postal savings bank bill in the senate, yesterday announced that he would endeavor tomorrow to get a vote on it, although he "fully realized the improbability of that bill becoming a law in the few remaining days of his congress."

Bills were passed by the senate yesterday as follows:

Providing that sentences of the court-martial which involve the dismissal of a midshipman at the naval academy shall be approved by the president.

For the naturalization of aliens who have served five years in the United States navy or marine corps.

Renewing the charter of the Lake Erie & Ohio River Ship Canal company for a period of three years.

Appropriating $80,000 to pay war claims of religious orders of the Catholic church in the Philippine Islands.

To defray expenditures for fitting the capitol for the inauguration of Mr. Taft, a joint resolution was agreed to unanimously in the senate yesterday, appropriating $16,000.

A bill providing for the purchase by the government, through condemnation proceedings of the property, lands and water rights north of the St. Mary's Falls ship canal, Mich., to the international boundary line, was introduced yesterday by Representative Young of Michigan. It carried an appropriation of $250,000. The measure also provides for the purchase by the government of the power plants on St. Mary's river.

CENTRAL BANK ISSUE SOUGHT

Senate Leaders Opposed to the Postal Savings Bank Bill.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 2.—That the national monetary commission will present a plan for a central bank of issue, and that the postal savings bank bill is doomed for this session and probably for all time, at least in its present form, has become known as a result of conferences among senate leaders, says a Washington dispatch.

Mr. Aldrich has been converted to the central bank issue proposition and believes that the next logical step will be the establishment of a type of branch banks which will supply the demand for postal savings banks.

Opposes Change of System.

Entertaining this belief, Mr. Aldrich is opposed to every material change in the present banking system, arguing now, as he has in the past, that when a fundamental change has been made, others will follow in natural sequence. The senator from Rhode Island has, therefore, informed Senator Carter that it will be futile for him to continue to press the postal savings bank bill at this session.

Mr. Carter will not abide by this decision, but has decided he cannot judiciously oppose the motion of Senator Foraker to make the Brownsville bill unfinished business, as to do so doubtless would estrange many good but not enthusiastic friends of the postal savings bank bill, so that the postal bill probably will be displaced on Monday.

Three and perhaps four vacancies will occur in the national monetary commission on March 4. Those who drop out are Senator Teller and Representatives Overstreet and Bonynge and possibly Senator Hopkins of Illinois.

Teller Asked to Remain.

Mr. Aldrich has asked Senator Teller to consider the advisability of accepting a place on the commission after March 4, and it is probable that the same invitation will be extended to Representative Overstreet. It appears that Senator Teller already has been assigned to cover a particular branch of the work of the commission, and Mr. Aldrich believes that it would cripple the commission if he were to drop out at this stage of its work.

The reason for urging Mr. Overstreet to remain is that he is regarded as an expert on postal affairs, so that in consideration of any proposition to extend the central bank through the postal service his advice would be of value.

CANAL TO MISSISSIPPI.

River and Harbor Bill May Provide for a Survey.

Washington, Feb. 2.—In connection with the comprehensive plan for surveys of canalization of waterways in the Middle West, it was indicated yesterday that a survey of the proposed canal from Lake Superior to the Mississippi river probably would be authorized in the river and harbor bill.

It will not be included in the measure when it is reported to the house, but advocates of the proposed canal will press the matter before the senate committee on commerce, and believe that a survey will be authorized should the report of the engineers indicate that a canal can be constructed at a comparatively reasonable cost.

A strong effort will be made in the next session to have the appropriation for it included in the large river and harbor bill, which is promised for the long session next winter.

EIGHT THOUSAND WILL RESUME STEEL WORK.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 2.—Employment for 8,000 idle men will be provided within the next two weeks by the Pressed Steel Car company, at its works near Pittsburg, and the Standard Steel Car company, at its works at Butler, Pa., near here. Both plants have been practically idle for about a year.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 2.—Ernst Sommers, who came to Madison in 1849, is dead. He was born in Prussia in 1822. He was an intimate friend of Carl Schurz and was associated with Governor Leonard J. Farwell at Madison in important enterprises. Mrs. Sommers died some years ago. To Mr. and Mrs. Sommers twelve children were born.

COULD NOT CURE WEEPING ECZEMA

Disease Began over Ear and Spread till Face and Neck were Raw—Itching, Inflammation and Soreness were Terrible—Lasted Over a Year and All Treatments Failed

UNTIL CUTICURA AGAIN PROVED GREAT SUCCESS

"Eczema began over the top of my ear. It cracked and then began to spread. I had three different doctors and tried several things, but they did me no good. At last one side of my face and my neck clear up to my hair were raw. The water ran out of it so that I had to wear medicated cotton, and it was so inflamed and sore that I had to put a piece of cloth over my pillow to keep the water from it, and it would stain the cloth a sort of yellow. The eczema itched so that it seemed as though I could tear my face all to pieces. The disease began in the fall and I did everything for it until the next winter. Then I began to use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and it was not more than three months before it was all healed up. I still use the Cuticura Resolvent Pills once in a while to cleanse the blood. I am very thankful that I tried Cuticura, and I can recommend it to any one. Miss Ann Pearsons, Northfield, Vt., Dec. 19, '07."

JANUARY WAS QUEER MONTH

Though the mercury found its way down the tube to a point lower than it has for a good many years, the mean temperature for January was about normal. The mean was 10 degs, which was 5 degs. lower than the mean of the month for the past thirty-nine years. The highest temperature was 40 degs. on Jan. 26, and the lowest 34 degs. below zero on Jan. 6. The greatest daily range was 40 degs. on Jan. 29 and the least daily range 1 deg. on Jan. 23.

The mean atmospheric pressure for the month was 30.12; the highest, 30.69 on Jan. 7, and the lowest 29.60 on Jan. 28. The total precipitation for the month was 1.02 inches and the total snowfall 3.7. The greatest precipitation in any twenty-four hours occurred on Jan. 22-23, when .53 inches of rain fell. There was 1.1 inches of snow on the ground at the end of the month. The precipitation during January this year was the same as that for January, 1908, and .03 inches more than the mean of the month for thirty-nine years.

The prevailing direction of the wind was west, and its total movement was 12,382 miles, or an average velocity of 16.6 miles an hour. The maximum velocity was reached Jan. 29, when there was a wind from the northwest at the rate of 71 miles an hour.

There were 7 clear days, 12 partly cloudy and 12 cloudy. On 11 days .01 inch or more of precipitation occurred.

There was an aurora borealis on Jan. 30, solar halos on Jan. 1 and 12, lunar halos on Jan. 1, 2 and 3, fog on Jan. 22, 23 and 24, and a thunderstorm on Jan. 29.

The figures are taken from the monthly meteorological summary issued by H. W. Richardson, forecaster in the United States weather bureau, and are from the official figures as recorded by the government instruments.

ECZEMA LODGES IN THE SKIN

For many years eczema was supposed to be a blood disease and was erroneously treated as such, but now the best authorities agree that eczema is only a skin disease and must be cured through the skin. The eminent skin specialist, Dr. D. D. Dennis, first discovered the eczema germ and his discovery was quickly taken up in both Germany and France.

To kill the eczema germ and at the same time heal the skin, Dr. Dennis compounded oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc. The remedy is a liquid, not a mere salve, hence it sinks right into the pores of the skin. Washing with this oil of wintergreen compound seems to take the itch away at once; soon the scales drop away and the disease disappears. The prescription has now been used so long as to have proven its absolute merit and we do not hesitate to express our confidence in D. D. D. Prescription. Lyceum Pharmacy, Duluth, Minn.

ADAMS DEFEATED BY LESTER PARKS

The Hockey Game Was Played Under Protest, However.

Standing of the Clubs.

Club—	W.	L.	Pct.
Bryants	1	0	1.000
Lesters	1	1	.500
Adams	1	1	.500
Fairmounts	0	1	.000
Northern Juniors	0	0	.000

By a score of 2 to 1, the Lester Park team defeated the Adams Alumni team on the ice of the Central rink last night, in a game that was featured by fast team and individual work.

The game was played under protest by the Adams team on account of the playing of Cummings by the Lakesiders. The rules provide for the playing of new men only when notice has been served on the other teams ten days in advance of the date on which they play. The Adams team claim that they knew nothing of the fact that Cummings was to play until they got on the ice last night, and immediately made known the fact that they would play the game under protest or not at all.

The contest was fast and rough. Several of the players on both sides were penalized for rough work and tripping.

Al Olson of the Adams team, got busy in the first minute of play and scored the first goal of the game. Play during the first half was mostly in Adams territory. Towards the last of the second half Cummings scored for the Lester Park team and he was closely followed by Gunderson of the same team. The score stood 2 to 1 at the end of the half and the game ended with the score unchanged.

During the second half the Lester Park team assumed the defensive, and although they played hard and took advantage of every opportunity, the Adams men were unable to score.

Cummings and Gunderson of the Lester Park team proved to be exceptionally strong players. They worked well together and they frequetly brought forth shouts of applause from the enthusiasts present.

The lineup:

Adams—	Lester Park—
A. Olson	left wing Ostegren
C. Olson	right wing Charton
E. Olson	center Bartlett
Grenner	rover Cummings
Helmer	cover point Gunderson
Ericson	point Kelley
Nelson	goal Thomas

SULLIVAN IS SURELY SINCERE

Pittsburg, Feb. 2.—John L. Sullivan left Pittsburg yesterday to make a beeline for the Pacific coast. He goes to see Jim Jeffries, and it is just possible John L. may call off his tour around the world and get ready for the fight, for which he expects to book Jeffries and Jack Johnson. Said John L.:

"I have heard from Jeff. He wants me to come to the coast and look at him. He does not say much, only that he would like to see me, and I'm on my way. It's more than likely that the big boy has found he can handle himself all right, and he will consent to go into the ring after the big black boy. I surely hope so, for I don't believe there will be anything to it when they get together.

"I can assure Jeff that the $75,000 is all right for the fight. I will tell something else, too, perhaps not so pleasing, and that is that the fight will not be brought off in Frisco nor on the coast. I have a place more centrally located.

"I may call off my jaunt around the world. It all depends on Jeff when we meet. I've even got the man selected to referee the battle, and though neither Jeff nor Johnson knows who it is, they will both take him; that is, if they are both on the square, which I assume is the case."

OUTLOOK FOR LEAGUE ROSY

Amateur Teams Are Enthusiastic Over Proposed Organization.

Interest in the formation of the new city baseball league is now greater than ever, and a number of teams not mentioned when the subject was brought up some time ago, have asked to be considered in a proposition of that kind.

At first it was thought that a league of six teams would be about the limit, but since the matter has been talked over, it has appealed so strongly to some of the managers, that they have sought out the originators of the scheme and asked permission to attend the meeting to be held some time next week.

It now looks as though a ten club league could be formed as easily as a circuit of only six clubs. The following have said that the proposition looks like a go and have expressed themselves as willing to enter: Duluth Heights, Adams, Fedje, Kellys, Columbias, Hummers, Oak Halls, Crusaders, Clippers of Superior and the Spaldings.

Representatives of the several teams will get together early next week at a meeting to be called by the manager of the Oak Hall team and Manager Lavall of the Spaldings. At this time the matter of organizing will be gone over thoroughly.

They will at this time perfect the organization, arrange a schedule, elect officers, and in fact get everything in shape for the opening, which will be about the first of May.

JEFFRIES WILL STICK TO STAGE

Champion Will Draw $2,500 Weekly or $50,000 for Engagement.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 2.—James J. Jeffries Monday signed a contract to appear upon the Eastern vaudeville stage for a period of twenty weeks at a salary of $2,500 a week, or $50,000 for the engagement. This means, of course, that the big "retired and undefeated champion of the world," whatever his intentions may be in regard to an ultimate meeting with Jack Johnson, will have another six months at least to think it over.

The contract with Jeffries was obtained by William Morris of New York, head of the big independent vaudeville circuit that has been causing so much trouble for the so-called vaudeville trust. Morris slipped quietly out of New York, just as quietly into San Francisco, and had his contract all but signed before many were aware of his presence in the city.

Jeffries is slated to go directly to New York with Morris about March 8. Starting in New York he will take in two theaters in that city, Boston, Brooklyn, Chicago and other large cities.

Before leaving the coast, however, the big fellow will make a barnstorming tour of the state under the direction of Fincus & Harris. Jeffries will finish the week here, and then go to Vallejo for a one-night stand. From there he will travel directly to Los Angeles, where he expects to spend about eight days settling his private business affairs preparatory to the long trip before the footlights.

When the actor-champion has finished his business in the Southern metropolis he will entrain for Bakersfield to start the swing through this state, which will include one-night stands at Bakersfield, Fresno, San Jose, Stockton and Sacramento and two nights in Oakland. When this trip is completed Jeffries will be turned over to Morris for the journey to New York.

"I completed a contract with Jeffries for twenty weeks on our vaudeville circuit,' said Mr. Morris Monday. "I dealt with Jeffries directly and he will go East with me early in March. We will show at the Lincoln Square theater in New York, the American Music hall in Chicago, the Fulton in Brooklyn and the Orpheum in Boston."

DOES ROOT LOOK LIKE A FIGHTER?

Former Secretary of State Mistaken for Billy Papke.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 2.—Secretary of State Root does not look much like a man in need of rest if one guest at the hotel is to be believed. The former secretary was mistaken yesterday in the hallway in his bath for Billy Papke, the pugilist, who is stopping at the same hotel.

Mr. Root was walking to the big bathroom, and was clad only in a Turkish robe and sandals. He met Jack Pollux, a traveling salesman, who was returning.

"Say, Bill," said the traveling man, "I thought I'd meet you in the bath. I wanted to talk over some matters with you."

Then Pollux saw his mistake and apologized. Mr. Root was amused when informed for whom he was taken, and asked if Papke's bathrobe was the same color as his.

Discuss Fall Races.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 2.—Directors of the Columbus Driving Park association yesterday decided that the bulk of their September racing programes shall be made up of the national trotting handicap, six stakes and two futurities. These races will be worth $84,000.

Secretary Shepard's plan for the handicap was adopted in all of its main points. It will be worth $35,000. The Hoster-Columbus stake for 2:16 trotters will be the only $10,000 one carded, as the B. & B. given last year will be dropped.

The boys of the boys' department Y. M. C. A. are looking forward with pleasure to the visit to be made them by Dr. Dick Grant, track coach at the University of Minnesota, Feb. 20.

Mr. Grant will speak before the Saturday club on that day on "Training." The boys are, of course, very much interested when it comes to anything relative to athletics, and a talk on training by a man who is a recognized authority, will be interesting in the extreme.

The boys are planning a reception for Mr. Grant in the evening of the day on which his visit to Duluth takes place, and they will at that time have an infermal dinner.

WILL SEVEN GAME SCHEDULE PASS?

Enthusiasts Confident That "Big Eight" Will Allow the Change.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—That Director Stagg and the University of Chicago athletic board will gain their point and get the permission of the remaining seven members of the "Big Eight" to play seven football games next fall was the consensus of opinion on the Midway yesterday. Directory Stagg and various members of the board expressed confidence that their proposal for an extended schedule for the coming fall would find favor at the hands of the governing boards at the other institutions.

It seems likely the Maroon board's legislation will revive the controversy over the seven games scheduled, and some fear the result may not be as satisfactory as last time. On that occasion Michigan voted and with the Wolverines out the fans ar afraid the supporters of the seven-game proposition may be defeated, as the Michiganders were one of its strongest adherents.

Last January Illinois, Wisconsin, Purdue and Chicago voted against and Michigan, Indiana, Minneosta and Iowa for seven contests.

New York, Feb. 2.—A challenge was received yesterday by the Motor Boat club of America, from the Motor Yacht club of Great Britain for the British international motor boat cup, which has been held for the last two years by the United States. The challenge was accepted and within the next week the officers and regatta committee of the Motor Boat club of America will hold a meeting to determine definitely upon the coarse and the time and arrangement of necessary details.

Anti-Fight Bill.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 2.—Senator Will of Redlands introduced in the senate yesterday a sweeping anti-prize fight bill. It prohibits all fistic contests in places where admission is charged and makes violation a felony. Under the penal code, the punishment would be not more than five years in the state penitentiary.

FOR THE PUBLIC

New Formula Cures Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Hoarseness in Five Hours.

Much is being done in these days to stop the ravages of consumption, but probably nothing has been so effective as teaching the public how to break up a cold and cure coughs, bronchitis, tonsilitis, etc., with simple home-mixed medicine free from opium, poisons, etc. A laxative cough syrup, free from whiskey and poisons is the prime need. A cough indicates inflammation and congestion and these in turn are due to an excess of waste and poisons in the system. A tonic laxative cough syrup rids the system of congestion while relieving the painful coughing. Get the following and mix at home: One-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Shake the bottle and take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less according to age. Cut this out and save it for some friend.

BADGER PLAYERS TO BE ASSISTED

Midison, Wis., Feb 2.—Dr. Hutchins, athletic director of Badger athletics, has evcolved a new scheme for bringing athletics back to their old plane at the university. He has appointed advisers for the university athletes who are near the danger line in their studies. The men will now be coached through their examinations and the plan is expected to have great influence upon the men.

Wisconsin has suffered sorely because of athletes who are deficient in their scholastic work. Last spring was an example when "Pete" Murphy, one of the best athletes that ever pulled an oar an dthe captain of the winning freshman crew at Poughkeepsie two years ago, was kept out out atletics because he was low in his work. Again last fall, the same thing occurred, and Murphy, an excellent fineman, was ineligible for football. Had Murphy been in the 'varsity shell last spring there is little question here but that Wisconsin would now be holding the title of intercollegiate champions. The same thing has been true of many other star athletes.

The plan is now being tried at Michigan, where deficiency in scholastic work is assigned as the cause of the malze and blue's miserable showing during the past two years.

The faculty will also be petitioned by the students to allow the law school men a "con' examination at the end of each semester., the same as men in the other departments. As the rule now stands, some conditions tide over for a year an da half. It is thought that the faculty will accede to the request, which is signed by hundreds of students.

Indian Easy for Ordeman.

Minneapolis, Feb. 2.—Henry Ordeman, the local wrestler, had an easy time with War Eagle, the Indian wrestler, last night, throwing the aborigine in 17 and 6 minutes respectively. War Eagle was slow and, although outweighing Ordeman, was no match for the local man's cleverness.

Indians Win.

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 2.—The Haskell Indians defeated Highland Park college in a one-sided basketball game here last night by a score of 47 to 21.

WRIGHT BARS AUTOS FROM MILITARY USE.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Secretary of War Luke E. Wright is either cocksure of his reappointment by Mr. Taft or he is a reckless man.

He is formulating an order withdrawing automobiles from military use in Washington.

He finds them too expensive, and besides, if President Roosevelt sets the standard of riding horseback and making ability to go fifty miles a day essential to good military form, the further use of automibiles would tend to destroy the popularity of this way of exercising one's muscles and demonstrating one's endurance.

Military men are influential with Mr. Taft. He was secretary of war. There he met all the generals, colonels and majors. And it was during his administration that the automobile was introduced as a necessary appendage to the army. These genetlemen threaten a revolt if they must now go back to the horse and buggy.

Early in his administration Secretary Wright expressed a wish to know the cost of maintenance of two motor cars which had been purchased for the use of the army in this city. Investigation was made for his information and the report showed that the expense in the way of repairs was considerable. The secretary came to the conclusion that the needs of the situation are fully met by horses and carriages and that the cost of maintenance of automobiles is not justified, at least in Washington.

CASS LAKE FIRE IS EXTINGUISHED

Loss to Property Is Between $15,000 and $20,000.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The disastrous fire that broke out here Sunday night and burned a good part of yesterday was extinguished completely early last night and the people relieved of the possibility of having their homes and business property wiped away, as it was one of the most disastrous conflagrations in this section in years.

The high wind that prevailed during the early hours of the fire made the task of the firemen unusually difficult and hazardous, the fire hanging on with a bull dog tenacity, that puzzled old fire fighters. Several times it was feared the town was doomed, but the fire fighters, by hard work, managed to change the course of the flames or finally check the fire. Mullen's saloon, the Globe hotel and the Old Log Cabin saloon buildings were destroyed. The loss will be between $15,000 and $20,000. All the buildings are understood to be covered by insurance.

SPENDING MONEY TOO FAST.

Cloquet Man's Display of Wealth Results in His Undoing.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Viraga, a Hungarian about 25 years of age, arrested Saturday evening, was sentenced Monday to ninety days in the county jail at Carlton for stealing $93 from the pool hall of John Hessler on the island.

Viraga had been in the employ of the Northern hotel as chore boy for about a week. A day or so after his arrival, one of the boarders missed $200 from his trunk. Viraga was suspected and was "shadowed" after working hours in the hope of finding him displaying wealth. Saturday night the opportunity arrived when Viraga was spending money faster than his job would warrant. On being arrested, he admitted having stolen money, but it developed that it was Hessler's, having been stolen from his safe but a short time ago. The man at the hotel is still out his money, but Viraga, according to the general sentiment, could probably throw some light on the subject if he cared to.

AITKIN YOUNG WOMAN COUGHS AND THEN DIES.

Aitkin, Minn., Feb. 2.—Miss Emma Seavey, daughter of L. G. Seavey, one of the pioneer residents of Aitkin, died very suddenly last night. She was employed at a local drug store, and after coming home to supper, stepped outside the door for a moment and, upon returning, began to cough, and immediately sank to the floor and died. Heart failure is supposed to have been the cause of death. The deceased was about 20 years old and highly esteemed.

SUPPOSED SUICIDE CASE WAS MURDER.

Frazee, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—An examination of the body of Elmer Bangle, a young farmer, who was found lying near his barn, seven miles south of here, Thursday, with the top of his head shot off, disclosed the fact that every bone had been broken by an ax or some sharp instrument, and what at first was deemed a suicide has developed into a murder mystery.

Bangle, who was 30 years old, was well-to-do, and it is thought that robbery was the motive for the murder. The police are investigating.

BUILDINGS OF STRAW.

North Dakota Concern That May Revolutionize Building.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 2.—The Pembina Portland Cement company has been reorganized as the Northern Cement & Plaster company. The new company consists of the same stockholders as the old one. It has been decided to increase the manufacture of products at the plant at Concrete to include northern brick layers' cement, hydraulic cement, northern cement plaster, northern fiber and northern stucco. The plant at Concrete will resume operations on Feb. 15. It will have a capacity of 500 barrels a day.

One of the products of the company will revolutionize things to some extent, it is predicted. From flax straw a fiber is produced which will be valuable for building. The process has been patented by the company. Besides being profitable for the manufacturer, it will bring a ready market for the product of the farmer.

No. 23 on Milwaukee Discharged Passengers and Went East.

La Crosse, Wis., Feb. 2.—The missing train "23" on the Southern Minnesota division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road was officially found yesterday when wire communication was established with Jackson, Minn. The train, unable to get through the snow drifts beyond Jackson, had discharged its passengers and started east. For the present it will be run between Jackson and Austin until the track has been cleared west of Austin. The passengers, who were bound for small towns in Western Minnesota and South Dakota had been cared for and sent to their destinations by roundabout routes.

WITHROW'S BAD FIRE.

The Washington County Seat Sustains Quite a Loss.

Stillwater, Minn., Feb. 2.—The general store, dwelling and hall used by the Modern Woodmen and other societies at Withrow, were destroyed by fire Sunday. The loss was $10,000, with $5,000 insurance.

The property was owned by B. W. Ellis. Part of the adjacent lumber yard was also damaged. Villagers and farmers by hard work prevented further damage. The co-operative creamery near by was in danger. The fire started from a kitchen stove.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 2.—It develops that Fay Kirk, who died in an East Grand Forks resort Saturday afternoon, had not intended to kill herself. She had been drinking wine and sought to scare the other inmates by pretending to drink carbolic acid. She took a teaspoonful by mistake from another bottle. This was her dying statement.

Polk County Game Association Expects Fine Hunting This Season.

Annual Meeting Shows the Association Is in Flourishing Shape.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual meeting of the Polk County Game and Fish Protective association was held in the city council chamber last evening and was largely attended.

The association has 130 members and is the strongest organization of the kind in the Red River valley, each member backing the worg of the game wardens to a man, and in addition lending personal assistance to aid in the enforcement of the game laws.

Last year the association purchased 500 ring-necked pheasants' eggs, and the result was fairly satisfactory, although some errors in handling the young birds the coming year will be avoided, as it has been practically decided to have all the eggs placed with one experienced man, who will hatch them under hens to be provided, and raise the birds until they are old enough for distribution. W. M. Ferguson, the representative of a cartridge company, has offered the use of his farm at Maple lake and will also furnish the man free of charge. It was decided to purchase $100 worth of pheasants' eggs this spring, as soon as they are available. In addition to this, the hens hatched last year will all be laying, and as they lay from twenty to forty eggs each, there will soon be quite a sprinkling of pheasants in Polk county.

It was also decided to order $100 worth of quail from the state game and fish commission, to be placed in proper localites about the county. There are a number of ideal locations for their propogation, the Fertile locality and a portion of Louisville township being exceptionally good places for their breeding.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Martin O'Brien; vice president, Judge L. E. Gessman; secretary, A. C. Schmidt; treasurer, A. G. Anderson.

The general sentiment expressed was that with the excellent protection being afforded game and fish, sports afield would be enjoyed more than ever in the future.

WILL USE PHONOGRAPH

In Taking Dying Statements of Persons for Use in Court.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—County Attorney R. D. O'Brien will hereafter use a phonograph in securing ante-mortem statements. The idea occurred to him, following the case in which Dr. S. W. Robillard was tried on the charge of performing a criminal operation on Mrs. Mary Olson, from the effects of which, it is said, she died.

An ante-mortem statement by Mrs. Olson was one of the state's exhibits, but counsel for the physician endeavored to discredit it, and with success, as the jury disagreed.

The phonograph has been purchased by the county attorney and is ready for use, in charge of Stan Donnelly, Jr., Mr. O'Brien's stenographer. When occasion arises for an ante-mortem statement, Mr. O'Brien intends to have the person making it speak directly into the receiver, in which way even a scarcely audible whisper can be recorded, and all the questions of the county attorney, the answers of the dying person and voices of witnesses can be made a part of the record as evidence.

The scheme also avoids the difficulty of having to secure a stenographer at inconvenient hours.

OPPOSE JUDGE STONE.

Upper Peninsula Man Has Opposition for State Office.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the Houghton Republican convention to elect delegates to the state convention at Grand Rapids Feb. 12, the delegates were pledged to work for Judge Stone of Marquette for justice of the supreme court, it developing that the Upper Michigan candidate has opposition in a Grand Rapids candidate.

These delegates were elected: James MacNaughton, Charles Smith, James N. Cox, A. D. Edwards, William F. Miller, Norman W. Thaire, C. L. Lawton, August Beck, William J. Uren, Argus W. Kerr, James T. Fisher, Johnson Vivian, Jr., D. J. Wessels, C. A. Wright, C. D. Hanchette, James B. Cooper, O. W. Robinson, W. D. Calverley, E. T. Abrams, W. B. MacLaughlin, A. F. Macdonald, C. E. L. Thomas, William R. Oates, W. J. MacDonald, Anthony Lucas, C. D. Worcester, Ed Ulseth, Andrew Johnson, S. H. Haller, C. O. Jackola, Albert Marsch, George A. Royce, Theodore Hennes, Samuel Eddy, Joseph W. Selden, H. D. Conant, Robert H. Shields.

PLAN LARGE MEETING.

Annual Gathering of State Sunday School Association at Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—This afternoon the central committee in charge of the arrangements for the annual meeting of the State Sunday School association here May 4, 5 and 6, met with the ministers of the city in the office of President Misner of the Commercial club and went over the plans in a preliminary way. An effort will be made to make this the biggest religious gathering ever held in Northwestern Minnesota and Secretary Locker believes it will be as it is being handled by the Commercial club and business interests of the city in which denominational affairs are totally elliminated. The convention will probably be held in the auditorium.

FIRE VICTIM BURIED.

Funeral of John Curley, Who Perished With Big Falls Hotel.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—John J. Curley, a pioneer of Minnesota, who was one of the victims of the disastrous fire at Big Falls, Minn., last week, was buried here yesterday from the home of his cousin, Charles Cain on Russell avenue north, and from the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Mr. Curley was 58 years old. His family came to Minnesota from the East in the latter part of the fifties and lived on a farm near Golden Valley, Minn., until 1888. Since then Mr. Curley has spent part of his time on the farm, but the greater portion with his cousin, Charles Cain, on Russell avenue N. He was unmarried.

Mr. Curley had been stopping in Big Falls for a few days and was asleep in his room when the fire broke out. The part of the hotel in which he was rooming was cut off by the flames and it was impossible for the fireman to reach him. Three other men and a woman were trapped by the flames in the same way as Mr. Curley, and were badly burned before they were rescued. Two of the men and the woman have since died as the result of their injuries.

FALLING GROUND KILLS.

Miner Loses Life in Oliver Company's Mine at Ishpeming.

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Coroner Prin is looking into the death of Andrew Aho, who was killed Saturday at the Oliver Iron Mining company's Section 16 property by a ground fall, a large mass of rock and earth descending upon him.

Aho and his partner were working on the thirteenth level. They noticed that the ground above them did not look any too safe, and they decided to notify the captain. Aho stepped back under the last set of timber to wait while his partner went into the drift to notify the captain and ask him to look into the matter. Just as the partner and the captain were returning, and were within a few feet of where Aho had been standing, they heard the crash of falling ore. The ground had broken through the timber, crushing out Aho's life.

Aho was an old employe of the company and was a good miner. He worked at the Section 21 property for several years prior to two years ago, when he was transferred to Section 16. He was 36 years of age and is survived by his widow and seven children, the oldest child a girl of 13.

LONG BETROTHAL ENDED.

Couple Wedded After Courtship of Twenty-Eight Years.

Madison, S. D., Feb. 2.—In the marriage at St. Thomas' church the other day by Rt. Rev. T. A. Flynn of Miss Julia Coffey of Madison and James Rofferty of Gettysburg, S. D., the couple was rewarded for a long wait through a bethrotal of twenty-eight years.

The long delay in the fulfillment of their promise to marry was due to the bride's devotion to her mother, an invalid. Considering it her first duty to make comfortable the last years of her mother, the bried devoted herself through more than a quarter of a century to the care of her charge.

DRUGGIST'S SUDDEN DEATH.

Lidgerwood, N. D., Feb. 2.—Henry Klein of Maroin, Iowa, a druggist employed by George Wirtenberger of this place, died suddenly Sunday night of poisoning at the Merchants' hotel.

He went to his room at noon and immediately thereafter called for a doctor, to whom he said he had been drugged and robbed, having no time to make further explanations before he lost consciousness. His room was found in disordered condition. An analysis is being made of the contents of the stomach. Klein was 36 years of age.

SUES BOWBELLS OFFICER.

Edward English Wants $2,000 for Being Locked in Jail.

Bowbells, N. D., Feb. 2.—Alleging that for thirty days he was compelled to remain in the Bowbells city jail on a wholly unfounded charge, Edward E. English is suing John Moore, a local constable, for $2,000.

According to the complaint the plaintiff was engaged in organizing a lodge of the Modern Brotherhood of America here on June 28, 1907. He claims that at that time he was arrested with his wife on some charge unknown to him and thrown into jail. Upon his release a few hours later he was arrested on the charge of assault and battery, and for thirty days was unable to attend to his business in the state. He further alleges that his credit was injured and asks that damages be granted him in the sum of $2,000. His wife, who was also arrested, and who is also an organizer, prays for the granting of a similar amount to her.

WOLVES KILLING STOCK.

Barnesville, Minn., Feb. 2.—Timber wolves and foxes are reported to be very numerous in the western part of this county this winter, and are doing much damage to livestock in that locality. Old settlers living in the country claim that the presence of so many wild animals is due to the forest fires which raged in the northern part of the state last fll. Several farmers have succeeded in killing them and have received big bounties from the county.

I Cured My Rupture

I Will Show You How To Cure Yours FREE!

I was practically helpless and bedridden for many years from a double rupture. I wore innumerable different kinds of trusses and appliances. Some of them were tortures, some positively dangerous, and none would hold the rupture in its proper place. The doctors told me I could not expect to have it entirely healed unless I would consent to a surgical operation. I fooled them all, however, and cured myself completely and permanently by a simple method which I discovered. Anyone can use it, and I will gladly send the cure free by mail to anyone who writes for it. Fill out the coupon below and mail it to me today. I will send the cure by return mail, postpaid.

COMING TO MINNESOTA.

Pure Air, Good Water and Fine Locations Attract Industries.

Brainerd, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The desirability of this part of Northern Minnesota for locating factories is attested by L. Boruszak, a Chicago silk manufacturer, who has been in this locality looking for a suitable site for a factory to make silken goods. He has decided to locate in the new town near here named Boruzak on the Minnesota & International Falls railroad, about fourteen miles north of here.

In naming the new town Mr. Boruszak was honored, his name being taken except that the letter "s" is dropped. He said that he should return in about a month and that the erection of a factory and other buildings would be commenced as soon as weather would permit. He stated that the manufacture of garments from silk goods would be the first industry started, but that several Chicago firms, who were desirous of getting their factories away from towns, where pure air, good water and ample space were to be had, were interested in the project. He will build a summer residence for his family at the new town and bring them there early the coming summer.

A Little "Time Off" For Your Stomach

Will accomplish wonders—in indigestion and dyspepsia. Kodol gives your stomach "time off" by digesting your food while the stomach rests.

Kodol thus digests food, for the simple reason that it contains all of the elements essential to food digestion. It would be impossible for it to not digest food.

You know that decaying food is extremely poisonous. Where, then, could decaying food be any more dangerous than lying on the human stomach? Bad enough if indigestion and dyspepsia were the worst results. But they are not.

When food doesn't digest, it forms into hard, lump masses. These irritate the tender linings of the stomach and intestines, and sometimes even cancer of the stomach is caused. Chronic forms of dyspepsia are quite certain to result.

There is nothing secret about Kodol. As stated, it merely contains all the natural digestive elements. It is made in a liquid form so that it can contain all these.

In this respect it differs from ordinary pepsin tablets and other partial digesters, which embody only one or two of the digestive elements. Kodol is a complete digester. That is why it is so invaluable in any ailment, resulting from bad indigestion.

Then again, some of these tablets containing soda or magnesia are quite harmful, if continuously used. They tend to choke up the lining of the stomach and destroy the digestive glands. They are injurious to the kidneys.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

At midday, the market was strong and ⅝d to ¾d higher than yesterday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 1.—Although weekly statistics were of a bearish nature the wheat market opened firm today owing to a fair demand by commission houses and bull leaders. Weather conditions in this country were favorable for the fall sown crop, world's shipments were liberal and the amount on passage increased 6,400,000 bushels compared with the previous week. At the start prices were a shade lower to ¼c higher, May opening at $1.07½ to $1.07¾. Later May touched $1.07⅞. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 121 cars, against 408 cars last week and 403 cars a year ago.

The market gained in strength as trading advanced, a big decrease in the visible supply of wheat in the United States being responsible for much of the bullish sentiment. May advanced to $1.09⅛. The market closed strong at the top with May up 1⅜@1½c, at $1.09⅛.

Local receipts of corn were exceedingly small, 48 cars, and this light movement created moderate firmness in the market for that grain. Pit traders and leading longs were active bidders but offerings were meagre. Prices at the opening were ⅛c to ⅛@¼c higher. May opened at 63c to 63⅛c and sold up to 63¾c. None of the arrivals today were of contract grade. Additional strength developed later in the day insympathy with the upturn in wheat. May advanced to 63⅝c. The close was firm with May up ⅝@¾c, at 63@⅝c.

Oats were firm on buying by cash interests. At the start prices were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher. May opened at 52@52⅛c and sold at 52⅛c. Local receipts were 50 cars.

Trade in provisions was dull. Notwithstanding a 10c to 15c advance in live hogs the market showed only moderate firmness. Prices at the opening were unchanged to 5c higher.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.09⅛; July, 98½c; September, 94⅞c; December, 95¾c. Corn—February, 60⅛c; May, 63⅛@⅜c; July, 63⅝c; September, 63½c. Oats—May, 52¼c; July, 46⅝@⅜c; September, 39½c. Pork—May, $17.10; July, $17.15. Lard—May, $9.70; July, $9.82½. Ribs—May, $8.97½@9.00; July, $9.12½@9.15. Rye—Cash, 76@½c; May, 78@78½c. Barley—Cash, 61@67c. Timothy—March, $3.95. Clover—March, $9.40. THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Shows Tendency Toward Price Maintenance, as Month Opens.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 1.—The new month came in with hthe wheat market showing tendency toward price maintenance. By noon the market was up, prices inclined to hold steady at the advance encouraged by a Liverpool market that opened ½d lower but was ¼d higher later. Local elevator stocks stood evened up for two days. Minneapolis got only 114 cars against 308; Duluth 1 against 8; Winnipeg 62 and 158. The market was strong as the session drew on and May advanced more than a cent from Saturday's low Just before the close May sold to $1.09. Chicago May at that time sold ⅛c over Minneapolis. May opened $1.08; high, $1.09; low, $1.07⅞; close, $1.09. July opened $1.08½; high, $1.09½; low, $1.08⅜@⅝; close, $1.09½. Poorer quality of a large proportion of the receipts made the cash market slower. No. 1 northern sold at 1⅜c to 2c over May and No. 2 at May price to ½c under, but there was less in proportion than last week at the top prices. Close: No. 1 northern spot, $1.10⅜; to arrive, $1.10⅜; No. 2 northern spot, $1.08⅜; to arrive, $1.08⅜; No. 3 wheat, $1.08⅜@1.07⅜. No. 3 yellow corn, 57⅛@57½c. No. 3 white oats, 49⅛@49⅞c. RULES FOR JAP CHILDREN.

An English newspaper published in Japan printed at one time an interesting synopsis of the rules which the public schools of that country were teaching their pupils on the subject of the treatment of foreigners, says the New York Sun.

This synopsis is reprinted in a recent book, "The Empire of the East," by H. B. Montgomery, and is accompanied by some interesting facts concerning the schools of Japan. The rules are as follows:

Never call after foreigners passing along the streets or roads.

When foreigners make inquiries answer them politely. If unable to make them understand inform the police of the fact.

Never accept a present from a foreigner when there is no reason for his giving it, and never charge him anything above what is proper.

Do not crowd around a shop when a foreigner is making purchases, thereby causing him much annoyance. The continuance of this practice disgraces us as a nation.

Since all human beings are brothers and sisters there is no reason for fearing foreigners. Treat them as equals and act uprightly in all your dealings with them. Be neither servile nor arrogant.

Beware of combining against the foreigner and disliking him because he is a foreigner; men are to be judged by their conduct and not by their nationality.

As intercourse with foreigners becomes closer and extends over a series of years there is danger that many Japanese may become enamored of their ways and customs and forsake the good old customs of their forefathers. Against this danger you must be on your guard.

Taking off your hat is the proper way to salute a foreigner. The bending of the body low is not to be commended.

Hold in high regard the worship of ancestors and treat your relations with warm cordiality, but do not regard a person as your enemy because he or she is a Christian.

Beware of selling your soul to foreigners and becoming their slaves. Sell them no houses or lands.

Aim at not being beaten in your competition with foreigners. Remember that loyalty and filial piety are our most precious national treasures, and do nothing to violate them.

Negotiations for the erection of a memorial to John Bunyan in Westminster Abbey, supported by peers, bishops, statesmen and literary persons, have issued in a proposal by the dean and chapter that the tribute shall take the form of a window to be placed in the north aisle of the Abbey. The archbishop of Canterbury promises to preside over the committee.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Market Opened Narrow, Rose Sharply, But Soon Declined Again.

New York, Feb. 1.—Prices moved irregularly today in the opening dealings in stocks. Business was small and changes generally were narrow. Westinghouse Electric declined 1⅝ and American Smelting large fractions. Canadian Pacific rose 1.

A brisk rise, in which a number of stocks rose sharply, was succeeded by a decline to the lowest prices of the hour. Denver & Rio Grande had an early rise of 1½ and Reading, Anaconda, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Central Leather, Interborough-Metropolitan preferred and United States Rubber first preferred. Among the losses were: Toledo, St. Louis & Western 2½, Erie first preferered 1¼ and Amalgamated Copper, 1.

The sag in prices carried down Chicago Great Western "A" preferred 1¼ and Northern Pacific; Minneapolis & Sault Ste. Marie, Iowa Central preferred and American Cotton Oil 1. Prices then took an upward turn, Reading rising to 133 and Chesapeake & Ohio, American Car and Tennessee Copper gaining 1 and United States Rubber 1½. Bonds were irregular.

The market closed barely steady and very dull. Highest prices in the final hour showed gains for Mackay companies of 2½ and the Harriman-Pacifics, New York Central, Missouri Pacific, Pittsburg, C. C. & St. Louis, Wabash preferred, American Smelting, American Malting preferred, American Hide & Leather preferred and American Sugar 1. Lackawanna sold at a decline of 7 and United States Pipe 1. Realizing of profits made some inroads upon the gains.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 1.—The cotton market opened steady at a decline of 5 to 7 points in response to lower cables, and sold about 7 to 9 points net lower during the early session under local bear pressure, scattering stop orders and selling by Liverpool and New Orleans houses. Some of the leading local bulls bought on a scale down and there was also a considerable demand from commission houses importing a steady undertone to the situation, although prices failed to rally more than a point or two during the middle of the morning.

Spot market closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.85; middling gulf, 10.10; sales, 400 bales. Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 1.—Barrett & Zimmerman report the horse market quiet, the stormy weather evidently keeping buyers at home. Receipts light. Two loads of logging horses were sold to lumbering interests at Stillwater, to be shipped to their camps north of Bemidji. The week's movement compares favorably with corresponding period in former years in numbers, but values are 10 per cent under a year ago with the margin of profit the narrowest possible, the bulk of the shipments lost money at the mid-week sale.

FEBRUARY 1, 1909.

Buy Calumet & Sonora stock at this level for it should only be a short time before it will be listed on the Boston stock exchange. At the mine they have opened up some big deposits of very high grade ore and with the listing should easily cause an advance of at least $20.00 a share in this issue.

Butte-Montana should soon be one of the heaviest trading stocks in the country. Big things are taking place in this one, and you will soon find out how correct we were when we advised the purchase. At this mine they have also opened up much high-grade ore on the 1,200-foot level.

Calumet & Corbin closed $2.87 bid. Here is a stock that should sell at $6.00 or $8.00 a share, for it is being bought up as fast as offered.

Copper Queen is another that should be bought at present prices.

Black Mountain should not be overlooked, for when they get this one running just right, it will be a regular mint.

Superior & Globe is getting more active. The Copper country has started to bid for it.

THE COPPER STOCKS.

SLAYER ASKS FORGIVENESS

Iowa Boy Murderer Appeals to Victim's Widow for Pardon.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Feb. 2.—In an effort to escape the death penalty for his crime, William Winters, the Titonka boy who shot and killed Linn Trimble at Union, on Jan. 16, pleaded not guilty before Judge Albrook, in the Hardin county district court at Eldora. Prior to his plea, however, he had signed a written confession as follows:

"Eldora, Iowa.—To whom it may concern: "I, William F. Winters, do hereby confess my guilt to the charge brought against me for the shooting of Linn Trimble of Union.

"I am very sorry for the deed I have done, and I also wish to say that I did it on the spur of the moment, and, being greatly excited, did not know what I was doing. I feel very sorry for the widow and her son. May they forgive me before we meet on the day of judgment before the throne of God, for it is written, 'for if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Heavenly Father forgive your trespasses.'

"I sincerely hope that this may be a warning to many a boy who may be starting out upon the wrong path into the valley of crime, for it has a bright and alluring entrance, but a dark and sorrowful exit. No boy should give himself up to reading bad books, such as dime novels and biographies of bandits and other worthless characters, or it may ruin his life as it has ruined mine.

"WILLIAM F. WINTERS."

ROTH WANTS HIS MONEY

Wandering Spendthrift Chafes Under Wife's Guardianship.

Under Her Management, His Property Has Kept Family.

Fred Roth, known in days gone by as "the spendthrift," will probably be released from the guardianship of his wife in a measure, by the probate court. He has made application to be restored to capacity and by agreement of the different parties, it will likely be arranged so that a trustee of his property will be appointed and he will receive a stipulated income each month.

Roth's story is a strange one. Several years ago, he was well known in Duluth. He made money, had considerable ability, but spent the money almost as fast as he made it, and his family was not provided for in proportion to his means.

Finally, he left and began to wander about the country. Four or five years later, he fell heir to nearly $7,000, and when the time came for claiming it, his wife took a hand. She went before the probate court and set forth that if Roth secured the money, he would squander it and the family, which was then in well-nigh destitute circumstances, would receive no benefit from it.

Under the decree of the court, Roth never got near enough to the money to see it. His wife was appointed guardian of him and given charge of the money to invest. On a lot, which was owned by her in her own name, she built brick flats and since then the revenue from them, amounting to $92 a month, has kept the family in comfortable circumstances.

The guardian was appointed four years ago and Roth has been living at Portsmouth, Ark., all of this time. Growing older and probably more settled in his ways, he determined to put in a claim for the property. He first filed suit in federal court to secure possession of the property, but the suit has now been dismissed, as he has come before the probate court to secure his freedom and some money. The wife opposes turning all of the property over to him, but is willing to allow him a certain amount each month. That course will probably be taken.

Electric Lamps For Heating.

Electric lamps are now utilized extensively in England for small radiators. These raidiators are provided with polished copper reflectors and may be connected to any source of electricity. It will also interest you to know that the practice of keeping a case of golden grain belt beer on hand at home is so general that it is well nigh universal. Your home deserves a case of this pure, wholesome beverage. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Duluth branch Minneapolis Brewing company.

IMPLEMENT MEN MEET AT FARGO

Dealers of North Dakota and Northwestern Minnesota Talk Shop.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The tenth annual session of the implement men of North Dakota and Northwestern Minnesota began here today. It will continue until Thursday afternoon.

The first day's attendance is large and enthusiastic. President McIntosh presided and after the usual opening formalities, his address was read. He named the regular committees and the other feature of the morning session was an address by Dan S. Stewart of Fargo, who discussed the relationship of the dealers and the traveling men.

This afternoon will be devoted to a trip to the North Dakota Agricultural college to inspect the courses given there in handling implements of all kinds. This course has been fostered by the association in every way. Prizes have been offered for the best essays on certain lines and every encouragement given in the way of models and samples of machinery to be used in instruction and demonstration worfl.

Tonight the delegates will listen to an address by President Worst of the agricultural college.

COULD NOT REACH FIRES.

Bemidji Firemen Handicapped in Fighting Two Bad Blazes.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—The homes of Claude Ritchie and Ole Rudd were totally destroyed by fire Saturday night. The fire originated in an overheated stove in the Ritchie house, which was soon destroyed.

The fire spread rapidly to the home of Ole Rudd, a short distance away, and that house was soon wrapped in fiery flames, being reduced to a heap of steaming ashes in a very brief time. Rudd saved but a small amount of his furniture and furnishings, and his loss was almost total.

The fire department responded promptly to the alarm, but despite the fact that some 1,300 feet of hose was laid the last hydrant on the street was located t so great a distance from the fire that it was impossible to reach the fire with a stream of water.

Ritchie's loss on the bilding was $400, which is partially covered by insurance. Mrs. Ritchie also lost $50 in currency, which she had secreted in a mattress in the house.

Rudd's loss was total, the house being valued at $400, with no insurance.

STOP DRINKING.

It was formerly customary for the habitual drinker to take the pledge regularly, sometimes once a year, and sometimes in every fit of remorse that followed his debauches, and then—break it.

But now it is gradually dawning on the world that pledges do not stop drunkenness. When a man takes a pledge voluntarily, he expects to keep it. Every man expects to keep his word and every broken pledge costs the drunkard many a heartache. But he cannot help it. He fights as long as he can, then succumbs to the craving. The nervous system of the habitual drinker is diseased and he must have treatment that will cure this condition.

Orrine is sold under a positive guarantee to cure the drink habit or the money will be refunded. No other treatment for the liquor habit is sold under such a liberal guarantee.

Orrine is prepared in two forms: No. 1 a powder, perfectly tasteless and colorless, which can be given secretly in any food or drink. Orrine No. 2 is in pill form, for those who wish to be cured of the habit, and it should be taken by every one who swears off.

No matter which form of Orrine is used the guarantee is the same. The price of Orrine is $1.00 per box, mailed in plain sealed wrapper upon receipt of price. Write for free booklet on "How to Cure Drunkenness," (mailed in plain sealed envelope) by The Orrine Co., Washington, D. C. Orrine is sold by W. A. Abbett, 201 West Superior street.

SEVERAL GOOD FEATURES.

Bijon Bill Much Above the Ordinary This Week.

The Bijou has an exceedingly strong bill this week, with more than one feature deserving of special comment.

It has been a long time since the Bijou patrons have been treated to a better playlet than "A Butterfly Wife," a little one-act comedy-tragedy of modern life. The one-sided conversation carried on by Eva Wescott, as the "butterfly wife," is very amusing, and she is brought to understand, with cruel suddenness, that life is not all pleasant follies, received the appreciation which it fully deserved.

The "Atlantic City Four" is a quartette of unquestionable musical ability, both vocally and as instrumentalists. The feature of their act was a drinking song, which made a big hit.

The special attraction of the evening were the fifteen little white poodles, trained and shown by Mrs. Doherty. The act was all that it was advertised to be, and delighted the house.

For a prolonged laugh, few comedians of the vaudeville stage can approach the Marco Twins, "The long and short of it." One appears to be about seven feet tall and about the size of a bean pole, and his companion is about three feet in each direction. The act consists entirely of horseplay, but it is very grotesque.

Some of his stuff is very funny, and some of it is very sad. He also shows a tendency to drift too close to the line of vulgarity at times. In spite of this, however, his continual fire of jokes, good, bad and indifferent, gets to be irresistible before he finishes his act, and the audience couldn't get enough of him last evening.

Isadore Silver sang "Father's Tom Boy Girl," accompanied by some very attractive pictures. The moving pictures were of unusual merit. This bill will be at the Bijou, afternoon and evening, all the week.

CLASH OVER DRAIN.

Fargo and Cass County at Odds Over Paying for It.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 2.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo and Cass county have clashed over the payment of the bonds for the completion of a drain through the extreme western part of the city's limits. The city officials claim the drain was for the benefit of farmers near Fargo and the removal of the water was of no benefit to the city.

The county, on the other hand, contends the drainage was for the sanitary benefit of the city and removed a constant menace to the health of its citizens. The total cost of the drain was $22,500 and the city is asked to pay about $18,000 of this.

THE LURE OF THE STORES

Just now the stores are "calling." It's the "merging of the seasons." It's good-bye to the new stocks — and good-morning to the almost-things—and the buyers "take their profits" when the Finger of Urgency is laid upon the merchant. The advertisements—spokesmen for all merchants who have any message for you, or invitation to extend to you—are filled with information, with persuasion, with friend-making facts. If you can, after reading the ads, willingly stay away from the stores these days—then you must be immune from the lure of self-interest and the beckoning smile of opportunity.

RAILROADS WILL ACCEPT THE TWO-CENT PASSENGER FARE LAW FOR ALL TIME

Milwaukee's Counsel Says It Will Always be Maximum Rate.

New Anti-Pass Bill as Drafted by the Sub-Committee.

Preliminary Public Hearing on Various Tonnage Tax Bills.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house committee on railroads had the word of the attorney for one of the leading railroads in the state yesterday afternoon that there would never be an attempt made to get away from the 2-cent passenger fare law enacted two years ago against the earnest protests of all the railroads, and that in all probability the 2-cent fare will continue to be the maximum rate for carrying passengers upon railroads in this state.

The expression came informally, and was merely incidental to an informal discussion before a gathering of the committee at which there was no quorum present, but it seemed to give satisfaction to the members of the committee who have been a little fearful about granting concessions from the anti-pass law that accompanied the 2-cent fare bill on the ground that the extension of the free pass privilege might give the railroads an excuse for evading the cheaper passenger rate.

The occasion for the discussion was the submission by the special sub-committee appointed for that purpose of the draft of a new anti-pass law that would let down the bars a little for certain classes. Discussing this bill, Representative Hugstad of the committee expressed the fear that if the concessions asked for were granted, the railroads would back out of the 2-cent fare law.

F. W. Root, counsel for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, who was present at the hearing, thereupon stated that in his opinion there was not the slightest danger of that.

"I do not believe," he said, "that you will ever see the railroads of this state trying to establish a higher rate than 2 cents a mile. That rate has been accepted and fixed, and there is no thought on the part of the railroads of seeking to evade it." In view of the fact that under the rulings of the federal courts on the commodity freight rate law the railroads could successfully attack the Minnesota 2-cent fare law if they deemed it to their best in-

PARTISAN DIVISION

More Peanut Politics by Republican Majority in the House.

County Option Fight to be Settled Wednesday for Session.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house had a partisan debate and a partisan division this morning over John Lennon's resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to investigate the charges made by Former Labor Commissioner Williams against his own department.

Representative Handlan, Democrat, offered an amendment including in the investigation the auditor, treasurer and secretary of state, but his amendment was lost.

Representative O'Brien, Democrat, moved that the matter be referred to the house labor committee and that, too, was defeated.

Representative Lennon said these were mere Democratic side-steppers. The labor department costs money, and Williams made certain charges regarding it when he was discharged. If the money is being spent improperly, the people ought to know it; if it is being spent properly, they ought to know that, too.

Representative Dorsey, Democrat, said he believed the house too sensible to indulge in any such peanut politics as the resolution proposed.

Representative Brady, Democrat, said he was amazed that the house should suspend business to wash linen for a politician.

The resolution was adopted, 80 to 28.

SAYS MISSOURI MUST BE HEARD

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 3.—Attorney General Major today filed in the supreme court a suggestion that if the court decides to have a hearing on the motion filed by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, that the State be allowed to be represented, either in oral arguments or by filing a brief. The document does not reveal the exact stand to be taken by the state, but it is thought that the attorney general will endeavor to have enforced the points agreed upon in last night's conference on the case at the executive mansion.

Crossed Wires Cause Fire Warning on Board a Vessel.

Marconi Instruments Call Aid and Another Boat Responds.

Newport, R. I., Feb. 3.—Crossed electric wires caused the sounding of the automatic fire alarm on the Fall River line steamer Providence, bound from New York for Fall River, while on her way up Long Island sound early today, and the report flashed out by the wireless telegraph operator made a decided stir on land when the message was picked up by the wireless stations.

When the fire bell on the ship began to ring, the operator, believing a fire was in progress on board, jumped to his key and clicked off a general message that the alarm had been sounded, and immediately afterwards called the steamer Puritan of the same line, which was passing through the sound on her way to New York, and ordered her to stand by.

The Puritan's "O. K." came promptly back, and the operator then started on an investigation. It took but a short time to discover that the alarm was sounded accidentally, and the Puritan was told it was a false alarm. She proceeded on her course.

Representative Burke Presses Bill Affecting Ocean-Going Vessels.

CONGRESSMAN WANTS MILEAGE WITHDRAWN

Washington, Feb. 3.—Representative Cox of Indiana proposes that the mileage, at the rate of twenty cents a mile now allowed to senators, representatives and delegates in congress, shall be withdrawn. By means of a bill, introduced by him, Cox desires to have the mileage section of the statutes repealed.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Following closely the introduction of a bill by Representative James Francis Burke of Pennsylvania to require ocean-going passenger vessels to be equipped with wireless telegraphy, the house committee on merchant marine and fisheris today took it up for consideration. An immediate report is being urged, so that the bill may become a law at this session.

Representative Burke attended the meeting to explain his bill. Since its introduction, which followed the wreck of the Republic off Nantucket, the Pittsburg congressman has been making an extensive study of the subject and has collected a mass of data.

"Since the introduction of my bill," he told the committee, "I have had communications commending the measure from individuals and commercial bodies throughout the country, and I hope for its passage at this session.

"Some one has denied our right to carry such a law as is proposed into effect without international agreement. No such agreement is necessary.

INVESTMENTS NO PROFIT GETTERS

Testimony Is Given on Deals of A. Booth & Co.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 3.—Many investments made A. Booth & Co., the fish firm, which went into receivership some time ago, did not realize any dividends, according to testimony given before a master in chancery in an effort of the receiver to learn why $84,000 of the firm's money was paid to Thornton & Chancellor, attorneys.

Justius Chancellor told how his brother, Philip, in 1905, brought out numerous subsidiary firms of the Globe Packing company of Cleveland. The firms were located in points in the East and in Canada. Mr. Chancellor said the assets of some of the firms were nominal and that few realized any profit.

CANADIAN NORTHERN TO HAVE THE SHORTEST LINE DULUTH TO THE PACIFIC

Road Is to be Extended From Edmonton to Vancouver.

Best Grades of Any Transcontinental Lines in Existence.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—"When I return East I will recommend to the company that engineers be placed in the field at once to locate the line to the Pacific coast. We have 3,450 miles of line in operation and 2,000 more miles financed, and when we commence building our line to the coast we expect to maintain our record of building a mile a day, although we may have to do a little less on some more difficult sections."

This statement was made by D. D. Mann, vice president of the Canadian Northern railroad, at a meeting held in New Westminster, under the auspices of the board of trade and city council.

Continuing, Mr. Mann said:

"Two thousand five hundred miles of the 3,450 miles of railway that we have in operation west of the Great Lakes have been guaranteed either by the federal or provincial governments, and the lines of railway have been so well located as to traffic and so economically managed that no government has been called upon to pay one dollar on account of these guarantees, and there is not the remotest chance that they

SNOW GRAFT THE LATEST

New York's Street Cleaning Department Has a Scandal.

Contracts Abrogated; Nine Men Are Arraigned in Court.

New York, Feb. 3.—As the result of an investigation inaugurated by William H. Edwards, who was recently appointed street cleaning commissioner of New York, eight employes of that department and the foreman of a private contractor were arraigned in court today on charges of grand larceny by the use of fraudulent tickets. These tickets were issued to drivers of snow wagons and attest to their removal of wagon loads of snow from the streets. All the men arrested were held in bail for a further hearing. It is estimated the frauds would have cost the city $50,000 if the street cleaning commissioner had not detected them.

All the existing contracts for snow removal have been abrogated.

Commissioner Edwards said that after the discovery of the frauds he sent an agent to Jacobs, the contractor's foreman, and purchased $700 worth of tickets at 80 per cent of their value when redeemed by the city. He said Jacobs offered $10,000 worth of tickets at the same price. Jacobs when arrested implicated the others and surrendered a check for $700 drawn to his order by Deputy Hogel.

Hogel said he had been speculating in legitimate snow tickets, taking 10 per cent from the drivers by redeeming their tickets more promptly than the city.

Man and Woman Asphyxiated in a Philadelphia Hotel.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3.—Lying across a bed, fully dressed and with their arms about each other, a man believed to be Maurice P. Patterson of this city and a woman whose name is said to be Margaret Lomax were found early today asphyxiated in a room in a hotel here. The couple came to the hotel on Monday and registered as man and wife, under assumed names, giving their residence as Lewistown, Pa. Patterson, who was about 50 years old, occupied apartments in West Philadelphia until Monday, when he gave them up. He said he had a brother, W. F. Patterson, in Pittsburg. The woman was about 40, and is said to have been separated from her husband, who lives here.

FIX GREAT LAKES RATE

Operators Charge Discrimination in Favor of West Virginia.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 3.—The Western Pennsylvania & Eastern Ohio Coal Traffic association, comprising high officials of the coal carrying roads operating in the Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio and West Virginia coal fields, is holding its joint annual meet- today to fix rates to the Great Lakes for the season of 1909.

Yesterday the coal operators of the Pittsburg district charged discrimination on the part of the railroads in favor of West Virginia coal operators. While it could not be ascertained in advance what rate the Pittsburg operators decided upon, their sentiments will be made known to the railroad officials at the meeting today. Rumors have been afloat, however, that unless a more equitable adjustment can be had an appeal would be made to the interstate commerce commission.

The cargo rate from the Pittsburg field on coal is 88 cents, with a haul averaging 160 miles, while the rate from the Fairmont, W. Va., field is 97 cents and the distance about 250 miles—and the same rate applies to

SENATE DISCUSSES THE JAPANESE ISSUE; WHITE RACE EXTOLLED

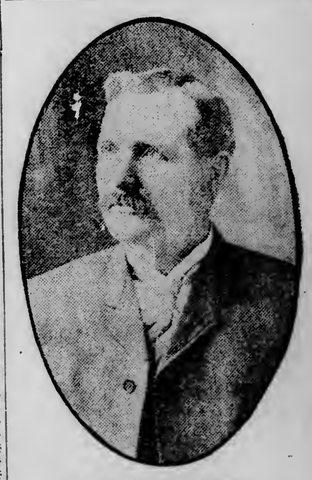

Washington, Feb. 3.—The Japanese and Chinese questions, causing anxiety on the Pacific coast, were referred to in the senate and Senator Bacon of Georgia made a general inquiry of the Pacific coast senators as to their attitude toward any proposition to appoint a Chinaman collector of customs of San Francisco. There was a very general discussion of the race problem, in which several of the senators on the Democratic side took part. Senator Money occupied nearly an hour and reviewed this story of the races to sustain his position that the superiority of the white race marked it to dominate in the management of the government.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 3.—With two nations stirred to a fever pitch over the anti-Japanese measures of two states the people of California are beginning to wake up and ask what it is all about.

The outburst of the Nevada legislature was unexpected, but it has not caused a great deal of comment in this state, with the exception of the Asiatic exclusion league, no one is engaging in the fight. But these facts are not generally accepted as an indication that the people of the state are not genuinely interested in the Oriental race problem.

The interest of the agriculturists is indicated by the bill to prohibit the ownership of property which was in-

DEMOCRATS HOLD SWAY

The New Council Will Stand Nine to Seven.

Only Six Avowed "Lid" Men in the New Body.

Yesterday's election resulted in no change in the number of Democrats and Republicans in the city council.

In the Second ward a Republican candidate for alderman won out, where a Democratic alderman is at present serving. In the Sixth ward a Democrat won, where a Republican is now serving.

This still leaves a majority of Democratic votes in the council, the division being nine to seven in favor of the Democrats. While no special fights over the liquor question seem to be in sight just now, if anything of that nature comes up, it looks as if those desiring rather an easy enforcement of the law would be in the majority. There are only six men in the council—Aldermen Moore, McKnight, Moe, Olson, Merritt and Getchell—who can be depended upon to stand for an air-tight lid.

In the Second ward, T. J. Storey, Republican, won, giving the Republicans a gain of one vote there. Alderman Mueller, the present alderman, is a Democrat. There was no change in the First, Alderman Moore, Republican, being elected to succeed himself. In the Third ward the Democrats gained nothing, for Mr. Hector, the successful candidate, is a Democrat, and Emil A. Tessman, who did not try for re-election, but who at present is alderman, is also a Democrat.

In the Fourth, Mr. Shartel, Democrat, was re-elected, and in the Fifth, J. A. MacDonnell, Democrat, will succeed E. R. Ribenack, Democrat. In the Sixth, the Democrats gained a vote by the election of C. R. Hoar over Alexander Kennedy, at present Republican alderman, who failed of re-election.

In the Seventh, Lucien Merritt, Democrat, will succeed M. J. Filiatrault, Democrat, and W. B. Getchell was re-elected.

Thus it will be seen that the number of Democrats and Republicans in the council will stand exactly as before, 9 to 7.

Alderman Moore had no opposition to re-election in the First, but four men cast their votes for J. L. Travers.

It was rather expected before election that the Republicans would make a gain in the number of aldermen in the council.

Backers of the proposed amendments are expressing disappointment today. They worked hard to get the amendments carried. A vote of three-fifths of the entire vote cast was necessary to carry each amendment, and in no case was the vote large enough for this. It is easier to carry amendments at special elections, for then every vote cast is either for or against the amendment.

DIES FROM HIS INJURIES

New Duluth Man Passes Away at St. Mary's Hospital.

Death, resulting from injuries received in a revolving balance wheel at the New Duluth box factory, came to Frank Napravick yesterday afternoon at St. Mary's hospital.

The accident occurred Monday afternoon, while Napravick was carrying a pipe. The end of the pipe caught in the machinery and he was thrown into the wheel. Before the machinery could be stopped and the man disentangled, his chest and breastbone had been crushed. Examination showed that his lungs had been injured by one of the broken ribs. It was at first thought there was some hope for recovery, but the end came very suddenly yesterday afternoon. His wife had been with him until ten minutes before he died, when he appeared to have rallied so that she felt she could return home. She did not hear of her husband's death until she reached New Duluth.

Napravick was 46 years old, and leaves a wife and one daughter, 2 years old.

BRAKEMAN HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Fred Anderson, a Duluth & Iron Range brakeman, narrowly escaped having his life crushed out yesterday beneath a falling load of logs.

Logging cars were being spotted at the banking grounds of the Red Cliff Lumber company's mill. Anderson, from the top of one of the loads, gave the signal to stop the train, which, in answer to his signal, came to such a sudden standstill that he was thrown off, and fell between the train and the banking skids. The stopping jerk unloosened the logs and they plunked from the car. It was only by rolling under the car that Anderson avoided being crushed.

Anderson's home is in Two Harbors. He was somewhat shaken up by his fall, but otherwise escaped without injury.

HONOR MEMORY OF LINCOLN

Ely School Children Will Give Entertainment Feb. 11.

Extensive preparations are being made at the Ely school for an entertainment on Thursday, Feb. 11, in honor of the centennial of Abraham Lincoln's birthday.

There will be two entertainments, one in the afternoon for the children, and one in the evening for the parents and other guests. At both entertainments the same program will be given with but few changes.

The program will consist of patriotic songs, recitations and flag drills. One of the recitation subjects will be Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg. Walt Whitman's tribute to Lincoln, "Captain, My Captain," will also be recited by one of the pupils. One feature of the program will be a military drill by the boys.

In the evening William S. Woodbridge will make an address on the subject, "The Man, Lincoln."

As a result of the sale of Lincoln souvenir badges by the children of the Ely school at 10 cents apiece, the school has purchased two fine pictures, to be hung on the walls of the school. One is a splendid portrait of Lincoln, and the other is entitled "Aurora." The children sold 1,000 badges.

MADE GOOD SHOWING.

L. A. Barnes' Name Written on Ballot by Ninety-Four Voters.

The meteor-like campaign started in the eleventh hour by the friends and supporters of L. A. Barnes to elect him for alderman from the Eighth ward, was not without effect in yesterday's city election.

Mr. Barnes refused the nomination on the Republican ticket before the primaries, and later declined to be a candidate on an Independent ticket. But in spite of this, his friends instigated a movement to secure votes for him on the day before election. Mr. Barnes' name was not on the tickets, theonly candidate being W. B. Getchell. Posters bearing Mr. Barnes' name were circulated yesterday. These posters were to be stuck on the ballot by the voters. In all Mr. Barnes received 94 votes, and in the Fifth of the Eighth received a majority.

Frost Is Very Deep.

The Bell telephone crew is having no little trouble installing new posts along Ramsey and Oneota streets, where the wind of last week caused so much destruction. The lack of snow has given the frost an opportunity to work deep into the ground, which makes it very difficult to dig post holes. There are seventeen poles in all to be put up. Though good telephone connections are to be had now between Duluth and West Duluth, there are still a number of telephones out of order.

Curlers Will Meet.

The members of the Western Curling club will meet this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the clubrooms for the purpose or considering the rearrangement of the rinks in the different contests.

Althought a number of games have already been played for the trophies, it is proposed to make a rearrangement of the rinks, wipe out the past scores and start anew. In case this plan is adopted, a regular bonspiel will be held, hurrying the contests to completion.

POWER PLANT MADE MONEY

Gross Earnings of Company for Half Year, $206,862.96.

The gross earnings of the Great Northern Power company during 1908 amounted to $206,862.96, according to the annual statement of the company, filed today with City Comptroller McCormick. Enclosed with the statement was a check for $206.86, as the city's share of the gross earnings. According to the franchise granted the corporation, the city is to receive one-tenth of 1 per cent of the gross earnings every year.

Prior to July 1 the business of the company was carried on under a construction account, so the statement giving expenses, etc., covers only the six months between July 1 and Jan. 1.

The actual cost of the plant and business from its first inception to the first of the year was $7,853,943.71, says the statement. The construction expenses between July 1 and Jan. 1 were $38,713.23. The above figures include the entire cost of acquiring riparian rights., reservoirs, canals, pipe lines, machinery, wiring, etc.

The actual debts and obligations of the company are given as $8,205,064.36, which includes the capital stock and bonded debt.

STEPHENSON LACKS FOUR

Madison, Wis., Feb. 3.—United States Senator Isaac Stephenson received but sixty-one votes in joint assembly today, lacking four of election. There were four members absent, two from each house.

The senate after a long debate has refused to concur in the assembly amendment to the senate resolution for a senatorial primary investigation. The vote was 23 to 7. The amendment rejected called for five members of the assembly on the committee instead of three, and March 1, as the time for reporting.

The result it is said may mean a new resolution favoring an investigation of all the senatorial candidates.

Republican State Chairman Edmonds is again reported as favoring a thorough investigation. He desires that the investibation shall be thorough, believing all the charges against Stephenson groundless.

New Move For Hopkins.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 3.—The senatorial situation took on new activity today, when the opposition to the Hopkins candidacy announced the discovery that his lieutenants are circulating for signatures of the members of the general asembly a card pledging a vote for Hopkins, "when a sufficient number have signed this agreement to insure him a constitutional majority."

The joint session today arose after one ballot which showed little change. On this ballot the vote was Hopkins, 75; Foss, 19; Stringer, 65; Shurtleff, 16; Mason, 3; McKinley, 1; Lowden, 1; Calhoun, 2; Carter H. Harrison, 10; Sherman, 2. Constitutional majority in joint session 103; majority of members present and voting 98. A net gain of two votes, one in the senate and one in the house was made by Senator Hopkins.

IS DENIED LICENSE.

Proctor, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village council has turned down the application of John Mackintosh for a saloon license renewal. It is understood this action was taken because Mackintosh, who formerly ran a saloon here, was once arrested, charged with selling liquor to a minor, but escaped punishment on a technicality. Then he left town although owning the saloon building. He has since been running a saloon on the range and returned here recently intending to reopen at his old stand, which during his absence has been run by John Cohen, but the council seems to have decided he should not be permitted to run a place here.

Faribault, Minn., Feb. 3.—The millers and helpers employed at the Sheffield-King flouring mill, about seventy-five in number, have gone on a strike owing to a reduction of wages and the lengthening of working hours.

The only men at work are the firemen and a few employed by the month.

The men had been working in three shifts of eight hours each, but by a new arrangement they were ordered to work in two shifts of twelve hours each, and at a reduction of wages of ten cents.

A delegation from the strikers met the mill owners in Mineapolis Monday, but failed to come to a satisfactory agreement.

CLEMENCY TO WISOCKI

Erring Polish Boy Will be Given Another Chance in Life.

John Myllykoski Sentenced to Five Years at Stillwater.

John Myllykoski, 5 years in state prison.
Annie Sanford, state prison, reformatory plan.
Frank Wisocki, 75 days in county jail.
Joe Zadownink, 75 days in county jail.
William Arnberg, judgment for $300.

Clemency characterized Judge Ensign's administration of justice in district court this morning, when four men and one woman, who either pleaded guilty of were convicted of crimes at the present term of district court were sentenced.

John Myllykoski, convicted of assault in the first degree, was given the minimum sentence of five years in the state prison. Annie Sanford, convicted of grand larceny in the first degree, was sentenced to the state prison at Stillwater on the reformatory plan. Frank Wisocki, who pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree and Joe Zadowniak, who pleaded guilty to petit larceny, were each sentenced to spend seventy-five days in the county jail and judgment for $300 in favor of a wronged woman, was given against William Arnberg, who pleaded guilty to being the father of an illegitimate child.

Judicial clemency in the greatest degree was extended to Frank Wisocki. The boy is only 20 years old and has been in this country but ten months. One day in November, in company with Zadowniak and another man named Tom Bardiak, he became intoxicated, and the three entered Esterly's jewelry store and took a number of diamond rings from a tray. Most of the stolen property was found on Wisocki.

The boy pleaded guilty, and an effort was immediately made to secure a light sentence for him. The boy said in court this morning that he was drunk for the first time in his life on the day of the crime—so drunk that he didn't know what he was doing. He has a brother married in Duluth, and the brother offered to see that the boy doesn't stray off the straight path again. Bardiak, who was believed to be the brains of the enterprise, was acquitted by a jury; Zadownak was allowed to plead guilty to petit larceny; the burden fell on Wisocki.

"I don't believe the great burden of this crime should have fallen on this boy," said Judge Ensign, before passing sentence. "I can't conceive of a boy of his age and apparent disposition being the head of the crime, although I don't know the truth about it. I can't send this boy, the youngest of them all, to the penitentiary, when one of the three has been acquitted and the other has only the crime of petit larceny fastened on him."

After exacting a promise of temperance from the boy, Judge Ensign sentenced him to seventy-five days in the county jail and followed it with kindly advice. He said he would see that a priest visits the boy in jail, and have him sign a pledge, which he hoped would be kept when he came out into the world again.

John Myllykoski was convicted of assault in the first degree in attacking one John Lilpakka with a razor, in their boarding house at Eveleth. Lilpakka claimed the assault was unprovoked, while Myllykoski claimed self defense. Myllykoski is 30 years old and has a wife and two children in Finland. He has been in this country about two years.

"I am not satisfied with the trial, as three men swore falsely against me," was all Myllykoski said before sentence was passed. Victor Gran, his attorney, made a plea for the minimum sentence. The maximum is twenty years.

Annie Sanford, the colored woman, who was convicted of grand larceny in the first degree in the theft of $30, a gold watch and a revolver from Ole Olson, the cook in a Lake avenue hotel, in the early morning of Nov. 12, also came in for consideration from the court. She is 21 years old and has been in Minnesota three years. "Your life has been a worthless one, but I will give you a chance to reform," said Judge Ensign, in passing sentence. "I hope that when you come out you will live an honest, upright life."

MRS. WRIGHT ON TRIAL FOR LIFE

Devils Lake, N. D., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—A jury was secured in the district court here yesterday to try Mrs. Mary Wright on the charge of murdering Miss Beulah Cox, her step-daughter, aged 16 years. The alleged murder occurred on a farm near Derrick, N. D., last summer.

On the day before the girl was found dead, she went to Edmore with some friends and did not return until 4 p. m. At 6 o'clock Mrs. Wright was heard to call the girl, who replied that if Mrs. Wright made her get up she would run away. At noon the men on the farm, where Mrs. Wright was housekeeper, asked her to call the girl.

The defense will be that the girl came to her death from heart failure, and the attorneys have received depositions from three physicians in Logansport and Wabash, Ind., stating that they had at previous times treated the girl for heart failure.

The state, however, claims it will introduce testimony of other physicians, who examined the girl, to offset the depositions. The state also alleges that the girl carried life insurance, made with Mrs. Wright as the beneficiary, and claim that if Miss Cox had heart trouble she would not have been able to pass an examination for life insurance.

The state claims that Mrs. Wright strangled the girl and then smeared carbolic acid on her victim's lips to make it appear to be a case of suicide. The defense claims she died of heart failure.

Mrs. John Beegel testified that she saw the girl's body shortly after her death was announced, and that there were finger marks on the girl's face and several black and blue marks on her neck.

SHOWS COST PER CAPITA

The per capita cost of running Duluth's city government during the year 1908, was $8.56, according to figures compiled by City Comptroller McCormick.

The total cost of running the city, outside improvements paid for by special assessments, and the water and light department, was $727,421.41. The earnings of the water and light department for the year amounted to $447,951.69.

The entire revenue of the city for the year amounted to $1,524,471.08. Of this amount, $250,632.39 was received from assessments.

The cost of operating the aerial bridge during the year was $12,913.68, including the interest on bridge bonds, which amounted to $4,000.

In preparing the annual reports of the different departments for the printer, Mr. McCormick is putting in more detailed information than was ever included in the city's annual statement.

Figuring upon the per capita basis, the report shows that every man, woman and child in Duluth contributed 89 cents towards the expense of operating the police department in 1908, and $1.46 towards the fire department. Forty-one items are given in the same connection, showing the per capita cost of paying for each of these items. This is but a sample of the detail into which the annual statement will go.

PROTEST MADE AGAINST HASTE

Labor and Capital Want a Well-Considered Liability Law.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 3.—Agreeing with Labor Commissioner W. E. McEwen that there is a disposition to "play politics" with the movement to obtain such legislation as will result in a constitutional and equitable employers' liability act, and declaring that such a disposition, if persisted in, will defeat the whole plan, labor and capital joined yesterday in a protest against the Minnesota legislature rushing through any half-digested measure at this session.

Both George B. Howley, president of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, and George M. Gillette of the Minnesota Employers' association, urged yesterday that the legislature appoint a commission and give it two years for investigation and report. Each talked frankly of the politics which endangered the proposed act.

"I think Mr. McEwen is right," said Mr. Gillette. "I understand there is some friction between the Republican members of the house and the governor. They seem afraid the governor will get some glory out of it, and the house, as I understand, would like to get something through now. I think this would be a great mistake."

"Some of the folks over there seem to think the governor drafted this memorial," said Mr. Howley. "He didn't. It was drawn by the employers and the employes, and the governor only sent it on to the legislature. They think it is the gornor's idea to get some credit out of it, but there's nothing to that.

"I agree with Mr. McEwen. In justice to both sides, a commission should be appointed to study the subject and report in two years. I believe that is the position of the labor interests as a whole. For twenty years we have been trying to get some such act through, and this is the first time the employers and the employes have ever been together on it. If we have waited twenty years, we may as well wait two years more and have it done right."

SHERIFF BATES SPRINGS BILL

For Boarding Virginia Prisoners, Taking Breath Away From Council.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The council last night passed an ordinance providing for the inspection of all milch cows in the city; for the inspection of all milk entering the city; that all milk dealers shall have a license, and for an inspector of milk. The inspector's salary was not fixed.

Frank Klink, proprietor of the Fay opera house, deposited $40 for the license of that place. Chief Thayer of the fire department said the Fay opera house was still under condemnation, the owner having failed to fix it up in accordance with the building ordinance. The matter was referred to the license committee.

The matter of making the present temporary road to Gilbert a permanent thoroughfare, was turned over to the street commissioner with orders to make the improvement. The clerk was requested to ask the Missabe railroad officials to construct a viaduct over their tracks where the Gilbert road intersects.

Chief Thayer of the fire department suggested as a good idea the building of platforms at each of the railroads, whereby the fire apparatus might be easily and promptly loaded on cars in an emergency when any of the nearby towns might need outside assistance.

The clerk will submit the suggestion to the different roads running into Virginia.

Chief Thayer also asked the council to abolish the volunteer fire department service and to add two additional men to the paid force. The recommendation was adopted, but only one paid man will be hired.

Sheriff Bates presented a bill for $149 for boarding Virginia prisoners that astonished the council. The clerk said he had never before heard of such a thing. The city attorney will look the matter up before Sheriff Bates gets a voucher.

The Virginian was selected as the official paper for the year 1909. The Enterprise will do the city's job work.

An expert will begin nexe week to audit the clerk's and the treasurer's books for the years 1906-07-08.

Boutan & Co., a new steamfitting and plumbing firm, were granted a plumber's license.

The American-LeFrance Fire Engine company was awarded a contract to furnish the fire department with one Eastman deluge set to cost $125.

The ordinance to extend the partial limits for the sale of intoxicating liquors, received its second reading without change.

An ol dhose cart, owned by the city, was sold for $40 to the Oliver Mining company for use at its mine at Mountain Iron.

The clerk of the municipal court reported the collection of $190.50 in fines for the week ending Jan. 30.

MACHINE IMPRACTICABLE.

Experimental Use in Grant Miae Was Not Satisfactory.

Buhl, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is announced that the Interstate Iron company, having offices in Virginia, will let a contract in a few days for stripping its Grant mine near here.

This announcement carries interest to mining men as it is interpreted as meaning the failure of the machine working on what has been denominated the "grab system," the invention of a Pittsburg man, that cost $450,000, the only one of its kind in the world, that has been used in this mine for two years.

The machine consists of two immense movable towers connected by cable and resembling the piers of a suspension bridge. Two clam shell shovels, working one on each side, grab up a 20-foot square mass of earth at a bite and, running out on the cable, dump it at the side. The towers are moved along as the work advances.

The machine is said to have been unsatisfactory chiefly because of its inability to work in boulder ground, the rocks hampering the action of the shovels.

"There's a Reason"

EVELETH QUITE HEALTHY PLACE

Report of Health Commissioner Makes Good Showing.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The resignation of the volunteer fire department, Messrs. Belanger, Murray, Levant, Mead, Thibaut, Hoel, Trevarrow, Allister Murray, Pryor and Fire Warden Johnson, were received last night at the council meeting and accepted. A vote of thanks was extended for the good work. The appointments of H. J. Gebeau and Hiram Gordon to the fire department were approved by the fire committee.

The monthly bills and payroll for the month were allowed. Chief of Police Kent reported $225 in fines collected during last month. The report of Street Commissioner John Warn was also read and approved.

The request by Simon & Fornerook, local meat dealers, for permission to build an ice house in the rear of their meat market was referred to the fire warden, as was also the request of Jascob Stein to raise his building three feet and make some other improvements. A license was granted to Alex McDonald to conduct an auction sale for three months at hut present place of business. The application for a liquor license by Frank Winchester was granted.

The matter of securing slop barrels and a steel tank to haul away the slips was brought up by the health board, and the members recommended the securing of galvanized barrels and a steel tank with boiler plate inside that will stand hard wear and tear.

The committee appointed to look into the high rate of taxation reported they had received a letter from Buckard Heard, secretary of the state tax commission, which explained how it happened that the Spruce mine was placed at a valuation of a little over $1,000,000 this year, at about $600,000 less than the year before.

Readjustments had been made in the valuations of mines on the range and in the revised valuations the local mine was reduced that much. It stated that if it could be shown to the commission that the valuation was too low, that something could probably be done in increase the valuation. City Attorney Boyle thought it best to leave the taxation question rate for this year and be on the watch for the next year's valuation and see that the local people do not have the same experience as this year.

The paving question was discussed, the council's idea being to pave Grant avenue starting about June 1. This will give the business men a chance to decide on what kind of paving they want and other particulars. The cost will be charged up to abutting property.

The annexation of the Central addition was discussed and the council seem to favor it. The report of Health Commissioner P. F. Brown showed that for the months from Sept. 1 to Jan. 1, there had been three cases of typhoid and sixteen cases of diphtheria, these being the only contagious diseases. During the year 1908, there were 138 births, sixty-six female and seventy-two males; sixty-one deaths, nineteen fmales, and forty-two males. The general health of the city is better, due to the putting in of sewers on Monroe street and more sanitary precautions.

EVELETH POLICE ALSO TO STRIKE

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Speecial to The Herald.)—Unless the meeting of the city council, called for this afternoon, to consider hiring back all of the police force at increased pay, acts favorably, the city will be without police protection tonight as the entire force is going on a strike.

The force is expected to quit at 2 p. m. today. The council has called a special meeting, and it is expected this meeting will do as was done in Virginia, when the police and firemen struck—hire them all back at an increased pay This is the only way possible to get around the charter provision against increasing salaries of city employes.

Chief of Police Kent, who is with the men in their action, gave an inkling of something of the kind at the council meeting last night, when he plainly told the council his pay and that of his men was not enough when compared with what Virginia and Hibbing are paying. The chief at present gets $75 per month and wants $100. The four men under him get $65 per month and want $75.

It is the general belief that the council will hire them all back at an increased figure.

FOR CITY OWNERSHIP.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The charter commission last evening decided to insert in the proposed charter a section providing for the acquiring or establishment of a municipal lighting and water plant by the city, at any time the city may see fit to vote in favor of the same. The present light and water plant is owned by a private corporation.

Other matters which were passed upon by the commission provides for the taking out of politics the handling of the fire and police departments and placing them in the hands of a commission, the adding of two more wards to the city—making six in all—and for the election of one alderman from each ward, and three at large; that the mayor receive a salary of $300 per year; that the aldermen receive $50 a year each for committee work, and from $2 to $3 for each meeting of the council they attend, and that the time for holding the city elections be changed from November to February.

The commission will hold another meeting tomorrow night in the municipal courtrooms at 8:30 o'clock. They intend to hustle the work to completion and expect to submit the new charter to the city council at its meeting Feb. 16. L. M. Osborn, attorney for the commission, says that the new charter will be a splendid one, and if adopted will add greatly to the welfare of the city's future.

Brings His Family.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—David Foley, police chief for the Oliver Mining company, has gone to Ironwood, his old home, after his family. They will occupy a new residence on East Chestnut street, which the mining company has erected for Mr. Foley's use.

TOWER ELECTION WAS HOT AFFAIR

Tower, Minn Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—About the liveliest election held here in years was pulled off yesterday, when W. M. Hall was chosen mayor over three other candidates. The total vote cast was 157 and interest in the outcome never flagged until the polls were closed.

The results for mayor and other offices follow:

Treasurer—Jalmer Pearson, 82; Albert Weinzerl, 70.

Assessor—John Jackshaw (no opposition), 129.

Special municipal judge—Frank Brocco, 12; M. F. Marion, 6.

Edmund Claffy was elected constable.

The result in some instances, was an entire surprise. Every inch of ground was hard fought until the last vote was cast, but the election closed without a disagreeable row. All joined hands hoping, that those elected will give the city entire satisfaction, and a businesslike government of the city affairs.

The name of L. W. Thompson for mayor did not appear on the official ballot, the number of votes he received being written on the ballot. There were also three of the aldermen whose name did not appear on the official ballot, which are as follows. E. J. Atkins, Dave Colberg and John Robertson, the number of votes each received were also written on the ballot.

BUSINESS CHANGES.

Eveleth Business Houses Preparing for Coming Season's Trade.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Some business changes are taking place here. Kealey Bros., grocers, are negotiating with James Floyd, formerly a prominent resident of Tower, for their grocery. The poolroom run by Wiener & Skumatz has been closed to satisfy a claim of S. P. Boino, now of Gilbert, against one of the partners. The Eveleth Hardware company is planning on moving their stock to Hibbing, where George Schrieder, the local manager, for the concern, has been lately making arrangements for the change.

Abe Levant, who has been having his own building fixed up with a new front and upstairs, intends to move into the building in a few days. The store next to Finch's saloon, which was bought only recently by J. M. Braidich from George A. Whitman, is being repaired inside preparatroy to some one moving in. The Gleason Hardware company has been closing out its furniture line and is now building new shelving on one side of the store for additional hardware.

ALLOWANCE UNUSUAL.

Transportation and Board of Prisoners Charge Against Village.

Biwabik, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village is liable for the transportation and board of prisoners to the county jail, according to a ruling made by Don C. Anderson, the village attorney, in response to an inquiry from the council, which took exception to a bill for $53 for board and for transporting prisoners to Duluth.

Mr. Anderson advised the council that the charge was made under a law that had not heretofore been enforced and stated further that all prisoners sent to Duluth hereafter who have been convicted under village ordinances, will be collected for by the sheriff, both for their transportation and for their board in the county jail.

Justice of the Peace Salmon reported the fines collected during January amounted to $75, which is a comparatively small amount.

The council discussed the furniture to rthe new village hall, which will be opened in about a month It was decided that teh present council will buy what is considered absolutely necessary, leaving the complete furnishing to the village officials chosen in March.

Injunction Denied.

RAILROADS WILL ACCEPT THE TWO-CENT PASSENGER FARE LAW FOR ALL TIME

terests, the statement, though informal and largely personal to the man uttering it, was regarded by members of the committee as important.

The new anti-pass bill drafted by the sub-committee does not meet all the requests that were made. It takes care of policemen, firemen, members of salvage corps, health officers and mail carriers, but limits their privileges to electric railroads. This was the only object sought, though an attempt was made to show that firemen were often transported from town to town upon railroads in case of grave peril, and that they ought to ride free in such cases. However, the bill contains an emergency clause, like the old law, which will probably cover such cases.

As to railroad employes who hold non-paid public positions, like railroad attorneys or surgeons who are on local school boards or honorary state boards, the bill as drafted makes no provision whatever. However, the committee has not yet acted upon it, and it may be that it will be loosened still further by committee action.

Thursday evening the railroad committee of the house will hold a special meeting to hear the arguments for and against the "full-crew" bill, which requires railroads to add one more man to freight trains of more than thirty-five cars in length. The railroad employes ask for a flagman in addition to the conductor and two brakemen now employed, and the railroad managers will probably oppose the request.

Another bill asked for by railroad employes, represented by D. H. Hayes of Two Harbors, for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is that requiring locomotives to be equipped with power headlights. The railroads make no particular objection to the move, except that they do not wish to be compelled to put these expensive headlights on engines that are used for day runs only. An agreement has practically been reached between Mr. Hayes and the railroad managers that will give the men all they ask, without submitting the railroads to unnecessary burdens.

Tonight the house committee on taxes and tax laws will hold a preliminary public hearing on the various tonnage tax bills now pending, at which the authors will have a chance to tell their story. This will be enough for one evening, and fuller hearings will be had later, when not only the advocates of taxing iron upon an output basis will be heard, but the opponents as well.

The bill of Representative J. F. Selb of St. Paul, requiring banking institutions to make annual publications of their lists of unclaimed deposits is attracting the notice of bankers and others.

The theory of the bill is this: Under the law property which gets scattered from its ownership is escheated to the state. In the case of real estate, the state's interests are easily protected, but in the case of personal property, and especially bank deposits, there is practically no chance for the state to come into its own. Mr. Selb's idea is that if banks were required to make public their lists of unclaimed deposits, the state would get more out of this law. Of course, cases where people go away and forget their bank balances, are by no means common, but they occur, and it is probable that in the aggregate a very pretty sum of money lies ownerless in the banks of this state.

The house committee on appropriations yesterday afternoon recommended for passage the Washburn bill creating a legislative information bureau under the state library commission. The appropriation is cut out, and if the bill passes, $5,000 annually will be provided for it in the omnibus appropriation bill.

There is considerable criticism, however, of this method of reaching a result really very desirable. About all the state library commission amounts to is the care of circulating libraries, while here boxed up and shipped about among the smaller communities of the state, in order that the people may have access to good reading matter that is denied them without this aid. While this is a very worthy object, indeed, and serves a most useful purpose, it does not join at all with the purposes of a legislative information bureau, and either the state would have to furnish the commission with a lot of new books, most of which are already in the state library, or it is likely to be more or less ineffective.

In the judgment of many, the proper place for this important bureau is in the state library. It is an open secret, however, that the reason for not putting the information bureau in that department, is that it would provide a new place for the Democratic state administration to fill.

Senator Sullivan of Stillwater has a plan, embodied in a bill now before the senate, for the addition of another attorney to the attorney generals office to help the lawmakers out in the preparation of bills. This, however, while apparently better than the library commission plan, would not reach the desired result of accumulating a large body of legislative information unless specific provision therefore is made.

The Minnesota state library is said to be one of the very best in the country, and few can be found to dispute the proposition that it should be the nucleus of the legislative information bureau which the state needs so much.

The Northern Minnesota normal school fight is about in statu quo. Representative P. H. McGarry has made arrangements for giving the members of the normal school committees of both house and senate a trip to Cass Lake to see what that community has to offer, but the other towns have apparently made no preparations along that line. If the committee goes to Cass Lake, it will mean that its members have decided that they are competent to select the site, and that the attempt to shoulder the responsibility off upon the state normal school board has failed. And it looks now as though the committees were going to Cass Lake.

The Holmberg resolution for a committee to investigate the grading of "velvet chaff" wheat, referred to yesterday in The Herald as passing the house, goes upon the assumption that the state grain inspection department has worked an injury to producers in giving this particular wheat a special and inferior grade all by itself, with the result that it sells for 6 to 10 cents a bushel less than No. 1 northern. It is asserted that the millers encouraged the farmers to raise this wheat by paying a special price for it, on the ground that it made better flour than others. Last September the crop was put on the market, and as the grades were then arranged, it graded No. 1 northern. Subsequently, Minneapolis millers appeared before the board of grain appeals and complained that the wheat was of inferior quality, so it was regraded and classed by itself as "velvet chaff," for which the market price is 6 to 10 cents less than that of No. 1 northern. It is asserted, however, that while it is bought at a lower price, the flour made from it sells at the full regular price. Therefore, the committee is to look into the matter and see if justice has been done.

ATTORNEYS SATISFIED

Believe Bill for Fourth Judge Will Solve Problem.

New Measure Is in Nature of a Compromise.

Duluth attorneys are expressing considerable satisfaction today over the bill drafted by the committee of the St. Louis County Bar association, providing for the fourth judge for the Eleventh judicial district and terms of court on the range.

The bill, which was completed at a meeting of the committee yesterday, was sent to St. Paul last night, and the St. Louis county delegation in the legislature will take it in hand. The members of the delegation have all expressed themselves in favor of some sort of lgislation to relieve the crush of business on the three judges of the Eleventh district and the range people, it is said, had succeeded in winning a majority of them over to the plan of establishing a superior court on the range.

The bill drafted by the bar association is in the nature of a compromise, and with a united county behind it, the members of the delegation will undoubtedly take it up and use their influence to secure its passage. It is the best solution the bar association committee could devise for the double problem of relieving the three judges of some of their work, and satisfying the demand of the ranges for terms of court at some point more convenient than Duluth.

On account of the natural rivalry between the different range communities, it might be expected that there would be some opposition to all four terms of court each year being held at Virginia, but it is said the other communities are satisfied to sink their petty jealousies under their desire to benefit the whole range district. Virginia is the most central point, and, though the superior court plan provided for terms of court at Virginia, Hibbing, and Ely, Virginia was to have been the headquarters, so that the choice of Virgina as the headquarters of the proposed new court is a natural one.

From the standpoint of the taxpayres, the plan as provided in the bill now proposed, is much better than the superior court plan. Ultimately, it would probably be necessary to have another judge for the Eleventh district anyway, had the superior court plan carried. As it is, it isn't likely that one judge will be required at all times on the range, so that some of the burden now on the three judges in Duluth, will be taken off. The complete separation of the two courts would undoubtedly entail additional expense in the way of clerks, officers, etc., so that the bar association and others concerned believe the establishing of a branch of the district court is the best means of meeting the ideas of the range people.

If the bill carries, Governor Johnson will be called upon to appoint the new judge and there is already speculation as to his choice. Several men have been mentioned for the place and, though the rivalry may be keen, it is believed the governor will be able to make a choice from the bar of the county, satisfactory to everybody. At the next election, the people will have a chance to vote on the fourth judge, but the governor's appointee will have nearly two years of service.

ALL FIVE AMENDMENTS TO CITY CHARTER ARE REJECTED BY VOTERS

manic candidates for re-election were successful.

There will now be nine Democrats and seven Republicans in the council. Six of them will line up as liddists, and ten as liberals, it is expected.

The closest contests were for aldermen in the Second and Seventh wards. In the Second it was not definitely decided until the last vote was counted, that Thomas J. Storey, Republican, had defeated Nick Mueller, his Democratic opponent.

In the Seventh the result was not known until the very end of the counting, so close was the race. William Jeffery, Republican, and Lucien Merritt, Democrat, ran neck and neck. P. G. Phillips, Public Ownership candidate polled a larger vote than was expected of him.

The first returns made it evident that the final count would show the charter amendments had been lost. Only in a few precincts did the amendments secure the number of votes necessary to pass them, and in no single ward was there the required majority.

What is termed the liberal element of the council is now in complete control, if the new aldermen take the positions expected of them on the liquor question. The six so-called "lid" men are Aldermen Moe, Moore, McKnight, Olson, Merritt and Getchell. Hogan, Bloedel and Trevillion are looked upon as neutrals, while the other aldermen are understood to be liberals.

A total of less than 6,000 votes was cast yesterday, although the registration ran over 7,000. The charter amendment calling for a sinking fund for the water and light department, No. 1 on the ballot, drew a large vote, but No. 3, providing for doing away with the board of public works, was the most popular. The three dealing with the taxation of property and street improvements, known as the ARREST DUE TO SYRUP.

Pancakes His Wife Cooked Tempted Soldier to Desert.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 5.—Though the pancakes of his wife inspired such memories while in the army that they caused him to desert, the syrup that was to be put on them caused Earl Stevens, who deserted from the Seventieth infantry at Presidio, San Francisco, about two weeks ago, to again lose his liberty and this time to land in a cell. Since he deserted Stevens says he has been at the home of his wife, 1303 Chestnut street, and has "laid low" all the time, enjoying the pancakes "which only Edna knows how to cook."

"Wait a minute," said Stevens, as two detectives started to hustle him off to headquarers yeserday. "You know my wife is cooking some pancakes and I started out to get syrup for them. It it wasn't for those pancakes you would not have caught me. Let me enjoy them and I will give up willingly."

BODY OF NAPOLEON'S HORSE IS FOUND

Paris, Feb. 3.—A straw-stuffed white horse, which has been found in the cellars of the Louvre turns out to be Napoleon's famous charger Vizire, presented to him by the sultan of Turkey. An examination of the records shows that the horse died in 1826, on the estate of De Chaulaire, the emperor's equerry. The latter was forced to flee for a political crime, and his effects were sold. Napoleon's horse, which had been stuffed, was acquired by an Englishman, D. W. Clarke, who presented it to M. J. Graves of Manchester, who in turn donated it to the Manchester natural history society. At the dissolution of the society in 1868, the horse was forwarded to Napoleon III and was relegated to the cellars of the Louvre. It was forgotten during the critical period preceding the downfall of the second empire.

WASHBURN-CROSBY'S

GOLD MEDAL FLOUR

THE VERY HIGHEST QUALITY

CONCERNING WOMAN.

Every department of the Bethel work is crowded, but the Bethel Rescue home will welcome with special joy the new building and equipment, which, it is hoped, will be ready by next winter. At the home in its present quarters, there is accommodation for sixteen adults and eight babies, and at the present time there are twenty-one young women and sixteen babies receiving the care and attention which the rescue work provides for them. The difficulties of working under such crowded conditions are trying, but each case that comes to the Bethel workers for help and assistance has a special appeal and need, and the babies are tucked a little closer together and the unfortunate young women there are willing to make room for the sorrowful one who also needs help.

During the month past the home has been thought of by people in many walks of life. Individuals in the city have sent money or food or clothing, the women's societies of the various churches have remembered their needs, and other societies have sent food or supplies. The work necessarily receives little publicity for protection from the idly curious and perhaps unsympathetic public, is one of the first considerations offered those who apply for help, but the work done is a splendid one and the interest of thoughtful people is always received with gratitude.

VIOLINIST IN CONCERT

Florence Austin to Appear at Flaaten Hall.

Florence Austin, one of the prominent violinists, will appear in a concert at Flaaten's hall Friday evening of this week. The assisting soloist will be Miss Donna Louise Riblette, soprano, of this city. Miss Austin has studied both at home and abroad under some of the best tutors of the violin, and while a student in the Liege conservatory won first prize with distinction from a contesting class of twenty-five competitors, after having been in the conservatory for only one year, a most remarkable accomplishment. After leaving the conservatory she made a short concert tour of the principal European musical centers, and was met on every hand by the unstinted and loud praise of the European press and public. Her fame preceded her to her native land, and at her initial appearance in New York city at Mendelssohn hall the press of that critical city and the large audience in attendance confirmed in no uncertain manner the stamp of approval that had been placed on her work by the European press and audiences. Since then each appearance has only tended to strengthen the first opinion as to her ability, and each one has been one of success.

Miss Austin has had a busy season and appeared with great success in New York and upon her Western tour.

WOMEN WORKERS.

Mrs. Starkweather to Speak of State Conditions.

With the present condition of suffrage in Minnesota, Mrs. Perry Starkweather of St. Paul, of the women's department of the state labor bureau, believes that the only thing woman can do to better the conditions which may neede bettering and to bring about the reforms that are greatly needed, is to talk. And Mrs. Starkweather talks to very good purpose as any one of her auditors will testify who heard in her brief toast at the civic banquet held early in January.

Mrs. Starkweather will come to Duluth this week to speak Friday morning at the clubroom of the library before the members of the Women's Council and the club members represented in it. The campaign of education which Mrs. Starkweather is conducting to make the women of the state familiar with the conditions existing among employed women and the methods which may be followed to affect imporvements, the necessity of stringent laws to remove the child woman from industrial world, is planned to especially reach the club women of Minnesota. Mrs. Starkweather is a speaker with much charm of manner and the facts are presented in a lively and witty manner that keeps her audience keenly interested.

Dr. F. J. Patton will also be one of the speakers of the morning and will explain in detail the various improvements which are hoped will be made a feature of the civic work in Duluth. The meeting will be Friday morning at 10 o'clock at the club room of the library and any woman interested is urged to be present.

THE NEW BLOUSE

To Be Correct Must Be Very Attractive.

There have been many comments made on the variety and originality of the new blouse ideas that have been put forth this winter. I lay it to the fact that the separate waist has been making a desperate fight for life against the growing popularity of the three-piece suit. A blouse simply must be attractive to convince a woman that it is more desirable than a bodies matching her skirt and coat, says a writer in the Delineator for February.

One of the most persuasive of the new waists is made in an admirable wash creponhalf silk, half cotton. The material is more dressy than the cotton crepes that were introduced last year. Instead of being embroidered, the new waists are stenciled in the most charming designs and colors. I saw one recently in apricot-colored crepon stenciled with stiff little Empire wreaths of flowers—of a nameless species—in a deeper shade of apricot with an occasional touch of green. In another waist the crepon and the stenciling were in two shades of violet, and the blouse was worn with a broadcloth suit in the rushes-of-violet color that is so perfectly delightful on the right person, and cruelly trying on the wrong one.

A reversal of the old accustomed order is the use of chiffon over lace, not only on the bodices of evening gowns, but in the separate waist as well. It is an exquisite combination and has made an immense hit in the first few weeks of its existence. I saw a very lovely blouse at tea the other day in mist-gray chiffon over valenciennes lace. It was worn with a high Directorie stock of folded velvet with a slender thread of silver chain strung with blister pearls at the base of the throat. The suit with it was gray, of course, but the hat and furs were black.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Brussels sprouts, 30 cents a quart.
Strawberries, 60 cents a quart basket.
Grape fruit, four for 25 cents.
Rutabagas, 25 cents a peck.
Parsnips, 40 cents a peck.
Potatoes, $1 a bushel.
New potatoes, two pounds for 25 cents.
Beef kidneys, 10 cents each.
Lamb chops, 35 cents a pound.

The grape fruit now in the market is reasonably cheap and of a dainty size that makes it possible to have this stimulant as the first course at breakfast without feeling unduly extravagant. While covertly enjoying their lusciousness, an unvoiced accompaniment of "Willful waste makes woeful want," or "A stitch in time saves nine," or "Take care of the pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves," or other economical-sounding proverbs, isn't the pleasantest thing on earth. Grape fruit is only $3.75 a case.

The oranges also are especially good, being fine in flavor and very plentiful. The strawberries continue to adorn the windows.

TOOK TIME TO RAISE MONEY

Concerts by Symphony Orchestra Will Have to be Postponed.

The members of the committee of the Commercial club who assisted in the movement to make possible a symphony orchestra for the city, have decided to postpone until the summer, any further efforts toward raising the necessary money to make the concerts possible. The musicians of the city organized and twelve rehearsals were held and it was felt by those interested that a series of splendid concerts could be given. The effort to raise the necessary money required more time than it was possible for the members to give at the present time, however, and the prudent course of postponing the concerts was decided upon.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Northern Michigan Power company, with a capital stock of $50,000, organized with main offices in Houghton for the purpose of damming the Sturgeon river and supplying water and electric power and electric light to Baraga, Houghton, Ontonagon, Marquette, Dickinson, Iron and Gogebic counties, has filed articles of incorporation in County Clerk Richardson's office.

The capital stock is divided into 5,000 shares of $10 each, of which 4,998 are held by Deen L. Robinson, one by Ellsworth M. Ingram and one by James D. Looney. These three gentlemen constitute the first board of directors.

An effort to learn the intentions of the company met with failure. Many views are expressed. Toronto, Ont., Feb. 3.—After five weeks' investigation and shadowing of the suspected men by a detective agency, two Grand Trunk railway conductors were arrested charged with defrauding the company. The arrested conductors are Daniel Corrigan of Toronto and Frank McCallum of Montreal. Jacob Woods, H. Rosenberg and Joseph Woods were also taken into custody on a charge of selling bogus tickets. It is alleged these men sold the tickets and the conductors honored them.

A Chemical Mystery.

Some years since a meteor that fell in Mexico attracted attention from scientists all over the world because there was some reason for thinking that it might be a fragment of a lost comet. A scientific investigation proves that golden grain belt beer is rich in nutrition and nerve food and a pure, wholesome drink that aids digestion. "GOVERNMENT PURITY" FOR CANNED GOODS.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 3.—"Government pure food standards for canned goods," is the cry sent up by 4,500 members of the National Canners' association and allied trades at the first session of their second annual convention. The tone of all the speeches reflected this desire, and it was urged that every fruit or vegetable which goes into a can should first be proved up to a stated government standard.

CHANGES IN THE BANKRUPTCY LAW.

The most ordinary observer of the workings of the national bankruptcy law cannot have failed to note the defects of the system. While the law in the main is just, and the principle which it upholds is one that commends itself to fair minded business men everywhere, the operation of the law has disclosed defects which make it possible for the dishonest debtor sometimes to cheat the creditor and for the dishonest creditor sometimes to secure an unjust advantage over other creditors.

To remedy these defects congress is now considering amendments to the National Bankruptcy Act. These amendments are embodied in a house bill known as the Sherley bill. The proposed bill does not in any way modify the general character of the bankruptcy act but simply proposes three changes which, it is expected, will make the law more effective.

Under present conditions the debtor who cannot pay may become a bankrupt and gain all the privileges of the bankruptcy act without notice to his creditors. Experience has repeatedly shown that a conference with the creditors will often result in arrangements by which the debtor is in time enabled to resume business and there is eventually no loss to creditors, or the debtor's business may be taken over by a trustee and so administered as to yield the largest possible returns to all. On the other hand, voluntary assignment, without conference with the creditors almost invariably results in the larger portion, if not all, of the assets of the debtor being eaten up in bankruptcy expenses. The Sherley bill provides for such conferences between the debtor and his creditors before he is adjudged a bankrupt.

The bankruptcy act in its present form enables the dishonest creditor in some instances to gain an advantage over other creditors. The act provides, for instance, that if a debtor owes his creditors $1,000 and an individual creditor, having no security, makes a subsequent loan of say $10 to the debtor and takes security covering such loan and also covering prior obligations, his security is good as to both obligations. One creditor thus secures an unjust advantage over all the other creditors, a thing which it is plainly the purpose of the bankruptcy act to prevent. The Sherley bill so changes the act as to make this impossible in the future.

The Sherley bill also amends the bankruptcy act by providing that it shall apply to "any moneyed, business, or commercial corporation, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation," thus making the law definite where it is now indefinite.

The changes contemplated by the Sherley bill have the approval of business men generally, as they are very clearly in the interest of both creditors and debtors. They have the approval of the National Association of Credit Men, the National Board of Trade, the Merchants' Association of New York, the Commercial Law League of America and the American Bar association. The changes recognize the fact that the aim of the act is good and they seek to make it more effective. It is generally conceded by business men that the law in its present form is too convenient a vehicle of escape for the dishonest and that it must be made more stringent against both dishonest debtors and dishonest creditors.

THE OPTIMIST OF MUSIC.

Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy was one of the world's two great optimists of music. The other was Handel. Mendelssohn was, and is on the whole, more popular. While others were greater, it is doubtful if any composer ever attained the popular favor accorded to Mendelssohn. Today is the centenary of his birth.

Others were greater than Mendelssohn. His wonderful Elijah and his St. Paul do not quite equal Handel's Messiah and Bach's Passion; his chamber music and his symphonies are a little less perfect than Mozart's and Beethoven's; his piano compositions are less important than Chopin's; his songs less beautiful than Schubert's. But no great composer ever accomplished so well so wide a variety of undertakings. In excellence in all lines of musical endeavor he stands supreme.

Mendelssohn's greatest works are the oratorios Elijah and St. Paul, and Elijah is, next to Handel's Messiah, the most popular in the world. The Hymn of Praise is also ranked high by critics. His overture the "Midsummer Night's Dream," is a model of its kind and its popularity is unbounded. Of his lyrical compositions "Songs Without Words," the "Spinning Song" and the "Spring Song" are the best known.

Other composers gave birth to perfect creations at an earlier age than Mendelssohn, but none came to the maturity of their powers so early as he, and it is claimed that neither in music, in poetry or in painting do we find a parallel to the works that Mendelssohn wrote at the age of 17.

Mendelssohn's popularity in his lifetime and for some time after his death was so unbounded that reaction set in from which his reputation has seriously suffered. That the final verdict of time will place him among the immortals of music none can doubt.

WHERE MERIT WINS.

This great government of the people, by the people and for the people is much blown about by political winds and tossed on many political seas. But despite the mutability of politics, despite the iron law that to the victor belongs the spoils, there are some servants of the government so needful to its welfare that they stay on forever no matter how administrations may change or how parties may rise and fall.

The Washington Star gives interesting sketches of several of these men, men who are interesting because of services rendered so valuable that even politics, which claims all things else, does not claim their heads. Among these probably, though not so certainly, is James Wilson, secretary of agriculture. The Star is authority for the statement that Mr. Wilson would have been reappointed even in the event of Bryan's election, and if anybody else has been recommended to Mr. Taft for the position the recommendation was not made by the public press, which has been unanimous, so far as The Herald has been able to observe, in its demand for Mr. Wilson's reappointment.

One of the most interesting of all of the government's fixtures is Jean Henry Vignaud. He fought with the Confederacy but Grant knew him for a man whom the nation needed and in 1875 appointed him secretary of the American legation at Paris and in Paris he has been serving this government ever since. He has represented at Paris during his lifetime three different governments, has served us there thirty-nine years, under nine administrations, Republican and Democratic alike.

Alvey Augustus Adee has been for twenty-seven years assistant secretary of state, and he will probably continue in that position so long as he lives. He has been in the diplomatic service of the United States for thirty-nine years. He became assistant secretary of state under Arthur and has held the post ever since. He is the government's encyclopedia of diplomacy, and is the final authority upon every technicality of that art.

Another man, who, without the protection of any civil service regulations, maintains his position without even so much as an assault from the politician, is Dr. Sumner Increase Kimball, for thirty-one years chief of the live saving service and for forty-seven years in the employ of that department of the government. So paramount were the services which he rendered the government that when he was first appointed chief of the life saving service thirty-one years ago, the senate confirmed his nomination without referring his name to a committee in the usual course. He is the only employe of the government who draws a salary which will die with him, for in 1893 the congress rewarded his services by voting the office an increase in salary "while the position is held by the present incumbent.",

These men are but notable instances of the survival of the fittest. There are many others. The political victor does not get all the spoils after all in this country. Gen. Luke E. Wright is a Confederate veteran and a Democrat, but he is secretary of war by the grace of a Republican president just the same. We shall not get to be ideal for some time yet, but we are getting to be more sensible in politics and government.

THE ELECTION.

That the results of the city election yesterday will be generally satisfactory to the people of Duluth cannot be doubted. The board of aldermen will consist of sound, competent business men, city officials who have been tried and proved have been continued in office by an emphatic vote, and progress has been made toward arousing public sentiment in favor of needed municipal reforms.

In the re-election of Municipal Judge W. L. Windom the people of Duluth are practically a unit. Frederick J. Voss, the watch dog of the treasury, who has for so many years served the city so faithfully, was returned to office by a vote of nearly two to one. The success of William S. McCormick would have been certain even against a candidate from a stronger political party. The voters had to choose between capable candidates in the different wards for aldermen and the new council will be an able, businesslike body.

The only really regrettable feature of the election was the defeat of the proposed charter amendment providing for the abolition of the present board of public works and the office of the city engineer and substituting a new non-partisan board of five members with full power to appoint an engineer and other officers and carry on the business of the present board. This amendment received a heavy vote but not the constitutional three-fifths. It was favored over the other amendments by the voters and it is certain that it will prevail at some future election. The Herald advised the rejection of the other amendments and is pleased that the voters followed its advice in this respect.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Duluth looks pretty good to me."

This was the statement made by J. H. Keeler of St. Paul at the St. Louis last night. Mr. Keeler is a brother of Assemblyman Herbert Keeler of St. Paul, and has lived in the Saintly City for years, tut after due consideration and investigation has come to the belief that Duluth offers better opportunities than any city in Minnesota.

"Duluth is the coming city of this state," said Mr. Keeler. "I believe that it has the greatest future of any place in this state. I came here to look over the opportunities, because I had heard so much of the rapid progress achieved by this city in the past few years. I have found that all that has been said is true. It is not exaggerating to say that Duluth today has a great future before it. I have been shown over the city and have observed the great progress that is being made in railway extension, have had explained to me what a benefit the coming of the steel plant will mean to Duluth, and after further studying the conditions, have about come to the conclusion that I will make my home here."

Anent the accidental discharging of the revolver in the hands of Mayor Busse's brother, in Chicago the other day, which resulted in the death of a woman, James W. McCauley of Chicago, a traveling representative of the Remington Arms company, stated at the Spalding yesterday, that not one man in 500 understood the least bit of the mechanism of a revolver. Not only that, but Mr. McCauley says that statistics will show that far more people are killed by just such accidents as happened in Chicago the other day, than are killed with deliberate intent. In the latter case the poor marksmanship of the average man often results in the escape of the intended victims.

"They have what is known as a primer at West Point," says Mr. McCauley. "The Primer starts out like this: 'The revolver is a dangerous weapon. It is exceedingly liable to be discharged at an inopportune moment. It is more dangerous to friend than enemy.' They impress this treatise upon the revolver upon all of the students of the academy. One of the first things that is demanded of the cadet is that he be thoroughly familiar with the mechanism of the revolver. If the average American was more familiar with the mechanism of a revolver, there wouldn't be so many foolish accidents, especially those in which the victim of the accident meets his death by looking into the muzzle of the gun."

C. E. Henderson, owner of the old building at the corner of Fifth avenue west and Superior street, which was partially destroyed by fire about a month ago, is at the Spalding hotel. In response to the query as to what disposition he was going to make of the property, Mr. Henderson replied that definite plans have not been completed yet. Mr. Henderson is in conference with his architects over the building, and until he has decided definitely that the old building that has been an eyesore to Duluthians, and especially to tourists and travelers, who make their first acquaintance with the city by way of the union depot, will be repaired, there is hope that a modern building may replace the besmudged ruins of the old Windsor hotel.

C. E. Clarke of Virginia, at the Lenox yesterday, stated that active preparations are under way to give Virginia one of the best baseball teams in its history. Mr. Clarke says the people of Virginia—the ones interested in baseball—were mightily afraid that they were going to lose the valued services of Oscar Graham, citizen and master of the slippery spheroid. Mr. Graham is one of the range pitchers who can throw the spitball, and his threatened return to organized baseball filled the citizens of Virginia with alarm. They beheld the Hailey cup returned to Hibbing, and the glory won last season by the defeat of Hibbing, vanishing in an ignominious reversal of the outcome of the series of last year.

However, Citizen Graham has learned to like the people of the iron range, according to Mr. Clarke, and has decided to spend at least another season in Virginia. That won't be good or cheering news to those citizens of Hibbing who are interested in the national game; yet it may put them upon their mettle, for Mr. Clarke says both towns will be out for blood this year, and that there will be no bets overlooked in the getting together of teams that will do honor to their respective burgs.

J. T. Saunderson of Biwabik, who is a member of the St. Louis River Farmers' club, was at the McKay yesterday. Mr. Saunderson says the farmers in the vicinity of Biwabik are looking forward with hope to the efforts that will be extended in their behalf upon the part of the good roads movement that has been inaugurated by the Duluth Commercial club, and which at the present time has been placed in the hands of the St. Louis County club.

Mr. Saunderson says before it is possible to get additional settlers to the part of the state where conditions are similar to those at Biwabik, it will be necessary for the county to do much work in the matter of good roads. At the present time, Mr. Saunderson says, good roads are a much greater necessity than are settlers. In parts of the county, at certain times of the year, it is almost impossible to get off the farm, he says.

THE WEATHER.

Clouds are obcuring the sun part of the time today, and, according to the weather man, they are forerunners of snow flurries, due tonight and Thursday. The temperature is expected to be warmer tonight, however, moderate easterly winds to accompany the milder weather. Last night was not very cold here, the minimum temperature being 18 degs. above zero. Northfield registered 10 degs. below zero, and was the coldest place on the weather map.

The sun came up here this morning at 7:31 and the time scheduled for setting is 5:14. The weather a year ago today was clear and mild.

Of weather conditions, Mr. Richardson says:

"The North Pacific disturbance has moved its center to Alberta. During the past twenty-four hours, this barometer depression caused a decrease in pressure and a rise in temperature in all districts except the New England states, Wyoming and Western Montana, besides light to coplus rains in California and over the coast portions of Oregon and Washington. The barometer continues high over the Lower Vissisippi valley and Central Gulf states. The easterly movement of the low pressure now central over Alberta will be attended by moderate temperature and scattered snow flurries at the Head of the Lakes tonight and Thursday."

The School Boy Abroad.

St. Louis Times: Recently compiled figures regarding attendance at this country's large universities disclose a surprisingly large number of students accredited to foreign states. In the University of Pennsylvania, for instance, which in this respect somewhat leads its rivals, there are no fewer than 216 undergraduates whose homes are abroad. We draw more pupils to our big schools from Asia than from Europe, which also might seem singular, did not reflection remind one of the great efforts putting forth by both China and Japan to give to their most promising young men an Occidental training.

Missouri, midway between the oceans and hardly eligible for competition for foreign students, has in her state university thirty-nine young men from other lands than ours. Nearly half of this number, it is true, come from our sister republic on the South, which, perhaps, is our natural territory of supply, but there are also representatives at Columbia from the Argentine Republic, Chili, Peru, Bulgaria, Denmark, Roumania, Russia, China, India, Japan, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

That is almost a cosmopolitan gathering, considering also that the native attendance embraces pupils from over forty states.

Great reputation must Uncle Sam have as a teacher when he draws learners from so far. These are the days when it is the school boy who is abroad.

The Joy of It.

Long time for grievin'

But there's joy in bellevin'
It'll soon be light!

Hope somewhere is weavin'
Of a rainbow bright;
Joy in just bellevin'
It'll soon be light!

Overriding the Veto.

Cleviand Plain Dealer: Concluding an editorial summary of the various state provisions for legislative overriding of the executive veto, the Detroit Free Press says:

"At the present time there appears to be twenty-eight states where the veto may be overridden by two-thirds of the members of the legislature, either elected or present, and three states in which three-fifths are necessary, while in all the others an ordinary majority is sufficient."

In this classification, it is apparently necessary to put Ohio in a division by itself, for by the constitution of this state a measure vetoed by the governor must, in order to be repassed, have not only as many affirmative votes in each house as were cast for the measure the first time. Thus a change of one vote in either branch of the legislature may be sufficient to sustain a veto. Is there any other state in the Union with this provision?

•••Wendell Phillips, the silver-tongued orator, died at his home in Boston last night, after a very brief illness. His life work was devoted to anti-slavery principles. He was also an advocate of temperance, woman suffrage and prison reform and was opposed to capital punishment.

•••It will be remembered that a few weeks ago Peter Arimond, who is about 70 years of age, was married to Miss Louise Watzel, she being his sixth wife. One cold morning of last week she got up, lighted the fire and putting on her outside wraps left the old man asleep in bed and took the train for St. Paul or some other point.

•••The sale of tickets over the St. Paul & Duluth road at Duluth for the month of January amounted to $4,831.10, which is $3,268.10 greater than for the corresponding month of last year.

•••Sunday evening Abe Thayer, who is a somewhat bashful young man, went to the Methodist church for devotional exercises, and after the services, as he was putting on his overcoat, he inadvertently put his arm into the lining of his sleeve. In taking his arm out he also drew off his undercoat, leaving him in his shirt sleeves. When Abe discovered his mishap, he looked as though he would like to drop through the floor, while the audience put on a broad smile.

•••Robert Osborn and others are getting ready to bring a suit against the C. N. Nelson Lumber company for obstructing the passage of logs on the Cloquet river. The suit will take nearly as long as the boom case took.

•••At the close of the session of Superior lodge, No. 10, A. O. U. W., held last winter, the degrees of the Oriental Order of Humility were conferred upon a number of the members by T. H. Pressell, the duly commissioned representative of the ruling grand potentate, the pasha of Persia. The sublime beauties of the order were received with such favor that it was determined to perfect and maintain a regular organization. Accordingly Zerxes Hut, No. 22423, has been instituted and the following officers elected: Most potent grand seignior, Tharas H. Pressnell; noble vizier, George N. La Vaque; venerable priar, J. R. Carey; reverend monitor, N. J. Miller; almoner, P. B. Gaylord; scrivener, J. P. Johnson; chief herald, C. A. Nichols; armorer, George Grierson; seneschal, John H. Jeffrey.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

St. Peter Herald: A new plan of selecting postmasters is to be tried by Congressman Lindbergh at his home town of Little Falls. He has agreed to appoint a man who shall be elected by the people, and to enable them to make their choice suggests that special ballot boxes be placed in the polling places at the city election. Republican papers in his district, particularly the St. Cloud Journal Press, are opposed to the innovation, they charging that it will have a tendency to disrupt party organization and may result in the defeat of Lindbergh himself. The Herald cannot see why the people should not be permitted to express their choice for postmaster. No public official comes in closer contact with the people, and if the voters can be trusted to choose their municipal officers, their congressmen and their governors, they certainly can be trusted to name their postmasters.

Breckenridge Telegram: Representative Kahn of California says that his state will pass the proposed laws hitting the Japanese in spite of the national government. In that case the national government ought to allow the Jap navy to call around some morning and wipe a few coast cities off the map, with the understanding that they would then steam away. The people of the Golden state are acting like a lot of kids and a good spanking by the Japs or someone else would do them a world of good.

Wahkon Enterprise: Senator Witherstine of Rochester would impose a fine of $2 on the citizen who does not vote on election day, and he would disfranchise the voter until the fine is paid. How would it be to use those fines as a healing balm for defeated candidates?

Floodwood Broadaxe: Poverty has its blessings after all. We did not notice the name of any country editor killed or injured on the ill-fated steamship Republic. Poverty and globe trotting are not compatible.

The Hiding Places.

She hid a secret in her mouth
The ivory gates behind,
A hiding place which would appear
For safety well designed;
But oft they oped, so it escaped
And travelled like the wind

She hid a secret in her purse,
Constructed well to hold,
A safe and sure receptacle
For silver and for gold;
But oft it oped, the secret fled
And travelled as of old.

She hid a secret in her heart
Where little entrance gained,
An organ which I think was meant
To give all it contained;
It opened not, and ever since
The secret there remained.

IRRESISTIBLE MOVEMENT TOWARD TRUSTS, SAYS SMITH; RECOMMENDS THAT GOVERNMENT SUPERVISE THEM

Washington, Feb. 3.—Commissioner Herbert Knox Smith of the bureau of corporations, has submitted to Secretary Strauss of the department of commerce and labor, the annual report of the operations of this bureau for the year ended June 30, 1908. In all respects, it is the most important report yet submitted by the bureau of corporations. The work of the bureau during the last fiscal year was more varied than during any similar period since the establishment of the department of commerce and labor. During the year Commissioner Smith directed investigations of many important industries and he now has on hand as current work, inquiries into the tobacco industry, steel industry, International Harvester company, lumber industry, cotton exchanges, and water transportation.

The most important legal work of the bureau in the last fiscal year was in connection with a bill for the amendment of the Sherman law. A large amount of work also was done in aiding the department of justice in the preparation for trial of cases against the Standard Oil company for alleged practice of discriminations in railway rates.

Discussing the general subject of corporate regulation and control, Commissioner Smith says:

"There is an irresistible movement toward concentration in business. We must recognize the fact that industrial concentration is already largely accomplished, in spite of general statutory prohibition. The aim of new legislation should be to regulate, rather than to prohibit combination. It is an obvious absurdity to attempt to do both at the same time, and prohibition has practically failed. Our present law, forbidding all combination, therefore needs adaptation to the actual facts. If we are to do anything effective with the corporation question, we must make an advance on our present legislation. The practical object to see that business opportunity and the highways of commerce are kept equally open to all; to prevent fraud, special privilege and unfair competition. To do this, we must recognize concentration, supervise it and regulate it. Above all, we must have a system for our purpose. 'Efficient publicity' means that sort of publicity which reaches the average citizen under every day conditions. A permanent office, after collecting material, must also summarize it for the public in brief, clear and reliable conclusion, showing important permanent corporate tendencies.

"The control by the Federal government (of corporations) should be broadened into a general constructive system based on tested principles of supervision, publicity and co-operation. The details of such a system, in its main features, should be as follows:

"It should be operated by the Federal government.

"It should provide for a system of regular reports from the large interstate corporations.

"Such government office should have access at all reasonable times to the records and accounts of such corporations.

"That office should publish concisely the important facts disclosed. It should safeguard from publication all business secrets.

"Corporations complying with these requirements should be given the advantage of a definite federal registration.

"The system should, if possible, be voluntary.

"Finally, supervision must be administrative. No other method has the necessary flexibility.

"We must have a system of supervision which provides a working basis for conference and co-operation, and which does not rely merely on criminal procedure and opposition. There is not only a change in the attitude of business leaders. There is also an aroused and intelligent demand from the public for fair business methods and for equal commercial opportunity for all. The future of the nation must depend largely upon the stability of its business machinery. That machinery cannot be permanent or successful unless it operates openly and justly. It must place and keep in control of our great commercial forces men who have risen there solely by superior industrial efficiency. It must protect such men from the competition of those who get power by unfair and illegal methods and privileges—practices that rely peculiarly on secrecy. To do this the government must have such supervision and control of that corporate machinery as will maintain in business the fundamental American ideal of equal opportunity to all."

HERBERT KNOX SMITH.

STEEL CORPORATION WANTED CONTROL OF TENNESSEE COAL AND IRON, DECLARES SCHLEY

Washington, Feb. 3.—Details of the formation of a syndicate to control the Tennessee Coal & Iron company, and of later negotiations for the sale of a majority of the stock of that concern to the United States Steel corporation, were given by Grant B. Schley of New York, of the firm of Moore & Schley, who was a witness before the special committee of the senate committee on judiciary, which is investigating the president's authority for permitting the merger in November, 1907.

Mr. Schley gave the names of the sixteen men who associated themselves together to control the stock. He told also of the arrangement for the sale of the stock to the steel corporation, and indicated that this was brought about through the agency of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co.

At the time of the purchase of the stock in the fall of 1905, there was outstanding common stock valued at $22,550,000 and preferred stock to the amount of $1,000,000. The association of business men obtained 118,500 shares, which was more than half of the total. Mr. Schley said the party had the idea of developing the property and was not speculating in the least. About one-half of the stock was paid for by the individuals and withdrawn, and about one-half, according to Mr. Schley's estimate, was borrowed upon by the holders. The only agreement made by members of the party was that they would not sell the stock for a period of two years. The names of the parties forming the association were given by Mr. Schley as follows:

O. H. Payne, L. C. Hanna, G. B. Schley, J. B. Duke, F. J. Berwind, J. W. Gates, A. N. Brady, G. A. Kessler, Oakleigh Thorne, who held 10,300 shares each; E. W. Oglebay, H. S. Black, F. D. Stout, J. W. Simpson, who held 5,150 shares each; G. W. French, 2,500; S. G. Cooper, 1,500, and J. A. Topping, 1,000 shares.

In the two years immediately following the purchase of the stock, about $7,000,000 were expended in improvements and new stock was issued. Mr. Schley estimated that in the fall of 1907 the Tennessee company owned from 500,000,000 to 700,000,000 tons of iron ore, 2,000,000,000 tons of coal, a large amount of fluxing material and large quantities of all the other elements needed for the manufacture of steel.

Loans on Stock.

Senator Culberson questioned the witness concerning loans made on Tennessee Coal & Iron stock, and Mr. Schley said that his firm had borrowed for himself and customers between $3,000,000 and $6,000,000 which was outstanding on Nov. 1, 1907, and that the total outstanding loans of Moore & Schley on that date amounted to about $33,000,000. It was shown that a considerable amount of Moore & Schley loans were made with the so-called Morgan banks. It was positively stated by the witness that every demand made upon his firm for the payment of the loan had been met promptly during the firm's existence.

It was asserted by Mr. Schley that there were about 100,000 shares of Tennessee Coal & Iron stock in loans which they had placed with other banks and that when the panic came on there was "nobody buying or selling this stock as so much of it was out of the market.'

"In the development of the panic," he continued, "the banks declined to loan upon a security where the market was apparently normal. So I would have continual calls—'please take this Tennessee out of that loan,' etc. Now it became a very serious matter."

Senator Culberson wanted to know why the Steel corporation could not have relieved the situation by simply taking care of that 100,000 shares of stock which was in loans. He suggested that the Steel corporation might have deposited steel bonds in lieu of the Tennessee stock for the $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 which had been borrowed on the latter. Mr. Schley said such a thing had never been considered, nor had he thought of it before. He did ont think such a thing would be practical. Concerning the suggestion, Mr. Schley said:

"It was natural to consider that when they took it; they wanted the control. I doubt if the Steel corporation would have wanted any interest in the Tennessee Coal & Iron property, leaving the control out of their own hands. I om speaking of the practicability of the suggestion.

Mr. Schley was asked if the acquirement of the Tennessee company's property to the Steel corporation added to the value of steel securities, and replied:

"Yes, surely."

Mr. Kittredge was asked if the contemplated improvements, when completed, would not enable the Tennessee Coal & Iron company to manufacture steel cheaper than any other steel company in the country, and Mr. Schley replied:

"Yes, I believe that is so."

Men of Great Wealth.

It was brought out by Senator Overman that all of the men making up the party that bought the Tennessee company's stock were men of great wealth and few of them would have been financially embarrassed if the deal of the Steel corporation had not been accomplished. Mr. Schley said that if loans that Moore & Schley had on these stocks had been called by the banks it could not be told what would have resulted.

"Was there any call on these men?" asked Mr. Overman.

Mr. Schley replied that his firm was acting as agent for these men, and that he called on them, but they could not respond. He would not say that there was any danger to any particular man in the party, but he said the call upon Moore & Schley were made so persistently that "it got to a dangerous point." The embarrassment, he said, extended to many others outside the district of stockholders, which he had been given. "We had right in front of us," he said, "a fear and a doubt."

The witness than described his visit to Lewis Cass Ledyard, who was mentioned by former witnesses as being the man who first suggested the merger of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company and the United States Steel corporation. Mr. Schley said Ledyard was not his attorney, but was the friend of J. Pierpont Morgan. The proposition made to Mr. Ledyard was that he should go to Mr. Morgan and suggest that the Steel corporation buy the stock of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company on the basis of par and cash. Mr. Schley said Messrs. Frick and Gary called on him and the deal developed, and was known to the public in a manner which brought some relief. He said:

"I can't tell what would have happened to Moore & Schley or to anybody else in the street, because we were oppressed by rumors, some of them untrue, but Moore & Schley were the subject of attack—serious attack—and their credit, which is the life of the business, was being destroyed. It was a matter of serious import. It had to be disposed of if it could. I don't mean for Moore & Schley, but for people about them, others interested, not those particular individuals of great wealth."

In response to questions by Senator Dillingham, Mr. Schley said the purpose was to relieve the situation most decidedly, not only with Moore & Schley, but with everybody about. The witness gave a graphic description of the panicky days and told of the calls made upon his firm, which he said amounted to $7,000,000 in three days and he declared that "nobody could pay all that money at once."

It was brought out by Senator Culberson that the relations of Moore & Schley to the Tennessee Coal & Iron company were known in the "Street" and as a result his firm was specially pounded during the panic.

No witnesses have been summoned for tomorrow.

County Road Work.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I read an editorial on good roads in your issue of the 29th ult. with much pleasure. I have long been in favor of spending the county road fund as the poor fund is disposed of—have a road commission and a road superintendent responsible for it. This county can afford to employ a road specialist; then let the road commissioners separate the wheat from the chaff, so to speak, decide what new roads and repairs are necessary, tell the superintendent what is to be done, and if he does not "make good," get some one else.

The present method of road construction, new or old, in this county is a farce and a travesty on justice. I have seen ten men at work on a piece of road for a day, and show no more results, or, in fact, not as intelligent results, as a good Irishman would do with a pick and shovel in half a day.

The idea of co-operation between townships and county where connecting roads form one highway to a given point is the correct one. New Jersey has accomplished better results per lineal rod of roadmaking for the money expended than any other state in the Union. There the different interests work together harmoniously and intelligently and accomplish wonders. For instance, if a piece of road needs sub-draining, they sub-drain it, not as I have seen on St. Louis county roads, soft places filled in with poles and brush and muck of all kinds, only to break open again as soon as the first freshet came. In New Jersey one organization, say a given county, will buy a portable rock crusher—for they realize that good roads can only be made by proper surfacing. The county leases this crusher for stated periods to each road district requiring it. Boulders, cobble stones and rock of all kinds abound. The crusher is moved and set up right at the work, and they get cheap top dressing, as cheap or cheaper than where there are natural gravel beds, but where the haul is oftentimes a long one.

Ideal conditions for this sort of thing exist in St. Louis county. My hobby at the present time is dairy farming, but as dairies and good roads go hand in hand, dairies are of no use without the good roads, as the Mr. Johnson, whom you quote so aptly, says. So I say, "Hurrah for good roads!"

I am pledged to assist the movement to the utmost, my zeal being only limited by time, money and ability. Respectfully,

W. C. SARGENT.

HISTORIC FEATURES

Lake Steamer Which Will Contain Wood From Every State.

Photographs of Governors Will Adorn Panels in the Cabin.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 3.—A block of wood from each of the forty-six states of the Union will enter into a novel exhibit to be displayed in the main cabin of a new steel lake and ocean steamer now being built at the shipyards at Manitowoc, Wis.

On this boat there will be forty-six staterooms, unless between now and spring the territory of New Mexico will be given the name of Lincoln and admitted to statehood, in which case there will be forty-seven, and each stateroom will bear the name of a great commonwealth of this nation.

In specially planned panels between the staterooms in the cabin will be shown the photographic portraits of all the governors in office at the time the boat is put in service next May.

The boat will be named the United States and will display the Star Spangled Banner, in red, white and blue electric lights, and an immense shield will be similarly constructed.

The cabin of this great steamer has been planned to show the history of this country in pictures and tablets so that it fairly will bristle with patriotic sentiment.

Pictures of Marine Events.

In the matter of pictures the most striking events of our wars on water as well as the more peaceful marine incidents, will be reproduced in oil. One of the pictures will represent Columbus' caravels sailing from Palos, August, 1492. Another will show the Mayflower at Cape Cod and the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers. A third will show the moonlight fight of John Paul Jones, his ship the Bonhomme Richard, grappled with the British frigate Serapis, off Flamborough head, Sept. 23, 1799.

The fight of Lawrence and his immortal words that have been handed down from the war on water between the Cheapeake and the Shannon, will be pictured and brought to mind, in the gallery of this new Lake Michigan vessel, as will also the event on Lake Erie that caused Perry to write the words familiar to every school child in the land.

It has been planned in still another way to portray interesting bits of history. Small brass tablets or panels will bear short sentences and terse paragraphs uttered by famous men from Patrick Henry down to the present day. One of the tablets will bear a short excerpt from the Gettysburg speech of Lincoln, and another will be lettered Grant's famous four-word appeal to the people—"Let Us Have Peace." These and many others will be placed where every man and woman and child aboard may read them.

The blocks of wood gathered from the different states of the Union will be kiln dried and then highly polished to show their natural grain, after which they will be carved in their exact geographical shapes, so that when put together they will form a gigantic map of the United States, showing the principal bodies of water and the natural water courses. The map will occupy a prominent position in the cabin.

Planned for Ocean Service.

The United States will be 215 feet long, 40-foot beam, and to the top of the bridge will measure 56 feet.

She will be equipped with a single screw propeller driven by a triple expansion engine. Her draft will be limited to thirteen feet, and she will be provided with condensers that will enable her to make steam from either fresh or salt water, thus making her an ocean-going vessel.

This is in contemplation of the completion within the next fifteen years of a deep waterway from the lakes to the gulf and in which event she will be able to make ocean ports.

The boat will be launched this month and will go into commission on Lake Michigan in May. She will be equipped with the most completed wireless telegraph apparatus to be had in this country.

Enjoy Your Meals

By Simply Eating a Little Pleasant Tablet After Each of Them.

A TABLET DIGESTS A MEAL.

When digestion is perfect the fluids necessary to this process come naturally to the aid of the stomach. They are of right proportion and do their work speedily and well. When indigestion and dyspepsia are prevalent, these same juices come slowly if at all, are weak and insufficient or are filled with strong acids and alkalies.

When such a condition exists each meal is a hardship upon the digestive organs. The meal should strengthen the juices, but on the contrary it weakens them, so that man by the very act of eating causes conditions to arise which of themselves bring him pain and loathing for the next meal.

By eating one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets you mix the tablet with your saliva and it goes into your stomach a strong, vigorous fluid, many times more powerful than the natural digestive juices. These tablets are made up from natural vegetable and fruit essences and are composed from Hydrastis, Golden Seal, Lactose, Nux, Ascetic Pepsin, Bismuth and Jamaica Ginger. There is the formula and one grain of it will digest 3,000 grains of food in any stomach. Beside digesting the food it will give the blood the power to enrich the digestive fluids so after a time nature will take care of itself. Though you have no stomach trouble one of these tablets after each meal is a powerful assistance to nature and is an excellent habit to make.

Go to any druggist and ask his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. We will abide his answer if he be an honest man. They sell for 50c per package. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart building, Marshall, Mich.

STALLED BY THISTLES.

Blizzard Piled Tumble Weeds High in Railroad Cuts.

Oakley, Kan., Feb. 2.—In the blizzard of the last forty-eight hours the greatest damage was done by the Russian thistle, more commonly known as the tumble weed. The weeds, which are about the size of a half bushel measure and almost round, blew over the prairie by the millions. In some cases they even stalled trains by piling in the cuts.

Near Oberlin a touring car belonging to the Miller real estate firm, of Elden, caught fire while trying to force its way through the Russian thistles and was completely destroyed, the occupants narrowly escaping being burned to death.

Russian thistles by the millions were hurled before the winds and orchards were packed full, yards and fences were hidden, alleys and sidewalks blocked, and in instances the weeds are piled so high about houses that only by using a pitchfork can the occupants clear a way through them.

Gives Out Letter to Show That Writer Was Brave.

Washington, Feb. 3.—President Roosevelt has come to the defense of James B. Connolly, the writer of sea tales, whose conduct on board the ill-fated Republic has been brought into question by the steamship company. Although the president has thus far declined Connolly's appeals for a Roosevelt denunciation of the charges, the president showed his sympathy with Connolly, and emphasized his disbelief in the charges by authorizing the publication of two letters from William J. Prendergast and wife, fellow passengers with Connolly on the wrecked liner, praising Connolly as being "cool."

GIRL KILLS BETRAYER IN TEXAS COURTROOM

Gatesville, Tex., Feb. 3.—Miss Verna Ware, daughter of a prominent farmer of this county, fired into a crowded courtroom here, continuing until her weapon was empty. As a result John Hanes, a merchant of Jonesboro, for whom the bullets were intended, is dead, two bystanders, James Smith and David Ross, are believed to be mortally wounded, and A. R. Wiley, Jr., is seriously wounded.

It was during the conclusion of a case on trial in the district court that the shooting occurred. Miss Ware, as complainant, and Hanes, as defendant, on charge of seduction, the former in an ante-room and the latter in the courtroom, were awaiting the calling of the case. Approaching a window, from which view of the courtroom could be had, Miss Ware saw Hanes among the spectators and drew the revolver from the folds of her dress and opened fire.

Miss Josephine Harveaux Is Taken Very Suddenly.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Josephine Harveaux, aged 21, eldest daughter of Joseph Harveaux, died very suddenly yesterday afternoon of internal hemorrhage, at her home on Fifteenth street.

There was no one with her at the time of the attack, and she may have been in an unconscious condition a long time before her sister discovered her. A doctor was summoned immediately, but she died soon after being placed in bed. Her father and two brothers are in the woods near Markham, at Camp Four, and they have been notified. The mother is not living, but father, two brothers and a sister survive her.

HINES TALKS ON TARIFF

Says Removal of Duty Would Not Lower Lumber Prices.

Claims It Would React Against Railroads and General Business.

Edward Hines of Chicago, president of the Virginia & Rainy Lake Lumber company, and one of the largest operators and holders of standing pine in this country, addressed a few of the prominent Duluth lumbermen upon the question of the United States removing the present duty upon lumber, in the rooms of the Commercial club, last evening.

Mr. Hines began his remarks by asking what this country would receive by removing the tariff upon lumber. He answered the question by stating that no appreciable benefits would accrue from such an action upon the part of congress. He stated that the harm resulting from the removal of the tariff would far outweight any good that might come to the lumber consumers through the revision of the lumber tariff.

Mr. Hines stated that the present lumber schedule did not prevent Canadian lumber from coming to the country. Upon the other hand, the lumberman stated that the tariff acted as a check upon the lumber situation in the United States.

"When the price of lumber gets too high, the Canadian manufacturer will ship lumber to this country, and when the price is moderate it prevents the Canadian from shipping lumber across the border," said Mr. Hines.

Getting further into the details of the question, Mr. Hines declared that the removal of the lumber tariff would greatly injure the railroads of this country. He stated that the removal of the lumber tariff would admit free, lumber from Georgian Bay to many of the largest cousuming centers of the country at an average rate of $1.75 a thousand feet, water rates, and thus would deprive the railroads of a great source of profit by reducing their freight traffic.

Mr. Hines stated that it was the cheap lumber that would be shipped to this country, and that the man who wanted to have his home built cheaper would not be benefited by the removal of the lumber duty. Mr. Hines would not admit that the removal of the lumber tariff would result in lumber being sold cheaper to the farmers of the country; yet even admitting, for the sake of argument that it did result in a lessened price, stated that the farmers of the country had no complaint to make over the present price of lumber, as their farm products were selling at a higher price than ever before obtained in the history of this country, and that this was owing in part to the lumber companies, which were heavy consumers of the farm products.

The speaker made the statement that the removal of the tariff would not result in the lowering of the price of lumber. He declared that it would result in making more profit for the retail dealer, who through the sale of a cheaper class of lumber at the price being maintained at the present time for a higher grade of material, would thereby realize greater profits.

"The railroads of the United States are alive to the situation," was the statement of the lumberman. "They would rather pay more for their lumber than have the duty removed. The removal of the lumber duty would result in the loss of a vast volume of freight and would work a great injustice to the railroads of this country. The removal of the tariff would also generally affect the business of this country. In nine years the importation of lumber from Canada will have increased over 300 per cent. It will increase plenty fast enough under the present tariff. The business interests of the country should unite to prevent the removal of the present tariff upon lumber."

Mr. Hines denied that there was anything approaching a lumber trust in this country. He further stated that he had convinced the ways and means committee of congress of the truth of this statement. He stated that there were 28,746 lumber mills in the United States and that Mr. Weyerhaeuser was not interested in more than forty.

The speaker referred to the fact that Senator Knute Nelson had written a letter to the Stone-Ordean company, informing the members of the firm that a further investigation of the tariff question would probably convince them that it was for the interest of Duluth to have the duty removed. Mr. Hines appealed to those present to 'put the senator right upon this question."

A committee composed of A. H. Comstock, C. R. Rust and N. J. Upham was named to act upon the matter. Mr. Comstock was made chairman.

Among those present were: Edward Hines, John Millen, James A. Ferguson, F. E. Weyerhaeuser, A. H. Comstock, A. L. Ordean, J. H. Madden, N. J. Upham, C. R. Rust, J. W. Bayley, Henry Turrish, W. H. Cook, S. J. Cusson, H. C. Hornby, George F. Lindsey, Charles Thornton and E. V. Eva, secretary of the Commercial club.

CALIFORNIA AND NEVADA PERSIST IN FOMENTING DISCORD ON JAP ISSUE

troduced by A. M. Drew of Fresno, the center of one of the largest orchard and vineyard districts of the state.

The other bills were introduced by Grove L. Johnson, who hails from the Sacramento valley, where the Japanese are regarded with hostility by people of all classes. This feeling has been intensified by the acquisition of late years by the Japanese of large tracts of orchard and garden lands.

The criticisms of the agriculturists is on the anti-Japanese feeling in this state has aroused a storm of protest from the papers of California. The California papers complain that the real attitude of this state is not understood East. Most of these papers regard the exclusion of the Japanese to be both necessary and inevitable, and they express the fear that the action of the state legislature will retard rather than advance this solution of the problem.

This morning, the Chronicle complains that the feeling against California in the East is entirely based on two main motives, both sordid—one to keep solid with Japan and thereby promote the sale of cotton goods and kerosene no matter at what cost to the unfortunate people of the Pacific coast, and the other is to force congress to make heavy appropriations for the army and navy.

The Chronicle predicts the exclusion of Japanese by domestic law as the only logical solution of the problem, and it maintains that in this desire to keep the Pacific coast "a white man's country," two-thirds of the people of the country are with California. In the meantime Governor Gillette and Speaker Walter Stanton of the assembly, are sitting on the lid which is expected to lift at Sacramento today.

Both of these officials say there will be no anti-Japanese measure passed, but the friends of the bills are equally certain they will succeed in passing the bills.

Anxiety In Washington.

Washington, Feb. 3.—No single question, nor, indeed, any group of questions is absorbing the interest and concern of the administration at this moment to the same extent as certain of the phases of the anti-Japanese agitation in California. The president has been in communication with many reputable persons who should be thoroughly informed as to the conditions on the Pacific coast. It is admitted that a systematic agitation was in progress on the coast, but a significant feature of its lack of strength was the fact that the labor leaders had taken no prominent part in it. Indeed it has been stated to the administration that the real main-spring of the agitation was to be found in some of the great corporations that had found their profitable business of coolie transportation threatened with destruction by the success attending the efforts of the administration to stop this class of immigration, for the fact is, that in the opinion of the administration the negotiations for a practically complete closure of American ports to the entry of Japanese laborers are certainly jeopardized by the extreme utterances of certain persons in California, and by the mere consideration of such resolutions as are entertained by the Nevada legislature.

"Even agreements already reached, which are being carried out in perfect good faith on the part of the Japanese government, are endangered, in the sense that the present agitation might very naturally tend to abate the interest of the Japanese officials in the execution of their obligations in view of the unfriendly attitude assumed by some elements on the Pacific coast. It is the considerations that have influenced the president in reaching the conclusion that everything possible should be done to prevent the enactment of legislation by any state that would discriminate against the Japanese as a class apart from other foreign elements entering America.

There is no objection by the administration to laws prohibiting all aliens from holding land in America. For this is now, under the revised statutes, the law in the District of Columbia and the territories and some of the states. Indeed, there is a similar law in Japan, and the government of that country consequently could not regard it as anti-Japanese legislation if adopted in California. The president has entire confidence in the people of the Pacific coast and is certain that they will do right in this matter.

The administration is much pleased with the tone of the speech of Premier Komura in the Japanese diet yesterday, so far as it touched upon the relations between America and Japan.

Another Anti-Jap Bill.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 3.—Another bill has been added to the long list of anti-alien and anti-Japanese bills that will be a special order of business in the assembly. Grove L. Johnson, the chairman of the committee on judiciary, reported out favorably his measure specifying Japanese in the law segregating Mongolians and Indians in the public schools. It was the attempted obliteration of the word "Japanese" in the statute that caused President Roosevelt, two weeks ago, to ask Governor Gillett to stop anti-Japanese legislation.

In the senate the committee on executive communications reported on the recent message of Governor Gillett (dealing with the subject of Japanese legislation). The report advises against the passage of any of these measures, declaring it to be the sense of the committee that such legislation would be unconstitutional. The report of the committee follows:

"We firmly believe that legislation of this nature is a menace to the welfare of the country. It is true that our population is composed of people from all nations of the globe. To single out any one particular nation would bring us into conflict with the Constitution of the United States and render us ridiculous in the eyes of the nation.

"Whatever is done to restrict Japanese immigration should come through the federal government. This matter is not one in which our own interests alone are involved, but one in which the whole nation is interested."

This report was signed by Hurd (Chairman), Bills, Lewis and Finn. Senator Campbell stated that he would make a minority report.

Roosevelt Not Censured.

Carson, Nev., Feb. 3.—The anti-Japanese resolution that was introduced the assembly by Speaker Giffen was shorn of its vindictive points yesterday afternoon. The matter was taken up by the governor, the leaders of both political parties and after a conference it was decided to eliminate the portions censuring President Roosevelt.

Assemblyman Folsom, when the resolution came up for reading, had a number of amendments which were read, and adopted unanimously, thus eliminating all reference to the president.

During Folsom's speech he said the Democrats of Nevada regarded Roosevelt as the greatest Democrat elected in many years. The resolution as amended declares that the state of California is justified in its action and urges that that state pass a law that will tend to exclude the Japanese race; also that Nevada views with alarm the attempted encroachment of the government on state rights. The resolution still contains the statement that "we do not believe in the danger of war with Japan, but we believe that if we must have war with Japan, now is a better time than ever to lay down terms to that empire, and teach those arrogant people that American rights cannot be encroached upon."

The resolution will go to the senate, where it probably will be trimmed further, as the Republican members of that body express the view that it is passing the bounds of good judgment.

The hasty action of the assembly in presenting the anti-Japanese resolution, which also censured President Roosevelt, is the talk of the members of both houses.

Prior to the calling of the resolution there was a conference of both political parties and an effort was made to modify it to the extent that the censure of the president be omitted. It was given out that Governor Dickerson opposed the measure in its original form. While he was credited with favoring the exclusion portion of the measure, he did not approve of the strong language of the resolution. Assemblyman Dodge, the Republican leader in the house, stated openly that he intended to do all in his power to defeat the measure. All of the Republican members of the senate made the same statement.

Speaker Giffen, who introduced the measure, has also introduced a bill designed to prevent aliens from holding lands in the state. Section 1 reads.

"Any non-resident alien, except subjects of the Japanese and Chinese empire, may take hold and enjoy any real property or interests in lands in Nevada, and upon the same terms and conditions as any other person."

This measure is in the hands of the judiciary committee.

Assemblyman Dodge introduced a resolution asking that a fleet of war ships be maintained in Pacific waters, as "citizens of Asiatic countries with whom we cannot mingle on terms conducive to our interests, are rapidly becoming a menace to our peace and prosperity, mainly from the want of proper naval protection.

Women to Blame for Their Own Ills

Too many women suffer needlessly each month from painful, profuse, scanty, or irregular menstruation.

There is really no excuse for this, for an eminent physician has supplied a prescription (which is here published) that regulates the flow, stops all pain, calms the nerves, cures cramps, banishes headaches, clears and beautifies the complexion. Any good druggist will fill it for you: Alpen Seal, 2 ounces; Fluid Extract Black Haw, 1 ounce; Pure Water, 5 ounces.

A teaspoonful before each meal and at bedtime, taken for several days before, during, and after each period, will do the work safely and effectively. Are you willing to take a wise physician's advice? Isn't it worth a trip to the drug store and the trifling cost of having the prescription filled?

INSISTS ON WIRELESS

We have the same right to require wireless instruments as to require life preservers on ships. The right to enter our ports is one that we can deny or make conditional. The French assembly has followed our example and yesterday began consideration of a measure similar to mine. No nation will resent, but all will welcome the passage of this bill by congress.

"Even in the face of the wonderful demonstration of the value of the wireless in the saving of over a thousand lives, many steamship owners will be slow to take advantage of the advice because of its slight cost, and legislation is necessary to compel such to act.

"There can be no possible objection to my bill, as it affects only vessels carrying at least fifty passengers and whose outgoing journey is at least 500 miles. It might even be applied to other vessels on shorter trips, possibly on the lakes and in the constwise trade, but all those will follow later."

The cost of equipping a ship is about $1,000, according to the estimate made by Representative Burke.

Interstate Liquor Bill.

One week from today is the tentative date set for the house to act on the proposal to regulate the interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors. Consideration of the revision of the penal code then will be resumed, and the first subject to come up will be the liquor question.

When the house closed consideration of the provision before the holidays, there was pending an amendment in the nature of an insertion, offered by Representative Humphreys of Mississippi, to regulate interstate shipments of intoxicating liquors.

After several conferences with Speaker Cannon, Representative Watson, the Republican "whip," Chairman Moon of the revision committee and others, Representatives Humphrey and Miller of Kansas have prepared a new bill, and this will be offered by Humphrey as a substitute for his amendment.

The new bill, which has the sanction of leaders on both sides of the house, is practically the same as the Knox bill, which passed the senate early in this congress. The principal difference is in language. These changes were made so as to have the bill conform with the legal phraseology of the revised code.

Another change adds the District of Columbia and islands subject to American jurisdiction to the territory affected by the proposed law.

The bill strives to accomplish three things. These are the marking of the contents of vessels; the making certain of the delivery of intoxicating liquor only to bona fide consignees and not to fictitious persons, and the prevention of the delivery of liquors C. O. D. All these regulations apply only to interstate shipments, railroad companies, express companies and other common carriers being punishable for violations.

Advocates of the proposed legislation claim that it avoids the alleged unconstitutionality features of the Littlefield bill. That measure made liquor shipped from one state to another subject to state laws as soon as it crossed the boundaries of the states.

Cram Not Yet Confirmed.

The nomination of Dr. W. D. Crum to be collector of customs of Charleston, S. C., was before the senate in executive session for more than four hours, at the end of which time no substantial progress had been made toward confirmation.

An agreement has been reached in the senate to vote Feb. 23 on the Aldrich substitute bill for the appointment of a court of inquiry to determine the qualifications for re-enlistment of the discharged soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry as the result of the Brownsville incident.

During the house debate on the automobile item, in the deficiency bill, Mr. Clark of Missouri, said he thought Mr. Taft would not need horses "as much as the celebrated equestrian who now occupies the White House." He said there was not the slightest danger that President Taft would ever ride ninety-eight miles in one day, one week or one month.

A wave of laughter swept over the house when Mr. Clark inquired if the present White House stables were to be transformed into a garage.

In a vigorous speech in support of the senate amendment, Mr. Sims of Tennessee, said Mr. Taft was demanding the adoption of a dangerous method of travel, not only to himself, but to citizens. "Let us be bold," he exclaimed, "and vote down this thing." He asserted that Mr. Taft, while a man of large build could ride a horse and could get in a carriage. If the carriage platform was not big enough, he said, it could be made so.

"We already have built him such a platform," commented Mr. Mann of Illinois, amid laughter.

"But you are trying to get him off that platform," responded Mr. Sims.

The amendment was opposed by Messrs. Fitzgerald of New York and Keifer of Ohio, both of the appropriations committee.

Messrs. Tawney of Minnesota, Vreeland of New York and Livingston of Georgia, were appointed conferees on the part of the house.

Blow to Aeronautics.

The hopes of the army for sufficient money to continue its experiments in aeronautics were blasted when the house reconsidered its action of last week, and by a vote of almost two to one withdrew the increase of $500,000 then made. After undergoing this and other amendments, the army appropriation bill was passed and consideration of the agricultureal bill immediately began.

Under license of debate on the latter measure, Mr. Keifer made an exhaustive speech in support of his bill for a ship canal from Toledo to Cincinnati along the Miami and Erie canal. Mr. Ansberry of Ohio spoke in advocacy of a ship canal from Chicago to Toledo, and Mr. Larrinaga, delegate from Porto Rico, urged a duty on other than Porto Rican coffee entering the United States.

Senator Clay's resolution calling on the secretary of the treasury for information in respect to the forming of national currency associations under the emergency currency act of May 3, came up for consideration in the senate yesterday.

Mr. Aldrich, saying that all the information called for was in the possession of the senate, moved to refer the resolution to the committee on finance. He said that but one such association had been formed, that being in the District of Columbia.

Mr. Clay said he would allow the resolution to lie over so that he might speak upon it today.

Burton's Army Bill.

Another discussion concerning the distinction between the line officers in the army and the men employed in the pay and other departments of the service, has arisen in the house on account of pressure for the passage of the Burton bill "to increase the efficiency of the pay department of the United States army."

This bill changes the title of paymasters' clerks to paymasters' assistants. Under its provisions they will be commissioned by the president and would receive the same pay as a second lieutenant, not mounted, in the army. While the rank of a commissioned officer is withheld, it is provided that they shall be retired under the same conditions as those applyin gto officers.

Gen. Charles H. Whipple, paymaster general testified to the committee on military affairs, which is considering the bill, that something ought to be done to aid this branch. He said that more lucrative salaries in private life took his best men out of the service. During the past seven years he pointed out that 43 per cent of the clerks had resigned.

ever will be called to pay anything in the future. We have the lowest fixed charges of any road on the continent, being only $710 a mile per annum.

"When our line of railway is completed to the Pacific coast it will give the people of British Columbia new markets for their natural products. It will enable the railway company to take grain from the plains to your ports on the Pacific coast, having your fruits, your lumber and all your natural products as return cargo for these cars eastbound.

Mr. Mann referred to the large grants of money and land received from the government of Canada by the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Pacific railroads to aid their construction. The Canadian Northern could not build a line of railway through British Columbia without government aid, and he had applied for such aid. No definite reply had been made by the government, but he had received some encouragement, and hoped to receive the necessary aid.

It is understood that, in making this statement, Mr. Mann did not wish to anticipate an official announcement by Premier McBride, and that the government has actually decided to grant the assistance requested by the Canadian Northern, so that the road may be continued from Edmonton to Vancouver.

This means the completion of another transcontinental railroad, which is of the very greatest importance to Duluth. It will give a short line from Duluth to the Pacific coast via Winnipeg, Edmonton and Yellow Head Pass to Vancouver, the mileage of the Canadian Northern from Duluth to Vancouver over the proposed route being less than from Duluth to Seattle via the Northern Pacific. The route will give the best grades from Duluth to the Pacific of any of the railroads now in existence. The elevation of the Yellow Head Pass is only 3,700 feet, while the Canadian Northern will have a water grade along the North Thompson and Fraser rivers, and but one range of mountains to cross, instead of three, as all other transcontinental systems have. Another advantage which the Canadian Northern will have is the securities of cheap coal at Duluth and at the foothills of the Rocky mountains, and again at Vancouver.

points farther south in West Virginia. This, the Pittsburg coal men claim, has affected their business in the Northwest. Another argument is that the cost of production on account of organized labor in the Pittsburg field is considerably greater than in West Virginia.

Among the railroad officials considering the new rate are: George F. Randolph, first vice president of the Baltimore & Ohio; H. B. Chamberlain, vice president of the Erie railroad; C. F. Daly, vice president of the New York Central lines; J. B. Thayer, third vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad; D. T. McCabe, fourth vice president of the Pennsylvania lines; B. A. Worthington, receiver for the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad; F. M. Whitaker, freight traffic manager for the North Carolina & Ohio railroad; E. D. Hotchkiss, general freight agent of the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad, and T. S. Davant of the Norfolk & Western, vice president.

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from Paris informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure, is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh a pound a day without injury to the stomach, the causing of wrinkles, the help of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results, however, follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We say Tablets (made in accordance with the famous prescription) can be obtained of any druggist or the makers, the Marmola company, Detroit, Mich., for 75 cents the large case, which is a decidedly economical price considering the number of tablets each case contains.

A BUSY YEAR IS BEFORE CLOQUET

Many Improvements Are Being Made at Mills, Indicating Much Work.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.) — A large force of men has been constantly employed throughout the winter on repair work at the different saw mills.

This work is carried on every winter overhauling the machinery, etc., but this has been an exceptionally busy winter owing to the extensiveness of the repairs. The Cloquet Steam Mill company is building a new power house and is installing one large power engine to take the place of two smaller ones, which have supplied the power heretofore. The Northern Lumber company is putting in a new machine called a "hog," which will be used to grind up much of the waste product for fuel for the Northwest Paper company. It is expected that this machine will not only supply the needs of the paper company during the summer, but will also accumulate enough for their needs in the winter, when the saw mill is down.

The amount of waste product which goes to the burner is being reduced every year and it is probable that the big burner will be rare sights in a few years.

The regular sawing season generally opens here about the middle of April, but the indications are that the wheels will begin to turn long before that time this year on account of the increasing amount of business. A big year is predicted and a good begining has been made. Although the logging carried on this winter by the companies in Cloquet has been light there is a great supply left over from the season of 1907 so that 1909 will be a big year in logging as well as in sawing, from present indications.

Mr. Thelan has been a resident of this city for the past fifty years, having been engaged in the saloon business, from which he retired about fifteen or twenty years ago. He was torn in Germany, Oct. 18, 1832.

The deceased leaves a wife, two daughters and two sons. He was a member of the Masons, being a Knight Templar, under whose auspices the funeral will probably be held.

Hart came here with the announcement that he was going to locate, rented a house, and visiting Clark & Co., purchased a complete outfit of furniture, giving in payment a check on a Superior, Wis., bank for $25 in excess of the amount of the bill. The goods were sent to the house he had rented, but for which he had not paid the rent, and the furniture firm congratulated itself on doing a good stroke. They felt differently when they heard from the bank that the check was no good and they were out $25. Meanwhile "Mr. Hart" and a woman who posed as his wife have departed for greener pastures.

THREW DICE FOR FIVE PER THROW

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Riley, who was arrested Sunday, charged with robbing a lumberjack of $40, was given a hearing before Judge Cummings today and bound over to the grand jury, the evidence being strong. Being unable to furnish bail, he was taken to the county jail to await the next term of court.

When first arrested Riley denied taking the money, but after several witnesses testified that the prisoner was seen by them shaking dice for $5 a flop and otherwise spending money very recklessly, he changed his mind and claimed he found the money on the floor. The evidence against the man appeared conclusive and left little doubt as to his guilt.

ROBS HIS BENEFACTOR.

Brainerd, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—For a downright ingrate, Charles Vaness, a lumberjack, apparently is entitled to the plan. He is alleged to have robbed Peter Dechaine, a cripple, living alone at 601 South First street, taking his watch, coat and a pair of mittens after Dechaine had given him shelter and food. Vaness tried to worm out of the predicament he found himself in by claiming he was drunk, but the court refused to believe him. Vaness then pleaded guilty, getting a thirty-five-day sentence in the county jail.

Manager Wanted.

Louis Moreau is accused of stealing $200 from the Clifton hotel on West First street. He was, before he ran away, manager of the place. Madam Gain will swear out a warrant for his arrest. His whereabouts are unknown.

ON IMPRISONED TRAIN.

St. Cloud Man Tells of Experience on Milwaukee Passenger.

St. Cloud, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Oscar Farm, who has returned from Mankato, tells of a rather thrilling experience, which occurred on a Milwaukee train last Saturday.

The blizzard in that section, it seems, was even worse than here and the snow drifted several feet high. Not a single train had left Monkato in twenty-six hours and a passenger was arranged to take a large number of people to St. Paul. The train made headway with great difficulty and when it reached a point a mile south of Longsdale the passenger train ran into a snowdrift and was stuck. The drift reached to the tops of the passenger coaches, shutting off all the light. There were only two shovels on the train and the work of removing the snow was slow. Many attempts were made to pull the train out of the drift and in so doing the engine became uncoupled. This broke the steampipe and shut off the heat. The passengers, hungry and shivering with the cold, were forced to remain for six hours before the train was released. This was not done until several farmers were gotten together, who worked for hours.

Some of the farmers brought sausage and bread. When they entered the first coach they were mobbed by the passengers, who confiscated the food in less time than it takes to tell it. The other passengers went hungry until the next station was reached.

Receipt That Cures Weak Men—Free

Send Name and Address Today—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man, who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So, I have determined to send a copy of the prescription, free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor-failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow man to send them a copy in confidence, so that any man, anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what, I believe, is the quickest-acting, restorative, upbuilding, SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so, cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 4671 Luck Bldg., Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid receipt, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, free of charge.

PLAIN TALK ON SCHOOLS

Denfeld Tells Business Men of the Improvements Needed.

"To make our school work advance relatively to the progress of the country in other lines, we must pay more attention to the fundamental principles. I consider the teacher the fundamental principle.

"You can't get the best teachers for what you are paying. They are all underpaid, and in spite of the fact that we are careful, there are many drawing salaries who are incompetent. The great curse of the school system from the Atlantic to the Pacific is that the pay is not large enough to attract the best.

"Thirty pupils are all that a teacher should be asked to take care of. When you crowd up to eighty pupils in a room, individual attention cannot be given, and the results are not what they should be.

"I am a strong believer in the practical side and believe that an agricultural school should be established in Duluth.

"We are making great progress in the manual training departments, and the school board has made great strides during the past two years in every branch, but they are hampered because of a lack of funds.

"I tell you, gentlemen, that we have got to go down in our pockets and dig up before our school system becomes what it should be."—Supt. R. E. Denfeld.

Supt. R. E. Denfeld of the Duluth public schools, spoke to the business men of the city this noon at the Commercial club on "Our School System," in the first of a series of noon talks. He went into detail and explained every branch of school work, from the kindergarten up to the senior year in the high school. He suggested many things, and when it came to the question of teachers, he drove his arguments home in a way that his hearers could not fail to be understood.

NO CHANGE IN OFFICERS

The first annual meeting of the Virginia & Rainy Lake Lumber company was held in the offices of the company this morning.

No change in the board of directors or the officers resulted in the meeting today, the directors confirming the appointment of the officers of the new company, which were published in The Herald when the company was formed, Dec. 19.

Edward Hines of Chicago will remain at the head of the company. William O'Brien of St. Paul is vice president; H. C. Hornby of Cloquet, secretary; F. E. Weyerhaeuser of Cloquet, treasurer; S. C. Cousins of Duluth, general manager. W. H. Cook will remain as president of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railroad, the control of which lies with the Canadian Northern Railroad company.

Out of town directors present at the meeting today were H. C. Hornby, F. E. Weyerhaeuser, Edward Hines, Samuel McClure of Stillwater, William O'Brien and S. C. Cousins, who calls Duluth his home since the establishment of the headquarters of the new company at Duluth.

Edward Hines, president of the company, stated that there was nothing outside of the formal meeting of the directors of the company accomplished at today's meeting. He stated that there was no movement on foot to increase the operations of the company, and denied that this was considered by the directors at the meeting.

W. H. Cook, president of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railroad, stated that any extension of the road from Virginia to Duluth, which might be taken up in the future, would be taken up through him as head of the railroad, but that nothing definite upon that project had been decided at the meeting of the directors of the lumber company.

The affairs of the company were discussed by the directors, but according to statements of the different members of the board, there is nothing of news to the general public that can be given out at this time. The general uncertainty of the lumber situation at the present time, owing to tariff agitation and the uncertainty as to what will be the result of the present tariff investigation upon the part of congress, has made future lumber operations uncertain, and has resulted in no decisive policies being formulated at this time by lumbermen.

DIVIDEND IS PASSED

In an interview this afternoon, Edward Hines, president of the Virginia & Rainy Lake Lumber company, stated that owing to the present unfavorable conditions of the lumber market, which caused the Rainy Lake company to sell some of its stock at a price below that which the officers had counted upon, the company would declare no dividend this year.

"The present year is one of the worst experienced in the lumber business," said Mr. Hines. "Owing to the agitation to remove the lumber tariff, which has led many consumers to expect that cheaper lumber will come from Canada, the price upon lumber is very low, and there is also a stagnation in the lumber market. The retailers are not buying, and what lumber they are buying they are getting at a very reduced cost.

"It is the worst year the Rainy Lake company or the interests that compose it have ever known. The company has not done the business that it expected. The outlook at this time is not very bright. The uncertainty as to what will be done in the matter of the lumber tariff may be said to account for the dullness in the lumber business. The lumber dealers are not buying ahead. There is a light demand for lumber, and to say that the market is in a stagnant condition does not exaggerate the situation. The outlook is anything but favorable.

"The railroad companies are not building any cars at the present time. This is in view of the fact that there is some expectation that the lumber tariff will be removed or revised, which will mean that a great quantity of lumber will come to this country from Canada by the water route, which would result in the reduction of the freight traffic of the railroads of this country."

WINDSOR TO BE REPAIRED

C. E. Henderson, owner of the Windsor hotel property, corner of Superior street and Fifth avenue west, which was partially destroyed by fire, took out a permit from Building Inspector Kielley today for the repair of the east half of the structure, which is the hotel proper.

Nothing will be done in the way of repairing the west half of the property, but in three years, at the expiration of a lease on the Windsor hotel, Mr. Henderson, it is said, will erect an eight-story building upon the corner. It will be of brick and stone construction, and will be another step towards the extermination of the old bowery.

Repairs on the east half of the property will cost $1,200. The board of fire commissioners, in company with Mr. Kielley, examined the fire-damaged property a few days ago, and found that there were two separate and distinct buildings upon the land in question. One building is situated on Lot 82, Block 2, Duluth Proper, Third division, and the other on the east half of Lot 84, Block 2, same division. They found that the easterly half of the buildings is not sufficiently damaged so that the board and building inspector would be warranted in declining to grant a permit for the repair of same, but that the westerly building is damaged so as to be practically a total loss, making it possible for the board and building inspector to withhold permission for the granting of a permit for its repair, as it is of wood construction, and located within the fire limits of the city.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

GHOSTS OF PUGILISM

John L. Sullivan Will Resurrect "Dead Ones" at Seattle.

Old Timers Will Don Gloves Once More at Exposition.

Seattle, Feb. 3.—Having dipped generously into about everything else, John L. Sullivan is about to launch himself into occultism.

The one time champion of all the "champs" is planning a resurrection, or a materialization, or some other psychic stunt and as a result of it, declares he, the pugilistic ghosts of other days, will be conjured to do their turn for a little time, as they did it in the days of the greensward and the skin tight glove.

It is these ghostly shadows of the past that Sullivan would bring back into the theater of events, that present generations may see what manner of man it was fought when nothing save pistols was barred, and the anvil was considered a legitimate weapon of offense.

It is in Seattle that Sullivan plans this wholesale resurrection of the dead ones. He has arranged with the directorate of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition for a concession on the "Pav Streak" and there he will set up a ring of the old days—not a ring with a velvet carpet on the floor and a lot of sofa pillows stuck around, but a real turf ring, with a rock or two here and there to make it feel homelike—and with the four posts jerked from a farmers fence, with the nails left in them. There will be none of your cosy corners, says John L., for either principals or seconds.

And through the ropes will go those pugs of the other day and some of a later day, who still were fighters, for Kid Lavigne will be among those present and there is none to say he was not a grand little man, who took the gaff and liked it when it came his way.

Charley Mitchell, traditional rival of the Boston lad, is in with Sullivan on the deal and stranger things could happen than that they two should get together in the late autumn of their careers to settle that long mooted question.

Sullivan has also pulled Jake Kilrain out of the never never land, and Peter Maher, champion of Ireland, it is announced will repeat that celebrated Mexican experience of his. Joe Choynski, one of the greatest of the old ones, who still lays claim to a punch will be another, and there is many a man today in fistiana who remembers the time Choynski and Jim Corbett went up San Francisco bay on a barge to have it out.

"I forgot my gloves," said Joe when the barge came to an anchor.

"Take these," said Corbett, "and cut the fingers off them," and he pulled from his pocket a pair of driving gloves with beautifully sewed silk welts down the backs of them. An hour later these same welts had made the banks clerk's face looked like an unimproved hamburger steak. It was only the foolish or uninformed who after that said Corbet had the streak in him.

That Corbet will be one of them, may not be said, for, he is now talking of tearing Jack Johnson's head off and throwing it in his face, and it is not seemly that ghosts should talk like that.

But if Corbett isn't, the rest of the old guard will be, an even score of them, and it will be such a show as will touch the hearts of the right ones, and be a lesson to these today chaps who settle their differences with cream puffs at twenty paces.

Annual Affair Is This Year Creating Much Interest.

Nome, Alaska, Feb. 3.—Nome's annual dog race, the all-Alaska sweepstakes, which has become known as a sporting classic, will be run this year over an 800-mile course, from Fairbanks to Nome, instead of the 400-mile route originally planned. This is the latest scheme of the sport lovers of Nome, who have offered a $10,000 prize to the winner and $5,000 more in smaller prizes.

Last year the sweepstakes was run from Nome to Candle and return, a 400-mile jaunt which occupied five days and was traveled by the racing dog teams in a fierce blizzard. The plan to race from Fairbanks to Nome would involve a ten days' trip over snow and ice, most of it on the frozen bosom of the Yukon. The trail is a good one, and, barring storms, the journay might be made by the racers in nine days, or a little less.

All of the big dog-owners of the North will have teams in the race, and many of them are conducting regular training stables here this winter, some having scores of dogs from which to pick a team of ten or twelve for the big race. The date of the canine derby is April 1. The winning team, in addition to the big cash prize, will leave Nome on the first boat in the summer and be exhibited at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition in Seattle.

OUT-POINTED BY ENGLISH CHAMP

Freddie Welsh Given the Decision Over George Memsic.

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.—Fred Welsh, lightweight champion of England outpointed George Memsic in a ten round bout at the Pacific Athletic club in this city last night. Memsic was the aggressor, pushing the Englishmen to the ropes several times but was unable to land a knockout blow.

Welsh used his cleverness to advantage to avoid the blows of the Streator lad. He contented himself with landing light lefts to face and rights to the body. The Englishman did not appear to be extending himself at any time and seldom did any damage.

In the preliminary Frank Sullivan outpointed Young Dougherty of St. Louis.

Women Enter Race.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 3.—Two entries have been received for the Woman's Track automobile race, scheduled for the Mardi Gras speed carnival here Feb. 20, 21 and 22. They are Mrs. Joann Newton Cuneo of Richmond Hill, N. Y., and Miss Alice Porter of Elgin, Ill. It is said this will be the first event of the kind in the automobile racing.

COACH RICE MAY QUIT COLUMBIA

But Little Interest in Rowing at New York College.

New York, Feb. 3.—Unless the students of Columbia university take more interest in their crew, Coach James C. Rice threatens to retire. "What's the use of wasting the boys' time and money?" says Rice in a statement, "with only two dozen candidates appearing for practice on the machines?"

A year ago this time more than 100 boys reported for crew work, but the lack of interest has become so alarming this year that a mass meeting has been called for Friday, at which all the available crew material will be urged to come forward.

WILL MAROONS PLAY "PENNSY?"

Reports Say Quaker Football Authorities Want Game With Chicago.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Maroon rooters see the chance of a football contest with the University of Pennsylvania as the result of Director Stagg's announcement that the athletic officials of the Eastern university had approached him with the desire of learning his attitude toward scheduling a game with the eleven for next fall. Stagg stated that when he was in the East last Thanksgiving at the Pennsylvnia-Cornell contest, he was approached by one of the high authorities of the Quaker institution, who suggested a game between his athletes with the Maroons.

While Coach Stagg did not say that the Pennsylvania representatives had made a formal request for a contest, he admitted the Quaker officials were keenly in favor of one.

FRANK CHANCE GETTING IN LINE

Cub Manager Gradually Working Back Into the Game.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Something definite at last has been heard from Manager Frank Chance, and, although not vital to the main point at issue—his playing with the Cubs next season—it is a straw that may indicate the direction of his intentions.

In a letter to Manager Murphy, the balking manager gives his hearty approval to the proposed exhibition game between Anson's Colts and the second string of the world's champions on the West side grounds, provided the veteran will use only eligible men on his team.

Canadians Win Again.

Glasgow, Feb. 3.—The Canadian curlers scored another victory yesterday, defeating twelve rinks from Stirlingshire and Forth and Endrick provinces. The Canadians had a total of 211 at the end of the contest and the Scotchmen 155.

MARATHON BUG AT UNIVERSITY

Fifty Athletes Are Getting Ready for the Big Event.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 3.—The Marathon bug has reached the University of Minnesota, and students, under the direction of Track Coach Richard Grant, have laid plans for the running of the classic race as soon as the outdoor varsity track is secured for spring practice. Fifty athletes who have competed in former varsity meets believe that they can meet the grueling requirements of the long race, and many have commenced training on the indoor track in the university gymnasium. Coach Grant has drilled the men in distance running since he assumed control of track athletics at Minnesota last fall, and the creditable time made by the students in the five-mile endurance run, the first ever held at the University of Minnesota, paved the way for the proposed longer run.

 OLDEST NEGRO MINSTREL DIES ***

Boston, Feb. 3.—The death is announced of Charles H. Atkinson, said to have been the oldest negro minstrel in the United States, aged 72. He was famed as a ballad singer.

MACRAE WINS FROM BRADLEY

Final Game in Vice President's Event is a Close Contest.

By a score of 12 to 11 Macrae's rink last night won the final game in the vice president's event from the rink skipped by E. N. Bradley.

The game required an extra head and was close and exciting throughout. Many good shots were made and the contest was watched wit hinterest by a large crowd.

At the end of the twelfth head the score stood 11 to 11, and was either side's game, as both sides played well, and one shot might have turned the contest either way. At the close of the contest both teams were loudly cheered.

Thursday evening play in the St. Louis event begins. This event will be played in regular bonspiel style, and is creating much interest.

The rinks last night were:

C. H. McLennan,	A. W. Withrow,
Royal Alworth,	Marshall Alworth,
Frank Frageau,	Ray Newell,
A. Macrae	E. N. Bradley,
skip—12.	skip—11.

Three games besides the big one were also played last night. Ron Smith defeated Sam Cleveland in a double-header in the president and Bagley events, 16 to 3; Hall beat Catlin 16 to 10, and Dinham beat Richardson 13 to 2 in the president's event.

A MISLEADING IMPRESSION.

By Showing Profits From Forest Conservation and Growing of Timber

To the Editor of The Herald:

In an article, which appeared in the Duluth Evening Herald of Jan. 25, it is made to appear that the forest conservation commission has been successful in growing timber and selling it. The report says:

"The forestry bureau does not sell all the timber that it can, it sells with an eye to future needs, rather than to an immediate realization of cash. Thus during the past year, while the sales were twice as great as ever before, they were restricted in many of the forests. The total amount of timber sold from the national forests during the past year was 392,792,000 feet board measure, as against 194,872,000 feet board measure for the previous year. In addition there was given away from the national forests 131,482,000 feet to settlers, schools and churches under 'free use' permits. The increase in amount sold is 102 per cent over 1907, and the national government received $849,047.24 for the timber so sold. Of this amounts 25 per cent will be paid to the states in which the forests from which the timber was cut, are located, such payment being in lieu of taxes. It is to be added to the several state funds for the support and maintainance of roads and schools."

An investigation should be made to ascertain the scope and authority under which the national conservation commission has the right to do all this kind of business. Where does it get authority to sell timber at less than $2.50 per thousand feet stumpage, and where does it get its authority to give away timber at wholesale? If the "free use" permits give them authority to give away 131,482,000 feet, then there is no limit to what they may give away, and peddle out in that way. Any law, or act of congress, that will permit the public domain to be slaughtered in that way ought to be repealed forthwith.

I think a bureau of forestry and a forest commission, composed of practical men who can go into the woods or forests and supervise the clearing up of all the inflammable refuse that might cause forest fires would be a great benefit to the nation, and by so doing, they could with safety plant young pine trees and in the course of fifty years time they would have merchantable timber for sale; but before planting young trees, I would advise the cutting and removal of all grown and mature timber from the land, and clearing the refuse from the land, thus insuring the growth of trees planted, but this giving the forest commission or any other bureau of forestry, unlimited authority over the public domain to carve out all of the best timbered lands in unlimited quantities and to sell the timber or give it away without respect to who it affects, is not a very good policy. Take, for instance, the fifty townships or more withdrawn from public entry in Northern Minnesota, where people are actively to work developing the northern part of the state and its resources taking up homesteads and building roads and entering and taking up lands under the timber and stone act.

This right by the stone and timber act has proved of inestimable value to thousands of poor people who have located claims, bringing into subjection the vast tracts of wilderness spread over the face of the northern part of the state of Minnesota. This wise land act induces the sturdy sons of toil to come out of the "house of bondage" in the densely crowded districts of the East, to create new homes in the regions of the West.

But now it is halted by the rulings of the general land office, or by the secretary of the department of the interior. This dog in the manger policy will do inestimable damage to the whole country. It will retard development and improvements in the northern part of this state, where practically all of the public domain has been withdrawn from public entry. There is something radically wrong about this conservation bureau of forestry, and it should be thoroughly investigated without delay, and see whereln they have overstepped the bounds of property. Respectfully submitted,

A. D. CUMMINGS,
Timber Cruiser and Explorer.

BRANDENBURG IS AFTER CASH

Then Wife Says He Will Return for Trial.

New York, Feb. 2.—A statement justifying his failure to respond to the calling of his name in court, to answer to the charge of grand larceny, is given out by Broughton Brandonburg, through his wife.

Brandonburg, who is wanted in connection with the selling to the New York Times of an article which he represented as having been written by the late Grover Cleveland, states that he is without funds with which to retain handwriting or other experts to refute the expert testimony to be offered by the prosecution.

As soon as he has obtained money enough to cover the cost of such expert testimony, he declares he will return and face trial.

New York, Feb. 3.—Horace Butler, member of one of the oldest families of Manhattan, died in Flower hospital yesterday from a bullet wound in the temple, inflicted by himself with suicidal intent in a room at the Hotel Roland, where he had registered under the name of Horace H. Bird.

Butler left ceveral letters in which he declared that the fear of going insane had driven him to his act of self-destruction.

S.S.S. CURES RHEUMATISM

This is just a short talk on Rheumatism, pointing out its causes and some of the reasons why so many fail to find a cure for this painful, and often far-reaching trouble.

No other disease is more persistent and discouraging than Rheumatism. Those persons in whose blood this painful ailment has taken root, often grow disheartened, and sometimes conclude there is no permanent cure. Patiently they have blistered and rubbed their aching joints and muscles with liniments, oils, etc., and faithfully taken potash and other mineral salts, only to find when the treatment is left off the disease returns, and usually with increased severity.

Rheumatism is due to an excess of uric acid, an irritating, inflammatory accumulation, which gets into the circulation because of weak kidneys, constipation, indigestion, and other physical irregularities which are usually regarded as of no importance. Nothing applied externally can ever reach this trouble, while potash and like mineral medicines really add to the acidity of the blood, and this vital fluid, therefore, continually grows more acrid, sour and weaker.

Rheumatism can never be cured until the blood is purified and built up. S. S. S. thoroughly cleanses and renovates the circulation by neutralizing the acids and expelling the foreign matter from the system. It strengthens and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, constantly depositing acrid and corrosive matter in the muscles, joints and bones, the entire body is nourished by rich, healthful blood, which completely and permanently cures Rheumatism. S. S. S. contains no potash, alkali, or any other harmful mineral, but is made entirely of blood-purifying and healing roots, herbs and barks which enrich and freshen the circulation while curing Rheumatism. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice furnished free to all who write. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

A GREAT SUFFERER FROM MUSCULAR RHEUMATISM.

Hopkinville, Ky.

Gentlemen: It is with pleasure I write to tell you of the wonderful cure I experienced from the use of S. S. S.

For over two years I suffered excruciating pains in the shoulders, caused by Muscular Rheumatism. I kept using liniments all the time, but the pains continued to increase. Finally I decided to try S. S. S., and after using several bottles had no more pain. To make sure, however, I continued to use your medicine so that my blood would be entirely purified. Although this was twelve years ago, I have never been troubled with rheumatism in any form since. I feel so indebted to S. S. S. that nothing I can say would be too high praise for it. With best wishes for the success of S S. S.

Yours truly,
209 Liberty St. C. E. WEST.

COULD NOT WALK FOR MONTHS.

Victoria, Texas.

In 1900 I had a severe attack of Rheumatism and my entire system was out of order. For months I was not able to walk. I tried other remedies without benefit and then commenced to take S. S. S. I took it for a while and saw that it was benefitting me and continued to use it until I was entirely cured of the Rheumatism. I was confined to an invalid chair for eight months at one time, but I have been absolutely free from pain since S. S. S. cured me. B. H. BORING.

REPEATED FAILURES, THEN RELIEF.

Mr. Wm. L. Hill, of Winston, N. C., at one time traveling salesman, and well known in North and South Carolina and Virginia, says: "Two years ago my blood was in a wretched condition, and in addition to other bodily ailments I suffered severely from Rheumatism. After repeated failures to secure relief from the use of other remedies I begun S. S. S., and it acted like a charm. The rheumatic pains left and my general health was built up as well. I have the highest opinion of S. S. S., for it is the only medicine that did me any good."

RHEUMATISM ALL GONE.

Mrs. Ida M. Palmer, of 196 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes as follows: "I wish you to know what great benefit I have received from the use of S. S. S. I have been afflicted with Rheumatism for twenty years, sometimes being entirely laid up by it and always lame in some part of my body. It grew worse until it was misery to attempt to walk at all; my right knee was nearly twice its natural size and was drawn up considerably shorter than the other one. A friend advised me to take S. S. S. which I commenced. I had tried so many things that I must say that I had very little faith that it would do me any good but I was willing to try anything that promised relief. Before I had been using it long I was greatly relieved, and continuing the medicine I soon found that I was entirely cured. The lameness and soreness all left, I can straighten, move or bend my leg as well as any one and I have never known what Rheumatism was since. I am 65 years old and feel deeply grateful to S. S. S."

DEMAND IS STEADIER

Wheat Is Well Bought in All of the American Markets.

May Flax is Up a Point at the Close Here.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 3.—Wheat was stronger today. Closing prices were more than a point higher than yesterday in several of the American markets. Values increased steadily from the first hour and the buying was active.

Coupled with the demand for wheat on this side of the Atlantic during the day, the foreign wheat markets were firmer. Liverpool closed unchanged to ⅛d higher, Berlin ⅜c lower, Budapest 1⅞c higher and Antwerp unchanged.

The May option closed 1⅛c higher in Duluth, New York and Winnipeg, 1⅛@1¼c higher in Chicago, ¾c higher in Minneapolis and ⅞c higher in St. Louis and Kansas City. May corn closed ⅝@¾c higher in Chicago and unchanged in Liverpool. May oats closed ⅜@½c higher in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat—The unexpected uneasiness in American markets yesterday and the increased American and Winnipeg receipts for a time stimulated larger offerings here and the market at the opening was quiet and ⅛d lower. Following the opening and during the morning, the market was well supported and values advanced ¼d to ⅜d. Spot markets were firm and the continued strength displayed in French country markets and also Mark Lane, caused shorts to cover. Another feature of the advance was the firmness of La Platte offerings and the fact that yesterday's sales of La Plata cargoes to Liverpool notwithstanding the advance, aggregated 15,005 tons. At mid-day the market was firm and from ⅛d to ¼d higher than yesterday.

"Corn was quiet and ⅜d lower at the opening in sympathy with America. The market, on the whole, was neglected."

Car receipts at Duluth were 9 against 55 last year, and at Minneapolis 176 against 183 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 185, against 238 las tyear. Chicago received 6, against 10 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 334,000 bus., last year 714,000 bu. Shipments 185,000 bu., last year 333,000 bu. Clearances of wheat and flour, 290,000.

Trading was active in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅛c higher at $1.07⅞, declined to $1.07⅝, rallied to $1.09, declined to $1.08¾ and closed there, a gain of 1⅛c over yesterday. July wheat was inactive and closed 1⅛c higher than yesterday, at $1.03⅞.

Durum wheat closed 1c higher and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was well bought and closed a point higher, for May. May flax opened unchanged at $1.59, went to $1.60, a gain of 1c over yesterday. July flax was inactive and closed 1c higher than yesterday at $1.60. October flax opened ¼c lower at $1.34, advanced to $1.34⅛ and closed at $1.34, a loss of ¼c from yesterday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Renewed Profit-Taking Causes a Moderate Weakness in Wheat.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Renewed profit taking by several of the leading holders caused moderate weakness in the wheat market here today, following slight firmness at the opening, when prices were unchanged to ⅜c higher, compared with the previous close. The volume of trade, however, was not large. A small advance in the price of wheat at Liverpool, despite the slump here yesterday, had a somewhat steadying influence. May opened at $1.05½@1.07⅝, sold off to $1.08¾ early in the day. Chicago, Minneapolis and Duluth reported receipts of 191 cars, compared with 164 last week and 248 cars the corresponding day a year ago.

Toward mid-day the market made a sudden spurt upward owing to lively competition by commission houses and local shorts for the moderate offerings in the pit. Demand was based chiefly on the strong cash situation in the Southwest. May advanced to $1.10. The market closed strong, with May up 1⅛c to 1¼c at $1.09⅝@¾.

Continued light receipts and a slight improvement in spring demand, created bullish sentiment in the corn market. Shorts and several of the leading bulls were moderate buyers. Prices at the start were a shade to ⅛@¼c higher. May opening at 63¼@63⅜c. For a time the price held within that range.

Additional strength developed later in the day owing to the bulge in wheat, May advancing to 64c. The close was strong, with May up ⅝@¾c at 63⅞c.

Oats were steady, owing to a fair demand by a leading elevator interest. Trade was quiet. May opened unchanged to a shade higher, at 51¾ to 51⅝@51⅞c, and sold at 51⅞c.

Provisions opened rather weak, because of a 10 to 20c decline in the price of hogs, but the market rallied a trifle early in the session on buying by local packers. Prices at the start were a shade higher to 5c lower.

Close: Wheat—May, $1.09⅝@¾; July, 98½@⅝c; September, 94½@⅝c; December, 95¼c. Corn—February, 60⅜c; May, 63⅞c; July, 63½@⅝c; September, 63⅜c. Oats—May, 52⅛@¼c; July, 46⅝c; September, 39⅛@⅜c. Pork—May, $17.05@17.07½; July, $17.12½. Lard—May, $9.67½@9.70; July, $9.80. Ribs—May, $8.95; July, $9.07½@9.10. Rye—Cash, 76½c; May, 78@79c. Barley—Cash, 61@67c. Timothy, March, $3.90. Corn—No. 2, 60¾@61½c; No. 3 yellow, 61¼@61½c; No. 4, 60½@¾c. Oats—No. 3 white, 50½@52¾c; No. 4 white, 47@51¼c.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

No Important Changes Registered in Wheat—Elevator Stocks Decrease.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 3.—Wheat did not make any important price changes during the first hour today, standing just about where it closed yesterday. Elevator stocks here decreased 25,000 bus for four days. Minneapolis got 176 cars against 183, Duluth, 9 against 55; Winnipeg 66 and 159. News began to come in about sales of wheat in Winnipeg made to Montreal, presumably for export. This lifted the market quickly and kept the tone very strong. May opened $1.08¼@⅜, high $1.08⅝@¾, low $1.08⅜, close $1.09⅜. July opened $1.08¾, high $1.09½, low $1.08@1.08⅛, close $1.09⅜. Good cash demand ruled and buyers paid 2c over May for the No. 1 northern, taking No. 2 freely at full May price. Millers bought more wheat. Close: No. 1 northern spot, $1.10¾, to arrive $1.10¾. No. 2 northern spot $1.08¾@1.09, to arrive $1.08¾. No. 3 wheat $1.06½@1.07¼. No. 3 yellow corn, 57¼@57¾c. No. 3 white oats, 49½@49⅞c. No. 2 rye, 71¼@72⅝c.

Barley receipts 30 cars, against 25; shipments, 45. Not much change in the market. Close: 50½@59½c.

Flax receipts 21 cars, against 38. Shipments, 2. About the same as yesterday. A few sales at ⅛@½c over Duluth May. Closes: $1.60¾.

Millstuffs shipments, 1,122 tons. Strong and active, as quoted by millers, with bulk bran $21.50@22.00.

Larger shipments reflected better flour business. Local and country mills found more doing and the general report was better, even though the gain in volume of business booked was not particularly large. Shipments, 54,489 barrels. First patents, $5.40@5.60; second patents, $5.25@5.40; first clears, $4.00@4.10; second clears, $2.85@3.10.

NEW JOB FOR EDWARD MANEY

Edward J. Maney, for the past several years private secretary and chief clerk to W. J. Olcott, president of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern road and vice president of the Oliver Iron Mining company, will leave the service of the United States Steel corporation, and will enter the employ of Thomas F. Cole, probably to look after some part of his copper mining interests.

Mr. Maney is at present in New York, as is also Mr. Cole, so details of Mr. Maney's business change could not be learned today. It is not known how soon he will begin his new duties.

Mr. Maney has been a familiar figure in the Steel corporation offices here for a number of years, and is very popular.

The election, at the annual meeting of the company held in New York yesterday, of Mr. Maney to the board of directors of the Giroux company, which recently passed into the control of the Cole-Ryan interests, suggests that Mr. Maney is to be prominently identified with the affairs of that corporation, which, it is understood, Mr. Cole is to direct from Duluth.

Whole List Reacted Under Profit-Taking in Final Hour.

New York, Feb. 3.—The opening movment of prices was irregular. The sharp advances in the copper industrials were the features. Utah Copper rose 1⅜, American Smelting, Tennessee Copper and Anaconda 1. Louisville & Nashville advanced 1½, Atlantic Coast Lines and American Cotton Oil 1 and Canadian Pacific and Missouri Pacific large fractions. Consolidated Gas declined ¾. Amalgamated Copper was late in its appearance on the tape and showed an advance of 1 on the first quotation.

Prices moved upward after momentary hesitation, caused by a drop of 1½ in Consolidated Gas. Buying of Rock Island preferred was on a rather large scale, but otherwise the demand was moderate. Western Maryland gaifide 2¾, General Chemical preferred 2, Erie first preferred 1½, and Rock Island preferred 1⅜.

The opening advance in the copper industrials was not extended.

The trading fell into semi-stagnation and prices became almost immovable. Bonds were firm.

Twin City Rapid Transit gained 1½ and Lackawanna 5. The whole list reacted under profit-taking in the final hour. Amalgamated Copper fell to a fraction below last night, Reading 1¼ and Toledo, St. Louis & Western 1.

FOUR NEW COMPANIES

Four new companies filed articles of incorporation with the register of deeds this morning. All are broad in their scope, the articles giving the right to buy and sell lands, improve property, conduct mercantile, lumbering or transportation business and giving other powers which they may assume under the statutes. All have their principal place of business in Duluth.

The Pembroke company is capitalized at $50,000, divided into 500 shares of the par value of $100 each. H. B. Fryberger, president; H. C. Fulton, vice president, and P. M. Martin, secretary ad treasurer, are the incorporators, directors and officers.

The Mallseet company is also capitalized at $50,000, divided into 500 shares of the par value of $100 each. H. B. Fryberger, president, H. C. Fulton, vice president and P. M. Martin, secretary and treasurer, are the incorporators, directors and officers.

The Kiltin Construction company is capitalized at $50,000, divided into 500 shares of $100 each, with H. B. Kiltin, president; W. A. Pond, vice president, and Herman Nyhus, secretary and and treasurer, are the incorporators, directors and officers.

The Modern Cement company is also capitalized at $50,000, divided into 500 shares of the par value of $100 each, and W. H. Kiltin, president; W. A. Pond, vice president, and Herman Nyhus, secretary and treasurer, are the incorporators, directors and officers.

AURORA MAN IS BADLY STABBED

Aurora, Minn., Feb. 3.—(Special to The Herald.)—Paul Oranzam, an Austrian, was quite badly cut Monday night over the heart with a knife in the hands of Frank Zuponicic, of the same nationality.

The knife severed one of the small arteries and it was thought for a while that the victim would not survive. Zuponcic had been on a drunk all day, and he and a partner started for Mohawk, where they were employed, at night. Near the mine they met Oranzam, and an argument took place in which Zuponcic did the cutting. The latter's partner at once sent for a doctor and the police, the quickness with which the former reached the wounded man probably being all that saved the case from being a murder. Chief of Police Witte caught Zuponcic entering the village a few hours later and he was released on bail of $200 to appear for hearing Friday.

Woodmen Strong Here.

R. R. Smith of Brookfield, Mo., one of the national directors of the Modern Woodmen of America, who is in Duluth today upon business connected with the local order, states that the insurance department of the Modern Woodmen received 140,000 new certificates last year. The society has 1,078,000 members at the present time and has 2,400 members in this city, according to the statement of Mr. Smith.

Minnesota is the sixth state in the jurisdiction of the society, which has forty-four states in its jurisdiction. The society pays out about $800,000 in insurance monthly. Mr. Smith says the insurance of the company is constantly growing and that it is upon a very solid basis at the present time.

GIVEN BALM FOR HIS BRUISES

The jury in the "grave yard" damage suit, which for the past two days has been the jest of superior court circles, this morning, after having deliberated over twenty-four hours, returned a verdict, which awarded the plaintiff, F. A. Sundberg, $14.50 damages.

It was alleged by Sundberg that one night about three months ago, after he and Bert Johnson, the sexton of a Superior cemetery, had taken a few nips from a friendly bottle, out among the tombstones, they quarreled. The quarrel ended in a fist fight, in which he, Sundberg, was badly worsted. He brought suit for $500 damages.

The verdict returned by the jury simply allowed him damages with which to pay the doctor bills, incurred while being treated for his bruises.

TRIAL WITHOUT JURY.

Superior Council Hears Ordinance Regarding Trial of Lawbreakers.

The Superior city council at its meeting last evening, gave first reading to an ordinance which provides that in all prosecutions for violations of the city ordinances, the trial shall be without jury. This proposed ordinance was referred to the ordinance committee.

The resignation of E. R. Smith, a member of the library board, was accepted, and the appointment of W. J. Leader, by the mayor to succeed Mr. Smith, was confirmed.

The board of public works was directed to take preliminary steps towards re-surfacing Hughitt avenue, between Third and Belknap streets.

A resolution providing for the paving of Lamborn avenue, between Third street and the Lamborn avenue bridge, was referred to the street committee.

The council also authorized the settlement of the Wisconsin Central road's 1906 and 1907 taxes, amounting to $9,149 for a cash payment of $7,000.

Banquet for Lenroot.

The Nemadji lodge, Knights of Pythias, will give a banquet this evening at the lodge rooms in the Odd Fellow's temple, in honor of Congresselect I. L. Lenroot.

Divorce Decree Granted.

Judge Smith in the superior court of Superior yesterday granted Barbara George a decree of divorce from Henry George, on the grounds of desertion and non-support. They were married in Superior, No. 26, 1906, and the plaintiff alleged that her husband left her a year later.

Approve Pension System.

The Superior board of education at its meeting last evening approved of a measure having for its object the extension of the teacher's pension system, so as to cover, the third and fourth-class cities, instead of the first-class only. The system only applies to Milwaukee, where teachers who have taught for twenty-five years may be retired on a pension, according to their salaries. The board also approved of a petition against the constitutional amendment raising the minimum school age rom 4 to 6 years.

Leon D. Balmat Dies.

Leon D. Balmat, aged 50 years old of 814 Tower avenue, died last night at the St. Francis hospital. He was one of the early residents of Superior and is survived by a mother and sister, residing at Fergus Falls, Minn. He also leaves two other sisters, one living at Spokane, Wash., and the other in Colorado.

Valuable Trainload.

A train load of steel rails worth at their destination approximately $50,000, yesterday passed through Superior over the Great Northern road on its way from Sault Ste. Marie to Phomeros, B. C.

TO PUT WIRES UNDERGROUND

Members of the board of public works this morning visited the Sixty-second avenue west slip, which is is proposed to widen and lengthen for city purposes, with a view to fixing the valuations of lands that must be purchased by the city in order to carry out the undertaking.

The board is holding a meeting this afternoon with representatives of local telegraph, telephone and lighting companies, in regard to the proposition of placing all wires in underground conduits between Ninth and Twenty-fourth avenues east on Superior street. It is understood all the companies are willing to make the improvement.

ALLEGED FRAUD ON PART OF GOULD AND HARRIMAN.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—Charging fraud against the Chicago & Alton, the Baltimore & Ohio and Messrs. Gould, Harriman and Stillman, the intervening petition of the minority stockholders of the Chicago Terminal Transfer company came up for a hearing before Judge Kohlsaat in United States circuit court today. It is alleged that in 1905 the terminal mortgaged its property, including a lease by the Baltimore & Ohio for $15,000,000 at 6 per cent to form a new company to build a line from Chicago to St. Louis.

It is asserted that Gould and his associates, fearing competition against the Alton by the new road, secured control of the stock of the new company and so manipulated its affairs that it could not pay interest on the mortgage. Then the Baltimore & Ohio, two years ago, filed a motion to foreclose the mortgage. The intervening petition, hearing on which began today, was filed a year later.

PATTERSON VETOES ANTI-INTOXICANT BILL.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 3.—Governor Patterson today sent to the senate a message vetoing the bill prohibiting the manufacture of intoxicants after Jan. 1, 1910. The message, in part, says:

"If this legislature shall destroy the distillerics and breweries, why cannot the next legislature forbid the raising or the selling of grains or the cultivating of the grape out of which spirituous, malt or vine liquors are made?

"Shall this or some future legislature prevent the farmer from raising or selling tobacco or the manufacturer from placing it on the market? If we are thus started, where shall we end?"

CERTIFICATE OF INCORPORATION —OF—
JOHN WAHL CANDY COMPANY.

We, the undersigned, do hereby associate ourselves together for the purpose of forming a corporation under the constitution of the State of Minnesota, and the provisions of Chapter 58 of the Revised Laws of Minnesota of 1905, and the acts amendatory thereof, and for that purpose have agreed upon, and hereby adopt and sign, the following certificates of Articles of Incorporation:

ARTICLE I.

The name of the corporation shall be "John Wahl Candy Company," and its principal place of business shall be at Duluth, Minnesota. The general nature of the business to be carried on shall be the buying, selling and trading in all kinds of personal property, and the manufacturing of all kinds of personal property capable of being manufactured, and particularly the manufacturing of all kinds of candies and other confectionery, and the conducting of a general wholesale and jobbing business in all kinds of merchandise, and the owning, holding and disposing of stock in other corporations, and of the doing of all of the above either in its own behalf or as the agent of other corporations or persons.

ARTICLE II.

The time of the commencement of said corporation shall be February 15th, 1909, and the period of its duration shall be thirty years.

ARTICLE III.

John Wahl, Hans Wahl and William J. Stevenson, all residents of the City of Duluth, Minnesota, are the Incorporators and shall constitute the first Board of Directors. The management of said corporation shall be vested in its Board of Directors. An annual meeting at which said Board of Directors shall be elected, shall be held on the 3rd Monday in February at the principal place of business of the corporation.

ARTICLE IV.

The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000), the same to be paid on the call of the Board of Directors. Said stock shall be divided into four hundred (400) shares of common stock of the par value of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each, and one hundred shares of preferred stock of the par value of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each. The preferred stock shall be entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of seven per cent (7 per cent) per annum, payable semi-annually on or before the fifteenth days of February and August of each year, for the six months next preceding the first days of said months. Such dividends shall be paid out of the net earnings of the corporation in preference to any dividends on the common stock thereof, but said preferred stock shall not be entitled to any further dividends or share in the earnings of said corporation.

In the event of the liquidation or winding up of the affairs of said corporation, whether voluntary or involuntary, the Preferred Stock then outstanding shall be paid off at par with all accrued dividends or apportionate fraction thereof, earned by the partial lapse of a dividend period, from the assets of the corporation before any payment therefrom upon the Common Stock of said corporation, and after such payment at par, and accrued dividends, said Preferred Stock shall not be entitled to any further share in or payment from such assets.

The holder or holders of such Preferred Stock shall not be entitled to vote said stock at any stockholders' meeting unless the payment of dividends on such stock at the times and at the rate herein provided shall have been suspended or be in default, and such default or suspension shall have continued for sixty days after the same became due and payable as herein provided, but in case of such suspension or default the holders of such stock shall have the same voting right and power as the holders of the Common Stock until such suspension has been terminated and such default cured, but no longer.

The corporation by a vote of a majority of its Board of Directors may pay off, redeem or cancel all or any part of said Preferred Stock and return the same to the treasury of said company for future issuance, which payment and redemption may be made upon any dividend date by giving thirty days' written notice thereof to the record owner of said stock by the payment of the par value thereof together with all dividends accrued, provided, however, that in case less than the whole amount of the outstanding Preferred Stock is so paid and returned to the treasury at any one time, the Preferred Stock so paid and recalled shall be ratably apportioned among the several holders of such Preferred Stock unless all of the holders thereof agree among themselves as to the stock so to be returned and produce as evidence of such agreement a written memorandum thereof. Said Preferred Stock that has so been returned to the treasury may be issued, returned and reissued as herein provided upon the determination of the Board of Directors.

The Preferred Stock in this corporation shall not be increased at any time without the consent of all of the holders of the then existing and outstanding Preferred Stock.

ARTICLE V.

The highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which the corporation shall at any time be subject is Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000). The other officers of the corporation shall be elected by and from the Board of Directors and shall consist of the President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, and the offices of President and Treasurer may be held by the same person. Until the first meeting of said corporation, and until their successors are elected and qualified, said John Wahl shall be the President and Treasurer, and said Hans Wahl shall be the Secretary, and said William J. Stevenson shall be the Vice President.

WEST END NEWS

WILL LAST THIRD WEEK

Scandinavian Churches' Union Services Strike a Popular Chord.

All Ministers Practically Decide to Extend the Time.

So successful have been the union revival services held under the auspices of four Scandinavian churches in the West end, that it has been practically decided to continue them all of next week, although the series was to have ended Sunday afternoon.

The attendance at every meeting has been very gratifying to the pastors, and they are anxious to have them extend over another week, if the interest continues.

Last night's services were held in the First Norwegian-Danish church and the sermon was preached by Rev. C. O. Nelson of the Mission church This evening, the meeting will be held in the First Swedish church and Rev. A. Edstam of the Baptist church will preach.

At the Swedish Baptist church tomorrow evening, Rev. Edwin Stromberg of the Swedish Methodist church will preach. The service Friday evening will be at the Swedish Mission church and Rev. H. K. Madsen will be the preacher.

No meeting will be held Saturday night, but a big mass meeting will be held Sunday afternoon in the Swedish Mission church. The principal sermon will be delivered by Rev. Edwin Stromberg and the other clergymen will give short talks.

Successor Not Yet Named.

No successor has been named as yet to Rev. J. Wilfrid Loughridge, pastor of the Central Baptist church, who resigned some time ago. Mr. Loughridge agreed to stay until the church could secure the services of a suitable minister to replace him, but that has not been done as yet

It is understood that when Mr. Loughridge does leave Duluth he will go into evangelistic work, as he has always had a liking for that branch of the ministry.

Annual Installation.

The annual installation of officers of Duluth Observatory, N. 39, of the North Star Benefit association, will be held this evening in Sloan's hall. The function will also be in the nature of a reception and all the members, their families and friends will be present.

The installation will be in charge of H. T. Lofgren, state deputy for the lodge.

The officers were elected in December.

West End Shortrails.

Miss Amy Gordon of Chisholm is visiting friends in the West end.

The debating team of the Emerson School Alumni association, which held a meeting last evening, is anxious for a debate with the Adams school alumni team.

The Adams school alumni is planning to give a dance. A committee to make arrangements will meet this evening at the home of Miss Myrtle Cox, 1713 West First street.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Swedish Baptist church is in session this afternoon, with Mrs. A. Edstam, at the parsonage.

The basket ball team of the Young Men's Sodality of St. Clement's Catholic church will play the Carpenter school alumni team in Superior this evening. The match will take place on the Wisconsin side of the bay.

Dr. Larson's new residence on Twenty-third avenue west, between Superior and First streets, is nearing completion.

The boys of the Ski Club of Grace M. E. church are organizing a basket ball team and will arrange for games with the Adams alumni, Emerson alumni and St. Clement's Sodality teams.

The lady visitors of the Second Presbyterian church are meeting this afternoon with Mrs. Sinclair of West Third street.

The Bema club held its regular meeting last evening in Dr. Oredson's office. The members are talking of giving another one of the club's famous banquets this month.

Owing to the fact that both the Republican aldermanic candidates in the Sixth and Seventh wards were defeated, the West End Republican club will not give the turkey spread the members had in mind in the event of favorable election returns.

The Epworth League of the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church will give Lincoln's centennial entertainment in the church on the evening of Feb. 12. J. L. McBride, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, will be one of the principal speakers.

Frank Hellerstad, who sprained his ankle last week, is now able to walk, with the aid of a cane.

The Kabibinacka club will hold a smoker at the home of Helmer Otterson on the evening of Feb. 11.

Harry Murray has gone to Tower to make his home. His loss will be felt in Adams alumni athletic circles.

CONVICTED OF BURGLARY

George Colonich Is Found Guilty in District Court.

George Colonich, charged with burglary in the third degree, was convicted by a jury in district court yesterday afternoon. Immediately following Colonich's trial, Peter Backus, who was indicted on a joint indictment with Colonich, was put on trial on he same charge.

Colonich and Backus were both employed at the Mariska mine at Gilbert last fall. A few days before Dec. 1 they were discharged, and on Dec. 1 the dryhouse of the mine was burglarized and a quantity of clothing taken. A sweater taken from the dryhouse was found on Colonich when he was arrested, and several other articles were found in Backus' room.

Admiral Barnett Retires.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Rear Admiral William J. Barnett, superintendent of the naval observatory in Washington, was transferred to the retired list yesterday by reason of age.

OVERCOME BY COAL GAS

Woman Is Unconscious When Rescued by Her Neighbors.

Entire Family Is Endangered in the West End.

Gas escaping from a coal stove nearly asphyxiated Mrs. Walter H. Ebel of 1828½ West First street last night, and she probably owes her life to the fact that neighbors smelled the fumes, burst into her apartment and dragged her out.

In the flat with Mrs. Ebel were two children, a baby 3 weeks old and a 1-year-old child, and her sister, a young girl of 15. They had not yet fallen under the influence of the gas, but Mrs. Ebel was in a serious condition.

When the neighbors entered the Ebel flat, Mrs. Ebel was unconscious. The air was heavy with the poisonous coal gas and she had evidently inhaled it for quite a while. The children were also beginning to feel the effects.

Had not the fumes of the gas got into the halls and atracted the attention of the neighbors, Mrs. Ebel and other members of her house would probably have been suffocated. She was soon restored to consciousness after being taken to better air. Today, except for a dizziness, she is completely recovered.

Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a Civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, 'that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." For severe colds, obstinate coughs, hemorrhages, asthma, and to prevent pneumonia it's unrivaled. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

No Agreement Reached by the St. Louis County Delegation.

Highway Commission Bill Advocated by C. P. Craig and Others.

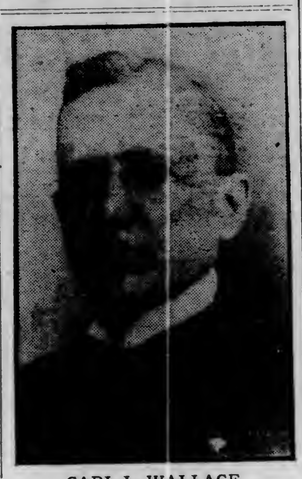

Opposition to Bill for Another Judge in Fifteenth District.

(From a Staff Correspondent.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Part of the iron range representatives having declared themselves as being unalterably opposed to the compromise judgeship bill produced by a committee of Duluth and iron range attorneys, it was impossible to reach an agreement over the matter at yesterday afternoon's session of the St. Louis county delegation, and at a late hour, after a debate which came near being heated at times, the delegation adjourned until this afternoon, when the subject will be taken up again.

John G. Williams, in behalf of the committee which prepared the compromise bill, which has already been described in The Herald, presented it to the delegation. He stated that after earnest consideration it was decided that it would be best to relieve the congested business of the district court and at the same time meeting the needs of the iron range people, by adding an additional district judge and providing four general terms of court each year at Virginia. This bill was Married After Thirty-Mile Auto Ride Through the Mud.

JAMIE RAY WEDS AN ACTRESS

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 4.—Miss Leslie Richard Preston, member of the Belasco Stock company, and Jamie Ray, globe trotter, violinist, cowboy, prospector, actor and son of the millionaire, Robert C. Ray of Palto Alto, Cal. and Duluth, Minn., were married at 4:15 o'clock Tuesday morning in the parlor of the Rosemore hotel at Santa Ana, the Gretna Green of Los Angles.

Miss Leslie was perhaps the most surprised person at the wedding, and the ceremony came after an automobile ride of thirty miles from this city to Santa Ana, during which the machine was three times stuck in the mud, requiring the services of a farmer and a pair of horses to enable the bridal party finally to reach its destination.

Jamie Ray belongs to one of the oldest families in Duluth, his grandfather, the late James D. Ray, having been one of the pioneers of the city. Robert C. Ray, his father, left Duluth a few years ago and spent several years abroad with his family. They now reside in California in the winter. James, his son, who is reported to have married an actress, is about 25 or 26 years of age. Jamie, as he has been familiarly known, is an accomplished musician and studied the violin in Germany under the best teachers.

ADMISSION BY BJORGE

That No Mining State in the Union Has Tonnage Tax.

House Committee Favors $50 License for Railroad Buffet Cars.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house committee on taxes and tax laws had its first hearing on the tonnage tax proposition last night, and the chief speaker was H. O. Bjorge of Lake Park, author of two of the pending bills. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the hearing was the admission by Mr. Bjorge that no other mining state in the Union, so far as he knows, is using the tonnage tax system of taxation, and that the two states that once adopted it—Pennsylvania on coal and Michigan on iron—are neither of them using this method now.

Mr. Bjorge explained his graduated tax bill at length, stating that he intended it as a substitute for his former bill for a 5-cent tax on all ores containing 49 per cent of iron and over. He made this change because he discovered a wide variation in the values of the ores, and he made the iron con-

Newark, N. J., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Mary J. Wilhelm, widow of Frank Wilhelm, who was murdered in his home Monday night, is in a condition of nervous collapse today, after an unusually severe application of the "third degree," including a midnight visit to the morgue, where she was suddenly confronted by the body of her husband.

The police expected to obtain some kind of a statement from her, but they were unsuccessful, for when the sheet which covered her husband's body was suddenly removed she became hysterical, fell to her knees and frantically declared her love for her husband. As her hysteria increased Mrs. Wilhelm

RUNS THEATER DESPITE EDICT

Chinaman's Playhouse Is Raided, Shots Are Exchanged.

Amoy, China, Feb. 4.—Serious complications are likely to ensue as the result of the raiding of a theater run by a Chinaman, who is a Spanish subject, in defiance of the imperial mourning edict, which followed the recent death of the emperor and empress dowager. The theater was raided by the police and a riot followed. Several shots were exchanged and two mem of the police force are missing. The authorities charge they were killed and their bodies concealed.

PROBE NETS BUT LITTLE

Senate Committee's Work, Delving Into Steel Merger, Fruitless.

Seemingly Nothing to Warrant Permission or Forbiddance.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The special committee of the senate committee on judiciary which is investigating the Tennessee Coal & Iron absorption by the United States Steel corporation, expects to meet great difficulties in preparing a reply to the senate resolution providing for the inquiry.

Although a number of bankers who were supposed to know all about the details of the purchase of the Tennessee company by the Steel corporation have explained to the committee their participation in the transaction, nothing has been brought out which disputes President Roosevelt's contention that there was nothing proposed with which he found it incumbent upon him to interfere.

The resolution calls upon the committee to report what was the president's authority for permitting the merger. Nothing has been found by the committee which seems to warrant the president in giving consent to the absorption nor anything which seems to demand that he should have forbidden the merger. Some of the members of the committee, in discussing the case informally today, suggested that it would have been wisdom for the president to advise Judge Gary and Mr. Frick to consult their lawyers instead of submitting the proposition to him.

In summing up the evidence presented, several lawyers in the senate have said it appears to them the party of sixteen financiers who obtained control of the majority of the stock were systematically "squeezed" during the panicky days of October and November, 1907. Senator Culberson has sought to show that the stocks were especially "pounded" in the "street" by people interested in the so-called Morgan banks.

It is possible no report whatever will be made to the senate in response to the Culberson resolution. So many legal questions are involved that it is predicted a long discussion would result from any attepmt to determine whether the president had proceeded in wrongful manner. His communication to the senate suggests that the only action taken by him was to say thathe saw no reason why he should interfere to prevent the merger. This

FLAMES OUST CHORUS GIRLS IN SCANT APPAREL.

New York, Feb. 4.—Two hundred guests of the Hotel Albany, Broadway and Forty-first street, were driven from their rooms early today by a fire in the adjoining four-story building occupied by the Trigolette restaurant.

The guests, including theatrical performers and chorus girls from several companies playing at the Broadway theaters, assembled in the lobby of the hotels bringing a motley assortment of valuables and clad in night clothing.

LID IS PUT ON OPTION

House Rejects County Option Bill by an Overwhelming Vote.

North Dakota Men May Go on Grain Appeal Boards.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house killed the county option bill this morning and nailed down the lid on its coffin. Never in the history of the county option movement has legislation of this measure proceeded so rapidly, and seldom, if ever, has its defeat been more overwhelming. Night before last, the house committee on temperance voted 10 to 5 to indefinitely postpone the bill, and this morning the report to that effect was presented by Chairman Mackenzie of the committee,

JURY LIST NOT TAMPERED WITH

Judge Makes Denial in the Carmack Murder Case.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 4. — When court opened today for the purpose of drawing a new venire for the trial of Col. Duncan B. Cooper, Robin J. Cooper and John D. Sharp for the murder of Former Senator Carmack, Judge Hart said:

"There have been intimations in the press that the jury list has been tampered with. I wish to say that the jury box from which the names are drawn is in the custody of Circuit Clerk Lewis Hitt. The names in it were placed there two years ago. It remains sealed and is controlled by Hitt, who was Carmack's campaign manager. I make this statement in justice to every one concerned."

Judge Hart seemed to feel deeply the insinuation that there was an effort to get men on the panel friendly to the defendants. Very few, if any, in the room had heard of such a charge, which was sent to the judge in the form of a clipping from an out of town paper. The court then drew the new venire and sent for Juror Whitworth, who was asked to explain his remark that he was against Governor Patterson. He said:

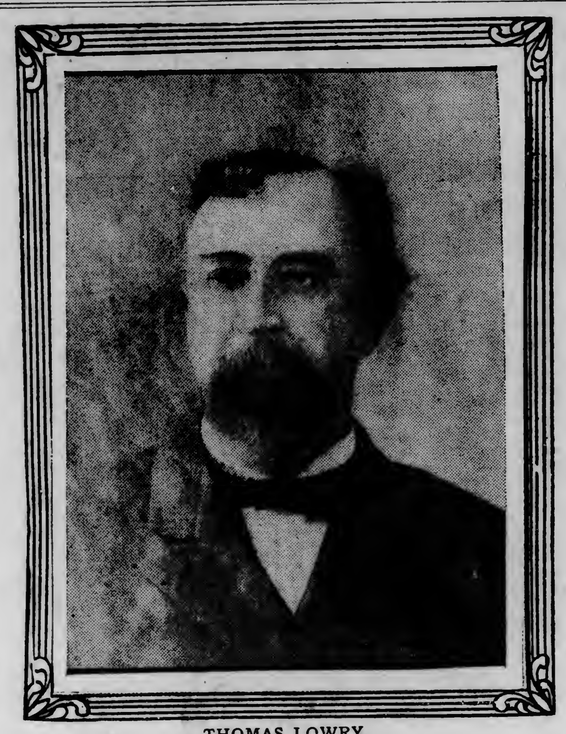

"I said I was against him because of his abuse of the pardoning power and for turning criminals loose."

PERE MARQUETTE NOT TO BE SOLD

President Cotter Denies Story Affecting the Canadian Pacific.

Detroit, Mich., Feb 4.—"So far as known," said President William Cotter of the Pere Marquette today, "there is no ground for the report that the Pere Marquette system is to be sold to the Canadian Pacific, to be used as a link in a transcontinental line from Detroit to the Pacific. I have just come from New York and I am free to say that there is absolutely nothing in it. Of course, the geographical position of the Pere Marquette system, lying as it does between the Canadian Pacific and the Wisconsin Central systemsfi, recently reported acquired by the Canadian Pacific, makes it naturally the subject for guesses of those who are figuring on possibilities, but so far as I know there is no ground for the report that the Pere Marquette is to be sold.'

THOMAS LOWRY DIES OF TUBERCULOSIS, FOLLOWING ILLNESS OF THREE YEARS

THOMAS LOWRY.

Principal Owner of Duluth Traction Expires in Minneapolis.

Abandoned Practice of Law to Direct Street Car Systems.

A Widow, Son and Two Daughters Survive Him.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thomas Lowry, president of the Twin City Rapid Transit railway and principal owner of the Duluth-Superior Traction company, also president of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railway, died at 8:40 o'clock this morning. He had been the victim of a lingering illness for three years.

Mr. Lowry had been a sufferer from tuberculosis of the lungs for several years and during the last year had had several bad spells, when at times his death was momentarily expected.

Born in Illinois.

Thomas Lowry was born on a farm in Logan county, Illinois, Feb. 27, 1843. His father, Samuel R. Lowry, a native of Londonderry, Ireland, emigrated to America when a young man and located in Pennsylvania. Here he married Miss Rachel Bullock, a native of Harrisburg, who died in early womanhood. The father, by his energy and industry, acquired a fair competence, and, in 1834, removed to the West, traveling from Pittsburg to Springfield, Ill., on horseback. In 1849 Samuel R. Lowry removed to Schuyler county, Illinois, where he at once took front rank among the leading men of that part of the state. It was in this new home that the boy Thomas began

MEET TO PRAISE INDICTED MEN

Sixty Muskogee Merchants Deplore Action of Grand Jury.

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 4.—Sixty leading business men of Muskogee held a business meeting last night that lasted until early today, to discuss the seven indictments returned by the grand jury in the government's town lot investigation. The meeting was presided over by Mayor Martin. Expressions of confidence in the high standing, integrity and honor of the indicted men were made, and a committee of seven was appointed to correct what was termed as erroneous impression as to the legality of land titles existing in Muskogee and Eastern Oklahoma.

More details came today regarding the indictments. The first indictment returned, that against Governor Haskell, Clarence W. Turner and Walter R. Eaton, alleged forty-seven overt acts in alleged conspiracy to defraud the government. The third indictmemrt was against Albert Z. English, Frederick B. Severs and Jesse W. Hill, and alleged ninety-two overt acts in conspiracy.

ANTI-JAP BILLS LOST

The California Legislature Refuses to Take Drastic Action.

Hope for All the Measures Vanishes With Drew's.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 4.—With the defeat of the Drew bill in the assembly yesterday, all hope of passing any of the anti-Japanese measures has been practically abandoned. One of the remarkable features of the defeat of the bill was the fact that it was accomplished in the face of an audience of 2,000 people, who wildly applauded every anti-Japanese sentiment. Both sides made dramatic appeals to the packed galleries and in one of these C. C. Coghlan, a San Francisco assemblyman, who was an opponent of the bill, made a bitter attack on the Japanese. His opposition was based on the plea that the bill would be harmful to labor by driving capital away.

Governor Gillette was highly pleased with the action of the assembly. It is expected he will now proceed with the measure which is designed to obtain an exact census of the Japanese in

DROP POLITICS ON LINCOLN DAY

Both Parties Will Join Hands for Kentucky Celebration.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 4.—Both political parties have united in connection with the Lincoln centenary, in Hodgenville, Ky., Feb. 12, when President Roosevelt will speak. NORWEGIAN BOAT MAY HAVE SUNK

No Word Is Received From the Overdue Munin.

New York, Feb. 4.—Funch, Edeye & Co., New York agents of the Norwegian steamer Munin, which sailed from New York on Jan. 26 for Darien said today that they have had no word from the Munin since she left port. She was in ballast and carried no passengers, but had a crew of twenty-five. Asked if there was a probability that Munin was the steamer which went down off Diamond Shoal lightship last week they said it was possible.

The Munin was built at Lubeck in 1899. She was 240 feet long, 35 feet beam and 17 feet deep and registered 778 tons net.

ABYSSINIANS IN PITCHED BATTLE

Brother of Empress Leads Against Throne Heir's Father.

Jibuti, French Somaliland, Feb. 4.—A condition of unrest prevails in Abyssinia, according to the latest reports received here. There has been an engagement near Ankober between the followers of Ran Wallie, a brother of the empress, and a detachment under Ras Michael, the father of Lig Yasu, the designated heir to the throne. Ras Michael is minister of war, having been appointed by Emperor Menilik.

The population of the Shoa country is insisting that Dedjas Tafari, a descendant of the Shoa dynasty, be proclaimed heir to the throne.

It is clear Emperor Menilik is very ill.

KILL CZAR FROM AIR

Russian Spy's Plan Is to Use an Aeroplane.

Terrorists Are Hot on Trail of Azef in Switzerland.

Paris, Feb. 4.—A dispatch from Zurich says that Eugene Azef is now in Switzerland, hotly pursued by four Russian terrorists. Azef is the Russian, who for years was an active leader of the fighting Russian Socialists. He recently was denounced as a government spy and sentenced to death by an organization from which he disappeared.

A local paper today declares Azef was active in preparing two plots for the life of the emperor of Russia.

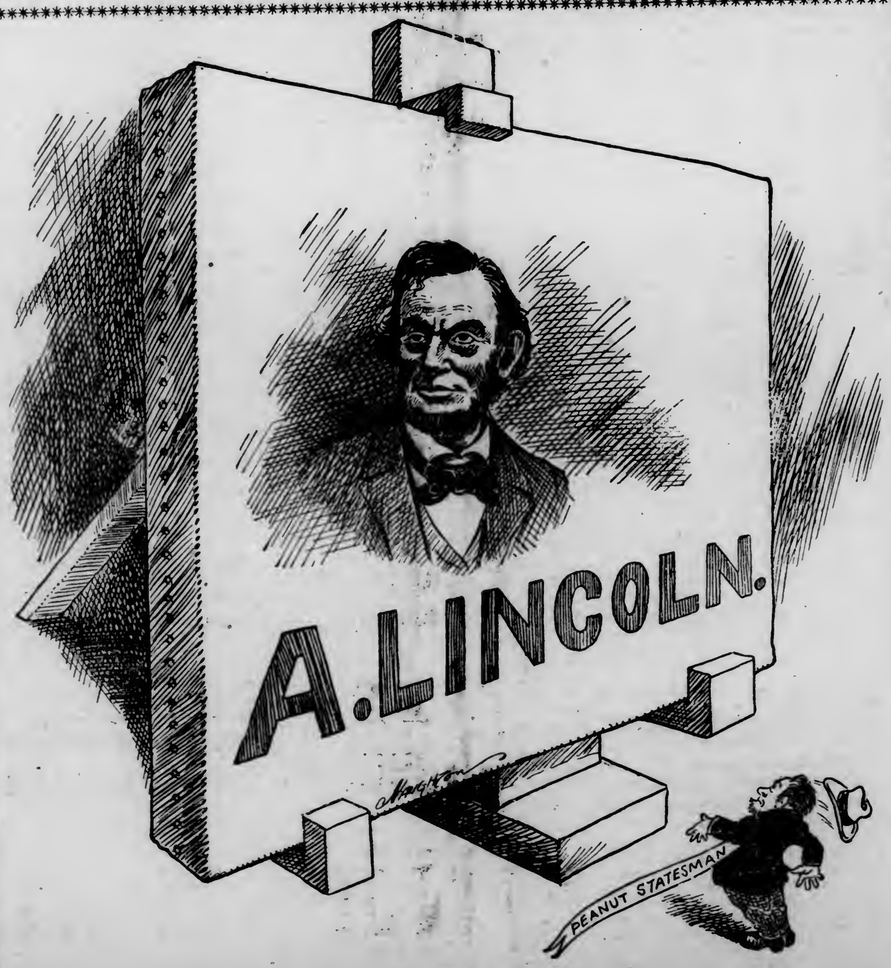

When his fellow conspirators were arrested, Azef retired from the active fighting circle. He then declared it was impossible to kill the emperor by ordinary means, such as a dagger, a revolver or a bomb, and that he was going to study out a plan of assassination in which an aeroplane would play the principal part.

American Under Arrest.

Moscow, Feb. 4.—The police have arrested a man with an American passport bearing the name of Richard T. Stevens of Washington, D. C., on the charge that he has associated with revolutionists. Stevens had been under surveillance for several days preceding his arrest. A forged Russian passport bearing the name Vladimir Kishineffsky was found in his pocket when he was taken into custody.

The police notified the American consul here of the arrest. Stevens told the consul that he was born in Galicia, and that he had lived eight years in America. He explained that his passport was obtained through his father Theodore Stevens of Washington. Stevens speaks Russian fluently.

RAILROADS COMES TO CITY IN PRIVATE CAR

Manager of Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad in Duluth.

Vice President and General Manager J. H. P. Hughart, of the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad, a subsidiary line of the Pennsylvania system, came to Duluth this morning in his private car. Mr. Hughart is here upon private business, in connection with his line. He spent most of the day with W. F. Fitch, president and general manager of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad.

Mr. Hughart stated that just at the present time the railroad business is very dull, especially in the freight department, there being but little general freight moving over the country. The passenger business is somewhat better, according to Mr. Hughart, but neither the passenger nor the freight business is near the normal.

DECREASE IN EARNINGS.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—The semi-annual statement of the earnings and expenses of the Great Northern system for the six months ending Dec. 31, 1908, shows a decided falling off in the income of the road as compared with the six months ending Dec. 31, 1907. The operating income for the last half of 1907 amounted, after deductions for expenses, to $12,858,712.30 while for the last half of 1908, the operating income was $12,492,100.27, showing a decrease of $366,612.07, or a little less than 3 per cent.

In the operating income of the road there was a decrease of $3,709,325.52, or more than 10 per cent, but the adoption of a policy of retrenchment and a reduction in the expenses of the road along almost every line, together with careful management, served to point balance a large part of this. The total operating expenses were cut $3,512,928.26, or about 17 per cent.

The heaviest decrease was in the revenue from freight traffic, where there was a decrease from $26,441,193.87 to $23,175,892.28, or $3,265,301.59. In the passenger department the decrease was not quite so marked, though it amounted to $543,499.49.

CONTESTS ABOUT OVER

Emil Zauft's Rink Winners in Union Match Company Event.

Commercial Club and Hurst's Medal Series Near an End.

The play for trophies at the Western Curling rink will, this week, be brought to a close, after which new rinks will be drawn and new trophies played for during the remainder of the season. This was decided at a special meeting of the members of the club held alst evening in the club rooms.

The play in the various events had been dragging so slowly that they would not have been finished before the ice went, so a meeting was called to decide on what should be done. After a heated discussion it was arranged that the high-score rink in each of the trophy contest squads should play off for the Commercial club cup, the Union Match company's trophy and the William Hurst badges. A committee was then appointed, consisting of Zauft, Clark and Wade, who will arrange for future games, and prepare for the celebration the club is planning on holding on Lincoln's birthday, which will probably be in the form of an ice carnival.

Following the meeting the Union Match company cup was played for by the rinks skipped by McDonald and Zauft, Zauft's rink winning by the score of 13 to 11, thus giving them the Union Match company trophy. In the Commercial club contest there will be played three games between the rinks skipped by Hoag, Ellis and Wade, and the Hurst button contests will be decided when the rinks of Evered, Scott and Hewitt have met.

Besides the deciding game in the Union Match company's contest, last night there were two practice games played between the rinks of Buckley and Scott, and those of Wade and Ellis. Buckley's four won by a score of 12 to 11, and Wade defeated Ellis 9 to 7.

The line up in the Union Match contest was as follows:

Donald,	Sullivan,
Mickish,	Martin,
Mallory,	Wakeman,

McDonald, skip--11. Zauft, skip—13.

Revivals Well Attended.

THE DISTRICT COURT GRIST

Mrs. Aramenta Gibbs Wants $5,000 From Street Railway.

Claims New Motorman Was Responsible for Collision.

Claiming that a motorman, who was just learning to run a car, and the man who was teaching him, recklessly ran a car into the carriage in which she and her sister were riding, Mrs. Aramenta Gibbs is suing the Duluth Street Railway company for $5,000 damages for the injuries sustained. The case was called before Judge Dibell in district court this morning.

Mrs. Gibbs claims that she and her son went riding with her sister, Mrs. C. A. Chamberlain, July 30 last. While driving along Michigan street in the vicinity of Tenth avenue west, she claims it was necessary for them to pass a heavy team, which was also on the road. They drove on the track, it is claimed, and, though the men in charge of the car, which was eastbound, had them in full view, she claims, the car struck the rig, throwing them to the ground.

Mrs. Gibbs claims that she was in a delicate condition at the time of the accident, and the shock and jar resulted in serious injuries to her body and her nervous system. The effects of the nervous shock remain, it is claimed, and she may be permanently injured as a result of the accident.

The case of Andrew Norlander and Herman Rose against the Coolidge-Schussler company was called for trial before Judge Dibell this morning, but was continued. The two men are suing for $812, claimed to be the balance due on a logging contract. The defendant claims that some of the ties cut were not of the proper size and were refused, and $250 was subsequently paid in full settlement of the claim.

A. N. Walters was given judgment on the pleadings against Andrew Blomgren by Judge Dibell in district court yesterday afternoon in a suit brought to recover $75 on a promissory note.

Claiming that A. N. Randall entered on his land and cut a quantity of timber, and the Cloquet Tie & Post company subsequently entered and removed it, A. L. Preston is suing for $1,600 in district court for the trespass. The case was called before Judge Ensign yesterday.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York Making Big Strides.

The remarkably good showing of the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York, during 1908, makes the outlook for the coming year excellent. The new business this year is materially in excess of that during the corresponding period of 1908.

One of the chief sources of contribution to the improvement is the increase of the company's dividends under the new conditions. The Mutual Life is the only company which has ever increased its dividend scale four years in succession; namely, the years 1906, 1907, 1908, and now, 1909. The sum apportioned for dividends, including the "deferred dividends" to be paid in 1909, is $11,092,282.38, as compared with $8,311,002.02 apportioned for 1908 and $4,321,493.34 for 1907.

The amount held for future dividend and contingencies, commonly called "surplus"—$85,844,991.20 — exceeds by many millions the similar accumulation of any other company, and the amount apportioned for dividends payable in 1909—$11,092,282.38—establishes a new record in life insurance, no company having ever before paid as much as $10,000,000 in a single year.

Anti-Alien Measure Meets Defeat in California Assembly.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 4.—The Grove L. Johnson bill prohibiting aliens from being members of corporations, one of the anti-Japanese bills to which President Roosevelt is opposed, was refused passage in the assembly today, 54 to 15.

The vote shows a heavy falling off of the support for the measures since yesterday, when the vote on the Drew anti-alien bill was 48 nays and 28 yeas.

The bill excluding Japanese from the public schools passed.

SUPERIOR STREET PROPERTY SOLD

New Owners May Tear Down Old Frame Shack.

Another deal in Superior street property was recorded in the register of deeds office this morning, conveying from A. J. Crawford of Pennsylvania to the Fidelity Investment company the property at 22 West Superior street.

The property is described as the westerly one-half of Lot 12, Block 4, and the westerly one foot of the easterly one-half of Lot 12, Block 4, Central division of Duluth. It is a frontage of twenty-six feet on Superior street and extends through to Michigan street. The building now on the ground is a small frame structure occupied by A. A. Salter.

The Fidelity Investment company is an Eastern corporation and the deal was made through W. M. Prindle & Co. The consideration expressed in the deed was $1 and Mr. Prindle said today he was not at liberty to make public the price paid for the property. No definite plans have yet been made as to what will be done with the property, but it was doubtless purchased for improvement.

THE "FOUR TWINS" ARE ARRESTED

All Named Anderson—Claimed They Stole a Watch.

The Duluth police this morning went "The Three Twins" musical comedy production one better, and arrested four twins, charging them with the larceny of a watch in Superior last night.

As a matter of fact, the men claim to be in no way related, although all of them go by the name of Anderson, and are about the same age. They look enough alike to be brothers, too.

Charles Anderson gave his age as 22 years. Oscar Anderson as 22 years, Alfred Anderson as 23 and Karl Anderson as 25 years. All of them look to be about 20.

The story told the Duluth police over the telephone, by the Superior department, was to the effect that the four got into a fight in the Arthur hotel. Third street and Hammond avenue, last night, and that in the fracas they extracted a watch from a railroad man's pocket, and made off with it, coming to Duluth.

It so happened that a member of the Duluth department rode up Garfield avenue last night on the Garfield avenue car carrying the men wanted, and their description tallied so closely with the description given over the telephone, that the local police decided they were the ones wanted. They had transferred to the West end, and were easily located there in a lodging house this morning. They were arrested, and taken back to Superior.

The watch was found upon Alfred, but he claims that he found it lying on the sidewalk.

SUPERIOR NEWS

MAILED HIMSELF MONEY.

Albert Johnson Gives Novel Explanation of Sudden Wealth.

Albert Johnson, who was arraigned yesterday in the Superior police court charged with robbery, gave a peculiar explanation as to how he happened to possess so much money at the time of his arrest, when $40 was found concealed in his cap. It is alleged he took $60 from Otto Snyder, while the latter was sleeping in a saloon. Previous to that time witnesses testified that he had been apparently broke. Johnson said that at Spooner he had mailed to himself at Duluth, a letter containing $110 in bills. The letter was addressed to "A. Johnson, Duluth." On arriving in Duluth, Johnson said he got the letter at the postoffice, and deposited the money in his clothing about his person. The court officials consulted the directory and learned that there are more than 100 "A Johnsons" living in Duluth.

According to a proposed bill received by T. B. Mills, Superior port collector, all motor boat owners will have to provide their boats with life preservers for each one on board, and in case of violation of this act the owner shall be fined $10 for each life preserver lacking.

To Change Game Laws.

The Douglas County Fish and Game league advocates a bill covering changes in the existing game laws. One of the special features of the bill is to lift the closed season which has been placed on prairie chicken shooting in Douglas county, making it unlawful t oshoot this game until 1915. This law does not cover other counties in the state, and therefore is considered unjust and without reason. The league desires open season for chickens from Sept. 1 to Dec. 1.

Tripped Over Weight.

For injuries received by falling over a hitching weight at the platform of the union depot, Superior, Mrs. Margaret Nelson asks $2,000 from Owen Connell and the Terminal railway. Connell carries mail to and from the trains, and it is claimed the weight was attached to his rig. The defense will attempt to prove that it was light at the station at the time of the accident, so there was no excuse for the plaintiff tripping over the weight, had she exercised ordinary care.

RATE LAW FIGHT HOT.

Railroads Appeal to Federal and South Dakota to State Courts.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Feb. 4.—Judge Garland, in the United States district court, has granted a restraining order, preventing the 2-cent passenger rate law, signed by the government yesterday, from going into effect, pending a hearing before him Monday, March 1, for a temporary injunction. The order was granted at the instance of the various railroad lines in South Dakota. The bill as finally passed by the legislature, contained an emergency clause, making it effective immediately.

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 4.—While the railroad companies were obtaining a restraining order from the federal courts at Sioux Falls, to stop the 2-cent rate law, the attorney general went before the state supreme court and got an alternative writ of mandamus, returnable on March 3. The question now to be settled is which court shall take jurisdiction in the matter.

ERA OF ASSAULT STIRS PITTSBURG

Negroes Resent Wholesale Arrests by Police Authorities.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 4.—Six negroes arrested last night in addition to the 126 arrested the night before, as a result of many assaults directed against white girls in the Herron Hill district, were discharged following a hearing before a police magistrate today. The negroes proved they were regularly employed and had good reputations. One of the negroes taken into custody Tuesday night, who had obscene literature and wore women's undergarments, was today fined $25 or thirty days to the workhouse.

Racial animosity is in evidence throughout the city. Many negroes are inclined to resent what they term high-handed police methods. The authorities reiterate their intention of cleaning the negro section of the city and large forces of uniformed officers and a great number of plain clothes men are on the alert for negroes addicted to the drug and no-work habits.

PAPER TRUST'S FIGURES BELIED

Norris Sends Charges to House Ways-Means Committee.

Washington, Feb. 4.—John Norris of the American Newspaper Publishers' association sent today to the house ways and means committee a letter wherein he charged that the International Paper company, in presenting its argument for the retention of the tariff on paper, had deliberately misrepresented to the committee the amounts paid by the paper company as wages to paper makers.

He charged that in making comparisons with Canadian mills to show the relative pay for labor, the International Paper company had understated the amounts paid by Canadian mills. Mr. Norris charged that thirteen rates out of 148 cited by the International Paper company, purporting to cover its own pay rolls, were over-statements. The paper company had made its comparisons on the claim that it paid 50 cents per hour to machine-tenders.

Norris furnishes the company's pay roll schedule to fortify his statement that the highest price now paid by that company to machine-tenders is 48 cents per hour, and that this rate applies only to six of eighty-four machines which the company operates; that some of the machine-tenders are paid 36 cents per hour, and that the average rate is 42 cents per hour, or 16 per cent less than the amount claimed by the paper company.

He declared that the comparison of wages paid to American and foreign labor, as set up by the paper manufacturers at the tariff hearing, was wrong, and that the manufacturers should have known it was wrong.

HAD WIFE IN DULUTH.

Bigamist Tells Judge That He Believed Himself Divorced.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—David Gray, indicted by the grand jury on a charge of bigamy, yesterday pleaded guilty before Judge John Day Smith in the district court and asked for clemency. Gray was married a few months ago to Miss Alice R. Hamilton of Minneapolis, but the second wife learned that Gray was married in Duluth to another woman.

Gray pleaded not guilty when arraigned, and explained that he supposed he had been divorced from his first wife. He said he had given a lawyer $10 to get a divorce for him, and thought that was the end of the matter. He will be sentenced later in the week.

A Prominent Kentucky Woman Says Peruna Ought to Be in Every Home.

MRS. WILLIAM C. MOORE.

Once an Invalid, Now a Well and Happy Woman.

Thousands of Mothers Can Tell a Similar Story About Peruna.

"I Feel That This Remedy Ought to be in Every Household, for it is a Blessing to Suffering Humanity."

Mrs. William C. Moore, Mt. Sterling, Ky., writes: "It gives me great pleasure to recommend Peruna to those suffering with catarrh.

"I had catarrh of nose so badly my hearing had almost left me. I was miserable, both to myself and those around. I had tried many physicians and medicines, but without success. I felt that my health was gone.

"But after using two or three bottles of Peruna I began to improve, and after taking ten bottles my hearing was restored, my catarrh cured, and I am now enjoying the best of health.

"I feel that this remedy ought to be in every household, for it is a blessing to suffering humanity."

Mrs. Moore is a housewife of excellent standing in the community where she resides. Every one acquainted with her knows her to be a woman that can be relied upon for veracity. Just consider what she has said.

First, she was suffering with catarrh so badly that her hearing was almost destroyed. She was a misery to herself and her friends. She had tried many physicians and medicines, but none of them gave her any relief. She was completely discouraged, and considered that her health was gone. Now, this was her situation.

Then she says, "After using two or three bottles of Peruna I began to improve." She kept on taking Peruna until her hearing was perfectly restored and her catarrh cured, and she is now enjoying the best of health.

No wonder she feels like saying that Peruna ought to be in every household. No wonder she says it is a blessing to suffering humanity.

Such a case as this ought to be heralded all over the United States. There are thousands of other people that are suffering as she was. There is every reason to believe that Peruna would frequently accomplish the same result in this class of chronic cases.

At least this much is sure, that Peruna is well worth a trial in any case of catarrh, whether it be of the head, nose, throat or internal organs.

Mrs. Cordia Brown, R. F. D. 4, Rogersville, Tenn., writes: "I had catarrh of the head, and had been troubled with it for ten years. I tried various remedies, but they did no good. I at last bought a bottle of Peruna, and began to feel better as soon as I began taking it. I was very thin and weak, but soon gained strength and flesh by taking Peruna."

"Is it good?" inquired the borrower from the public library as she thumbed a book which had been handed her on request.

"When I have the time," said the library assistant in cold, cutting tones, "I'm going to invent a contrivance here at the desk upon which I can press a button and it will whirl around and give out the right answer."

The person addressed looked crushed. "I only wanted to know," she stammered apologetically.

"That's all any of them want," said the librarian tartly. "'Is it good?' you ask me and how am I to know what you call good? There are people who consider Boccaccio 'good' and others who admit nobody but George Barr McCutcheon to their list."

"Why, I just thought ——," said the person who inadvertently asked "Is it good?"

"They all think," said the librarian. "Sometimes I say 'Well just look at it. The copy is rebound. They just read it to pieces' or I say 'The people who like this man's things always like them awfully well,' or I say 'It's spoken of very well,' or I say 'He has been a real success,' or I say 'Well it's one of the new books,' which gets them every time. But, really, I wish people would not depend upon me for their literary criticisms. I get so peeved," said the librarian.

"I should think you did," said the borrower from the library. "Is there a copy of 'The Beloved Vagabond in?'" she asked.

"Yes," said the librarian. "Here is one."

"Is it good?" asked the borrower, and speechless messages were flashed from the librarian's eyes and she deigned no reply.

"DR. CURE-ALL."

Amusing Piece is Given at Y. W. C. A. Rooms.

A few of the young women of the gymnasium classes of the Y. W. C. A. appeared in a little two-act farce last evening at the gymnasium and a large audience was greatly amused at the confusion and trouble of the doctor who promised all things to all people. Many timely hits added to the interest of the piece. The cast was as follows: Dr. Cure-All, Miss M. Cheska; postman, Miss Elizabeth Geason; thin lady, Miss Peterson; fat lady, Miss Cunningham; white-haired lady, Miss Sund; German farmer, Miss S. Cheska; Dr. Jones, Miss Cathro; pigeon-toed lady, Miss McSwain; elocutionist, Miss Jorsted; bashful girl, Miss Campbell; Mrs. Rotchkiss, Miss Haid; short lady, Miss Gorman; Maria, Miss Charlotte Robinson; widow, Dr. S. Valentine Day.

Valentines, lovely confections in lingerie effects in rose buds and cupids, are already making their appearance in the shops and attracting the usual amount of interested attention. A valentine has a very special attraction of its own and people, who from all appearances would have no possible knowledge of the valentine or its missive, linger longingly at the counter.

The festival is one that lends itself with special ease to distinctive and pretty social events, and although it happens this year to fall on Sunday there will doubtless be many affairs on the Saturday and Monday nearest the day. The caterers are showing charming little favors for valentine entertaining.

The festival of the patron saint of cupid and his affairs is celebrated on Feb. 14, and although there is more than a week intervening, many hostesses are already making the first preparations.

VISITING MAID.

A Great Help in Keeping Well Groomed.

A woman has told me of an exceedingly satisfactory arrangement by which three women living in the same large apartment hotel share the same combination maid and seamstress, says Vogue. She has two rooms in the hotel, one of which she uses entirely for the service of her three mistresses. She conscientiously divides her time between the three equally, and they divide their wages and expenses. This arrangement has proved successful for two years and still continues to be. This woman not only performs all the service of a ladies' maid but has time for embroidering underclothes and a knack for making dainty hand-made neckwear. She never seems to object to serving more than one mistress, and is tactful enough not to allow any conflict of claims ever to appear if they do actually occur.

Invaluable in this connection is the visiting maid, who can be procured to come once a week and go over the list of things which have been jotted down against her visit. In half a day such a maid can manicure the nails, massage the hair, look over the clean laundry, run in ribbons and mend little tears in dainty waists or lingerie, oil the shoes for the week, and attend to an infinite variety of details.

One woman has recently told me about a small room which she has set apart solely for the purpose of keeping up her wardrobe. In it are several cabinets, originally intended for medicine chests. In one of these are all the necessaries for cleaning clothes, several kinds of soaps, cloths of various kinds, pieces of sponge and forms for cleaning gloves. The little accessories ordinarily more cumbersome than useful, when kept thus out of the way, become distinctly valuable.

GET A HOBBY.

One of the Best Helps for Tired Nerves.

The best thing in the world for nerves is sleep, the next, proper food, and third, proper dress. But as good as one of these is a hobby.

How often does one hear the expression, "Oh, that is So-and-So's hobby," spoken rather disparagingly. It is the tendency of the average mind to regard a person who has a pronounced enthusiasm as a species of harmless lunatic, rather to be pitied. The truth of the matter is that any one who has any especial fad is greatly to be envied, as it probably provides more interest and musement for its possessor than anything else. Any decided interest in life, whether it is dignified by the name of an occupation or is simply an enthusiasm, or even mentioned slightingly as a fad, is eminently desirable.

"I have never seen a genuine collector that is not happy when he is allowed to gratify his tastes," remarked a student of human nature, "and a bent in that direction should always be encouraged. It is a curious phase of our humanity that we will work diligently to make provision for our material needs when we are told, and quite neglect to store up mental resources that will interest and amuse us until we are called hence."

ANENT VOTING.

Women With Suffrage Secure Things More Promptly.

In Denver the women voters demanded a juvenile court and got it. They chose and elected Lindsey exceptionally well qualified for judge, who made it a success. Both parties conspired to eject him and united against him. The women, irrespective of party, have just re-elected him, says the Woman's Journal.

In New Orleans the disfranchised women petitioned again and again and again for a juvenile court. After six years of labor and expenditure they have obtained it. But straightaway the machine politicians have selected the judge and appointed its officers, held a glorification meeting, claimed the credit and divided the spoils.

Jane Addams, in an address recently delivered in Boston, stated that the Chicago women had succeeded in getting a juvenile court, but had been unable by their "indirect influence" to retain the judge whom they regarded as specially qualified to influence the children. This disappointment is probably one reason for the strenuous effort they are now making to get municipal woman suffrage incorporated in the new city charter.

For Winter Salads.

Winter salads frequently lack variety, so new touches should be given to them wherever possible.

In using canned asparagus tips, for instance, they are very apt to be tasteless, even with a highly seasoned mayonnaise or French dressing.

Try, however, cutting up over the asparagus, one or two green peppers from which the seeds have been carefully removed.

This adds greatly to the flavor and if red peppers instead of green are used the appearance of the salad is also improved.

LYCEUM — Louis James in "Peer Gynt."

"Peer Gynt."

Ibsen, the poet; Grieg, the composer; James, the actor, is the trilogy united in "Peer Gynt," the best known until the play was brought to the stage, by the "Peer Gynt" suites as performed by the concert orchestras. Mr. James has a concert orchestra to perform not only the first and best known suite, but the second suite, which Grieg wrote on Ibsen's invitation when "Peer Gynt" was first produced in Copenhagen. Though referred to as the Norweglan "Rip Van Winkle" because it is an allegory embracing the intimate domestic life of mountain peasants entwined with their folk and fairy lore, and the lusty young braggart of the early scenes is finally disclosed in his snowy maturity, "Peer Gynt" is more aptly described in the Balzac term, "A comedy of human life." Peer is at first a youth, a bragging brawler, an amiable, beloved scamp; in his cups he sees visions of troll (fairy) land, to which he rides across the mountains on the back of a wild boar. In the later scenes he is the wanderer, returning home. The ship on which he is sailing splits on a rock in the storm, and though others sink with the wreck, he is saved. Finally, after a career of extraordianry material success, and the gratification of every "pleasure," he finds real "happiness" in the arms of his boyhood sweetheart. The scenic side is embroidered in fourteen massive settings. The cast numbers thirty-seven, and the James organization totals nearly eighty. There are three ballets, one whole scene being given to "Anitra's dance," of the first Grieg "Peer Gynt" suite. There are two lyric numbers. It is the longest and most exacting role Mr. James has ever played, not even excepting "Hamlet."

COURT BARS OUT CURIOUS CROWD

Only Those Directly Interested Attend Stirling Divorce Hearing.

Edinburgh, Feb. 4.—Tired of having his court turned into a theater filled with curious men and women, who have seemed to regard the Stirling cross-divorce case as a lurid melodrama produced for their benefit, Judge Guthrie, today closed the doors to all except those directly interested.

John Alexander Stirling is suing his wife, who was Clara Elizabeth Taylor, an American show girl, for divorce, alleging misconduct with Lord Northland, while Mrs. Stirling is praying for divorce on the alleged misbehavior of her husband with Mrs. Atherton.

Lord Northland was on the stand all the morning. His evidence consisted largely of flat denials to the statements made by Mr. Stirling and Mrs. Atherton. Mrs. Atherton, he asserted, carried on a conspiracy to keep Mr. Stirling and his wife apart. She even pressed him to join Mrs. Stirling in America in furtherance of her objects, but he refused to go. He attributed much of his attention to Mrs. Stirling to his efforts to cheer her up, particularly as she had purchased a revolver and on many occasions had threatened to kill herself.

WOULD HALT WATERWAY PLAN FOR CONGRESS.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 4.—A joint resolution and preamble embodying the Lorimer-Cooley idea of deep waterway legislation was presented in the Illinois house of representatives today by Representative Riley of Joliet, read for the information of the members and ordered printed. The resolution reads:

"Be it resolved:

"That the general assembly of Illinois defer further consideration of deep waterway legislation until such time as the present congress of the United States shall have had an opportunity to act in the premises, on or before March 4, 1909.

"That the secretary of state send a certified copy of this memorial and resolution to the honorable president of the senate and the honorable speaker of congress of the United States and that he also send printed copies thereof to the senators and representatives in congress from this state."

Representative Riley explained that the purpose of the long preamble, reciting in a way the history of the deep waterway project, is a memorial to congress to co-operate with the people of the Mississippi valley.

PATTEWAY ACQUITTED

Claimed Officer and Detective Took Evidence From His Trunk.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Attorneys F. L. McGhie of St. Paul and W. E. Rowe of this city turned the tables on the state in the second trial of A. Patteway.

Patteway, a colored man, was convicted of robbing the Merchants National bank of this city of $1,600 while acting as porter last summer, his trial in January creating more interest than any trial in this city in recent years.

An appeal to the supreme court was taken in the bank case, and the state asked for a special term and Patteway was tried again on a charge of having stolen some goods from the Guarantee Clothing store. The second trial resulted in a verdict of acquittal at 6 o'clock last evening, the jury having been out but forty-five minutes. The goods had been taken from the Guarantee Clothing store in April, and they were found in Patteway's trunk when he was arrested for the robbery of the bank in July Patteway claimed he had bought them in a pawn shop in Minneapolis.

The sensational part of the trial was that Patteway claimed that when his trunks were being gone through by Chief of Police Eck of this city and a Pinkerton detective, that a pocketbook containing a diamond ring, a $5 bill and the receipt from the Minneapolis pawnbroker had been taken. The Pinkerton man was not present at the trial and the attorneys for the defense scored a point when Chief Eck admitted that the detective might have taken the pocketbook when he was not looking, and the chief could not swear that the other had not taken it.

Attorney McGhie argued the motion for a new trial in the bank case, and with Attorney Rowe assisting him, feels confident of an acquittal in case of a new trial.

During the last trial the courtroom was again packed, the case of the colored man having aroused intense interest, many thinking that he was convicted the first time because he was colored.

TAKES LIFE IN CLOQUET HOTEL

Man Registering as "Estranger," St. Ignace, Mich., Kills Self.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—A strange man who registered the evening before as "A Estranger," St. Ignace, Mich., was found dead in his room at the St. Louis hotel yesterday afternoon. Circumstances point to suicide, a box of capsules and a bottle of carbolic acid being found in a drawer of the dresser near the bed. The man arrived in town Monday afternoon and stayed Monday night at Crane's lodging house. L. S. Patterson, proprietor of the St. Louis hotel states that the man applied for accomodations at his house Tuesday evening saying that it was too crowded at the house where he was staying. He remained in the hotel all the evening speaking to no one, but going about the room as if laboring under a great mental strain. About midnight he went to bed and asked that he be allowed to sleep in the morning.

Yesterday afternoon the proprietor became suspicious, when Estranger did not appear and on detecting a peculiar odor in the hall upstairs investigated, finding the dead body in bed completely covered with clothes. The coroner was summoned and the authorities in St. Ignace notified in case any relatives lived there to claim the body.

When the man arrived he carried a bag in his hand, but trace of this can be found. The suicide was a large man, slightly bald and was very nervous in his actions. Those who saw him state that he impressed one as being a man of some refinement, but scarred by misfortunes.

The body is at the morgue where it will be held in the hopes of hearing from relatives or friends.

ST. CLOUD GETS MEMENTO OF WAR

Sword, Carried Through Struggle by Gov. Miller, Given City.

St. Cloud, Minn., Feb. 4—(Special to The Herald.)—This city is the proud possessor of a magnificent sword, which was presented to the late Lieut. Col. Stephen Miller by the citizens of St. Cloud in May, 1861.

After being in possession of the Miller family for forty-eight years it comes back to the donor by the express wish of Mr. Miller and his son, Capt. Stephen C. Miller, who died at Washington, D. C., last December.

Lieut. Col. Stephen Miller came to St. Cloud in the 50s and engaged in the mercantile business. At the opening of the Civil war he was commissioned lieutenant colonel and was preparing to go to the battlefield when a mass meeting of St. Cloud residents was held for the purpose of presenting to him a sword. An article in the St. Cloud Democrat, dated May, 16, 1861, tells of the meeting which was held and that $50 was presented to purchase a sword. A committee, consisting of the late Judge McKelvey and Gen. C. C. Andrews, was appointed to make the presentation. Lieut. Col. Miller carried the sword through the war. When he resigned his position as brigadier general in January, 1864, to take the office of governor of Minnesota the sword adorned the walls of the executive office. After his retirement into private life at Worthington, Minn., he treasured the sword until death. His dying wish was that it be given to his son, Capt. Stephen C. Miller, with the instructions that if he should die childless it should revert back to the city of St. Cloud. Capt. Miller died childless at Washington, D. C., on Dec. 8, 1908. Mrs. Miller, knowing of the wishes of her late husband and also of the late Lieut. Col. Miller, immediately wrote to L. W. Collins, a close friend of the latter, and asked that he make the presentation to the city of St. Cloud.

It is said that the accident occurred while a stick of dynamite was being made ready for the fuse. Luigi was fearfully mangled. One of the other men had a leg broken and he was bruised about the shoulders and face. Luigi came from the old country about two years ago, and he lived for a time at the coal docks here. It is thought both the other men will recover.

GIRL CLAIMS ESTATE.

Alleges She Is Common-Law Daughter of Rich Man.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Feb. 4.—When the Ole Christiansen estate came up for final settlement Tuesday, Attorney Connor put in an objection and created surprise by saying that the deceased had a common-law daughter, Miss Matilda Christiansen, living in Minneapolis, who demanded a share of the $150,000 estate.

GOVERNOR'S PROCLAMATION ON OBSERVANCE OF LINCOLN'S CENTENARY

STATE OF MINNESOTA, Executive Department. } Proclamation.

On Feb. 12 occurs the centenary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. Wherever the American flag floats, wherever an American heart is thrilled by the devotion and patriotism swelling from the crucible of a nation's woes, wherever the chords of human love and sympathy are touched by reverence for the meek and modest man of sorrows, there will come involuntarily and spontaneously a tribute of affection and honor to Abraham Lincoln, whose prophetic vision foresaw that "this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

The name of Lincoln is imperishable. He was not born great, as the heir of a great name or of an estate, yet he was born great in having a strong intellect and a noble heart. His elevation to the place of greatest power and prestige, shows that in America every station in life may be honorable; that there is no bar to the humblest, but that merit, wherever it exists, has the opportunity to be known and find expression in the broader fields of noble adventure. To all these his example and his elevation becomes a living power, and what he became they may aspire to be.

I can name no name of any age or country that in private and public life outshines that of Abraham Lincoln. And in the recital of the pages of history bearing upon the Civil war, in which Lincoln's fame was fashioned, Minnesota is given a conspicuous and an honorable part. A few of our public men were his friends and confidants; we were first to heed his call for volunteers; thousands of her soldiers died on the altar of sacrifice; some of the crucial battle charges were led by her sons; at Gettysburg, at Shiloh, at Vicksburg, at Manassas, her children sleep among the hosts of the unnamed dead, and from the firesides of a hundred thousand Minnesota homes were sent the daily prayers and benedictions of soldier mothers and wives and daughters.

It is fitting, then, that Minnesota should join the other states of the Union in paying tribute to the memory of Abraham Lincoln, and I hereby designate Friday, Feb. 12, 1909, as a public holiday, and ask that the people of the state join in commemorating the memories of the day.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the state to be hereto affixed at the capitol in the city of St. Paul, this 3rd day of February, A. D., 1909.

Attest:
JULIUS A. SCHMAHL, Secretary of State.

JOHN A. JOHNSON, Governor.

FEDERAL JURY INDICTS GOVERNOR HASKELL; LAND FRAUDS ARE ALLEGED

Guthrie, Okla., Feb. 4.—Governor Haskell, when informed that he was indicted, issued the following statement: "I have just heard of the indictment for conspiracy, coupled with seven or eight of the oldest and highest charactered citizens of Muskogee, men who developed and built up that city by their unselfish effort. From now on, the proceedings will be open to both sides. Hearst's crooked manipulations will be at a discount. I am satisfied the interior department has been misled by false statements. I am confident there has not been a dishonest act done by any of the indicted parties and that good citizens in general, regardless of politics, feel the same way."

Guthrie, Okla., Feb. 4.—In the United States district court Judge Cottrell has sentenced D. H. Hallock of Woodward county to pay a fine of $1,000 and to serve six years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan. Hallock, who is reputed to be one of the wealthiest men of the state, was indicted by the federal grand jury some time ago and later convicted on two counts alleging subornation of perjury, in connection with the location of public lands.

Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 4.—As a result of the investigation by the grand jury of the alleged frauds in connection with the scheduling of town lots in this city, seven indictments were returned last night. The charge against the defendants is conspiracy to defraud the government.

The news that the indictments had been returned caused much excitement here.

The names of those indicted are: Governor Charles N. Haskell, F. B. Severs, C. W. Turner, W. T. Hutchings, Walter R. English, James W. Hill and Walter R. Eaton.

Attorney Thomas H. Owen of Muskogee, representing Governor Haskell, made arrangements for the governor tomorrow morning to enter his appearance and give $5,000 bond for appearance for trial. The writs issued are returnable forthwith.

There is but one indictment against Haskell, charging him with conspiracy with Walter R. Eaton and Clarence W. Turner and one each against the others.

Turner was first to give bond in the sum of $10,000. Hutchings and Eaton called and gave bond in the sum of $5,000 each. All will probably be arraigned before Judge Campbell tomorrow morning.

The indictments were returned under section 5,440 of the federal statutes, which provides:

"If two or more persons conspire either to commit any offense against the United States or to defraud the United States in any manner and for any purpose, and one or more of such parties do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, all the parties to such conspiracy shall be liable to a penalty of not more than $10,000 fine or to imprisonment not to exceed two years or to both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court."

BEATINGS FOR YOUNG BRIDE

Joaquin Peixotte Began Cruel Treatment Few Days After Marriage.

When Ethel Clancy changed her name to Ethel Peixotte, at Winnipeg, in 1902, she bound herself to a human threshing machine, according to a complaint for divorce from Joaquin Labahte Peixotte, filed in district court yesterday. Within a few days after Joaquin had promised to love, cherish and protect her, she alleges he began to beat her. She charges that during the first few months of their wedded life, her husband beat her so often, and with such vigor, that she was forced to leave him before a year had passed

Mrs. Peixotte claims that her husband not only beat her, but threatened to take her life. She says he drank to excess and, coming home, would vent his drunken anger on her, often awakening her from sleep with a blow.

She is 24 years old and he is 45. She asks a divorce and the right to resume her maiden name, Ethel Clancy. There are no children.

CRIME FROM THE MINING CAMPS

Most of St. Louis County Offenses Committed on Range.

Most of the crime which develops in St. Louis county, particularly in the line of murder and assault, has its root in the mining communities of the range, according to statements made last night by Warren E. Greene, assistant county attorney, in an address before the Park Point Improvement club.

The character of the population of the mining districts brings the number of criminal cases of the county to a high average. Because of the character of this population, St. Louis county has more cases of assault, in proportion to its population, than any other county in the state. Mr. Greene said that where there is a large element of population from Southern Europe, crimes against the person will predominate.

In regard to juvenile crime, he said there was nothing like home influence, the school, and religious training, to keep boys straight.

The speaker went back to the early ages, and traced the history of crime to the present time. One hundred years ago there were 152 crimes punishable by death, and now there is only one, murder in the first degree. He spoke of the characteristics to be found in prisoners, and described the Bertillon system of measurements.

Mr. Greene explained that the main object of the office of county attorney was not so much to secure a conviction in any one particular case, as to to teach a lesson to those who have not yet offended, and warn them to be good. It is intended that conviction and punishment in a few cases shall be an object lesson to the many.

INSTITUTES FOR FARMERS

Series of Potato and Clover Meetings Will be Held.

The Farmers' Institute management will conduct a series of special potato and clover institutes throughout the potato sections tributary to the Twin Cities and Duluth. Such subjects as varieties of potatoes, selection of seed, treatment for scab, preparation of seed bed, planting, cultivation, spraying and marketing, will be discussed by successful potato growers.

Clover is the greatest crop common to Minnesota in building up the soil, and there is no place where potatoes do better than following a crop of clover. Clover is also one of the best and cheapest feeds for live stock. So a farmer attempting to grow potatoes must grow clover to help prepare the soil for potatoes. The clover furnishes good pasture and makes good hay, so he will logically keep live stock to make use of this cheap feed. His live stock will furnish a considerable amount of manure, which is a very valuable adjunct to potato growing. Unsalable potatoes may be profitably fed to stock, if the starch factory does not afford a market for them. Such a system of farming will furnish employment all of the year, maintain the productivity of the soil and give satisfactory returns.

Potatoes are an exhaustive crop to the soil if grown continuously on the same land. A crop of clover, with its heavy root system and power to add nitrogen, and a good dressing of manure, renews the soil to its original producing power. Many farmers are getting from 200 to 400 bushels of potatoes per acre when handling their soils in this way.

The production of clover seed is now a very important enterprise in Minnesota, and the best methods of handling the clover crop for seed should be known by every farmer.

All of the above topics will be discussed by practical men at the special clover and potato institutes to be held at convenient points throughout the potato growing sections. If any settler believes such a meeting would be of value to his neighborhood, held either in the school house or in the nearest village hall, he may make his wants known to A. D. Wilson, superintendent of farmers' institutes, University Farm, St. Paul, and if possible, his locality will be reached.

STANDS PAT ON SECRET SERVICE

Roosevelt Says Government Must Have Agents of Full Efficiency.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Declaring that "if the government is to act with full efficiency against criminals, it must have some force of secret service agents who can act against criminals anywhere," President Roosevelt, in a statement made public from the White House, emphatically reiterates his opposition to restricting the field of usefulness of the secret service.

"The position of the adminstration is," said the president, "that it is against sound public policy to discriminate in favor of criminals by discriminating against the use of the secret service to detect and punish them."

The statement was called forth by "misleading statements appearing in some afternoon papers" to the effect that the work of the secret service has not been hampered and that the investigation of cases outside the detection of counterfeiters and the protection of the president has not been circumscribed by the restrictive legislation at the last session of congress.

The Owen Daveno

The Only Perfect Bed Davenport

As a Davenport

As a davenport, the DAVENO is all that could be desired. No one could ever tell from its appearance that a perfect bed was concealed beneath its luxuriant upholstering; and no regular davenport could present a more pleasing or more elegant appearance.

The DAVENO is beautifully designed, splendidly made and finished, in either solid oak or mahogany; the upholstering is of the highest grade, and comes in either genuine leather, French tapestry or Verona.

Even if you were merely contemplating an ordinary davenport, why not get a DAVENO?

You could not obtain a single advantage either in looks or utility in a regular davenport that the DAVENO does not give you.

And there is sure to come a time when you'll wish you had another bed—the Daveno will give you this extra bed at very little extra cost.

$15.00 Mattress for $9.98

We have quite a number of high grade Felt Mattresses, which are well worth the regular price of $15 each, but just as a business persuader for February, we are going to run them while they last at the small sum of $9.98

We carry an exceedingly large line of mattresses of every desirable kind at prices ranging from $6.50 up.

We can save you money on any kind of a mattress.

As a Perfect Bed

As a bed the DAVENO has regular full sized bed springs and full sized mattress, entirely separate and apart from the upholstering as a davenport. As a bed, the upholstering and springs of the davenport are not used in any way whatsoever.

You don't have to move the DAVENO from the wall to change from davenport to bed, or to change from bed to davenport. The whole operation of making either change requiring but a few seconds time.

You don't have to chase about the house for bedding with which to make up the DAVENO bed, nor pull it from under the couch, covered with dust, because your bed is all made ready for occupancy before folding into a davenport, and presto-change—your bed is ready when wanted.

The DAVENO must be seen to be appreciated. Come in and let us "show you."

Prices range from $42.00 UP. Easy payments if desired.

A Bed Davenport Without a Peer

A Winner!

At Last—A Bed Davenport Without Objectionable Features

Unless you have used a DAVENO you are probably skeptical as to any bed davenport being a perfect success.

There are all kinds of bed davenports and much is claimed for some of them, but until the innovation of the DAVENO we don't know of any that were entirely satisfactory.

The DAVENO is not merely a "makeshift" bed—but it is a practical every day bed that can be used with as much comfort and satisfaction as any bed that was ever made.

Neither is the DAVENO a "makeshift" davenport, but is as perfect, handsome and desirable a davenport as the most fastidious heart could wish.

The DAVENO is entirely unlike any other folding bed. The whole principle of its construction and operation, which is protected by patents, is different and it is incomparably superior to all others.

The DAVENO construction is simple, reliable and sanitary, and is guaranteed not to get out of order.

We want you to know more about the DAVENO even though you may not contemplate buying one just now, for you'll surely want one some time.

Come in and let us give you a demonstration, then when you come to want a bed davenport, you'll have no hesitancy as to What Kind.

WOMAN "STARTS THINGS" AMONG LABOR LEADERS.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 4.—A recent speech of Miss Jean Gordon of this city before the child labor conference in Chicago has apparently aroused labor leaders all over the country. She declared she was a unionist, but had lost all hope of any assistance from the American Federation of Labor, as it had thwarted the plans for bettering child labor conditions in New Orleans.

President Gompers of the federation has written to Former Secretary George Bunch of the Louisiana federation, asking for the articles as to the action of local labor leaders at the time of the passage of the present child labor bill.

STRIKE OF FORCE IS SHORT LIVED

Eveleth Council at Special Meeting Raises Salaries of Police.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The resignation of the policemen, as predicted in Wednesday's Herald, took place yesterday afternoon.

Chief of Police Nick Kent, Sergeant Peter Norell, Patrolmen John Zidar, Charles Mahaffey and John Bakka all handed their resignations in to Mayor Smith, who notified the city clerk that there were no policemen.

The city council was called together in special session and raised the salaries of patrolmen from $65 to $75 monthly, sergeants from $70 to $80, the chief from $75 to $100 monthly. With the new scale of salaries the same men were appointed, so that at 4 o'clock, after being without police protection for only a short time, the patrolmen were again on the job. During the time that there were no policemen one call was made for some little matter, but this was easily settled. The action of the Virginia policemen about a week ago gave the hint to the local minions of the law, but as everyone was satisfied to raise the men's salaries, the only possible way of getting around the charter was adopted.

NEW TRUCK CHRISTENED.

Latest Virginia Fire-Fighting Appliance Stands Test.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new hook and ladder truck, with chemical attachment, with all the latest contrivances for fighting fires, which cost the city $1,750, had its first test last evening at a chimney fire in the Second ward. It proved very effective.

Chief Thayer has appointed Frank Meehan a member of the department, and he entered upon his duties yesterday.

The new first size steam fire engine, recently purchased by the city, is expected to arrive about Feb. 15, and the new "deluge" set to go with the engine has been ordered by the city clerk.

The volunteer firemen, Ever Hawkinson, James Lavick and George Holcomb, discharged by the council Tuesday evening, moved out of the department yesterday, and the fire fighters are now all regulars, nine men in all.

AFTER SOCIAL EVIL.

Hibbing Commercial Club Asked to Take Hand in Suppressing.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 4.—Special to The Herald.)—The Commercial club received a sensational communication at the last meeting from B. H. Hayes, who owns a large part of the Western addition to town, in which he claims two disorderly houses driven from his addition have taken refuge on an adjoining forty, and that the antics of the inmates have become a public disgrace.

The public affairs committee of the club was directed to look into the matter of the suppression of the social evil in general, as many former inmates of Duluth's closed restricted district are said to have flocked here and to have become entirely too conspicuous. Five places of this sort, with half a hundred inmates, are said to exist in the town, and the respectable element will back up the club in an effort to clean the town of this class.

MANY IN FAVOR OF LARGER HALL

Aurora Village and Township May Join in Enlarging Building.

Aurora, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The village council held a busy meeting last night. The report of Engineer Dorway, showing the average cost per lot for the sewer assessment, was accepted and placed on file. The report gives the cost for lots, not including those on Jackson street, at $21.43; for lots on Jackson street alone at $34.56 and for all the lots in the village at $25.14. It is the intention of the council to assess the Jackson street lots at their average cost, and the other lots lower.

The report of Anthony Puck, architect, of Duluth, on the Knights of Pythias hall showed that the roof was all right, but that the floor had been weakened by the cutting of two archways in the store underneath, that the doors swung inward and were of insufficient size. He recommended the bracing up of the archways and that both back and front doors be widened and made to swing outward, and that the building be condemned for public gatherings until such changes had been made.

The council was waited upon by the committee appointed by the Commercial club and also two members of the board of supervisors, and the matter of the town and village joining together in the erection of a hall was discussed. A committee was appointed by President Olson to meet with two of the town board and two taxpayers to talk the matter over and report at the next regular meeting. It seems to be the opinion of a majority of the taxpayers that the scheme be carried through. The township board offers to pay one-third of a $15,000 building or one-quarter of a building to cost $20,000.

Officer Dudley of the Hohawk location stated that he had been notified by Attorney McGilvery of Eveleth that suit was to be instituted against him for $100 for shooting a dog last Thursday. Dudley asked the council to back him up, and the board will do so. Dudley was coming down Fourth avenue when the dog followed him, snapping at his heels, with the result that Dudley killed it. The village of Aurora is infected with a number of these curs and many of the citizens have been nipped at. The sentiment of the council is that some means will have to be taken to get rid of the dogs.

The report of the water committee was accepted, as was the report of the street grading committee. The council received an invitation from the Aurora firemen to attend a banquet on Feb. 16, by members of the fire department under 27 years of age.

INTEREST WIDESPREAD.

All of Itasca County Lining Up in Sheriff's Fight.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—It seems as though about every resident of Itasca county is lined upon one side or the other in the fight being waged in the district court here between Georgo Riddell and T. J. Riley over the office of sheriff.

The contest drags along and the end is not yet in sight. The contestee is trying to prove that about every one who voted for him was entitled to a vote, and this necessitates callings a raft of witnesses, from fifteen to twenty being constantly kept waiting to testify. Whoever wins it is conceded the prize will come high as the contest has cost both principals a large sum already.

FALLS BETWEEN CARS.

Floodwood, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Earl Wolfer a "car-spotter" living here had a close call from being killed yesterday while "spotting" cars at Gowan.

He was walking on top of a moving freight train, which was uncoupled, and while stepping from one of the cars to another the cars separated and he fell between the cars. He sustained a severe sprain in his leg with a few bruises.

Among Subjects Eveleth Business Men Will Discuss.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—An important meeting of the Business Men's association will be held tonight to talk over the tax and paving questions. Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—An effort is being made by Chief of Police Kent to secure a juvenile court for the range, and this may be possible when the additional district court is granted. At present there are many boys from 10 years up and the local courts have to wait for the probation officer from Duluth to come up and look over the cases, and he decides whether to take the boys to Duluth for trial or put them on probation.

accompanied by a minority report urging the passage of the bill.

Representative Mackenzie moved the adoption of the majority report, and Representative Saugstad moved, as a substitute, that the minority report be adopted.

Representative Wells, before debate had begun, moved the previous question, thus shutting off discussion.

Ware, the author of the bill, charged that the Republican steering committee members were voting for this foreclosure of debate, but a couple of the members voted against it.

The motion to put the previous question carried, 66 to 51, and then the roll was called on the Saugstad motion to adopt the minority report, which was lost, 44 to 73. The bill was then indefinitely postponed. This is about the vote expected on the bill. Several members, voting for it, said they did so because of the action of the house in refusing debate upon it, though not a member of the house had the slightest idea that the bill would carry, with or without debate.

The committees on grain and warehouse of the house and senate, as a result of a meeting yesterday afternoon with the committee from the North Dakota legislature, which is here asking that a North Dakota man be put on each of the two state boards of grain appeals at Minneapolis and Duluth, adopted a resolution yesterday afternoon approving the plan, providing it is legal and practicable. The attorney general was asked as to its constitutionality, and the railroad and warehouse commission, the Duluth board of trade and the Minneapolis chamber of commerce, as to its practicability.

The senate this morning jockeyed a bit more with Senator Works' bill creating a state land, timber and mineral bureau. It was reported back from the committee on public lands, whereupon Senator Seward, backed by Senator Laybourn, asked that it be sent to the judiciary committee.

Senator Works thought this a needless delay, and asked that the bill be made a special order for two weeks from today.

Senator Seward said it was too important a matter to be disposed of summarily, as there are constitutional questions involved.

Senator Farrington, Democrat, and Senator Peterson, Republican, supported the Works motion, but the Seward motion to refer was adopted.

Senator V. L. Johnson this morning offered a bill providing a fine of $1,000 or imprisonment for five years, or both, for anybody who makes false statements intended to gain him financial credit.

The senate committee on agriculture reported a substitute county agricultural school bill, providing eight schools, located at Marshall, Windom, Hutchinson, Foley, Appleton, Austin, Dodge Center and Waseca. The L. H. Johnson county agricultural school bill, which does not seek to make definite locations, is a special order in the house this afternoon.

Senator Canfield offered a bill which provides that having burglar tools in possession shall be proma facie evidence of an intent to commit burglary.

Senator Pugh, by request, introduced two bills discharging judgments of $8,265 against the Lesure Lumber company and $6,834 against the Rat Portage Lumber company. They bought state timber in Northern Minnesota and were unable to log it within the required time. The state auditor, Dunn, allowed them to cut the timber and let it lie on the ground, with permission to remove it after the time limit had expired. Later the state sued for the full value of the logs, including the value given them by the companies' labor, and the supreme court gave judgment for the full amount without even giving credit for the amount already paid the state.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

A Common Cold.

We claim that if catching cold could be avoided some of the most dangerous and fatal diseases would never be heard of. A cold often forms a culture bed for germs of infectious diseases. Consumption, pneumonia, diphtheria and scarlet fever, four of the most dangerous and fatal diseases, are of this class. The culture bed formed by the cold favors the development of the germs of these diseases, that would not otherwise find lodgment. There is little danger, however, of any of these diseases being contracted when a good expectorant cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It cleans out these culture beds that favor the development of the germs of these diseases. That is why this remedy has proved so universally successful in preventing pneumonia. It not only cures your cold quickly but minimizes the risk of contracting these dangerous diseases. For sale by all druggists.

M'DOUGAL OF DULUTH ASKS AN ACCOUNTING FROM BISHOP FOLEY.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 4.—In federal court, Attorney Z. M. Coffin, in behalf of Thomas A. McDougal of Duluth and Alex P. Campeau of Detroit, petitioned to have Bishop Foley of the Roman Catholic diocese of Detroit give an accounting of moneys received for the property known as the Church Farm, since that property fell into the hands of the late Bishop Frederick Reese in 1833.

Coffin declares he represents about forty heirs of the ninety residents who owned the property in 1808. Four trustees managed the property for the ninety owners and the two surviving trustees in 1833 gave the property to Bishop Reese. The petitioners challenge the deed for this transfer. The property, stretching from the river to Gratiot avenue, for about seven blocks east of the boulevard, has a present value probably exceeding $6,000,000.

CLOQUET HOME DESTROYED.

Residence of Mike Hackett Goes Up in Early Morning Fire.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fire that probably caught from a defective chimney practically destroyed the home of Mike Hackett on Pine street about 4 o'clock this morning. The loss is about $1,500, partially insured.

Some furniture and a piano were saved. The home of W. M. Merrigan, adjoining was threatened, but was not damaged. Hackett is an employe of the box factory and an old resident.

EDITOR IN MIX-UP.

Floodwood Scribe Alleged to Have Assaulted an Old Man.

Floodwood, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is currently reported that M. N. Triplett, editor of the Broadaxe, a local paper, had an altercation yesterday with J. Meagher, aged 60, and during the trouble struck the latter with some instrument, bruising him about the neck.

The trouble is said to have started over driving across Meagher's land and breaking some locks on gates.

So far as known Meagher has not secured a warrant. Both men are on the street today.

STUDENTS EXPELLED.

Stole the Examinations Papers and Board Put Them Out.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Feb. 4.—Four boys of the high school were officially expelled from school when they took their seats at the beginning of school yesterday morning.

The expulsion was the action of the school board following thefts of examination papers from teachers' desks during the night, the boys having broken into the buildings and taken the papers, and, it was charged, peddled them among other students, who benefited by them. Nearly all the high school boys were brought up on the carpet and put under the sweating process until the crime sifted down to four boys who, when they found themselves trapped, made a full confession, and their parents were notified. The boys broke into the high school on two occasions and with matches and lighted candles ransacked the papers in the desks, thus endangering the building to destruction by fire.

DISAPPEARS, LEAVING NO TRACE BEHIND HIM

Frank T. Sherwin Has Been Missing Since Last Saturday.

Books Checked Up and Found to be Correct.

FRANK T. SHERWIN.

Frank T. Sherwin, 30 years old, who for the past three years has been cashier in the American Express company's office at Duluth, has been missing since Saturday, and all efforts to locate him, or even to find a clue as to what may have become of him, have failed utterly.

The disappearance is most mysterious and unaccountable in every respect. Careful examination of his books has showed the company's accounts to be absolutely correct and up to date. There is not a cent missing, as far as four days' investigation shows. He was a man of no bad habits, and though very quiet and uncommunicative, was of a cheerful disposition, had no inclinations towards melancholia and was far from being morbid. He was also apparently in good health. His close friends, who are few, owing to his reserve, state that as far as they know he had no great trouble weighing on his mind, and are very much puzzled and distressed over the strange way in which he has vanished without leaving the slightest trace behind.

Sherwin was last seen at about 9 o'clock last Saturday evening at the company's office, 226 West First street, where he had bachelor quarters in the rear. At that time he was closing up his books for the week. Sunday, although he was missed, nothing much was thought of it. But Monday, when he did not appear, the management grew worried. A careful scrutiny of his room showed everything in order, and nothing, not even his suit case, was missing. He had evidently taken nothing, but the clothes he wore. The books were then gone over, and according to the company officials, were found to be balanced with the cashier's usual care for the end of the week.

Every possible reason for his disappearance has been considered. The mis-appropriation of the company's funds has been eliminated as a cause and there seems to be no reason to believe there has been foul play or suicide. Working on the latter theory the morgue where the body of the unidentified man found beneath the Missabe ore dock lies, was visited. This, of course, failed to reveal anything.

Sherwin is a single man, with no relatives residing in Duluth. His father is said to be manager of a lumber yard at Knox, N. D., and his mother is visiting a sister at Boise, Idaho. The father has been notified of his son's strange disappearance, but as yet no reply has been received from him.

For six years Sherwin has been an employe of the American Express company, and has always been found faithful and trustworthy. Three years ago he was promoted to the position of cashier. He was a member of the Duluth militia, in the company of Capt. Knowlton.

Yesterday afternoon George F. Kennedy, general agent for the company, said that they had absolutely no theory to advance for the disappearance. He stated that they had always found Mr. Sherwin honest or they would not have kept him in their employ, and that he did not gamble or drink, as far as he knew.

"We have found his accounts absolutely correct," said Mr. Kennedy, "and there is not a cent missing as far as we have been able to ascertain. The police have been working with us on the case and they are as much perplexed as we are. We have worked quietly and have let nothing of the affair get out until now, for we wanted to have plenty of time to go over the books and see how he stood, and give him an opportunity to show up. It is a very peculiar affair, and we are at a loss to know what to think of it."

this state. Most of the opposition to the bill, according to the speeches of its opponents was based either on grounds extraneous to the Japanese question, or on the argument that its passage would retard rather than hasten the exclusion of the Japanese from this country.

Two sensational surprises were made, one for and one against the measure. Assemblyman Grove Johnson of Sacramento, ex-congressman and author of four bills segregating Japanese in school and residential districts and preventing aliens being members of corporations, made an impassioned appeal for the enactment of the Drew bill. At the climax of his speech, he walked backward from his seat to the lobby rail, and seizing in his arms a golden-haired girl of 3, held her aloft and declared that he was "in favor of this as opposed to the Japanese menace to our institutions."

Nathan G. Cole of San Francisco, who was elected at the indorsement of the union labor party, opposed the Drew bill, on the ground that it was in conflict with the state constitution; that it was inimical to union labor and that it was not favored by the national administration, which he said was dealing with a delicate problem and should be supported by the people of California.

Dramatically confronting Assemblyman Drew, he said:

"If President Roosevelt should throw open the doors of this assembly chamber and, laying his hand on your shoulder, should request for reasons of state that you withdraw your bill, you, Mr. Drew, as a patriotic citizen of the United States, would assent without a murmur."

Drew stated that, in his opinion, President Roosevelt had done all he could to help solve the Japanese problem, but had been unsuccessful. The Federal government, he said, had an unchallenged right to exercise sole control over immigration, but California also had the right to protect the integrity of her soil.

The committee on federal relations rendered a favorable report on Nathan C. Coghlan's joint resolution calling upon the national administration for the maintainance in Pacific waters of a fleet strong enough to defend the Western coast against any nation in the Far East.

"Worse Than Chinese."

Carson, Nev., Feb. 4.—The assembly of the Nevada legislature has passed the anti-Japanese resolution as amended. The amendment eliminates all reference to federal interference, but urges California to pass stringent measures to exclude Japanese. There was but one vote against the measure.

Governor Dickerson says:

"Personally, I would like to see the Japanese excluded from this country and every one of them here deported. I regard them as being a worse evil and a greater menace to our country than the Chinese. I am not in favor, however, of enacting laws or passing resolutions on this subject that will tend to embarrass the national administration in its negotiations with the Japanese government for the restriction of immigration.

"I believe that President Roosevelt is earnestly endeavoring to exclude the Japanese, so far as it is possible for him to do so under present treaty conditions."

Astonished in Tokio.

Tokio, Feb. 4.—No comment has been made by the newspapers of this city on the anti-Japanese resolutions now before the Nevada legislature and the matter is but briefly mentioned in the special press dispatches. The full text of the resolutions has been officially cabled to the foreign office, however, where it was received with expressions of astonishment. Leading men of the capital, who have been interviewed on the subject, while they are very deeply wounded by the attitude taken in Nevada, refrain from comment further than to say:

"Nevada is not America."

The full text of the resolution is not known to more than a dozen persons in Japan at present, and it is impossible to foretell what the general view in regard to it will be until it is published. It undoubtedly will draw excited comment from Japanese jingo press and politicians, but the leading papers and the people of Japan as a whole never express their feelings even under the strongest provocation.

The letters interchanged on the anti-Japanese matter by President Roosevelt and Governor Gillette of California have been published in full by the Japanese newspapers and appear to afford great satisfaction. Official expression as well as the editorial stand taken by the press is one of gratitude at the attitude of the national government in America.

A high official of the government said today:

"Our confidence in the fairness and justice of the American people will remain unshaken through a stronger test than the action of a few men, who do not really represent the sentiment of the public. In Nevada, California and elsewhere, we believe the true sentiment of the people is voiced by President Roosevelt and the leading statesmen and business men. The real danger of such utterances as those contained in the Nevada resolution and similar ones made by persons who entirely misunderstand Japanese ideas lies in the effect they may have on the ignorant people of both Japan and America. The intelligence of both countries should be exercised to muzzle the ignorant and vicious press and individuals."

Leading foreigners and diplomats in Tokio deplore the present agitation in America for the reason that they believe that it may seriously hamper American trade in Japan and possibly throw difficulties in the way of the smoothing of the new treaties between the two countries.

tents the basis because he understood that the iron companies sometimes base their leases on that classification.

When mines are operating, they go into the tonnage tax class, and pay a tax of 2 to 5 cents per ton to the state, depending upon the percentage of iron they contain. Most of the ores now being shipped, practically all, in fact, would come under the 5-cent tax. When mines are not operating, they go into another class and are taxed upon the ad valorem basis both for state and local purposes. A mine may pay a tonnage tax one year, and next year, because it is not operating, it may pay taxes upon an ad valorem basis, as at present. If this bill had been in effect in 1907, the banner year for iron production, the state would have got $1,676,000 instead of $661,000.

Mr. Bjorge devoted some time to anticipating possible legal objections as to the validity of the classification and as to the tonnage tax being a tax on interstate commerce, reading from voluminous briefs which he has prepared. He criticised the present system because, as the iron is shipped out, the taxes will decrease until in time there will be no taxes at all.

L. H. Johnson of Minneapolis asked if the state could not, for similar reasons, levy a similar tax upon the lumber industry.

Mr. Bjorge said that it could, and that the case would be analagous, though it would be pretty late to start it now.

A. K. Ware of Northfield briefly explained his tonnage tax bill, which makes no classification whatever, but taxes all ores mined and shipped at the flat rate of 10 cents a ton for state purposes.

Mr. Bjorge asked him what would happen if a mine produced 1,000,000 tons but did not ship it. Mr. Ware said there would be no tonnage tax in that case until the ore was shipped. Mr. Bjorge expressed the opinion that as the ore would then be headed out of the state, this would be an attempt to tax interstate commerce, and would therefore be void.

Representative Carl L. Wallace of Minneapolis asked Mr. Bjorge if the tonnage tax method is used in any other state. Mr. Bjorge said Pennsylvania used to have it on coal, and has been considering a bill to restore it, but it has been defeated several times in the legislature. The Michigan tax commission, he said, recently advocated it on iron in that state.

Mr. Wallace said he had recently talked with members of the Michigan tax commission, and that they told him that the commission was very much against the tonnage tax system, as they got much more taxes under the ad valorem system, such as Minnesota now uses. The law in that state was held unconstitutional by the supreme court.

Mr. Bjorge stated that this was because the law exempted from the tonnage tax ores smelted within the state, which the court held to be a discrimination. He added once more that the main argument for a tonnage tax is that as the shipments continue, the quantity of iron will decrease, and in ten years the state will not be getting much out of it.

L. H. Johnson asked if new mines are not being discovered and new ore bodies developed, and Mr. Bjorge said that was possible. In response to a similar question from George A. Mackenzie of Gaylord, Mr. Bjorge said he was not familiar with what is going on in the iron country, but thought it probable that new discoveries were being made and would be made.

"Is there any state in the country now using the tonnage tax system?" asked Representative Wallace.

"I know of none," replied Mr. Bjorge.

Representative Congdon of Duluth said that in some of the Western mining states there is a "millage tax," based upon production, but in those states the minerals lie in veins whose extent is unknown, while in Minnesota they lie in flat ore bodies, which can be measured as accurately as a load of hay, so the need of a special form of taxation does not exist in this state. The tax commission has secured full information from the mining companies about their properties in this state, and it is possible to find out as much about them in the offices of the tax commission as it is in the mining offices at Duluth.

R. H. Jefferson of Bingham Lake, one of the tonnage tax promoters of two years ago, who was defeated for re-election, was present, and at the suggestion of Mr. Bjorge, he was called upon to speak. He said that he was not prepared, and would only say that he had seen one natural source of wealth in this state—lumber—practically disappear through faulty legislation, and he hoped the legislature could do something to save the mineral wealth from a similar fate, and to see that the state gets something out of it.

The tax committee recommended for passage the Adams bill, requiring railroad companies to pay a license fee for every car on which liquor is sold in the state, after the license fee had been cut from $100 to $50.

The house committee on elections yesterday afternoon appointed the following sub-committee to draft a substitute primary election bill: Wells, Allen, Dorsey, Holten and Mork.

The committee recommended for passage the following bills:

By Bendixen—Providing for the canvass of the state votes on the third Tuesday in November, instead of the second Tuesday in December.

By Nimocks—Fixing the filing fee for legislative candidates in the primaries at $10, no matter whether they run in one county or several. At present those running in more than one county pay $20.

By Wallace—Raising the voting limit in new precincts to 600, and providing that in cities the polls at general elections shall be open until 9 p. m., as they now are in primary elections.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

drawn up by a committee of lawyers which included N. B. Arnold of Eveleth and W. H. Osborne of Ely. Robert Stratton of Hibbing was selected, but unfortunately did not learn of his appointment until after action had been taken. Messrs. Arnold and Osborne both signed a letter with the other members of the committee, commending the compromise bill to the delegation.

Mr. Stratton appeared at the delegation meeting, however, in bitter opposition to the compromise, which he said would not be satisfactory to the ranges at all. There were other communities besides Virginia, he intimated, which would feel that they were as much entitled to terms of court as Virginia. Besides, the bill provided no resident judge to whom appeals could be made for writs in cases of emergency. The ranges wanted a court all their own, separate and independent from the Duluth court, but having equal powers.

Doubt was expressed by members of the Duluth delegation as to whether or not a bill creating an entirely new court could be passed. Mr. Stratton said that he had been informed that it would be considered a purely local matter, and that if the St. Louis county delegation approved it, that would be all there was to it.

Mr. Congdon assured him that the case is far different, and the other members backed him up. The creation of a new court would arouse fears in the minds of some of the legislators that if superior courts were established in one place, they would quickly be asked for in other places. Besides, the matter of the judgeship, even when it is merely a case of adding an additional district judge to a district, is something that concerns the entire state, and all such measures must go through the judiciary committee.

Thereupon Mr. Stratton was asked whether he would rather have the delegation make a fight for the superior court, even if there was a strong chance of failure, or get what was within reach. Mr. Stratton said the ranges wouldn't be satisfied until the matter is settled right, and that the delegation ought to go after the superior court even if it did go down in defeat.

J. W. Osborne, of the committee of iron range attorneys in charge of the fight for additional court facilities, said that he did not agree with Mr. Stratton. The people of the ranges want relief, and they have no desire to butt their heads vainly against a stone wall. For his part, if nothing better offered, he believed the compromise bill presented by Mr. Williams, would be satisfactory.

The debate was prolonged, and reached no definite basis. Senator Vail wanted to have the matter put over a week in order to find out whether the range people wouldn't rather have four general terms of court each year, than nothing at all. P. E. Dowling of Eveleth said that he thought an attempt might be made with the superior court bill any way, and then if it was obvious that the judiciary committee would not approve it, it might be withdrawn and the other bill substituted.

As the hour was late and no agreement was in sight, the matter was put over for further discussion this afternoon.

Besides the delegation here on the court bill, which included Robert Stratton of Hibbing, N. B. Arnold of Eveleth, J. W. Osborne of Ely and T. E. Grae of Duluth, C. P. Craig of Duluth, Mr. Stratton of Hibbing and P. E. Dowling of Eveleth were here on the bill indorsed by the Country club, providing a county highway commission for St. Louis county, and County Attorney John H. Norton was before the delegation to explain his bill providing his office with a "county detective," to ferret out evidence in important criminal cases.

Mr. Norton showed that while in the city of Duluth there are four detectives to dig up evidence in criminal cases, in all the vast empire of St. Louis county outside the city, there is no such aid to the state's endeavors to enforce the law. He believed that such an officer could make himself so useful that the fines he would be instrumental in imposing would more than pay the cost. The county attorney's office now gets $1,000 a year to be used in hunting up evidence, and as a result several times that much is turned into the treasury ever year from fines.

Representative Congdon wanted to know if such a man wouldn't become so well known as to be unfitted for detective work, and the county attorney said he believed that in such cases the county detective could delegate the delicate work to others under his direction. He objected to the word "detective," however, though he admitted that it describes the prospective functions of this prospective official. In the bill he is called a "special officer."

No action was taken on the bill by the delegation.

C. P. Craig of Duluth presented the highway commission bill, explaining that it provides for a commisson of five men to handle the county's road expenditures. These commissioners are to be paid a nominal salary of $500 a year, are to be appointed by the governor and are to be selected for fitness and personal qualifications, not for politics. The commission would employ a road superintendent to oversee all the county's road work and to see that the road money is spent systematically and effectively.

Mr. Craig stated that the state highway commission authorities inform him that, upon the average, every dollar spent on roads in this state has an efficiency of about 15 cents, the remainder being wasted by unsystematic and unbusinesslike methods. In most counties road money is distributed according to the pull of the commissioners, each of which is anxious to make the best showing possible with the people in his own district.

P. E. Dowling advocated the measure warmly, and expressed his belief that the amount of money now being appropriated by St. Louis county for roads could, if systematically expended under such plan as this, produce hundreds of miles of road every year.

The bill will be acted upon by the delegation later.

Opposition to the bill providing for an additional district judge in the Fifteenth judicial district cropped out in the house in the committee of the whole yesterday afternoon. Everybody who opposed the bill or sought delay denied that politics had anything to do with it, but its friends charged that the motives back of the opposition were political. As a matter of fact, three members of the Republican steering committee of the house either opposed the measure or asked for delay.

Representative Elmer A. Kling of Little Falls asked that the bill be recommended for passage, and made a strong showing as to the need of the new judge. He said that he was a Republican, but he would not sacrifice the needs of the people of his district for partisan reasons. He did not come to St. Paul to represent the Republican party, but the people in his district.

Frank T. White said he wanted more light on the bill, and hoped that progress would be reported.

Elmer E. Adams said politics should not enter into the consideration of a judgeship bill, but he quoted figures tending to show that what the state needs is a judicial redistricting. He said that while the judges in some part of the state were overburdened with work, those in others did not have enough to do.

Lawrence H. Johnson of Minneapolis said he had been up in that section, and he knew that the new judge is needed. He hoped that peanut politics would not interfere with the duty of meeting that need.

Richard F. Grant of Duluth said that he knew that the courts of Itasca county, which is part of the district, are clogged with giltitation, and he hoped the bill would go through.

Representatives Dower and Hinds, who represent counties in the Fifteenth district, said that they understood there was some opposition to the new judgeship in their part of the district, and they also asked for delay.

The situation becoming stormy, Mr. Kling consented to let the matter go over for a time.

Most of yesterday's sessions were very dull, and in the early part of the afternoon's house session in committee of the whole about the most sensational matter was a debate over whether or not the law ought to forbid boys to go into bowling alleys. Representative Mork had a bill on general orders forbidding them this privilege, and Representative Gates of Kenyon said he could see no reason for refusing to let boys indulge in the harmless and healthful exercise. He proposed an amendment, which was adopted, letting boys attend bowling games with the consent of their parents, after which the bill was laid over.

The house in committee of the whole killed the Adams bill repealing the law passed two years ago creating a state farm for inebriates. Mr. Adams, in calling attention to the bill, said that the plan has merit, but that the law of 1907 was carelessly drawn. It is raising about $35,000 a year out of a 2 per cent tax on liquor licenses, but it provides no limit on the size or character of the establishment to be provided, and it lacks perfection in many other details.

Representative Nolan said that a bill could be offered for curing these defects, instead of repealing the law, and he moved that the Adams bill be indefinitely postponed. The motion was adopted.

Speaker Rockne yesterday appointed the following committee to investigate the case of "velvet chaff" wheat, and to see whether or not the state inspection department has done it injustice by putting it in a special and inferior grade: Representatives Holmberg, Bickneil, Lende, Davis and Burnquist.

The house is running rather strongly to investigating committees. There are now more than there were two years ago, and while not every member has been put on a special committee, if the creation of new ones keeps up that condition can hardly prevail much longer.

Yesterday's was the first all-day session of the house—that is, the first session at which an adjournment has been taken from forenoon over the noon hour to an afternoon meeting.

SIMPLE WASH CURES EXCEMA

Why Salves Fail While a Simple Liquid Has Accomplished Thousands of Cures.

It is now thoroughly established among the best medical authorities that eczema is purely a skin disease, due to the germ, and curable only through the skin. It is not a blood disease at all; in fact, thousands of people suffer with skin disease and are perfectly healthy otherwise, and thereby prove they have no diseased blood.

Smeary salves cannot reach the germs because they do not penetrate the skin. The only way to reach the germs is by means of a penetrating liquid.

Such a liquid can be obtained by simply mixing ordinary oil of wintergreen with thymol, glycerine and other healing agents. This compound, known as D. D. D. Prescription, stops the itch instantly—and the cures all appear to be permanent. In fact, it took thousands of cures, case after case, before the best scientific authorities were convinced of the absolute merit of this remedy. D. D. D. Prescription kills the germs in the itching skin. Its effect is seen within one minute after the first application. We especially recommend D. D. D. Soap in connection with the treatment.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York

The Record of 1908.

The fiscal year ending December 31st, was pre-eminently a prosperous one for the policyholders of this Company. In every material respect their interests have been advanced.

Favorable features for the year may be noted as follows:

The assets are now $539,038,968.13, an increase of $44,861,947.10.

The total net reserve for outstanding policies and annuities is $433,137,716.00, an increase of $13,042,974.00.

The reserve held for payment of deferred dividends and other contingencies (so-called "surplus") is $85,844,991.20, an increase of $28,314,221.75.

The premium income for 1908 was $58,994,653.29, an increase of $2,355,453.09.

The total income for 1908 was $84,880,026.81, an increase of $3,705,552.96.

The new insurance paid for (not including revived) was $93,926,992.00, an increase of $45,206,942.00.

The interest and rents received were $244,300,559.94, an increase of $1,466,453.91.

On the other hand, the death claims paid during the year were $21,664,819.77, a decrease of $1,629,213.04.

Increased Dividends.

There has been appropriated for dividends to be paid in 1909 the sum of $11,092,282.38

This sum greatly exceeds the largest amount ever before paid as dividends in a single year by any company. The increase made in the annual dividends of The Mutual Life in recent years, as a result of changes and improvements instituted by the Board of Trustees, is unparalleled.

In Economy of Management the Company Stands Pre-eminent.

The total expense of management (exclusive of taxes) paid in 1908 was $7,123,180.69

This is but 8.39 per cent of the total income—a lower ratio of expense than any American company doing a general business has heretofore been able to show. It has sometimes been asserted that the decreasing expenses of various companies in recent years are due merely to a smaller amount of new insurance written. This is not true of The Mutual Life. Although there has been an increase in new paid-for business in 1908 of $45,206,942.00 over the amount written in 1907, involving an increase of $432,680.83 in first commissions, the other expenses show reduction aggregating $738,799.14, making a net reduction in expense of management of $306,118.31.

FORTUNE FOR HAMLINE.

Methodist University Has Conditional Offer of $75,000.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hamline university has received a conditional promise of $75,000 from the general educational board. This amount will be contributed by the institution founded and endowed by John D. Rockefeller when the trustees of Hamline secure an additional $225,000.

The Hamline trustees some time ago inaugurated a campaign for raising $300,000, the principal part of which should go into the university endowment fund. After the work was fairly under way, President George H. Bridgman went to New York and placed the needs of the university before the general education board. He was promised that the matter would be given immediate attention, with the result that he received word of the conditional gift.

The campaign for the additional $225,000 will now be pushed with vigor, to the end that needed improvements at Hamline may be secured and the university finances placed upon a footing that will be in keeping with the growing institution.

One of the improvements contemplated by the trustees is a new assembly hall, to be used also as a chapel.

LAW MILL CONGESTED

Absence of Judge Cant Clogs Wheels of Justice.

Many Cases May be Continued Until Next Term.

With Judge Cant still engaged in conducting the hearing of the Riddel-Riley election contest at Grand Rapids, and likely to be so engaged until about the middle of this month, the indications are that the trial of cases on the January calendar in district court will extend well into the March term.

Under the circumstances, good progress has been made thus far during the January term, but with only two judges on the bench, the court is seriously handicapped, and it is not at all likely that the court will complete its work before the opening of the March term on March 3. The condition which has come about was unforseen. When Judge Cant went to Grand Rapids it was thought that the election contest hearing would only consume a few days. As it is, nearly every voter in Itasca county has been summoned as a witness and the hearing has settled into a monotonous grind.

Fortunately, the trials so far this term have been universally short, and the promptness of trials has done much to relieve the congestion. Should a long trial come up, however, it would tie the court up, so that a heavy continued list would have to go to the March calendar.

There are but a few more cases on the criminal list, pleas of guilty having done away with the necessity of trials in a large number of cases. The important cases to be tried are those of Frank Colom, charged with murder; Victor Lahti, charged with assault in the first degree, and Frank Spark, charged with larceny in the first degree. The two last named will probably be tried first and Colom will be placed on trial for his life the latter part of the month.

Clara Elizabeth Stirling Defends Herself in Divorce Suit.

Edinburgh, Feb. 3.—Mrs. John Alexander Stirling, a former American show girl, Clara Elizabeth Taylor, today submitted to cross-examination for the last time, in the suit brought for divorce.

In spite of searching questioning, which occasionally broke down her composure and caused a flood of tears, the defendant almost invariably had a ready answer and a plausible explanation for seeming indiscretions.

She stuck to her story that there had been no misconduct between her and Lord Northland, named by Stirling as co-respondent, and just before she left the stand she got an outburst of laughter by replying to the question whether she had given up the idea of marrying Northland, by saying:

"I am not free; Lord Northland could not propose to me yet."

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT FOR ALBERT T. PATRICK.

New York, Feb. 3.—Justice William Gaynor, of the appellate division of the supreme court, in Brooklyn, today granted a writ of habeas corpus, calling for the appearance of Lawyer Albert T. Patrick, now serving a commuted life sentence in Sing Sing for the murder of William Marsh Rice, on March 1, before the appellate division.

William L. McDonald, counsel for Patrick, asked for the writ on the legal proposition that the commutation of the death penalty to life imprisonment by Former Governor Higgins, was not warranted, in that it was a change to a punishment not provided by statute for the crime for which Patrick was convicted, and that the change was to the prisoner's disadvantage in that it was an imposition of a different and greater punishment.

ASKING FOR POINTERS

Other Cities Want to Know About Local Milk Inspection.

Score Cards Making a Big Hit With General Public.

Duluth's campaign for a pure and wholesome milk supply and the fact that it is bringing about such good results has been so widely advertised that communicaitons are being received almost daily by Health Commissioner Patton from different parts of the country, asking for particulars regarding the campaign and requesting pointers for getting better milk at different points named.

Duluth is now getting one of the most satisfactory milk supplies of any city in the country, and the quality of the fluid is being improved right along, as the dairymen make improvements about their places and in their methods of milking, straining and storing milk. It took some little time to get the new system properly in effect, for numerous important changes had to be brought about and they could not be made in a day. In some instances the owners have practically rebuilt their dairies to conform to the instructions of Dr. Patton's deputies.

With very few exceptions, the milkmen have responded cheerfully to the efforts of the health department for bet'er milk, and a rapid improvement has been noted from the start. In cases where the men did not have much money for a working capital, the improvements came gradually at first, but some change for the better was made every week or two, until now almost the point of perfection has been reached in instances where very low markings were given eight months ago.

The system of keeping records and official scoring of all dairies in this district in the health office, where the public may look at them at any time, has turned out to be a good idea. Inquiries for the lists are numerous, and come mostly from women of the city who are determined to give their trade to the man with the highest score. This naturally is an additional incentive to the milkmen to exert themselves to supply good milk, and there is ken rivalry among the dairies to see which shall get the highest score. As a matter of business, it pays to have a good dairy and consequently a high score, for it attracts trade.

Next summer will see a record-breaking number of ice houses among the dairies in the territory tributary to Duluth, for the milkmen are planning to store their own ice this winter and will erect houses large enough to hold a supply that will carry them through a summer. In most cases the dairymen are located near a stream or lake of some kind, so they can cut and store their own ice very cheaply.

THEY MAY DODGE THE JAIL ISSUE

No Feasible Plan Presents Itself to County Board Members.

The February meeting of the county board will be held tomorrow, and the report of the committee appointed to consider the question of providing better jail facilities for the county will be received. The committee will probably hold a meeting this afternoon to decide upon a report, which is not expected to recommend any radical action at this time.

The need for larger quarters to house the county's prisoners is admitted, but the committee has thus far reached no decision as to what may be done. The project to move the present jail to the site of the new courthouse has fallen through, as Third street is too narrow for the passage of the jail, and no other thoroughfare is available. The plan to build a new jail on the courthouse site is opposed on grounds of economy. It is claimed the county cannot stand the expense of a new jail now, when the heavy expense of building the courthouse is on it.

Whether the committee will recommend any additions to the present jail is a question. The jail is crowded all the time, and some move may be made to enlarge the quarters, so that they will be suitable until the county can see its way clear for the erection of a larger building near the new courthouse.

Bids will also be opened tomorrow for the purchase from the county of the site of the present courthouse, exclusive of that portion of the property occupied by the jail and a sufficient space on the west side of the jail for a driveway. If the bids are satisfactory the remainder of the property will probably be sold immediately as the county is in need of funds for the completion of the new building.

Nothing else of importance is expected to develop at the meeting, from the outlook at present. A few road petitions will be heard and there may be some opposition to the granting of a liquor license to G. E. French in the town of French. French's license was revoked some time ago on complaint of settlers in the town and now he wants to start in business again.

VENEZUELA DEADLOCK IS STILL UNBROKEN.

Caracas, Feb. 3.—The deadlock in the negotiations between W. I. Buchanan, special commissioner of the United States and Venezuela for settlement of disputes between the countries, has not yet been broken. Neither side is willing to yield in the matter of the method of arbitration of the cases of the New York & Bermudez Asphalt company and the Orinoco corporation.

BRICKMEN TO RESIST ADVANCES OF CEMENT.

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 3.—The National Clay Machinery association convention here today, elected L. W. Penfield, Willoughby, Ohio, president, and W. N. Durbin, Indianapolis, secretary. It is felt that cement is cutting into the brick trade and it was decided to exploit brick through a publicity bureau, to be started by the organization.

TARIFF ON LUMBER AND RECIPROCITY.

Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota were once great lumber states. Minnesota still has millions of feet of standing pine and the lumber business will be an important one in the state for one and possibly for two decades to come. Yet, in comparison with the growing trade of the Canadian Northwest, the lumber iterests of the three states named are really insignificant. If it is true, as alleged, that the removal of the tariff on lumber will work an injury, it may be doubted if the injury will be at all comparable to the benefit which will come to the Northwestern states and to Duluth and Minnesota in particular, by the adoption of the policy of reciprocity.

Reciprocity with Canada is advocated by pretty much all the leading men of the Northwest; it has found warm advocates, particularly, in Minnesota's senators and representatives. The interests of the border line states, if not all the other states of the Union, are that there shall be as free as possible an exchange of goods between this country and Canada.

The Canadian Northwest will become the home of millions of people; now is the time that favorable trade relations should be established with this great territory, a territory whose resources are great and whose fertile soil is certain to steadily attract settlers and to cause to be built innumerable towns and cities. This vast territory needs what we have to give it, it must find an outlet here through which to market its products. To Duluth, in particular, nothing can be of greater interest than that favorable trade relations shall be established with Canada. This city's growing importance as a railroad center, its unrivaled opportunities to become a great manufacturing center, its exceptional connections by water with the markets of the East—all these things make Duluth the natural objective point of Canadian products and its natural depot of supplies. Duluth certainly cannot afford to overlook the importance of this fact, it cannot afford to shut its eyes to its advantages as a distributing point for the Canadian Northwest. If these advantages are to be realized, the foundation stone must be laid in reciprocity. Upon the broad base of reciprocity, Duluth may build up trade relations with the Canadian Northwest which will constantly increase in volume and in profit and which will eventually be worth to the Zenith City more than any other asset that can be named.

In accomplishing reciprocity, the tariff on lumber will necessarily be removed, and The Herald is inclined to question the assertion that any serious evils will result from such removal. The interests of the Northwest in lumber are not so great that general business will be seriously affected. In fact, lumbermen do not seem to be agreed upon the proposition that the tariff on lumber should stand. Russell A. Alger declared in this city hardly more than two weeks ago, that the removal of the tariff on lumber would not injure lumbermen and that it would not, in his opinion, result injuriously to general business.

It is certain that the policy of reciprocity with Canada is a vital one to all the Northwest and particularly to Duluth. Its importance is such that Duluth must do all in its power to bring it about at the earliest possible moment.

LINCOLN, THE MASTER.

Abraham Lincoln was a great man—great in the truest sense of the word, great in the keenness of his intuitions and in the greatness of his soul. Other men knew more, other men had wider experience, other men were more clever, others far surpassd him in diplomacy, in business acumen, in finance, but none were as great a man as he. He was the master of all men of his time.

Nothing more clearly demonstrated the mastery of Lincoln over his fellows than his relations with Stanton, the great war secretary. Stanton was a rugged man, impatient of restraint and of opinions other than his own. He was a Democrat thoroughly devoted to the cause of the Union. He was a man of wide experience, of great legal learning, a man of iron, utterly devoted to his principles and utterly hostile to anything that crossed them. Lincoln, the backwoods lawyer, he regarded with coarse contempt and coarser speech. The election of Lincoln to the presidency he regarded as an unutterable calamity; by reason of it he despaired of keeping the Union alive. Naturally bitter, this act of unparalleled folly on the part of the American people lashed him to a fury of contempt and criticism of the unschooled, illlettered Lincoln, and seldom, if ever, has a president of the United States been so assailed as was Lincoln by Stanton. This is the man whom Lincoln called to be his secretary of war—a man so hostile to Lincoln personally that he disdained to speak to him, a man who so held Lincoln in contempt that he accepted his appointment because he sincerely believed that unless Lincoln had men of his experience and ability the country was irretrievably ruined. When in the history of the nation has another such appointment been made? But Lincoln knew his man. It made no difference to him what might be Stanton's prejudices concerning himself. For four years the two men worked together, the irrasible, peppery, unyielding Stanton and the merciful, great hearted Lincoln. Again and again did Lincoln outrage the judgment of Stanton by his interference with discipline. Where Stanton was adamant for rigid, military discipline, Lincoln decided according to the dictation of a great heart. And how did it all end? When Lincoln lay dying, his ears deaf to praise or blame, the iron Stanton bent over him, weeping, and said, "This is the man who was master of us all."

Time has swept away the petty heart burnings and jealousies of his contemporaries and of his captious critics. Mortal man must have his failings and his limitations and Lincoln had his, but as a great leader and a master of the hearts and minds of men, he was without an equal in his time and no man in all the world's history has been more than his peer.

ROCKEFELLERS OF JAPAN.

The Mitsui family are the Rockefellers of Japan. Note the form of the statement—it is the family, not an individual Mitsui, that is the rich man of the nation. Japanese society is based upon the family and not upon the individual. This fact has some very important economic effects as a brief examination of the affairs of the Rockefellers of Japan will show.

The Mitsui family is the great business concern of Japan and its powers and influence in Japan are proportionately far greater than that of the Rothschilds in Europe, the Krupps in Germany, the Astors, Vanderbilts or Rockefellers in America. The family as a business institution is of long standing. It was founded back in the time of Chaucer and has been for centuries a great business institution, although it was not until the dawning of the new era in Japan, beginning with the Russo-Japanese war, that it acquired its great political influence. The family are merchants, miners, manufacturers, exporters, bankers and financiers. The volume of their annual business runs into the hundreds of millions and in some years has been equal to one-seventh of the entire foreign trade of Japan. The family has branch establishments in all parts of the world, including New York and San Francisco in this country.

The Mitsui house is a "joint association," composed of eleven different Mitsui families. The effect of making the family the social and business unit in Japan is illustrated by the character of the Mitsui bank. This establishment has a capital of $2,500,000, with a surplus of nearly three times that amount and deposits of $35,000,000. The entire property of the eleven different Mitsui families guarantees the deposits of the bank. The liability of the families or partners is an unlimited one. The same rule holds good in every line of business in which the Mitsuis are engaged. The credit of each business is backed by the collective resources of all the branches of the Mitsui family. The credit thus enjoyed is enormous and the confidence placed in the Mitsui house is almost as great as the confidence which the government enjoys in this country in its financial ability.

No nation can become a world power until it is properly financed. Japan discovered this at the beginning of the war with Russia and it was at that time that the Mitsui family was called in to assist in financing great loans. Since the war the family has obtained a great influence with the Japanese government by reason of the extraordinary services it has been able to render the country. It is practically through the Mitsui family that the nation has learned to put its affairs upon a business basis. Japan has all the resources that are necessary to a great people; in adopting the Mitsui methods it has insured its permanent prosperity and power as one of the great nations of the earth.

The Mitsui family is one of the greatest business institutions in the world and probably the most ancient. By reason of the principle of making the family the unit and not the individual, it enjoys a financial credit greater than that of any other financial house, and through its great services to the Japanese empire it has secured a political influence of which no other business institution on earth can boast.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

Supt. Denfeld of the city schools, in his address before the Commercial club yesterday noon, hit the nail squarely on the head when he declared that we must pay more attention to fundamental principles in our public schools and that "the teacher is the fundamental principle."

The cost of the public schools the country over is practically one-half of the whole burden of taxation. There are ways, and we are endeavoring to get at them, to reduce other taxes, but the amount of money which we spend for our schools must be increased,—and that by a considerable percentage.

The teachers of the public schools are underpaid. Some effort has been made in the past twenty years to increase salaries, but the increases which have been obtained do not measure one-tenth of the increase in requirements for the teaching profession. No woman can prepare to teach in the public schools, perform her work according to high ideals and live on the salary she receives without constantly denying herself the things which such a position needs. Luxuries of any description are absolutely impossible.

The public school returns a greater value for the money than does any other institution supported by public taxation. We cannot afford to cripple it by paying insufficient salaries to the women who teach and form our children. Teachers' salaries must finally be increased at least 50 per cent; the results that the next generation would reap from such a step would be many fold in money, the means of contentment and all that goes to make life worth living.

Supt. Denfeld is perfectly right in his declaration that "we have got to go down into our pockets and dig up before our school system becomes what it should be." Let us leave our children a little less in our wills and put a little more in their character right now.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

There are many parts of Western Canada, even today, where it seems as if the hand of civilization had just begun the work that some day will transplant the wild and virgin wilderness into a farming community, with towns and villages closely related and many settlements marking what is now an almost virgin wilderness.

Edward Hewitt, with his wife and two children, was at the McKay hotel yesterday. Mr. Hewitt and his wife lived in the extreme northwestern part of the Saskatchewan valley for the past ten years, and have watched the slow growth of the western part of the province from an almost uninhabited wilderness.

Mr. Hewitt told last night of driving 120 miles in a dog sled to one of the Hudson Bay posts in search of a doctor, when his wife was taken suddenly ill. He told of not seeing the face of a white man for six long months, of not receiving any communication with the outside world during more than that length of time, and of how it was not until five years ago that the first settler settled near enough to him to permit of visiting and companionship.

The days of the wilderness in Western Canada is past, according to Mr. Hewitt. The coming of the railroad and the numerous extensions, but more than anything else, the discovery of what the land up there in the wheat country is really worth, Mr. Hewitt says, has answered the question as to the future of Western Canada.

"Now they are pushing railroads to the western part of the province," says Mr. Hewitt. "The discovery that the land yields more bushels to the acre than any other land in Canada or the United States, has settled the destiny of the western part of the Dominion. It is destined to be one of the greatest countries in the world. Its growth from now on until Canada becomes a well settled country, will, if something utterly unforseen does not intervene, be of wonderful rapidity, and the development of the country will be astonishing to those who have not thoroughly studied the conditions of the Western country."

Mr. Hewitt was asked about some of the experience he had gone through while living in a practically unsettled portion of the country.

"We had no thrilling experiences to speak of," replied Mr. Hewitt. "For the most part it was ten long years of work. Of course, there were times when the loneliness of the situation beat in upon you despite anything that you could do. There were times when I thought that I would give up the struggle and return to the haunts of man. But with the coming of the first settler to that part of the country, a distance of twenty-five miles from my homestead, it seemed as if a great change had taken place and that the mere knowledge that a white man was in the neighborhood had a most wonderful effect upon me. That was nearly five years ago. Since the coming of the first settler to that part of the province has been more rapid. Today there are settlers within a few miles of us, although the nearest railroad station is over eighty miles away. But each year adds to the number of men in the community, and it is only the question of time before the country is settled as thickly as the farming communities of this state.

"I have watched the growth of the western part of Saskatchewan as only a man who longs for companionship can observe such conditions. I have watched conditions; I have studied the possibilities, and before the lapse of many years there will be a heavy settlement in the great Saskatchewan valley, for the wheat that grows so freely upon the fertile land will draw settlers to the most extreme parts of the province.

"The settlers who have come to the more unsettled parts of the province are a sturdy lot, for the most part; men with character and intelligence, and the future of Western Canada is in good keeping in the hands of the type of men that are coming to the West today.

"The wheat will result in the extensions of the railroads, and they will soon wipe out the last trace of the sweeping stretches of wilderness that today mark the more remote parts of the Western provinces. The enormous immigration that is yearly coming to Canada will soon result in making the country a general farming community, and the song of the wilderness will pass into the history of the Western country."

Mr. Hewitt and his family are on their way to Toronto to visit relatives, whom they have not seen for ten years.

"For about the first time since the catastrophe that nearly wiped out Galveston out of existence, the people down those parts are eating fish and oysters that are taken from the sea in the vicinity of Galveston," said E. A. Cody at the Lenox yesterday.

"Ever since the Galveston disaster, when hundreds of people were burned in the sea, there has been a prejudice against fish and oysters that were taken from the sea anywhere near Galveston. The prejudice is now disappearing, and today the natives of Galveston are eating the fish and oysters, that are the best in the world—the ones that come from near that city. In the past a waiter would lie to you when you asked him where the fish or oysters he was serving you came from. He would never tell you they came from Galveston. However, the prejudice is dying out, and as a consequence the colored waiters down there are not compelled to be members of the Ananais club."

THE WEATHER.

CLOUDY

The mild, cloudy weather of today promises to continue until tomorrow at least. Last night's lowest temperature was 18 degs. above zero. The threatened snow storm failed to materialize.

A year ago the weather was much same as it is today, and will set this afternoon at 5:15, making nine hours and forty-six minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Temperatures have risen quite generally throughout the Northwest, the Upper Lake region and Southern states during the past twenty-four hours due to the influence of a low pressure area that has moved its center from Alberta to Eastern North Dakota. This low pressure condition also caused light rain or snow from the Central Rocky Mountain region westward to the Pacific coast. The barometer is rising and the temperature is falling over Alberta, British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, Nevada and California. Pressures continue high over the Gulf states. The easterly movement of the Dakota depression will be attended by moderate temperatures and snow flurries at the Head of the Lakes tonight and Friday."

Reform's Apotheosis.

Brooklyn Eagle: The parish of Estherwood, La., has adopted an anti-gambling ordinance, which, along with betting on horse races and lottery drawings, and progressive euchres, and grab bags, prohibits checkers and dominoes under penalty of fine and imprisonment. This may be called the ne plus ultra of the moral reform movement, which is sweeping the states from Saratgo to Santa Monica. Louisiana is gradually getting rid of all the diversions of life except the lynching of human beings, and that is regarded down there as more a duty than a pleasure. Louisiana never does things by halves. She leads. Maine, and the other states may follow if they will.

It is to be assumed that the devotees of checkers will enter a demurrer. Some of them will insist that draughts is a game of skill. Technically this is true. There are people who would ironically make the same plea for horse-racing, for lotteries, and for progressive euchres. But if dominoes should be barred, why should checkers be let in? And dominoes can be, and often are, the implements of gamblers. On the whole, the Louisiana plan commends itself as wholesomely drastic, and, therefore, progressively sane. The experiment claims the interested attention of Pan-America.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Pine River Sentinel: Dairying is but a side issue to the average farm in this country, which has everything necessary to make it the grandest dairying section in the world. Don't say that it has been tried and that it is no good. It requires the same degree of intelligence and energy to make money out of dairying as in any other business, and while there are handsome profits derived from this branch of the farm where it is conducted right, it don't necessarily follow that money forces itself upon any man who happens to engage in it in a slip-shop half-hearted way. You may not own any mining stock, but if you have a few good dairy cows and use them rightly you have something every whit just as good. Dairying takes care of the future as well as the present.

Martin County Sentinel: Evelyn Thaw is in St. Paul. The legislature should at once adjourn and the members be hurried home. It may be a deep laid plot of the wicked interests to have Evelyn appear just in time to take attention of the solons away from needed legislation for the welfare of the people.

Alexandria Post News: Evidently many of the members of the house have not experienced the annoyance of a charivari on their wedding day. They have refused to even consider Representative Lobeck's bill placing those demonstrations under the ban.

Hinckley Enterprise: A cry for dynamite at cost, has gone out and an effort will be made to get the state to furnish it, of course without success. That it would be a great help to the newcomers in Northern Minnesota goes without saying—but why not furnish the poor printer with ink and paper at cost! The Lord knows he needs it!

Foley Independent: The necessity for a sixth normal school is apparent to all who are familiar with the crowded condition that obtain in the various schools of the state. However, those towns that are after the proposed school are shooting wide of the mark by causing bills to be introduced that name any particular location. Such a measure only serves to draw the fire of all the other contestants and will have but one ending—defeat. The bill providing for the new school, leaving the selection of the site to the normal board, is the only rational measure, and should be supported.

Detroit Record: The annual report of the postal department shows a deficit of over $17,000,000, brought about, the report says, by the fact that over $20,000,000 worth of mailable stuff was handled by the postal department for the various government departments which deadhead their stuff. If all the matter transported by the postal department had been paid for the statement would have showed an earning of $3,000,000 instead of the enormous deficit above.

Moose Lake Star-Gazette: It is rumored that both houses are very much interested in the $100,000 appropriation asked by the commercial clubs of the state to properly advertise Minnesota, some of the members expressed themselves in favor of it and others intimated the amount should be cut down. If the Canadian government spends hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to get settlers and it has brought results we cannot see any reason why this state should hesitate about spending $100,000 for a country that has Canada "skinned seven ways for Sunday."

"Yes, pop."

Pretty Widow—Certainly not. Your colonel's wife hasn't called on me yet.

Kansas City Journal: "I want to marry his daughter. I get a good salary. Don't you think the mention of that fact ought to pave the way?"

"Sure. Wave the pay under his nose."

Rochester Times: "And have you an ideal man, Miss Gladys?"

"I had an ideal, but he—"

"Your ideal has been shattered?"

"Not exactly shattered, but he is broke."

Chicago Tribune: "I have always heard," observed the doctor, "that President Roosevelt is a good liver."

"How can that be," testily responded the professor, "when he has only one Leob?"

New York Sun: Othello has just smothered Desdemona. "And yet," he cried, "she was never inconvenienced by those new ruffs." Herewith he considered it an accident.

Punch: Officer (investigating old-age pension claims)—Well, Mrs. Brady, and how old might you be?

Officer—Think now. Don't you know the date of your birth?

Mrs. Brady—The date of my birth, is it? Sure, there was no such things as dates when I was born.

MYSTERIOUS BLOOD CLOT

May Have Connection With Disappearance of F. L. Sherwin.

Blood-Covered Club Is Found Near Stain in Lincoln Park.

The finding of a huge clot of blood in the snow near the Lincoln park skating rink, with a blood-covered stick lying six or eight feet distant, yesterday, sent cold shivers running up and down the spine of C. A. Olund, of 615 North Twenty-sixth avenue west.

Mr. Olund thought at the time that it looked as if foul play might have been committed there, but afterward the matter slipped his mind, until today he read of the mysterious disappearance of Frank L. Sherwin, local cashier for the American Express company, and wondered if there could be any connection between the two incidents.

There is just a possibility that Mr. Sherwin went to Lincoln park to skate Saturday night, and that, probably upon his way home, he was attacked and beaten into insensibility, possibly killed, by men who knew him to have in his possession $50 or more. In this case, some disposition must have been made of the body.

The snow is so hard in that vicinity that nothing can be gained from the footprints, and the snow is not fresh enough, nor is there enough of it, to show whether a struggle of any consequence occurred. There is a chance, of course, that a dog or some other animal was killed there, and that the blood is not from a human being.

Mr. Olund came across the frozen blood while taking a short cut across the park, east of the rink. The spot of red covered an area several inches in circumference, and underneath the frozen surface were several clots of the blood. The club, measuring about two feet in length, was found lying not more than eight feet distant. Its heavy end was covered with blood.

The matter has been reported to the police, and an investigation is being made.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Most Popular Because It Is the Best.

"I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past eight years and find it to be one of the best selling medicines on the market. This remedy not only cures the coughs, colds and croup so common among young children, but is pleasant and safe for them to take. For sale by all druggists.

MASQUERADES UNDER THE BAN

No More Mask Balls Will Be Allowed at Armory.

No more masquerade balls at the armory.

At a recent meeting of the armory board it was decided to place the ban on this form of amusement, as the dances seemed to attract the rougher element.

As a result of the frequency with which these dances were given, property owners near the site of the armory registered kicks with the board, with the result stated.

EAU CLAIRE MAN MAKES LONG JUMP

Tolieff Hemmestvedt, Ski Rider, Leaps 140 Feet Without Falling.

Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 4.—There was sure some jumping at the Mount Washington slide yesterday afternoon, and the hopes of the Eau Claire Ski club to break all previous records on tournament days Saturday and Sunday next will undoubtedly be realized.

Accurate measurements were taken of all the jumps made. With very little apparent effort Tolieff Hemmestvedt of the Eau Claire club jumped 140 feet, fair and square, and stood. Norby of the Superior club made a magnificent jump of 138 feet but fell. Little Ingvald Hendrickson, the remarkable boy skier, jumped 128 feet and stood. Quite a large crowd witnessed the sport and it grew very, very enthusiastic when the long jumps were made.

LOOPHOLE IN GAME LAWS

Two Men Arrested for Illegal Fishing, Escape on Technicality.

Charged With Having Set Lines in Otter Tail Lake.

The cases against Mike Sobiska and Andrew Koslakowicz, charged with illegal fishing, were dismissed in municipal court this morning by Judge Cutting, because of a defect in the state game and fish law.

The men were arrested by Deputy State Warden Green last week, who says he found them fishing with set lines in the outlet of Otter Tail lake, to the north of Duluth. Attorney White, acting for the two men, pointed out in court that the law covering this point was ambiguous, and that a close study of it showed that a conviction could not be secured under it, because of faulty wording.

Judge Cutting, before whom the cases came, was forced to concede the point, and dismissed the cases, although it is said the evidence against the alleged offenders was quite clear. An effort will be made to get the present legislature to remedy the defect before the session adjourns, so that future prosecutions may be brought with reasonable assurance of obtaining a conviction, where the evidence warrants.

While the intent of the law is to prohibit fishing with set lines having more than one hook attached, the phraseology of this clause and one relating to the legal number of fish that may be caught in one day, is so intermingled as to make the true meaning doubtful, leaving a chance to secure dismissals of the nature of the two in question, because of the faulty wording.

Sportsmen in this part of the state are very anxious to see the game and fish laws enforced, and the matter will be taken up immediately with the legislature, in an endeavor to have the fault remedied. Fishing with set lines has, it is claimed, been carried on quite extensively in Northern Minnesota this year, and with no law for the protection of fish caught in this manner, the practice will continue unabated. Where before, fishermen setting lines for the market, have had to do so by stealth, they will now be able to do it in the open, apparently without fear of conviction, until the law is changed, and it naturally follows that their operations will be largely increased.

FRANK WAS TOUGH, BUT JAILER M'DERMOTT SENT HIM TO THE MAT

Frank Maki, a big Finn from Virginia, has not the freedom of the corridors at the county jail. Neither has he a cell mate. With great scrupulousness, the jailers see that he does not get out on the chain gang, for Frank is a bold, bad man.

Maki was brought into the jail the other day to serve a thirty-day sentence for drunkenness. The effects of the jag hadn't left him. He had a mild attack of reptile seeing and a pronounced attack of ugliness. When he was turned loose, there was something doing around the jail office for a minute or two.

The chain gang was lined up for the afternoon session on the city thoroughfares. Maki charged through the gang in the big cell room and tore into the chain gang, with both arms swinging and sledge hammer hands knocking them right and left like pins going down before a bowling ball. The gang backed away precipitously, as Maki fought his way toward the door—which was locked.

Maki's advance was suddenly checked when Jailer Peter McDermott took a hand. McDermott has been handling wild men of every kind for several years. He has traces of jiu jitsu that would put most Jap wrestlers to shame. He has hammer locks, half Nelsons, collar and elbow, and cross collar holds of his own, that are sure to do the business. He unloaded a whole carload of them on Maki all at once. The conflict was short and sharp. A couple of brave members of the chain gang went to the mat in the retreat, and the next thing Maki knew, he was reposing in a cell, with very firm bars holding him there and there he will stay until he shows some sweetness of disposition or until his term is up.

ONE LITTLE SLIP COST JIMMY DODD HIS FREEDOM

Misfortune has come to Jimmie Dodd. After a few months of good behavior, he made a slip, which was apparently a return in a measure to the ways which drew him a five-year term in the reformatory. He proved innocent of intention of wrong-doing in the slip, promised to straighten up, signed the pledge, went to work and took a new grip on the simple life, but the slip cost him his liberty. A guard from the state reformatory at St. Cloud arrived in Duluth last night, took him in charge and left with him for St. Cloud this morning. Jimmie will have to serve out the ten months of his term, which still remain.

Jimmie Dodd is a Duluth boy, now about 22 years old. When he was very young his father died and his widowed mother, with a family to support, could not give him proper care. He went the way of wild youth and wound it up with a five-year term in the St. Cloud reformatory. Early last fall he was paroled.

Up to November Dodd lived an exemplary life and his reform was thought to be complete. One night in November he and two companions were discovered in the Sterling wine house about midnight. They denied any intention of burglary and asserted that they had only gone in to play a game of cards. Dodd stoutly maintained innocence of any intention to do wrong and his story was believed. He was released.

He began to do the right thing again. Deetz & Co., his employers, said he was a model workman. Every pressure was brought to bear to induce the board of control to let the parole stand. Deetz & Co., the county attorney, other officials and friends of the family, wrote to the board, stating the facts and urging leniency. It was all of no avail. Jimmie's slip was regarded as serious and he must spend ten months behind the reformatory walls.

FREED OF WIFE MURDER CHARGE

Jury Accepts Man's Statement He Did Not Choke.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Charles E. Holmes, charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Pauline Holmes, was today acquitted by a jury in Judge Brentano's court. Holmes declared his wife's death was due to injuries received during a fit of hysteria. The principal witness against Holmes was his 12-year-old son Howard. The lad told of weakening suddenly at night and seeing his father choking Mrs. Holmes. Mr. Holmes swore that instead of choking her, he was in fact endeavoring to steady her when the attack of illness came on.

BRAINERD HAS BIG SCARE.

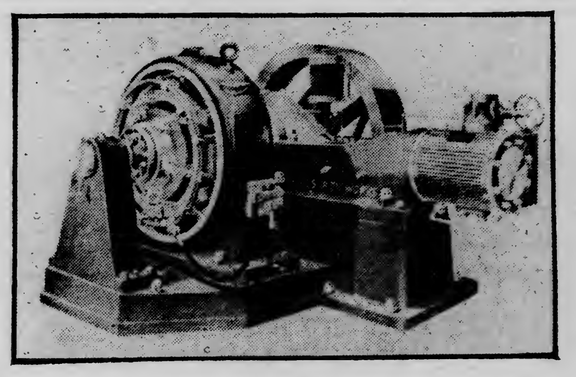

Mad Dog Runs Through Town Biting Canines Before Killed.

Brainerd, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Brainerd had a mad dog scare yesterday forenoon when a collie dog, afflicted with rabies, chased around town for several hours before being killed, and bit a large number of other dogs.

Whether or not any person was bitten is uncertain, as one man reported seeing a dog on Monday grab the leg of a small boy that was catching on bobs. The dog resembled the one afterwards shot and the boy went off limping, but the man does not know how badly the child was bitten, nor for certain whether or not it is the same dog.

The authorities announce that all dogs must be confined hereafter. During the chase after the mad dog a bullet aimed at the dog glanced on the pavement and struck a second story window in the Ransford hotel.

HOW J. P. MORGAN TOOK REVENGE

Forced John W. Gates Out of Tennessee Coal & Iron.

Washington, Feb. 4.—That J. Pierpont Morgan secured a great historical revenge on John W. Gates by squeezing the Gates pool in Tennessee Coal & Iron, in the panic of 1907, and that he did it because Gates several years previously had gobbled control of the Louisville & Nashville and forced Morgan to take it from him at a fancy price, is the theory now entertained by the senate investigators of the steel trust and Tennessee Coal and Iron merger.

It is said that Gates made about $10,000,000 out of his famous coup in Louisville & Nashville, and that Morgan has "laid for him" for years. At length he found the Gates syndicate in Tennessee in a position to be squeezed. He seized the opportunity, and the result was that the Gates crowd was forced out, United States steel got its big competitor and the general financial situation was much involved in the affair.

Sensational stories are afloat to the effect that when this whole business is ground out it will show that the Tennessee Coal & Iron contest was a battle of money giants, worthy to be rated alongside the "Blue Tuesday" struggle of Hill and Harriman for the control of the Northern Pacific or the "Black Friday" panic caused by Gould's corner in gold.

LUMBERMEN'S MEETING CHEERFUL AS A FUNERAL

Big Operators, Gathered in Duluth, Buried in Gloom.

Bugaboo of Tariff Revision Is Constantly Before Them.

There was a representative crowd of lumbermen in Duluth yesterday, and not a single man in this crowd could be found who was willing to say that there was anything good in the present lumber situation.

William Kiser, one of the big operators of Stillwater, who is also interested in a large box manufacturing establishment, was one of the lumbermen who could see nothing but stagnation and low prices and short sales in the present condition of the market.

"There are a good number of lumbermen who have lost heavily in the lumber business, due to the decrease in the price of lumber," said Mr. Kiser. "They secured lumber when the market was higher, were compelled to sell when the price was very low, and as a consequence they have dropped a large sum of money in the transaction.

"It will be the same way if congress passes an act to remove or lower the tariff upon lumber. If the tariff upon lumber is lowered, you will find that the price of lumber—that is the price the retailer will pay to the manufacturer—will decrease, and then you will find that the manufacturers will lose heavily, as they have bought with the market at a higher price and no thought of a tariff revision."

Mr. Kiser is firmly of the belief that if a lumber combine or trust were in existence it brought the best results, if one considered the majority of the people affected.

Mr. Kiser admitted that the lumber trust, if there was one, might crush some of the smaller competitors out of business, but stated that it resulted in higher wages to the working men, more steady employment and more business for the general public.

"If you consider the majority of the people," said Mr. Kiser, "you will find that the lumber trust or combination employing large capital, has been a benefit both to the people and to business in general. The talk about trusts and restraint of trade have worked a great injury to business. The lumber business of today is more than quiet; there is nothing moving. There is a dead market, and it is this talk about trusts and bad business methods, together with the prospect that the tariff upon lumber will be removed, that is responsible for the dull condition of the market.

"We thought that business would improve after the election of Taft. Well, the election is out of the way, yet there does not seem to be avery great increase in the business of the country. Last year the box trade of the country fell off 40 per cent, and as many kinds of goods are sent in wooden boxes, this decrease means a loss of a great volume of business. This falling off in the box industry is another of the results of the agitation about bad business methods.

"I don't believe that business will show any decided improvement until the manufacturers of the country know which way the great question of the tariff is going. Until that question is settled, there will be a period of waiting upon the part of the manufacturers and other business men, to whom the tariff question is one of vital interest."

A. L. Lammers of Stillwater, another large operator, stated that the present market was very dull, and that there was little demand for lumber, even considering that this was the dull season. Mr. Lammers also stated that prices were not what they should be, and that what lumber was being bought was in small lots and at a low price.

Samuel McClure of Stillwater, one of the directors of the Virginia & Rainy Lake Lumber company, was another lumbermen who could see little of good in the present lumber situation. Mr. McClure said the season was more than usually quiet at this time; that until some settlement of the tariff question was made, there was little prospect of a heavy increase in the lumber business.

Edward Hines went further than the others. He stated that the removal of the tariff would result in cheapening the price of lumber to the retailers, but would make but little difference to the consumers.

W. H. Holt and George H. Holt of Chicago, of the Holt Lumber company; J. B. Dunnigan of the Schulte Lumber company, and H. C. Hornby, were some of other outside lumbermen here yesterday. All of these lumbermen agreed that there was little doing, and that at the present time there was little prospect of an immediate betterment of the situation.

New Testament Studies

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON: FEB. 7. Acts iv., 32-v., 11: True and False Brotherhood.

By Rev. J. S. Kirtley, D. D.

THE CONNECTION.

We left Peter and John standing before the council. After Peter spoke, their enemies felt helpless to oppose them, but dismissed them with a severe injunction not to preach again. The report of these two men to the rest of the disciples stirred their enthusiasm. It was followed by a prayer for strength to speak boldly in the face of the threat made against them. A token of God's approving presence was given them—the shaking of the place where they were assembled—and that was followed by a new reception of power from the Holy Spirit and a new boldness in speaking the word. One effect on the disciples is in our lesson.

THE LESSON.

I.

A Sin Against the Church, 32-37.

"And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common.

"And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus: and great grace was upon them all.

"Neither was there any among them that lacked: for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold,

"And laid them down at the apostles' feet: and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.

"And Joses, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas (which is, being interpreted, the son of consolation), a Levite, and of the country of Cyprus,

"Having land, sold it, and brought the money, and laid it at the apostles' feet."

1. Unity of Spirit and Community of Good.

These verses describe the state of things among the disciples and that shows how horrible was the lie that spoiled this noble unity. The disciples as a whole might be characterized by the term unity. They were one in spirit and temper and that was the result of three things—their new birth into the nature of Christ, their incorporation into the body of Christ, and their possession by the Holy Spirit. That unity is described in the phrase "of one heart and one soul," unity in feeling, and in purpose. They had the same experience of salvation, the same joy in Christ, the same allegiance to Him, the same purpose for His cause. A result of this was unity in testimony. They said the same thing; they testified to the same thing. They, therefore, testified in power. The voice of the one who spoke had in it the power of urgency of many voices, "and with power" they witnessed to the resurrection of Christ. It was not only unity in spirit and in testimony, but in comfort. They took care of each other. Their method of doing so was to have a common purse, as far as anyone cared to go into such a plan, and out of that they met all wants.

2. An exceptional case.

It may be again said that this was practiced only in the church at Jerusalem and not elsewhere; that it was practiced there only temporarily; that the apostles never taught it as a duty either there or elsewhere; that it was entirely voluntary; that, as Peter told Ananias, he need not give up his possessions, if he did not want to, there must have been persons in that church who did not practice it and that their standing and fellowship were in no wise impaired. The spirit of the practice is permanent, for it is the spirit of fellowship and stewardship, and Christians must be ready to serve each other with all the means of service in their possession. Those Christians even went so far as to convert their lands into money and put it in the hands of the apostles, for the good of all.

3. A big-hearted Christian.

One instance is given, though there were very many others, and that is given because the person was afterward a prominent man—Barnabas; because he was exceptionally useful just then as a consoling and inspiring speaker in their meetings, so much so that they called him "son of exhortation;" because he was a Levite and he shows that the official class were being won to Christ; because he was so thorough a convert, as seen in his leaving his home up on the Island of Cyrpus and converting lands into money, for the Jews acounted lands more valuable. Against such unity and goodness is the sin of lying committed.

II.

Sin Against God. 1-4.

"But a certain man named Annanias, with Sapphira his wife, sold a possession,

"And kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and laid it at the apostles' feet.

"But Peter said, Annanias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land?

"While it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not thine own power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God."

1. Their names would lead us to expect better things, for "Annalas" means "Jehovah pities," and "Sapphira" means "comely."

2. The company they were in also makes it surprising.

3. It was a voluntary lie, not at all necessary, as Peter tells them, for there was no law of God or man to compel them to give up the land. He could have kept all of the money without doing wrong and could have given part of it, as he did, and held back the rest without doing wrong, provided he did not claim to be giving all.

4. It was a lie prompted by a contemptible motive—the mere motive of vanity. They wanted to get the credit of being very devout and unselfish and sympathetic.

5. It was a stupid lie, for it was an attempt to deceive God, and for the same reason it was blasphemous.

7. It was a satanic lie, for the devil himself inspired it, and they were his willing tools. Yet their responsibility was just the same. It was in their power to repel the diabolical suggestion or impulse, but they did not. It was an insult to God, deliberate and concerted.

III.

A Sin Against Themselves, 5-11.

"And Ananaits hearing these words fell down, and gave up the ghost; and great fear came on all them that heard these things.

"And the young men arose, wound him up, and carried him out, and buried him.

"And it was about the space of three hours after, when his wife, not knowing what was done, came in.

"And Peter answered unto her. Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much? And she said, Yea, for so much.

"Then Peter said unto her, How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and shall carry thee out.

"Then fell she down straightway at his feet, and yielded up the ghost; and the young men came in, and found her dead, and, carrying her forth, buried her by her husband.

"And great fear came upon all the church and upon as many as heard these things."

1. Suicide.

They killed themselves. They slew their hearts and their consciences by the lie itself. The most terrible penalty of sin is not any external punishment that can be visited on the sinner, but the hardening of the sinner, so that he will want to sin more, or at least will become insensible to anything good or sacred. When heart and conscience were slain physical death was better than life. They sinned against their own souls in inviting punishment. The punishment was not arbitrary but retributive. They were members of the church and the church must be relieved of them, and in a way to maintain its holiness and justice. Hypocrisy must be rebuked, else the modern slander that the church makes a specialty of hypocrites would have been a true charge.

2. Protection.

God took their lives to protect His church and administer a wholesome warning to any who were disposed to connect themselves with the church for gain. Peter hardly seems to have thought the punishment would come so soon; he must have been surprised. The effect of all this was to gather a crowd and fill them with awe, as they thought of such a sacred thing as the church, whose sanctity was minifested and protected so wonderfully. The disciples impressed the people and were themselves awed by the manifest presence of God.

Note (1.) This retribution was from God and made the people sensible to God. (2.) It was without human vindictiveness, for not one word of unkindness was spoken. (3.) It was just for Peter explained to Sapphira, especially, how they had sinned unnecessarily, and he graciously gave her a chance to abandon the purpose to deceive. (4.) It was kindly, for they buried the man with all the kindness posible and gave her time to repent. (5.) It was prompt and thorough, for there was just time enough to take him out for burial and return when she came in.

The effect of all this was marked. It taught the church a lesson—that it must be kept pure and unspotted from the world. It taught the disciples, as persons, a lesson—that God was to be always with them, "keeping watch above His own." It taught the world a lesson—that they must not try to make gain of the church; that they are always in the hands of the living God. It taught our present age a lesson—that God will not allow men to make merchandise of his church. It set us an example at the very beginning of what God wanted His church to be till the end.

Thus the first persecution ended in calling out more of the power of the church and setting it into more intense and powerful witnessing for Christ. They will grow still more rapidly after the presecution and after this tragic fate of hypocrites.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

It was freely conceded that he was under no obligation to give all his substance, nor, indeed, any of it, but he must not lay his hands on that sacred reputation which he did not deserve. It is sadly easy to set this sin forth by modern illustration. The common understanding today, at least in the church, is that when a man attends its worship and participates in the communion he is a good man. It is not difficult for the blacked hypocrisy to avail itself of this presumption and pose before God's people as piety. —Stifler.

Consciously or unconsciously the parrator of this story has thrown up into view the fearful mystery of sin. Sometimes we seem to concoct it alone and unaided. We deliberately conceive it in our heart. But again we feel caught and swept along by some impulse breathed into us from the outside. This it is that makes life so tragic. You may be innocent and well disposed, but the Zeit Geist, the spirit of society or business, satan the devil, whatever it is, seizes upon you and whirls you away. I will warrant you that Annaias would not have explained his sudden collapse without declaring that this awful something had thus, as it were, overpowered him. But mark this—he still felt it to be his own deed. The comfort of blaming the devil for our wrongdoing is short-lived. The final testimony of reflection, of consciousness, of the soul itself is, "Thou didst it!" "Thou conceivedest this thing in thine own heart."—Goss.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

1. If one belongs to Christ and the church, to what extent do his belongings belong to them?
2. Is it wise to give away every thing we have?
3. How can every cent of our money be converted into character?
4. Is the acted lie always as bad as the spoken?
5. Does God settle with us here?
6. Would a similar case of punishment help the cause now?
7. Is the church ever exploited, these days, for personal gain or glory?

HOISTING ORE AGAIN.

No. 2 Shaft of Tamarack Repaired and Restored to Service.

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—Hoisting operations have been resumed in No. 2 shaft of the Tamarack mine after being idle for about a week for repairs.

A week ago the dummy cage in the auxiliary shaft caught on top of the tool cage as it was coming to the surface. The tool cage carried it some distance up the shaft, when it fell away, breaking the rope and dropping down the shaft. In falling the dummy damaged the timbering of the shaft, making it necessary to close down the shaft until repaired.

Bronchial Troubles

ALMOST INSTANTLY RELIEVED

MISS EVA CARTER

Anyone whose bronchials have been weakened by frequent colds will rejoice with Miss Eva Carter, of Denver, Colo., who was subject to bronchial trouble for years, but finally found a remedy that affords quick relief.

Miss Carter's Letter

"I have been subject to bronchial trouble for years, and never found anything that gave me the almost instant relief that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy does. Every cough or cold I would contract seemed to affect the bronchial tubes. The phlegm was very disagreeable and troublesome, and before used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy would hang on for months at a time. Now a bottle or two of this remedy is all that is required to rid me of this unpleasant bronchial trouble. I am only too pleased to recommend it."

SMOKE — THE BEST CIGAR--BEST TOBACCO! — SMOKE

LA VERDAD.

Stop That Indigestion!

Kodol will do it. If it fails it costs you nothing. All forms of Dyspepsia can be traced to Indigestion.

Indigestion hurts in so many different places.

There may be simple discomfort in the mouth, stomach or bowels—this is just the beginning. The use of Kodol should be the end.

You may have pains in the head or be attacked by an overpowering sleepiness in the daytime and wakefulness at night.

You may have aches in the joints, trembling in the limbs, bowel troubles, heart palpitation, disordered nerves—even falling hair.

The thing is to keep the digestive apparatus right—then you will be right.

Kodol will do this.

Try it the next time you feel bad from whatever cause. If the trouble comes directly from indigestion, it will be over almost as soon as you have swallowed a spoonful of the liquid. Kodol will tone up the system.

Kodol is a liquid because nothing in dry form can be so combined as to do all that Kodol does. Because it is a liquid, Kodol reaches the spot quickly. Kodol relieves all pain anywhere in the digestive tract, almost instantaneously. Kodol takes care of all undigested food wherever found. It works as Nature does, extracting the nourishment and expelling the refuse so that the body gets all the benefit of every bit of food taken into the mouth.

These are facts. Prove them by a free trial of Kodol.

Kodol is as harmless as it is helpful.

There is nothing mysterious about it.

We have perfected a liquid which duplicates as exactly as possible all that Nature supplies for digestion. We called it Kodol and now tell others about its value.

There is nothing like Kodol; nothing but Kodol which will do the work which Kodol does.

There is no other digester, which will take the place of any or all of the digestive processes. There are some which will take care of one or two classes of food. There is not one, but Kodol, which will always supply any element needed, no matter what it is. No other will entirely and naturally relieve stomach and bowels.

Indigestion must end entirely if all the digestive functions are to be resumed. Kodol begins its work as soon as it is taken into the mouth. It continues it in the stomach and intestines. It mixes with food and begins digestion as quickly as the same elements do when supplied by the natural digestive apparatus.

Food then can't ferment. It can't harden and irritate the delicate membranes of the stamach.

Kodol in the home, means healthy stomachs.

Healthy stomachs, mean clear brains and strong bodies.

Clear brains produce good work. Strong bodies make life joyous.

These are facts. Prove them by a free trial of Kodol.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

BASEBALL LEAGUE A GO

Semi-Professional Circuit Known as Lake Shore League.

Five Duluth and Three Superior Teams in List.

The new semi-professional baseball league that will be shortly organized in Duluth will be known as the Lake Shore Semi-Professional Baseball league, and will include five Duluth teams and three Superior teams, and possibly a team representing Two Harbors, and one other club to be decided upon later, making a ten-club league.

The plan suggested in The Herald some two weeks ago met with instant favor, and the matter was at once taken up by the several managers, with the result that a meeting will be held shortly, at which time the league will be organized.

Practically every team in the city, except the Fitwells, and the teams already entered in the Commercial league, will be entered.

This will put the game on a sound basis in Duluth and will assure good sport for the lovers of home talent baseball.

Harry Gran, manager of the Oak Hall team; Will Brun of the Clipper team of Superior, and Manager Lavail of the Spalding aggregation, are enthusiastic over the plan and express the opinion that the league will be a sure go. One more team is desired to make the circuit of ten clubs, and any team that wishes to be admitted can get information concerning the new league by addressing any of these three men. The teams that at this time look favorably on the idea and have expresstd themselves as willing to enter, are: Clippers, Billings Park and South Superior, all three of Superior; Spaldings, Duluth Heights, Oak Halls, Hummers, and Adams, of Duluth.

A team from Two Harbors will also be entered and probably another from Duluth or Superior. The Columbias and Kelleys are considering the matter and it is likely that either of these teams will enter.

Some time this week or the first of next, a meeting will be called at which time the several managers will go over the plan together.

MICHIGAN TO BE MET AT FOOTBALL

Two Gridiron Contests Arranged Between Gophers and Wolverines.

Minneapolis, Feb. 4.—The athletic board of control of the University of Minnesota announced last evening that a game of football will be played between the University of Michigan and the University of Minnesota Nov. 20, 1909, thus resuming an athletic relationship that has been severed for five years. The game will be played on Northrop field, Minneapolis. The last game between these universities was played in the fall of 1903, the game resulting in a 6 to 6 tie.

The contract signed by the two universities calls for two games, the second to be played at Ann Arbor, Mich., in 1910.

LAMY WINS AT SARANAC LAKE

Outdoor Championship Skating Races Witnessed by 3,000 People.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Three thousand persons witnessed the preliminary events of the international outdoor amateur skating championships held under the auspices of the Saranac Lake Athletic association on the Pontiac rink yesterday. The weather was cold and ice hard.

Edmund Lamy, the amateur champion, who competed despite rumors that he would not be allowed to do so, won the four heats in which he started, in clever fashion. Especially was this true in the three-mile race, in the last lap of which Lamy was last until the back stretch was reached, when he pulled ahead and won handily by twenty feet.

The question of Lamy's eligibility was raised because he competed in races at Cleveland before, it was charged, he had registered at the National Skating association. Fred H. Tucker, chairman of the racing and registration committee of the Eastern Amateur Skating association, said yesterday that Lamy had violated no rule of the association and therefore would be permitted to start.

CANADIAN SPEED SKATER LOOKING FOR RACE HERE

"BILLY" SLOAN.

"Billy" Sloan of Winnipeg, a Canadian speed skater, is in Duluth, and would like to arrange matches with any of the fast skaters of Duluth or Superior.

Has Duluth another Jack Johnson "in her midst?"

Walter Whitehead, the colored boxer, has been beating up his opponents with pleasing regularity, and disposing of them in a neat, effective manner that arouses admiration. There is no stalling, or funny work with Walter. He simply stands up to his man and beats his head off. He apparently has a punch like the kick from the business end of an enterprising and healthy mule. True, Walter has not met any of the top notchers yet, but he has been up against some tough boys. The range people brought one of the stockyards' favorite sons up to meet Walter, and the stockyard boy went to dreamland over the usual route. They don't raise lawn tennis players around the stockyards, and any one who graduates from that school is generally tougher than a Methodist minister's son. Walter will meet the Kerry Kid of Superior next week. The Kerry Kid is a big, strong fighter and if Walter disposes of him in the same handy manner, he will be slated for bigger game. Willie is the next stepping stone, and there is no telling how far the dusky one will go if he continues to slip over those insomnia killers of his. On the other hand some first rater may come along and hit Walter so hard that he'll lift him right out of his shoes. But meanwhile you have to give it to Mr. Whitehead. He is the saccharine kid for the time being.

If this Marathon racing epidemic keeps spreading, they will be pulling off fat men's Marathons next summer at picnics of the United Order of Knights of Arabia, and the Water Carriers' union, and Duluth people will see fat men clad in jerseys and knee trunks, puffing down Superior street with the throttle wide open, and shedding a pound a block. They started the game in New York. Then it spread to Chicago, St. Louis and Minneapolis, and scarcely a day passes that Dorando doesn't beat Hayes, or Hayes beat Longboat, or Longboat beat Dorando. Schoolboys are getting into the game, and holding Marathon races. Next the ladies colleges will take it up, and it may yet replace the potato race as the popular form of amusement for summer picnics. A little twenty-six mile jaunt down Superior street and back, ought to put a man in shape to go after the chicken pie and the potato salad with a clear conscience, and in a whole hearted manner.

To the proverbial man up a tree it looks as if James J. Jeffries were stalling and getting considerable free advertising for his vaudeville engagement. Jeff must have needed a little ready money. An alfalfa ranch is not always what it is cracked up to be.

CLOQUET AGANST AITKIN.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—The basketball game next Saturday evening at the local high school building between Aitkin and the Cloquet high school teams promises to be one of the best games of the season. Last year the two teams each scored a victory, and considerable rivalry exists for this reason.

Racing in Texas.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 4.—Advices from Austin are to the effect that the house committee, after a lengthy session of hearings, has finally decided to favorably report a bill creating a racing commission for Texas. All matters referring to racing are to be passed on by this commission. Meetings are to be limited to fifteen days under the auspices of any one association, and to thirty days within any one county; an absolute ban upon pool rooms or selling information to pool rooms within the state; the commission to control the betting, which must be under the Paris mutual system. The percentage, however, is all to go to the association holding the meeting.

CRICKETERS FOR WEST INDIES

American Team Will Play Match Games at the Islands.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 4.—An eleven of Philadelphia cricketers started today on a trip of twenty days to the West Indies, playing against Port Antonio, Jamaica, on Feb. 10, and staying there the remainder of the week. Another match will be played at Montago Bay and a week will be sent in Kingston. The last match of the hour will be against the combined cricket strength of the island. The return is booked for Feb. 24. The team will include: J. H. Mason, captain; P. N. Le Roy, Capt. J. J. MacDonogh, Edward Norris, W. P. Wright, C. H. Winter, R. L. Pearson, W. P. O'Neill, W. P. Newhall, W. V. Horden, H. G. Pearce, S. W. Mifflin and J. R. Conyers.

FAIRMOUNTS ARE DEFEATED

Northern Juniors Win From West Enders by a 4 to 1 Score.

How They Stand.

Club—	P.	W.	L.	Pct.
Northern Juniors	1	1	0	1.000
Bryants	1	1	0	1.000
Lesters	2	1	1	.500
Adams	2	1	1	.500
Fairmounts	2	0	2	.000

Last night at the Central rink, Tenth avenue west and Third street, the Northern Juniors defeated the Fairmounts at hockey, by a score of 4 to 1.

The game was fast and hard fought throughout, but the uniors seemed to have it on the Fairmount team when it came to team work, and although the West end boys showed considerable improvement over their playing in former games, their work was not up to that of the Juniors.

Clark played a strong game for the Fairmounts and it was due to him that the score was kept as low as it was.

The forward line of the juniors played together in great shape, and, considering the fact that this was their first game, the work of the aggregation as a whole was of high order.

McFadden scored first for the Northerns during the first five minutes of play. In the second half he repeated, after about two minutes of play, and Steinbeck followed with two beautifully executed goals. Black of the Fairmont team took the puck down the ice unassisted for the only score made by the West end team.

The line-up follows:

Taylor	right wing	Clark
Steinbeck	rover	Crosby
McFadden	center	Black
Holgate	cover-point	Meldahl
MacCrea	point	Bethune
Feetham	goal	Osdahl

The Bryans and Adams Alumni teams will play Friday evening and the game promises to be fast.

"Lucky" Baldwin Dying.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 4.—E. J. Baldwin, aged horseman, was reported dying of heart disease at his ranch, at Santa Anita, last night.

Bout Called Off.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 4.—Because of the announced intentions of the authorities to interfere, no effort was made last night to pull off the scheduled bout between Ad Wolgast and Tommy Sullivan. An effort will be made to have the bout in Hot Springs, but promoters in that city declare it is not possible in this section.

TWO PLAYERS ARE REINSTATED

Chase and Weimer Are Subject to Heavy Fines, However.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 4.—Hal H. Chase, firstbaseman of the New York American league team, and Jacob Weimer, pitcher of the New York National league team, were yesterday reinstated by the National Baseball commission, on conditions that they pay fines of $200 and $150 respectively. In the Chase decision, it is stated:

"Hal Chase was regularly under contract with the New York American league club during the season of 1908. He left that club about the middle of the season, giving his principal excuse as ill health. The player went to his home on the coast, and then joined one of the teams in the California state league, which is an outlaw organization. The player now applies to the commission for reinstatement.

"The commission has made quite an extensive examination into this case, and we would feel inclined to reinstate this player without inflicting any penalty, had it not been for the fact that he played with and against teams harboring ineligible players. His application, therefore, for reinstatement, is granted conditioned that he pay a fine of $200, which fine will have to be paid to the secretary of the commission before the player will be eligible to participate in games with any club operating under organized baseball."

In the Weimer case the commission says:

"It appears that he was under contract with the Cincinnati National league club during the season of 1908, and was released by them to the New York National league club about the middle of the season, but the player refused to report to that club. Later on he was found playing with and against clubs harboring ineligible players in Chicgao. He now applies to the commission for reinstatement, giving as his reason for not reporting to the New York club the illness of his wife.

"The commission would have no hesitancy in reinstating this player player under the conditions named, were it not for the fact that this is the second time that he has failed to report to the club having title to him; the second time he has participated in games with clubs harboring ineligible players. He has applied for reinstatement before, which was granted, and a fine of 100 inflicted against him. His application for reinstatement is again granted, conditioned, however, that he pay a fine of $150, which fine will have to be paid to the secretary of the commission before the player will be eligible to participate in games with any club operating under organized baseball."

HORSES UNDER HAMMER.

Wilkerson, a Fast Green Trotter, Brings Good Price.

New York, Feb. 4.—The stars of the third day's midwinter sale by the Fasig-Lipton company of light harness horses in Madison Square Garden yesterday were Wilkerson, said to be the fastest green trotter in America, and Henry Setser, which last year, as a 3-year-old, trotted a mile in training in 2:08¾. The horses were bid in by A. Johnson of Brockton, Mass., for $6,300 and $5,300 respectively.

Other good prices realized today were as follows: Fleming Boy, bh., W. R. Cox, Manchester, N. Y., $3,100; Dulce G., ros, C. F. Dean, Palatine, Ill., $2,500; The Friend, blk s., B. A. Rosenthal, New York city, $2,175.

With the Curlers.

Woodruff's rink last night defeated Nichols' rink 15 to 11 in The Herald event and the score counted also in the President's event. Feetham played Oldham for the Board of Trade buttons and lost out by a score of 11 to 8. In the Manley-McLennan event W. A. Dinham defeated E. B. Gridley 16 to 4, and Walter Hall turned the same trick on James McLennan, 11 to 8.

Play in the St. Louis event will be begun tonight.

MRS. DUNPHY IS HELD INNOCENT

Jury Decides She Did Not Steal From Money Lender.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Mrs. Martha Maybelle Dunphy, wife of Dr. John W. Dunphy, a prominent physician of Boston, was yesterday acquitted by a jury of the charge of having stolen $8,000 worth of jewelry and securities from Charles E. Giles of Dorchester, Mass., a money lender. The jury deliberated less than thirty minutes.

When the verdict was read Mrs. Dunphy buried her face in her handkerchief for a moment and then rushed across the courtroom to shake hands with the jurors. Many women were present and Judge Clifford had to rap for order to silence the audience. Giles, who had charged that Mrs. Dunphy broke into his trunks at a hotel and took the valuables in his absence, stood in the corridor outside the courtroom when the verdict was announced. Mrs. Dunphy, who has been working in a department store during the trial, said she had not decided whether she would return to Boston or not.

Preceding the retirement of the jury, Attorney James Brady for the defense, attacked Giles. "The rate of interest, 100 per cent, that Giles charged as a money lender shows what kind of a man he was," said Attorney Brady, addressing the jury. "His own testimony shows that he pursued Mrs. Dunphy from one part of the country to the other to force her to marry him. He has robbed her of her social position, her husband and every one of her relatives except a gray-headed mother. If he is getting the interest he charged Mrs. Dunphy he will have all the money in the United States in the next few years. He told deliberate falsehoods to induce you to send the woman to the penitentiary. Mrs. Dunphy proved without a doubt that the diamonds were hers and as she said, gave them to him for security. She showed you the bills showing where she purchased them and how much she paid."

Worth Knowing.

That open air exercise, preferably some definite work or play, is an excellent beautifier and that exercise in a room is better than none at all. That golden grain belt beer is unequaled as a food tonic and a preventive of nervousness and indigestion, makes rich, red blood and rebuilds wasted tissues. NEBRASKA QUINT TO PLAY GOPHERS

Two Basketball Games Booked With Cornhuskers' Strong Five.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 4.—Nebraska's basketball five will be here Friday for two contests with the Gophers at the University armory. The Cornhuskers are a somewhat puzzling quantity this year, as not even by the most roundabout comparative scores for the present season can the Minnesota basket tossers be compared with the Nebraskans. The latter are playing most of their games with the Missouri vally conference institutions, and the only big eight teams whioh they are scheduled to go up against are Iowa and Minnesota.

The schedule of the visitors is a long one, and one that has so far given them a great deal of training. This should have made them fit and experienced by this time, and as a result the locals are prepared to meet no insignificant team, but one made up of players in an advanced stage of the game. Capt. "Christy" Hansen's team has been started at its most strenuous practice of the season. After these two contests, three weeks will intervene before the Gophers have another game on their home floor.

Attell vs. Eddie Kelley.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 4.—Abe Attell of San Francisco and Eddie Kelley of New York, will fight a ten-round bout tonight before the Southern Athletic club for the feather weight championship of the world. This will be the third time the men have met. Attell knocked Kelley out inside of ten rounds on each former occasion.

Cock Fight Raided.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Sheriff Jerge early today raided a cock fight on the outskirts of the city. Over 100 men were arrested and seventy-five dead and live birds were captured. The prisoners include men from Ohio, Pennsylvania, Canada and down state points

John L. in St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain passed through St. Paul yesterday on their way to the West. John was wearing a bandage over his eye as a result of Kilrain's eagerness in a sparring bout. Sullivan does not believe that Jeffries will ever fight Jack Johnson. John admits that he has been asked to consider an offer to become athletic director at Harvard.

IMPROVEMENT IN IRON TRADE SLOW

Cutting Down on All Products, Except Rails, Noted.

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 4.—The Iron Trade Review today says:

"Some mills report an increase in specifications against contracts in January as compared with December, their increase being largely in the heaviest products, but improvement comes very slowly and there is cutting on all products except rails, although quotations are fairly well maintained on tubes. More general cutting in sheets has been a development of the past two or three weeks. There has been no formal discussion as to prices, but it is probable that last year's quotations will prevail. Three blast furnaces are now in operation at Gary, with a capacity of 13,500 tons per month each. The Steel corporation has slightly more than 57 per cent of its blast furnace capacity in operation.

The pig iron production of the country for January was almost exactly the same as for December. The pig iron markets are very dull, and in some sections there is a tendency toward weakness, especially in the South where lower prices seem to be inevitable, unless the smelt should show a good increase. In the Cincinnati district, scrap dealers and other speculators have on hand about 25,000 tons of pig iron. This fact is a menace to the strength of the market, which up-to-date has been pretty well maintained by the furnaces.

The principal railroad order for the week was 2,200 steel cars for the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, and the Chesapeake & Ohio also ordered 500 cars. Of the Pennsylvania car order, the Cambria Steel company will build 1,000 cars, the American Car & Foundry company 600 cars, the Pressed Steel Car company 500 and the Standard Steel Car company 100 cars. The Chicago & Northwestern has ordered 20,000 tons of Bessemer steel rails and 10,000 tons of open hearth rails; the Rock Island has ordered 28,000 tons of Bessemer rails, the Tooelee Valley will take 5,000 tons of rails from the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, and the Pennsylvania Steel company have been awarded the contract for 7,200 tons for canal work. In structural material keen competition continues. The Cramps are figuring on from 7,000 to 9,000 tons of plates and shapes for collier work. Some mills report increased specifications on steel bars. On plates, conditions are unsatisfactory and the cutting is from $10 to $20 per ton. One important interest reports a steady increase in orders for heavy materials, some of which will be exported. The City of Mexico will have a letting, March 10, on 12,000 tons of cast iron pipe, principally four to thirty-two inch. The old material market has experienced further declines in nearly all centers and very little business is being transacted. The coke market is possibly a shade stronger, but some very low prices are still being made for prompt delivery on both furnace and foundry grades.

"REMEMBER THE MAINE."

Cubans Send Dispatch to Secretary of Navy Newberry.

Washington, Feb. 4.—That "Remember the Maine" still has a place in the Cuban heart was brought to the attention of the navy department when Secretary Truman H. Newberry received a dispatch from the veterans of the war of the independence of Cuba, who visited the new battleship Maine in Havana harbor on Jan. 26, expressing their admiration for the American navy, their gratitude for the work it has done for Cuba in 1898 and since, and assuring the department of their appreciation of the American sailors who went down with the old battleship Maine on Feb. 15, 1898.

The dispatch of the Cuban veterans is signed by Gen. Glacia Nelez, Gen. Bravel, Col. Hartelli, Col. Goeerich, Col. Wandiego, Col. Heldin and Col. Athay.

The new Maine, through a close calculation of her officers, steamed into Havana harbor on Jan. 25, exactly eleven years to an hour after the famous old Maine threaded her way through the Spanish craft to the fatal buoy that marked the place that was to be her grave. Gen. Magoon has told in his report of the interest and enthusiasm of the people of Havana in the big gray fighter. Dozens of small craft swarmed about the namesake of the old ship whose bones lie resting and rotting in the harbor, and many visited the Mississippi, which went with her.

The Only Ash Sifter

Made For Furnaces.

The Shovel-Sifter works right in the ash-pit without dust or litter. So simple, it is a wonder that the man who invented the furnace didn't make one to go with it. Fill it with ashes and shake it, just like a corn-popper, right in the ash-pit, bank your fire with the coal saved and put the ashes into a handy receptacle. Made of one solid sheet of steel, durable as any shovel, three-eighth inch perforations, saves every particle of coal as big as a kernel of corn.

THOMAS LOWRY DIES

his lessons in life, and, like all boys of his time, was put to work on his father's farm in the summer, attending the village school during the winter months; and, fortunately, his educational facilities were exceedingly good for that time. In 1863 he entered Lombard University at Galesburg, Ill., but owing to ill health was forced to leave that institution before graduating. After leaving college he entered the law office of John C. Bagby, at Rushville, Ill., with whom he studied until May, 1867, when he was admitted to practice in all the courts of Illinois.

Came to Minneapolis.

Thus equipped with a good education and a profession, young Lowry turned his face to the new Northwest to begin for himself the battle of life. While seeking a location in the spring of 1867, he came to Minneapolis, and was soon favorably impressed with the thriving village that he determined to settle there. He at once began the practice of law, and continued his professional career successfully until about 1884, when the large personal interests he had secured in various important enterprises, pertaining to the growth and development of both the cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul forced him to abandon his chosen profession. Successful as Mr. Lowry had been in the practice of law, he had no sooner accepted the responsibilities of these new interests than he at once developed that wonderful talent in the administration of business affairs which has since contributed in a most remarkable degree to the "Twin Cities" of the Northwest. Most conspicuous among the many important interests with which Mr. Lowry has been identified, and has largely controlled, are the street railway systems of the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Taking control of the street railways of these cities in their early infancy, when the one was but barely self supporting and the other in helpless bankruptcy, Mr. Lowry carried them forward until the short tramway lines, operated by "one-horse" power, of a few years ago have grown into the most extensive and thoroughly equipped electric street car system to be found in the world. Mr. Lowry also obtained control the the street railway systems in Duluth and Superior, which have also been greatly extended and brought up to date in equipment and service.

President of the Soo.

In addition to his street car interests, Mr. Lowry has been prominently identified with the railway enterprises of the Northwest, contributing largely to the construction of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railway, of which he became a director in 1886. He became the president of the road in 1889, and has been instrumental in making it one of the great railway systems of the Northwest. Mr. Lowry was also financially interested in many large corporate interests of the Northwest, and until the past three years, when illness curbed his activity, he was instrumental in promoting the general business growth and commercial and manufacturing interests of Minneapolis. Mr. Lowry was married in 1870 to Beatrice M., daughter of Dr. C. G. Goodrich of Minneapolis. To them were born two daughters and one son, who, with Mrs. Lowry, survive him.

A Remarkable Man.

Mr. Lowry was a Republican in politics, but was never a candidate for any office. A prominent author and statesman who knew Mr. Lowry intimately for many years, said of him a few years ago:

"Something more than stereotyped phrases are needed to describe the altogether exceptional characteristics of Mr. Lowry. The fact is, he is sui generis—a remarkable man in many ways. Among the thousands of his acquaintances all over the country there are none who do not regard him as a prodigy of endurance as well as of pluck and perseverance. It is a general remark that the strain which he has undergone with seeming ease would kill most men. Yet to all outward appearance he remains unvexed and unwearied. Let the skies be cloudy or bright, it is all the same. The anxieties of business do not rob him for a moment of that smile and hearty handshake with which he greets all.

"Mr. Lowry has an aptitude for story telling to illustrate a point scarcely inferior to that of Abraham Lincoln, and many is the victory he has won at the bar, before legislative committees, and with boards of aldermen by the happy application of a story which clinched an argument better than an hour of eloquent oratory.

"Mr. Lowry's capacity for work is wonderful. One would naturally look for scores of clerks, messengers and agents about his office and expect to encounter delay in securing an audience; but instead of this a couple of quiet, capable men, as unassuming as himself, are found in the outer rooms, and it is very rarely that a caller is kept waiting beyond a few minutes. Yet ask for a document relating to business in which you are concerned, and which you think he, as well as you, has well-nigh forgotten, and in almost less time than it takes to write it the paper is forth-coming, and the facts are recalled by him with a particularity that astonishes you.

Very Popular.

"If asked to name the most popular man in his home city, there would be one voice in selecting Mr. Lowry. And this popularity extends far beyond business circles or personal acquaintances. Thousands who have never met him are familiar with his jokes, his generosity, his benevolence, and take pride in his name and success.

"If he had turned his attention to politics he could have commanded almost any position in the gift of the people. He was abundantly equipped for pulic service, for his head is a store-house of facts, and few men are better posted on the political events of the last thirty years.

"While familiar with humble life and the hard digs of fortune, his home is one of elegance, where hospitality is dispensed with a lavish hand, and where the refinement and culture displayed has often astonished the cosmopolite who looked only for rude prodigality in the home of Western millionaires.

"I have sometimes regarded Mr. Lowry as one of the strongest links between labor and capital to be found in the West, if not in the whole country. No person of all the thousands in his employ could meet him and not feel that he intended to be fair between 'man and man.' There is such a positive absence of assumption, such a plain, straightforward way of putting things, such an evidence in all his manner of keeping the 'live and let live' motto to the front, that few could withstand and none could doubt his sincerity. With probably as large an acquaintance all over the land as any man in the United States, Mr. Lowry has more friends and fewer enemies than any one it has ever been my fortune to meet."

is construed variously by members of the committee, some of the Democrats going so far as to say that it amounted to an instruction to the attorney general not to prosecute the merger even if it was proven to be contrary to provisions of the Sherman law.

Like a Minstrel Show.

Nearly four hours were devoted by consideration of the re-appointment of William D. Crum, colored, as inspector of customs at Charleston, S. C. Confirmation is opposed by Senator Tillman, aided by his Democratic colleagues.

Thus far there has been nothing in the proceedings to indicate that there will be a filibuster by the Democrats, although there are a number of senators wh oare ready to speak at length in opposition to Crum. The Republican senators are united in favor of confirming Crum.

The debate in the senate, according to the reports which leaked out afterward resembled an old-time minstrel show. Senators Tillman, MacLaurin, Money and Johnston told negro dialect stories and kept the senate in laughter throughout the proceedings. Nothing but the best of humor was displayed.

The reading of an article written by Mr. Taft, declaring that the South should not be treated as a conquered country, was begun by Mr. Tillman, but the debate led off into other channels before he had an opportunity to conclude. Speeches were made by Senators Carter and Beveridge commenting on the prosperity of the South and giving the credit to the Republican rule. Senators Tillman and MacLaurin combatted the proposition that Republican rule had anything to do with it and asserted it was white supremacy in the South which has accomplished practically all of the progress.

Senator Teller spoke in the senate yesterday afternoon on the Bacon resolution, declaring that all public documents in the executive departments are subject to inspection of congress. He declared the refusal of President Cleveland to send information to the senate was not comparable to the refusal of the present president to respond to such a call. In the Cleveland cases, in 1886, he said, it was desired to obtain facts relating to reasons for the dismissal of a public official. Mr. Cleveland maintaining that such papers were not public property, and that they were in his possession for his personal information.

"Mr. Cleveland," said Mr. Teller, "asserted that we had no right to inquire why he had made a removal and contended that we should confine ourselves to the candidate he had appointed."

Mr. Teller approved this view of the president, although should the president abuse the power of removal, he believed congress could invoke its power of impeachment, as his acts would constitute a crime. The present president, he said, had denied the right of either house to call for information in the possession of the departments, but Mr. Teller insisted that either house of congress had that right, and the president would be obliged to respond unless there should be special reasons for not doing so.

"There may be cases where the senate and house may call for information that the executive thought he would be justified in withholding," said Mr. Teller. "These are the exceptions. The rule may be well stated to be that the president or the head of a department should give to the senate information called for, unless it can be made exceptional and taken out of the ordinary."

Mr. Teller declared that he was addressing himself in an academic question, "because," he said, "with a change of administration I presume and hope there will be a change of sentiment on this subject."

Forestry Service Attacked.

A severe attack on the forestry service of the department of agriculture was made in the house by Mr. Mondell of Wyoming. He denounced it as the most autocratic bureau of government outside of Russia.

The Wyoming representative recalled the action of congress last year in an effort to oust the alleged press agents maintained by the bureau. He said the attempt had resulted in failure. "And I notice that next year," continued Mr. Mondell, "the forests are to be protected, water flow regulated and resources conserved by the purchase of $34,624 worth of typewriters, $16,000 worth of paper, $22,000 worth of envelopes and $7,000 for card indexes."

He ridiculed the appropriation of $10,000 for the purchase of compasses, saying it is a joke in the West that the Eastern college-made foresters must have guides when they enter a forest. Hope was expressed that the employes will use the $6,000 appropriated for field glasses to see at least the homeseeker "hitherto unnoticed."

Hend Sleuth Testifies.

That it has been possible for the various departments of the government to obtain the services of secret service men in spite of the restrictions placed upon the secret service by the amendment to the sundry appropriation bill last year is apparent from the testimony of Chief Wilkie, made before a sub-committee of the house committee on appropriations, but apparently the outside use of the men was limited. The testimony has just been made public, and indicates that the amendment regarding which there was recently a controversy between the president and the house of representatives, due to th chief executive's references to the effects of the restrictions, does not entirely restrict.

In reply to various questions Mr. Wilkie at the hearing stated that one man was assigned from the secret service to the navy department to investigate a theft in the navy yard at Norfolk, Va., and another to the state department to investigate the Mexican revolution under the neutrality act. Both men are carried on the rolls of the secret service, but are paid by the department to which they have been assigned.

Another case brought out at the hearing is that of the assignment of two men to accompany President-elect Taft, for which there is no provision in the law. Mr. Wilkie claimed that the assignment in this instance was justified in that the secret service would probably be held responsible for Mr. Taft's safety if no measure for protection were taken.

Declaring that a period of financial and commercial depression increases counterfeiting, Chief Wilkie asks for an increase in the annual appropriation of $20,000.

Mr. Wilkie devoted his arguments principally to the plan to organize a central detective bureau in the department of justice, which would do the investigating and detective work for all the government departments. In conclusion, Wilkie said:

"I wish to record the fact that no members of the secret service or any one acting for the secret service has ever shadowed a congressman or senator."

Chemists Under Fire.

General debate on the agricultural appropriation bill in the house afforded critics and defenders of the department of agriculture an excellent field. Mr. Lever of South Carolina led off with an attack on the appointment and work of the referee board of consulting chemists in the department. Mr. Heflin of Alabama asked on behalf of cotton growers for a governmental monthly report on the consumption of cotton. Mr. Sturgis of West Virginia, urged an extension of the forest service. Mr. Humphrey of Washington took an exactly opposite view, while Mr. Mondell of Wyoming declared the bureau of forestry the most autocratic government bureau outside of Russia. Mr. Bartholdt of Missouri urged the issue of bonds for inland waterways improvements, and Mr. Candler of Mississippi, complained of the tariff on agricultural implements. Chairman Scott of the agricultural committee closed the debate with explanatory remarks on work done by the department during the past year.

Before the bill was taken up in general debate, the house passed the senate pension bill for federal judges.

Argues Against Prohibition.

"One thousand men should not dictate to one man how he shall comport himself, as long as he does not endanger the public health or does nothing that is a breach of the peace."

This was one of the arguments made today before the house committee on the alcoholic liquor traffic, by Theodore Sutro, in support of his contention that the prohibition question was one which should not be left to a popular vote. Mr. Sutro and Adolph Timm, secretary of the National German-American alliance, appeared before the committee in opposition to the Bennet bill, which aims to create a commission on the alcoholic liquor traffic, consisting of five senators and five representatives. The commission would investigate and recommend to congress legislation for the national control of the liquor traffic.

Mr. Sutro contended that such a commission is unnecessary and would entail useless expenditures of money. He objected to the references in the bill to crime, declaring that it was an undue reflection on the liquor traffic, which, he said, is legitimate and one of the chief sources of revenue of the government. He also contended that the respectable beer manufacturers do more for temperance than any other agency, and said that no legislation prohibiting the use of liquor can be enacted by congress without interfering with the police powers of the individual states.

TAKE HER TO MORGUE

became incoherent and the detectives who were watching her and listening, could make nothing of what she said. When she was taken back to the police station again, she was in a state of utter collapse.

The midnight visit to the morgue was planned as a surprise to Mrs. Wilhelm. She was allowed to go to sleep in her cell, but was aroused shortly before midnight and was told she should accompany two detectives who were waiting.

"What do you want with me?" she asked.

No answer was made.

"What am I wanted for now?" demanded Mrs. Wilhelm in some alarm.

Again there was no reply.

She was taken to a carriage by the detectives and driven to the morgue. On seeing the body she drew back for a moment and then rushed forward, crying out:

"Oh, Frank, if you could only speak and tell them who did this."

Later the detectives endeavored to make use of similar strategy to obtain a statement from Nicholas Sicca, who has been in the custody of the police since the murder. Sicca was taken from the police station to the Wilhelm residence, and in the basement where the body of Wilhelm was found, was questioned by the detectives. He, however, preserved an undisturbed demeanor.

CHILD SAVED

By Simple Change to Right Food.

When a little human machine (or a large one) goes wrong, nothing is so important as the selection of food which will bring it around again.

"The Doctor, and I also," writes an Ills. woman, "consider that we owe the life of my little four year old niece to Grape-Nuts food.

"From the time of her birth her stomach was so weak she could not digest milk or any food we could think of, although we tried about all the Infant Foods known. The doctor gave me no hope—called the trouble Intestinal consumption.

'At 18 months the child could barely sit alone, her body was so weak, and her brain did not seem to be properly developed.

"One day, having some trouble with my stomach, I brought home a package of Grape-Nuts and started to use it. The thought came to me that a very little of the food made soft in cream might be good for the little one.

"I gave her some Grape-Nuts thus prepared and she soon became so fond of it that she would reach out her little thin hands and cry at the sight of a saucer with a spoon in it.

"She ate Grape-Nuts not only in the morning, but at night also and since the first has never missed a day. She is now, at four years, a strong, healthy child with a good straight back, fine bones, and firm muscles. Her mind is bright also.

"We stopped all medicines, so we know that it was Grape-Nuts and not medicines that saved her."

PEACE IS WORD OF KAISER'S MAN

Ambassador von Bernstorff Addresses New York Chamber.

New York, Feb. 4.—Count Johann Heinrich von Bernstorff, ambassador from Germany, speaking before the chamber of commerce today, said, in part:

"I can assure you that your friendly feelings are most heartily reciprocated by his majesty, the emperor, and all the German people. From the time of the birth of the people down to the present day there has been unbroken friendship between Germany and the United States. My mission to this country can be summed up in the one wish, that this friendship may continue and always deepen.

"The enormous development of wealth and industry, based on the great natural advantages which nature has given to the United States and due to the active, enterprising and courageous spirit of their people has never been regarded with unfriendly or jealous eyes from our banks of the North and Baltic seas.

"Great and civilized nations consider the prosperity and happiness of other people not as hindering but as helping their own.

"It would be idle to deny that we try to keep pace with you, to trade more and more with you and to join with you in keeping open the doors in the Orient. We are proud and happy when we see the black, white and red flag pass the liberty statue of the New York harbor, flying from ships equal to the finest on the ocean. But such friendly struggle in the fields of commerce is a guardian of peace and amity. Nothing makes more for peace between nations than the exchange of products."

WHAT DULUTH NEEDS IS TO WAKE UP, SAYS HARRINGTON

Eyes of Business Men of Northwest on This City.

It Should Soon be a City of 200,000 People.

"What the people of Duluth need more than anything else right at the present time is an awakening to the realization of what a great future lies ahead of this city, and what wonderful commercial transformations are going on at the present time to assure Duluth the greatest future of an traffic center in this country," was the statement made today by Albert Harrington, formerly of the grain firm of Van Dusen-Harrington, and who possesses a thorough knowledge of the railroad operations and commercial changes that are going on in the Northwest and the Canadian West.

"Duluth will go ahead faster in the next five years than it has in the past twenty years," said Mr. Harrington today at the Spalding. "I believe that Duluth will reach a population of 100,000 when its development starts and then it should grow to be a city of over 200,000 in a very short time.

"Up here you have not started to develop. That lies in the future for you. The people in other cities are asking each other why Duluth doesn't wake up to the fact that it has a great future ahead of it. The eyes of the business men of the Northwest are upon this city, and the railroads of the Northwest and the Canadian empire have selected Duluth as one of the greatest outlets for their wheat."

Mr. Harrington pointed out that in the near future Duluth would have six tarnscontinental lines. The Canadian Pacific will have two lines here, the Soo and the Wisconsin Central; the Great Northern is here; the Canadian Northern will have entry to this city, as will the Grand Trunk in the near future, in the belief of Mr. Harrington; the Milwaukee will have a line from this city to the Pacific coast, and the Northern Pacific makes the sixth. That will mean that Duluth will be an outlet for all the country touched by these roads, and will mean that Duluth will have the same rates from their territory that are made to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

"Up in Western Canada they say that 500,000 people will settle there this year," said Mr. Harrington. "Many of these settlers are our people. They sympathize with us and they are using machinery made by American manufacturers. What will happen in the course of time? The way traffic construction is heading, it means that eventually that Duluth will be the outlet for a great part of the Canadian export wheat that at the present time goes to Port Arthur.

"With the construction of the Soo from this city to Thief River Falls, the country tributary to the Canadian Pacific system will be 150 miles nearer Duluth than it is to Port Arthur. This means that Duluth will receive a great part of the wheat that at the present time finds an outlet at Port Arthur.

"The Canadian railroads figure upon constructing approximately 2,000 miles of roads in Western Canada this year. People down here have no idea of the magnitude of that country, nor of the territory covered by the Canadian railroads. It simply means that Duluth will draw from an empire, and from as far as Alberta and Saskatchewan you will be drawing grain in bond through this port. It will find an outlet to the ocean by way of the Great Lakes, as it does at the present time through Port Arthur.

"The competition that is going on across the boundary will force the Canadian railroads to ship to Duluth. This is the logical point, and as long as Duluth is the nearest point of shipment, you may be sure that the railroads will ship to this point. You will receive grain over the Canadian Northern, the Great Northern and over the Canadian Pacific, through its subsidiary road, the Soo. Then, in my opinion, it will only be a matter of time before the Grand Trunk is forced to find an outlet in this city. A glance at the map, and you can easily understand the competition that will force the Grand Trunk to find an outlet in Duluth for its Western traffic."

Mr. Harrington further pointed out that Duluth would receive much of the lumber business from the West, by the extension of the Canadian lines in the timber belts of the Canadian West. Duluth, he said would get the same rate upon this lumber as St. Paul and Minneapolis received, and much of this timber would come to this city.

"I know of no other city in this country that has the future that Duluth has," said Mr. Harrington. "Its prominence as a future traffice center sticks out with the conspicuousness of an index finger, raised and pointing out the fact of its future greatness. With its growth will develop other lines of business that you have not possessed in the past. You need awakening to the fact that you are entering upon a future of great development. Your growth has not started, as yet."

United States Attorney Says Contractors Found Government Easy.

Were Paid Twice for Dredging at Portage Lake.

Papers in a civil action against Porter Brothers, a contracting firm, by United States Attorney Charles C. Haupt, who seeks to recover from the contractors $9,286.58 for the United States government, paid on an alleged misrepresentation of facts concerning some work done by the firm in 1900 and 1901, were filed with T. H. Pressnell, clerk of the Federal court this morning.

In constructing the piers for the lake entrance to the Portage Lake ship canal, the regular angular rocks used to build foundations became scarce, and with the permission and the knowledge of the engineers in charge, the contractors dragged the lake for boulders aad used them in the construction work. In doing this they dragged up much sand and deposited it along with the boulders in the wall. They then presented to the auditor of the war department a bill for the dredging amounting to $9,826.58, which in due time was paid.

The United States claims that the dredging done was voluntary on the part of the contractors, and that it was necessary in order to get the material cheaply.

WARE VERY SORE OVER HIS DEFEAT

Withdraws Bills From the Consideration of the House.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 4.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. K. Ware, author of the county option bill, arose in the house today after his bill had been killed and asked permission to withdraw from further consideration of the house two other measures now pending before committees. One is the primary election law and the other a tonnage tax bill. He stated that he perceived he was a marked man and that it would be impossible for him to get any legislation through. Therefore, he would introduce no more bills to bother the house. He will, however, retain his seat. His measures were cheerfully returned as requested.

SENATORSHIP UNSETTLED

Stephenson Again Lacks Four Votes in Wisconsin Legislature.

Balloting by Illinois Solons Also Results in No Choice.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 4.—The sixth joint ballot for United States senator today showed that Senator Stephenson is as far from re-election as ever. There was practically no change from yesterday's vote. While he received one more vote, there was one fewer absentees than on yesterday. The taking of a vote, in a joint ballot daily is beginning to look more like a mere formality than anything else, and that no result will be reached until after the senatorial primary investigation has been concluded.

Following is the individual vote: Bishop, 1; Ledvina, 1; Hustings, 1; J. O. Davidson, 1; J. E. Scott, 2; Frlid, 1; McGovern, 1; Estabrook, 1; Frear, 1; Webb, 1; Bancroft, 1; Sanborn, 2; Martin, 1; Bichlor, 1; Cook, 2; Morse, 1; Wright, 1; Hoard, 2; Marsh, 1; Morris, 3; Strange, 4; Owen, 3; Esch, 9; Cooper, 4; Rummel, 4; Brown, 18; Stephenson, 62.

A conference committee is now at work trying to frame a report governing the investigation and it is said the committee has agreed that the investigation shall include charges against any members of the legislature as well as the senatorial primary candidate.

The joint conference committee of the Wisconsin legislature is expected to make its report at today's session for an investigation of all the senatorial candidates at the last primary election. The report is expected to recommend that the committee on investigation consist of five assemblymen and three senators. A twofold object is sought in the senatorial primary investigation, the first being to examine into the charges against United States Senator Stephenson, and the second to gather information regarding the lavish use of money in the primary election, to guide the legislature in the work of enacting a law regulating expenditures in primary and regular elections.

The conferees last night decided to recommend an investigation of the expenses of all the senatorial candidates, without limiting the investigation to the text of the charges made by Senator Blaine against Mr. Stephenson.

An election bill introduced in the assembly today propcses to repeal that portion of the primary election law with reference to the nomination of United States senator and substitute in its place the election of United States sehator by the direct vote of the people at the time of the holding of the general election in November.

Another bill provides that all the departments in all classes at the University of Wisconsin shall be open without distinction to both sexes and that women shall be on an equal footing with men at the university.

In the senate, a resolution was offered for the appointment of a committee of three members of the assembly and two of the senate to investigate charges against the insurance department.

No Choice in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 4.—On the twenty-seventh ballot today the total vote in the joint session of the legislature was: Hopkins, 71; Foss, 18; Stringer, 73; Shurtleff, 16; Mason, 3; McKinley, 1; Lowden, 1; Calhoun, 1; Sherman, 2. No choice. Constitutional majority of joint session, 103. Majority of members present and voting 94. At the conclusion of the twenty-seventh ballot the joint session arose. The balloting will be resumed next Tuesday noon.

ONLY ONE MAN WANTS TO TEACH A COUNTRY SCHOOL

Thirty teachers are today taking examinations at the Central high school for certificates, under County Supt. S. W. Gilpin. The examinations will continue Friday and Saturday.

Out of the thirty applicants there is but one man. The country schools these days are taught mostly by women, with a high school and summer term normal training. The pay is not high enough to attract men usually, and the old-fashioned schoolmaster is a thing of the past. In Minnesota at least.

The demand for teachers has this year been heavier than ever, on account of the many new schools established throughout the more thinly populated districts of the country.

Those who are taking the examinations are: Annie Haglund, Mae Casey, Katherine Newbaur, Mary Dunn, Allie Onsgard, William Wendtland, Sophia Soderburg, Ruth Stynsberg, Grace Lavaque, Mae Maloney, Dorthea Olsen, Emma Olson, Mamie Larson, Mabel Robinson, Marie Thayer, Annie Speece, Grace Maxted, Stella Lord, Margarite Stephen, Anna Furlong, Laura Berg, Ruth Twohy, Beatrice Flynn, Annie Swenson, Leonia Sandoe, Annie Fagerstrom, Ella Jensen, Selma Moline, A. C. McCutcheon and Camille Franklin.

Now there are many who handle all kinds of small cereals and corn, while others make a specialty of one kind of wheat. Some go in heavily for different grasses. THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Further Advances Made in Wheat During the Early Trading.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Further advances were made in wheat today, following the sharp upturn of the previous session, the May delivery touching $1.10¼ during early trading. The strength of the Liverpool market was one of the chief bullish influences. Talk of sales of a large quantity of flour yesterday at Minneapolis, however, added materially to bullish sentiment. At the opening prices were ⅛@¼c lower to ⅛@¼c higher with May at $1.09½@1.09¾.

The high point for May was reached at $1.10⅜. Later the market was inclined to sag on selling credited to leading holders, but prices at no time went below yesterday's closing quotations. The close was steady with May up ⅛@¼c at $1.09⅝.

Trade in corn was fairly active and the market was firm, owing to the continuance of light acceptances reported from the country. There was a general commission house. May opened unchanged to ⅛c higher at 63⅞@64c and sold at 64@64⅛c.

Sentiment in the corn pit became a trifle bearish during the final hour and May sold off to 63⅝c. The close was easy with May off ⅛c at 63¾c.

Oats were barely steady, owing to moderate realizing by local longs. May opened unchanged to a shade lower, at 62¼c to 62⅛@62¼c, and later sold at 62⅛c.

Provisions were dull and easy. Liberal receipts of live hogs at Western packing centers caused moderate profit-taking. Prices at the opening were a shade to 5c lower.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Wheat Easier Against Strong Cables—Elevator Stocks Decrease.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 4.—Minneapolis got 257 cars of wheat today against 156 last year, and this made the market a little easier against cables which were strong and 1c higher. Duluth had 13 cars against 60, Winnipeg 39 against 56. Local elevators stocks decreased 30,000 bu. for five days. In view of the strong cables, the market was disappointing to the bulls. May advanced to $1.09¾, but sold down again later, and closed at $1.09¼. May opened $1.08⅞@1.08¼; high, $1.09¾; low, $1.08⅞; close $1.09¼. July opened $1.09¼; high, $1.10; low, $1.09¼; close, $1.09⅜@½. Two cents over was paid for No. 1 northern and No. 2 sold at the full May price, with choicest lots ½c over. Millers were buyers. Close: No. 1 northern spot, $1.11; to arrive, $1.11; No. 2 northern spot, $1.09@1.09¼; to arrive, $1.09; No. 3 wheat, $1.07@1.07½; No. 3 yellow corn, 57½@57⅝c; No. 3 white oats, 49⅜@50⅝c; No. 2 rye, 71¼@72¾c.

Barley—Receipts, 56 cars against 22; shipments, 55; market about the same; little brisker demand, but not enough to offset larger receipts. Close, 57@50½c.

Flax—Receipts, 32 cars against 21; shipments, 1; quoted ½c over Duluth May, but sold at ¼c over. Close, $1.59¾.

Millstuffs — Shipments, 1,473 tons. Bran in bulk, $21.50@22.00.

Reports came in that Minneapolis mills were selling flour heavily in Chicago, one estimate making the quantity 4 none day's sales 125,000 barrels. Local firms named as having made the sales refused to confirm them and pronounced the report exaggerated. Shipments, 39,432 barrels. First patents, $5.40@5.60; second patents. $5.25@5.40; first clears, $4.00@4.10; second clears, $2.95@3.05.

STOCKS ARE IRREGULAR

Market Opens With Sagging Tendency, Advances, But Declines.

Sharp Rise in Wisconsin Central Was the Principal Feature.

New York, Feb. 4.—Quite a number of stocks showed gains at the opening today, but the most important issues were lower. The movement was sluggish and indifferent. A loss of a point in Anaconda was the only important change.

An inquiry for the Gould stocks had a stimulating effect on the market, but the advances were subsequently lost when an outbreak of liquidation in Consolidated Gas started heavy selling of Reading and Union Pacific. Consolidated Gas dropped 3¼ to 114½. Reading, Union Pacific and American Smelting preferred gave way 1 and most of the active stocks sagged below yesterday's closing prices. Among the gains were Missouri Pacific and International Paper 1½, and Minneapolis & St. Louis and New Haven 1¼.

A steadier tone developed, Consolidated Gas making up about one-half of its loss, and the general list a good fraction. Some of the minor stocks were unusually active, Western Maryland going up 1⅝, Pittsburg, Columbus, Cincinnati & St. Louis 1⅝, and Baltimore & Ohio preferred and Detroit United Railways, 1. Northwestern was forced down 1. Bonds were irregular.

An interval of heaviness followed the decline in Reading in which Louisville & Nashville and Northern Pacific lost a point and Chicago Great Western 1½. Purchases of the Gould stocks again had a strengthening effect on the market. Chesapeake & Ohio rose to 67 and Denver & Rio Grande touched 46¾ gain of 1⅝. Wisconsin Central advanced a point.

The market closed irregular and active. The circulation of an estimate of the benefit to fall to the Wisconsin Central from its connection with the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie was followed by a rise of 4½ in that stock. Denver & Rio Grande rose an extreme 3⅜. Twin City Rapid Transit also gained 2¾, Wisconsin Central preferred and Colorado & Southern 2¼, Denver & Rio Grande preferred 1½ and American Car 1. The special advances did not prevent a sagging tendency elsewhere, some stocks getting back to the lowest. North American lost 1 and Canadian Pacific 1½.

Calumet & Sonora should do something as soon as Mr. Norton gets back from Boston. We understand the stock is now listed on the Boston curb and therefore a big interest should be made in this issue in the Eastern market. This stock is so scarce that if the Eastern people begin taking it, it should easily advance several points.

After Monday, Butte-Montana should begin to climb. Big things are going on in this issue.

CONSTITUTION BACK IN PORT

Captain Johns Reports "Summer Voyage;" Few People on Island.

The tug Constitution, Capt. Johns, arrived in port this morning after her second midwinter north shore trip.

Capt. Johns reports a "summer trip." There was no trouble experienced at any place, and the tug may make another trip.

She carried camp supplies to Grand Marais and Chicago bay, bringing back fish. The fishermen are still active and were anxious that the boat make another trip so that they could get in another shipment.

There are several people making their home on Isle Royale this winter, according to the crew of the boat. There are a few trappers and the caretakers usually employed by the cottagers and clubs.

When last visited they all seemed to be content and in a good state of health.

The lake has not yet frozen over, so that the settlers could drive their dog teams to Port Arthur as they have been in the habit of doing in some seasons.

The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000), the same to be paid on the call of the Board of Directors. Said stock shall be divided into four hundred (400) shares of common stock of the par value of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each, and one hundred shares of preferred stock of the par value of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each. The preferred stock shall be entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of seven per cent (7 per cent) per annum, payable semi-annually on or before the fifteenth days of February and August of each year, for the six months next preceding the first days of said months. Such dividends shall be paid out of the net earnings of the corporation in preference to any dividends on the common stock thereof, but said preferred stock shall not be entitled to any further dividends or share in the earnings of said corporation.

In the event of the liquidation or winding up of the affairs of said corporation, whether voluntary or involuntary, the Preferred Stock then outstanding shall be paid off at par with all accrued dividends or apportionate fraction thereof, earned by the partial lapse of a dividend period, from the assets of the corporation before any payment therefrom upon the Common Stock of said corporation, and after such payment at par, and accrued dividends, said Preferred Stock shall not be entitled to any further share in or payment from such assets.

The holder or holders of such Preferred Stock shall not be entitled to vote said stock at any stockholders' meeting unless the payment of dividends on such stock at the times and at the rate herein provided shall have been suspended or be in default, and such default or suspension shall have continued for sixty days after the same became due and payable as herein provided, but in case of such suspension or default the holders of such stock shall have the same voting right and power as the holders of the Common Stock until such suspension has been terminated and such default cured, but no longer.

The corporation by a vote of a majority of its Board of Directors may pay off, redeem or cancel all or any part of said Preferred Stock and retire the same to the treasury of said company for future issuance, which payment and redemption may be made upon any dividend date by giving thirty days' written notice thereof to the record owner of said stock by the payment of the par value thereof together with all dividends accrued, provided, however, that in case less than the whole amount of the outstanding Preferred Stock is so paid and returned to the treasury at any one time, the Preferred Stock so paid and recalled shall be ratably apportioned among the several holders of such Preferred Stock unless all of the holders thereof agree among themselves as to the stock so to be returned and produce as evidence of such agreement a written memorandum thereof. Said Preferred Stock that has so been returned to the treasury may be issued, returned and reissued as herein provided upon the determination of the Board of Directors.

The Preferred Stock in this corporation shall not be increased at any time without the consent of all of the holders of the then existing and outstanding Preferred Stock.

ARTICLE V.

The highest amount of indebtedness or liability to which the corporation shall at any time be subject is Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000). The other officers of the corporation shall be elected by and from the Board of Directors and shall consist of the President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, and the offices of President and Treasurer may be held by the same person. Until the first meeting of said corporation, and until their successors are elected and qualified, said John Wahl shall be the President and Treasurer, and said Hans Wahl shall be the Secretary, and said William J. Stevenson shall be the Vice President.

COMPROMISE BILL WILL PROBABLY BE RESULT OF REAPPORTIONMENT TALK

Senator Clague Would Reduce the Membership of Senate.

Johnson County Agricultural School Bill Passed by House.

St. Louis County Judgeship Likely to be Settled Harmoniously.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The campaign for reapportionment, which it is hoped will redeem Northern Minnesota from its present situation of unjust legislative representation, is slowly working to a head.

The house committee on reapportionment has already gone so far as to appoint a sub-committee of nine members, one from each congressional district, to get up the framework of a bill on which the battle can begin. The senate committee has not made so much progress, but it met yesterday afternoon for a preliminary survey of the task before it, and briefly discussed the subject. No action was taken, but a committee similar to that appointed by the house committee will shortly be selected, and the two will probably work jointly in the endeavor to agree upon something as near just as it can be with any hope of passage through the legislature.

For, beyond any question, the reapportionment bill will be a child of compromise. Properly, of course, the legislature should produce a reapportionment based squarely upon popula-

Senator Calhoun Offers Bill to Repeal the Entire Law.

House Goes on Record Against Federal Inspection of Grain.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Two senators offered bills this morning proposing to do things to the primary election law. Senator Calhoun of Minneapolis goes the whole way by repealing the entire law. Senator Cooke of Kellogg is less radical. He would cut out the primary election as to everything except cities of the first class. Both bills were referred to the elections committee, to join the many pending measures of similar or allied import.

Senator Fossen offered an anti-sweatshop measure, providing that no workshop, factory or place of business can be conducted in a basement, cellar, underground apartment or other place

TROOPS CHARGE THE STRIKERS

Several Hurt on Both Sides in Pennsylvania Fight.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 5.—As a result of violence being offered today by the striking miners at the Tremont coal mine, Belle Vernon, Pa., near here, to the non-union miners, who went to work yesterday, a troop of state constabulary charged the strikers today. Several persons on both sides were slightly injured.

As the strikers are alleged to have threatened both the non-union men and the constabulary, deachments of Pennsylvania police were sent to Belle Vernon from Greensburg.

DAVIS AIDS NEW PAPER

Plant to Manufacture It From Plants Is Boosted.

Minnesotan's Motion to Appropriate $10,000 Adopted by House.

Washington, Feb. 5.—If an amendment adopted by the house of representatives and offered by Congressman Davis of Minnesota shall be embodied in the agricultural bill when that measure becomes a law, $10,000 will be appropriated for the breeding of fibrous plants which may be used for papermaking.

Senator Lodge has introduced an amendment to the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill providing for the appointment of a congressional committee to investigate the condition of the consular and diplomatic service abroad. It is provided that the commission shall consist of three members of the senate committee on foreign relations and three members of the house committee on foreign affairs which commission is authorized to visit such foreign countries as it chooses. The amendment carries an appropriation of $50,000.

The house committee on military affairs has agreed to a favorable report on the bill to change the title of paymasters' clerks in the army to paymesters' assistants and to provide for their retirement as if they were officers in the army.

By Stevens of Minnesota.

In order that the war department may be able to withdraw officers on the active list from duties away from their respective commands, Representative Stevens of Minnesota at the request of the house committee on military has introduced a bill authorizing the secretary of war to detail retired officers, not above the rank of colonel, on active duty.

While the house was engaged yesterday in considering the agricultural appropriation bill there was a sharp exchange of words between Mr Hepburn of Iowa and Mr. Livingston of Georgia, two of the oldest members of the house. It arose in connection with a colloquy over a minor amendment between Mr. Livingston and Mr. Scott of Kansas, which was carried on in such a low tone of voice that Mr. Hepburn was led to protest that he

It is expected the meeting will result in the framing of a bill which will be submitted to the legislatures of the several states for adoption. The meeting was called by Governor Warner of Michigan. Woodbury, tax commissioner of New York, representing Governor Hughes. Representatives from Wisconsin, Indiana and Ohio are expected later.

CONSIDERS NAVY NEEDS

Roosevelt's Committee of Eight Holds Its First Meeting.

Two Former Naval Secretaries Included—Perfect Efficiency, Aim.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Perfect efficiency in military action is President Roosevelt's idea of what the organization of the navy department should provide and which, in his opinion, it now lacks. Under his call for that purpose, a commission of eight men of wide experience in naval maatters, met today to consider the needs of the navy. The commission consists of two former secretaries of the navy—Paul Morton of New York and Associate Justice William H. Moody of the supreme court of the United States; Judge A. G. Dayton of West Virginia, formerly of the house naval affairs committee, and five retired rear admirals, S. B. Luce, A. T. Mahan, W. M. Folger, R. D. Evans and W. S. Cowles.

The president explicitly stated that he desired them to consider and report, first, the fundamental principles of a system of organization and execution that will provide and maintain an immediate preparation for hostility in time of peace, and, second, to specifically recommend changes necessary in the present naval organization that will accomplish this result. The commission is to consider strategic needs of the fleet and number, location and facilities of navy yards.

This committee met at the invitation of the president on Jan. 15 and discussed naval administrative reforms, and approved Secretary Newberry's plans of action, though not considering that the present organization of the navy department provides that effi-

INDIAN MAID IS MINUS HER CASH

Paleface Furnishes Lobster and Champagne—Off With $1,800.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ella Robinson, an Indian maiden, from the Sisseton, S. D., reservation, it at the Minneapolis central station, bemoaning the fate of $1,800 and her acquaintance with a white man, with whom she smoked the pipe of peace and partook excessively of champagne and lobster.

The maiden is known to her tribe as Princess Shatow, and she appeared at police headquarters and made known her plight. She said he received $1,800 of the money dispensed by Maj. McLaughlin in St. Paul a few days ago, and then chanced to meet a dapper young paleface. The two set out to celebrate. The dizzy whirl was too much for the maiden, and when she awoke she was minus both money and companion

The police of both cities are looking for the young man, who is supposed to have annexed her wampum. The girl is well educated and claims to be a graduate of Carlisle.

Borah Checks Anti-Oriental Move Among Idaho Lawmakers.

Vice Consul at San Francisco Is "Deeply Grieved."

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 5.—All California is today breathlessly awaiting the reply of President Roosevelt to a telegram sent him by Governor Gillett last night, in answer to a message from the president yesterday, in which Mr. Roosevelt told the governor the bill passed in the California assembly compelling Japanese to attend separate schools is the "most offensive of all." Thus far the president's reply has not been received.

In his message to the governor yesterday the president said:

"What is the rumor that the California legislature has passed a bill excluding the Japanese children from the public schools? This is the most offensive bill of all, and in my judgment this is clearly unconstitutional, and we should at once have to destroy it in the courts. Can it be stopped in the legislature or by veto?"

By passing the separate school act, the lower house has taken the step which the board of education of San Francisco intended to take two years ago, but which was abandoned after the board and Former Mayor Eugene E. Schmitz were called to Washington and had several conferences with President Roosevelt. At that time it was contended by the Japanese that they were not "Orientals," and they resented the efforts to place them in the same class with the Chinese, Koreans and other Asiatic races. The question was also raised whether, under the law, the segregation of Japanese school children could be enforced in the absence of special mention of the word "Japanese."

Unexpected was the passage of the

BREAK UP IN A ROW

Austrian Lawmakers Adjourn After Free-for-All Fight.

One Man Is Bitten and Another Badly Lashed.

Vienna, Feb. 5.—The present session of the Austrian parliament came to an end today after a scene of turbulence extraordinary even for an assembly where violent outbreaks are common.

The trouble, which arose from the old racial feeling between the Germans and Czechs, broke out during the debate on this message for several days past with a continuous din from drums and tin whistles, so exasperated the Garmans this morning that the opposing deputies came to close quarters and a fierce scrimmage ensued.

One of the radical Czech deputies, a man named Speczek, who has been particularly violent in his obstruction, was captured and whipped until he howled for mercy. Another Czech was bitten by a German on the cheek and sustained an ugly wound, and black eyes and sore heads were numerous. The premier, Baron von Bienerth, seeing the uselessness of attempting to pass legislation, closed the session and sent the deputies home.

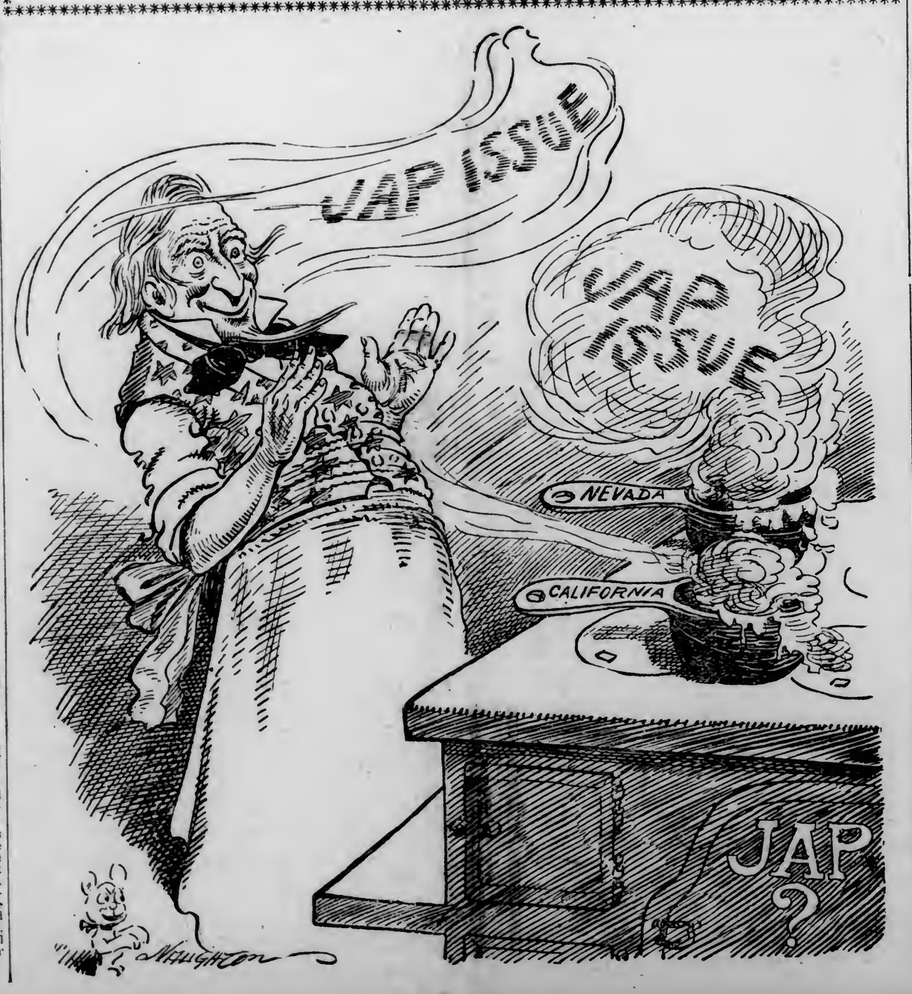

The departure of the ministers was followed by another free fight in which the opposing factions rushed upon one another to the strains of revolutionary songs and wild confusion reigned for half an hour.

The sudden closing of the session and the political import of the disorder have had an adverse effect upon the bourse.

EIGHTEEN PERSONS ARE TAKEN OUT OF FLAMES.

New York, Feb. 5.—Eighteen persons, including several women and children, were carried out of a blazing tenement house on Lorimer street, Brooklyn by policemen today, after some of the former had been overcome by smoke. In the rescue of the family of Max Trevis from the third floor Mrs. Trevis fell one flight into the arms of citizens on the sidewalk. The property loss was about $10,000.

THREE LOST IN ORPHANAGE FIRE

Missing When Roll Is Counted, After Battle Creek Blaze.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 5.—The Haskell Memorial home, a three and a half story brick orphanage, located on the western boundary of this city, was destroyed by fire early today. Three of the thirty-seven little inmates were missing when the roll was counted after the fire. They are: Lena McFerney, 14 years old; Cecil Quotent, 13; George Goodenow, 8.

In the panic when the children were awakened by the first alarm, seven little girls jumped from a third-story window, but it is not thought that any of them were fatally hurt, although Ruth Roff, 12 years old, is seriously injured in the back. James Armstrong, 12 years old, made a hero of himself by standing on a shed under the window from which the girls had to jump, directing them how to make their fall as easy as possible, and actually catching two of the smaller girls in his arms. Mrs. R. S. Owen, who with her husband was in charge of the institution, fought her way down the main stairway while it was a mass of flames, carrying a 6-weeks-old baby in her arms and with two small children clinging to her skirts.

DANISH TREATIES ARE APPROVED BY RIGSDAG.

Copenhagen, Feb. 5.—The rigsdag today approved treaties of arbitration with the United States, Norway and Sweden.

FLOODS IN GERMANY TAKE TEN LIVES; VAST AREA IS INUNDATED

Berlin, Feb. 5.—The floods in Germany are today taking on a serious aspect. The first fatalities are reported from Nordhausen, where many bridges have been swept away and ten people drowned.

At Nuremberg the Pegnile rose twelve feet last night and this morning it is raging through the lower streets of the city. The water is higher than it has been for thirty-three years. The newspapers of Nuremberg have suspended publication. Frankfort-on-the-Main reports on the highest water in fifty years on some of the streams in the Odenwald. At Essen the situation is growing more threatening.

The town of Heddecke is flooded and a number of dams in the vicinity of Hagen have been carried away.

At Dortmund the floods are increasing, and the fire department was called out to rescue a family from the second story of its dwelling.

Several railroads over the confluents of the Rhine on the north side have been swept away and all trains from Cologne up the river are being sent over the tracks on the south bank. The valley between Giessen and Wetzler appears as an immense lake. The rivers of Silesia also are high and many miles of territory are flooded. The waters are falling at Chemnitz and Erfurt, but the Rhine and the other large streams are rising steadily.

COSTLY CONFLAGRATION SWEEPS THROUGH CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA.

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 5.—The most disastrous fire here in twenty-four years early today destroyed property valued at $220,000. The blaze originated in the building of the Charlottesville Hardware company on East Main street. Among the losses are: Charlottesville Hardware company, $100,000; Gilmore Furniture company, $50,000; J. B. & W. H. Wood, clothiers, $35,000; James B. Waddell, shoe dealer, $25,000.

The People's National Bank building had a narrow escape from destruction, the two upper stories being gutted.

The fronts of five stores on the north side of Main street also were burned.

PRODUCE IS DECLINING

Reduction in Prices for Different Lines, Feature of the Week.

Butter, Eggs Fruit and Fish Have a Slump Here.

Here and there, in the produce market during the past week, prices have been nipped and pruned, putting them lower than they have been for several weeks.

Those strongest features, butter and eggs, have gone down in price, fruits are easier and, because the receiver for the defunct concern of A. Booth & Co., decided that his company was overstocked, a reduction in the fish market was brought about. It was the first time in many moons that the fish market has been dippled by any violent fluctuations.

Fresh eggs are now 35 cents a dozen. They were 37 cents last week, but receipts have increased during the last few days. The days have been warmer, a circumstance which probably encouraged the hens of the nation to do considerably more laying than they have been.

Storage eggs are no longer quoted here. The fact is, that the local stocks of storage eggs have been exhausted. They were heavily drawn upon this year because of the stringency in the fresh egg market, and besides, the season is pretty well advanced.

The feeling in the trade seems to be that eggs will be on an easier basis from now on. It is thought that 40-cent hen fruit is a thing of the past for this year.

Receipts of butter have been so encouraging as to enable the wholesalers to reduce their price for creamery prints to the sum of 32 cents, a slightly more modest figure than that of 35 cents, which prevailed for a couple of months. Tubs are now quoted at 30 to 32 cents.

Renovated butter is 27 cents, ladies 22 cents, and packing butter 16 to 20 cents.

Fruits are cheaper. Oranges have gone down and grape fruit is on an easier basis than formerly. Receipts of oranges from California are very good and the quality of the fruit is excellent. They are selling on the street this morning at $2.75 to $3.25 per box. Grape fruit is $4.50 per box.

Pinapples are $4.50 per crate and plentiful at that price.

Lemons are $4 a box.

Cranberries are still in the market at $14 a barrel.

Bananas are still on an easy 3½ cents basis.

Apples are $3.75 to $4.25 a barrel. Some weeks ago, potatoes developed considerable strength, in view of declining stocks and light receipts, and advanced 5 cents over the 75-cent level they had evenly maintained during the season. They gave signs of going still higher, but the warmer weather seems to have dispelled that tendency and they are still quoted at 80 cents a bushel.

Onions are $1.50 to $2.

Brown beans are quoted at $3.

The tale of the fish was told in Tre Herald last week. Price reductions came about through the fact that Mr. Chalmers, receiver for A. Booth & Co., in checking over the list of stocks on hand, discovered that he had altogether too many fish to fry—or sell at prices in vogue at the time. So Receiver Chalmers decided to give a grand fish sale, by which the entire country might benefit.

All the agents of the Booth company were notified to inform the faithful that fish prices would be slashed as they had never been slashed before. It was to be the greatest mark-down disposition of water products in some moons. Accordingly, the new schedules were sent out and they took effect in this section of the country last Monday.

In many respects, Mr. Chalmers' sale has been just as advertised. Pike are now quoted at the modest figure of 8 cents a pound, wholesale, and the snowy whitefish is to be had in Michigan street and at the Booth stronghold, for the mere trifle of 8 cents. Fresh lake trout have been reduced to 10 cents and the homely herring is offered at 2 cents.

Of course, when A. Booth & Co. decided to have a fish sale, the rest of the market had to fall in line. The "independent" fish dealers could do naught but shave their quotations to conform with the new order of things.

Cheap fish prices still obtain. No intimation has been given yet as to when the "fish sale" will end.

Pork loins have been declining all week and are now offered at 11 to 11½ cents. Beef is 6 to 10 cents. Lard is firm at 11 cents. Veal is 7½ to 9½ cents and lamb is 13 to 14 cents.

FOUR STATES IN THE ANTI-JAP MOVE

Japanese school segregation bill. After the defeat of Drew's anti-alien land bill, which was generally believed to foreshadow the rejection of all measures aimed at the Japanese, the defeat of two more anti-Japanese bills added to the surprise occasioned by the vote on the segregation bill.

Oregon In Line.

Salem, Or., Feb. 5.—In a memorial to congress introduced in the senate by Senator A. A. Bailey of Multnomah, congress is urged not to abrogate the present Chinese exclusion laws in favor of general laws, as has, it is stated, been suggested. The resolution asks that the present exclusion law be broadened as to include Japanese and Hindus.

Choked In Idaho.

Bolse, Idaho, Feb. 5.—The anti-Japanese resolution did not materialize in the Idaho legislature yesterday as promised. It is understood Senator Borah has brought influence to bear to prevent, for the time being, the introduction of such a resolution and has received assurance it will be throttled if presented.

Program Is to Smother.

Carson, Nev., Feb. 5.—The Giffen anti-Japanese resolution, shorn of its reference to President Roosevelt, came up in the senate and was referred to the judiciary committe. It is said this committee, of which Senator Boyd is chairman, will smother it, in accordance with the wishes of United States Senators Nixon and Newlands.

Surprise in Washington.

Washington, Feb. 5.—News of the passage by the assembly of the California legislature of the bill providing for the segregation of Japanese school children was received in official quarters here with surprise and consernation.

While unwilling to discuss the bill Senator Perkins of California asserted that the right should be given to school authorities of the state to furnish separate schools for Japanese.

Senator Flint of California said he was surprised to learn of the passage of the bill. He said his views on the school question are similar to those of Senator Perkins.

War Material Sent.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 5.—The close of the present week will see an unusual amount of war material and supplies shipped from this port to the Philippine and the Hawaiian Islands. This fact, taken in connection with the arrival of the naval transport Buffalo, from Honolulu, yesterday, painted leaden gray, the color that is associated in the popular mind with the fighting garb of the American navy, and the unexpected return of the torpedo flotilla from the South, is causing some local comment.

Today the bark Michigan cleared for Honolulu, carrying two great disappearing guns, destined to form a part of the defense at Pearl Harbor. Tomorrow, the Pacific Mail liner, Asia, sails for Manila and Japan, carrying 3,500 tons of cargo, 2,000 tons of which consists of army and navy stores for the Philippines. Included in this shipment are 200 submarine mines, which are to be placed beneath the waters at Subig bay, at the entrance of Manila harbor, and 2,500 cases of small arms ammunition. The army transport Sheridan also leaves for Honolulu tomorrow, taking 3,000 tons of general supplies for the troops in the islands.

In connection with the change made in the color of the Buffalo, it is stated that orders have gone out to the Pacific fleet that the big fighting ships be similarly altered in appearance on their return to Magdalena bay from the South American cruise. This is the first time since the building of the new navy, "the white navy," as it has been widely known, that the color of the ships has been changed except in times of war.

While admitting that there is unusual activity just at present in Pacific coast naval circles, officials of the navy profess themselves unable to explain it.

Vice Consul Grieved.

The passage of the Johnson bill for the segregation of Japanese in the public schools was unexpected here, for it was generally believed that after the defeat of the Drew measure, all of the anti-Japanese bills would be buried under an adverse vote. At the local Japanese consulate, the news was received as soon as the bill passed, and on behalf of Vice Consul Takashi, Secretary Koyama made the following statement:

"Speaking for the Japanese vice consul and residents, we are much grieved that the assembly passed this bill. We did not expect such action would be taker even by the assembly. We are confident, however, that the bill will not pass in the senate because of the attitude of a majority of the members of the house. Moreover, we feel certain that Governor Gillette, observing the desires of President Roosevelt, will not sign the bill, even though it passes in both houses. President Roosevelt and Governor Gillette, we believe, are acting justly and wisely in this matter."

The news of the passage of the bill was received with some consternation by the local school board, which has already had its share of trouble from the question of separate schools for Japanese. If the bill cannot be beaten today, it is expected a move will be made to postpone reconsideration for a week at least until the opponents of the measure have had time to recover their breath.

K. Kaneko, the Japanese student, who was the victim of an assault alleged to have been made by University of California students, as he was passing through the campus last week, has written the following letter to President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the university:

"Hearing of your being in some zealful investigation on the assaulters, I wish to write to you that my profound thanks are due to you, but I hope you will quickly give up such useless attempt, because I am sure your students are not in charge of. Wishing to add that I want not to exaggerate such small trouble, nor to lead it into some international question and especially desiring that the Californians are not so sensitive about the Japanese problem. Yours, very truly,

"K. KANEKO."

LETTERS BY RUTH BRYAN

Charges of Desertion Are Disproved by Her Correspondence.

Told Husband It Was Her Duty to Help Father.

Paris, Feb. 5.—The divorce suit brought by Ruth Bryan Leavitt is based on the grounds of desertion and non-support, and while the artist husband she is suing refuses to discuss the case in detail, he has obtained the following letters from Mrs. Leavitt as a remarkable series of documents in the case.

The first of the interesting series, which, all told, make a trunkful in Mr. Leavitt's studio here, is addressed to the husband from Lincoln, July 19, 1908. It reads:

"Dear Peter—It is strange that you offer in one letter to do anything I wish and in the next lay down a line of duty for me to follow. I have to do what I think best to do, and there are other considerations. Mother needs me very much, and I am glad to be able to help her, for she has very hard months before her.

"I am going to remain here to help her. For the time being it is my highest duty to take all the care I can off her shoulders.

"I have had some new photographs made and will send you one when finished.

"Sorry you were annoyed by that newspaper investigation of our affairs out here. Nothing will start from this end, I can assure you, and if you carry out your summer plans as arranged, no one can comment, for they are perfectly acceptable."

Insisted on Her Own Way.

In March of last year, and writing from Constantinople, Mrs. Leavitt says:

"You affirm that you will do anything to please me and in the very next letter you insist that I shall change my plans for the summer. I insist that my way will prevail in this case. I have told you time and again that I wanted a full year to recover my health and to make up my mind about the future.

"You say you will do as I wish, and I write you that I wish you to continue your work in Paris."

That Mr. Bryan had a hand in this interesting correspondence is shown by the following, addressed to Leavitt on the Commoner's letterhead, March 15, 1908:

"Your favor found on my desk on return to city. I can appreciate your desire to have the two children, for I, too, am fond of children. But in Ruth's case the first thing to be considered is her health. You know she had a narrow escape last summer, but is now improving, and I think the Mediterranean trip has done her good, besides being an advantage in the way of education. As you know, travel broadens one. Ruth enjoyed the Holy land especially.

"I do not know what plans she has for the summer. I shall urge her to conserve her health until entirely well. Nothing else is to be thought of. I will write you about the plans as soon as I consult Ruth.

"I am glad your mother is with you. I was prompt to correct the rumor about the separation, but I had not heard the reports about yourself, of which you speak. Yours truly.

"W. J. BRYAN."

Refused to Join Her Husband.

In another letter, dated from Cairo, in January of last year, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Leavitt writes her husband:

"My Dear Peter—At last in Egypt—to find your letters awaiting me at the bank. I want to thank you for looking at the convention delegateship as you did. I haven't heard if I have been appointed except in the paper, but anything for father's interests is all both you and I would do. But for the next few months I think you can help yourself and others by making the most of your work.

"My advice is to peg away; make good; do your big picture and I will do all in the way of quiet influence to help father.

"But you take this chance. Make the most of your chance while you are young. Also don't buy any furniture or anything else for a house in Paris. Use your money for your materials and models for this year. It is your chance to do something fine and something that will be more lasting than Louis Quinz furniture—no matter how pretty that is. I don't think the idea of joining you in England this year is possible, for my year of comfort, travel and recuperation does not expire until the fall and I think if I stay at Fairview (Lincoln) next summer I can do a great deal to help papa—especially if we are to be in another campaign this year.

"If you and I go to Denver together, or any other American city, there will be much unpleasant notoriety. But if I continue to travel and only visit at Fairview there can be only one place where unkind papers can be curious.

"As you say, what is my happiness is yours, and I answer that my desire is to do what is best for you and me and for papa's chances. "RUTH."

Another letter to "Dear Peter" from Mrs. Leavitt at Cairo, dated Jan. 30, reads:

"It is very painful to me that the papers have so much to say about us. I will not nominate father for the presidency; I will not make a speech in the convention and probably all this talking in the press means that I will not even be a delegate.

"A little more worry of this sort and I will be back where I was last spring. But I shall not endanger my health again by accepting other than the easiest course with mother and a good nurse for the babies; and I shall not, nor should you, expect me to shorten the year of rest you promised me."

could not hear and that they were both out of order. He laid down the parliamentary rule requiring members to address the chair.

"I am very much obliged to the gentleman," replied Mr. Livingston, amid an uproar of laughter, but he certainly is getting in his dotage."

The chair admonished the members that they must observe the rules of debate and address the chair.

Smarting under Mr. Livingston's characterization of him, Mr. Hepburn got the floor. "The gentleman from Georgia in his amiability has suggested that I am in my dotage," he said, "and yet his evidence of that was that I could not hear his wanderings. But the moment the chair addressed the house in loud tones, the gentleman at once said: 'I cannot hear.' I submit the question of dotage to the membership."

Raked Over by Mann.

Although plainly vexed at first, Mr. Hepburn smiled as he sat down, the house in the meantime being convulsed with laughter.

The bureau of plant industry was given a raking over by Mr. Mann of Illinois, who charged that the money appropriated for testing papermaking plants had been wasted. "All the information obtained," he said, "was already known. They had to learn something themselves. They knew very little about the subject."

In the course of debate, Mr. Cole of Ohio, made a strong plea for an appropriation of $20,000 for experiments in the manufacture of paper from cornstalks and offered an amendment to that end. Mr. Gronna of North Dakota supported the amendment, which, however, was withdrawn after notice of a point of order against it by Mr. Scott, who said that it had been fully demonstrated that paper could be manufactured from cornstalks.

Mr. Mann directed a shot at Secretary Wilson. He admitted, he said, that the secretary was a very able man, but when it came to the subject of paper making, "what he does not know about it would fill many volumes, and what he does know would occupy very little space."

By way of a substitute, which was agreeable to Mr. Mann, Mr. Davis of Minnesota, offered an amendment appropriating $10,000 for breeding fibrous plants which may be used for paper making. The amendment was adopted.

Wireless Telegraphy Again.

Appreciating the value of suggestions that have arisen since the introduction of his bill to require all ocean passenger vessels to be equipped with wireless telegraphy, Representative Burke of Pennsylvania, re-introduced his bill, with several amendments.

This action followed a long conference with Commissioner Chamberlain of the bureau of navigation and Gen. Uhler, supervising inspector general of the steamboat inspection service in the department of commerce and labor. Both officials approve of the new bill. As amended the bill applies to ocean passenger steamers certified to carry fifty passengers or more between points 200 miles distant instead of 500 miles, as in the first bill. The new bill thus makes the requirements applicable to coastwise vessels except on the Great Lakes. The penalty is changed so as to provide for a maximum fine of $1,000 or one year's imprisonment.

Forestry Service Criticised.

The forestry service in connection with the consideration of the agricultural appropriation bill came in for further criticism. Mr. Mondell of Wyoming charged that the forestry bureau was administered with wanton extravagance. His statements were controverted by Mr. Scott, who said that the Keep commission had found that the forest service employes were paid less than those of other departments.

Bitter denunciation was heaped upon the service by Mr. Smith of California. It was, he said, the greatest outrage that had been perpetrated upon any people. "The effort of the forest bureau," he declared, "is to grind every dollar it can get out of the people of the West." There was, he declared, no kind of an activity carried on in any part of the national forest that the people were not made to yield "money, money, money," all the time to the Federal government. He charged that the forest service had illegally extorted fees from miners, stockmen, farmers and others. He spoke particularly of a case in which a fee of 10 cents each had been levied on bee hives.

Mufflers on Motor Boats.

No more will motor boats disturb landsmen with their exhausts, if a bill which was unanimously reported from the merchant marine and fisheries committee should become a law. This bill would require mufflers on motor boats which do not have exhaust pipes under water.

Advocates of reform in the postal service are to press for remedial legislation at this session. As a result of this decision, the house committee on postoffices and post roads yesterday decided to begin consideration of the Overstreet bill paragraph by paragraph next Monday. This bill carries into effect the reforms recommended by the postal commission. One of the most radical measures in it is the creation of the office of director of posts.

WANT MEN IN SILK HATS.

Frock Coats Also Required for Job in Inaugural Parade.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Wanted—Nine able-bodied men, one from each congressional district in Minnesota and two from the state at large. Apply to the chief marshal of the inaugural parade.

Four men from Dakota and four from South Dakota are also wanted. This need is created through invitations extended to the two senators from each of the states mentioned and all the members of the house to designate men to appear on the 4th of March attired in the usual afternoon get-up, with frock coat and silk hat, and to pay about $20 for a horse to be used during that day. The inaugural committee will furnish the usual white sash and probably the white gloves which go with the job.

Such a designation is considered an honor and tenders will be made to some of the best known men in the state. Representative Nye has written W. W. Heffelfinger asking him to represent the fifth district and he hopes for an acceptance.

ANGELL TO RESIGN SOON.

Aged President Will be Made Chancellor of Michigan "U."

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 5.—It became known here yesterday that the office of chancellor of Michigan university is to be created by the regents and President James B. Angell is to be installed therein.

A new president of the university is to be elected to assume the burden of heavy work, which is becoming too onerous for Mr. Angell's eighty years, while President Angell, as chancellor, will remain the actual head of the institution at a salary probably larger than his present one.

It is stated that on these conditions only have the regents consented to let Mr. Angell retire from the presidency. Dr. Angell's present plan is to present his resignation at the next meeting of the board of regents, which is planned for Feb. 17, but which may be postponed a few days.

No Automobile Farming.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 5.—In an address before the state board of agriculture here yesterday Former Secretary of State Walter L. Houser of Mondovi ridiculed the idea that the farm work of the future will be done by autos, and said horses were the farmer's greatest asset. He flayed the "predatory rich who hurl themselves about the country in big machines smoking cigarettes and flirting with other men's wives."

MAN-IN-THE-BOX FOUND; INTENDED TRAIN ROBBER?

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 5.—Toledo police and railroad authorities are investigating a "man in the box" mystery, which they believe was an attempt to rob the express car of a Lake Shore train.

Since Wednesday morning, when the strange case was reported, the matter had been suppressed.

In the car was a long box consigned from Toledo to Worcester, Mass., by the American Express company. Near Sandusky the messenger heard a voice coming from the box, and upon forcing the lid, discovered a man, who jumped out and began a struggle.

The messenger, however, pulled his revolver and compelled the stranger to throw up his hands. The train was stopped and the man hustled out of the car.

MASONIC LODGE SCORES OHIO GRAND MASTER FOR DISPENSATION TO TAFT

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 5.—W B. Melish, past grand master of the grand lodge of Masons, said that the adoption of the resolution by the Masonic chapter at Wortham, Tex., condemning the action of the grand master of Ohio in granting a special dispensation in the case of President-elect Taft, permitting him to become a Mason "at sight," is unprecedented and inexcusable.

He declared that the action of the grand master of Ohio was absolutely regular and Masonic in every respect and in accordance with Masonic precedent. He said that the Wortham chapter, in adopting the resolution is either an irregular chapter, or it is violating the tenets of Masonry in passing such a resolution and that the grand high priest can be asked to discipline the chapter.

tion, as the state constitution requires No one district should have a greater representation than any other district.

But when it comes to the touch of practicality, it will unquestionably be found that those from districts likely to suffer by a just reapportionment will be numerous enough to give the friends of just apportionment the alternative of compromising or losing altogether. Still, the outlook for reapportionment is excellent, and even though it may be a compromise bill that becomes law, it will leave representation far more just than it is now.

Senator Clague of Lamberton has an idea that is being considered by some of his colleagues. He believes that the senate is now too large, and that it should be reduced. It is true, as The Herald showed two years ago, when the matter of reapportionment was up for brief consideration, that the Minnesota senate is the largest in the United States. The average senate consists of about forty-eight members, and Minnesota's senate has sixty-three members.

Senator Clague's idea is to have the basis of senatorial apportionment about 40,000 population, which would produce a senate of about fifty-one members, still above the average, and large enough for all practical purposes. He would give each county a member of the house, with the exception that Lake and Cook counties would be joined together in one house district, and where population required, he would increase the house membership from the larger counties. As he has figured it out, this would make a house of about 108 to 110 members, instead of the present house of 119 members.

Of course, if it were desirable to increase the membership of both bodies, it would be possible to approach justice a good deal nearer than probably will be done, without materially injuring the representation of the older but less populous districts.

But there would be serious objection to increasing the membership of either house. Both are already too large for convenient transaction of business, the senate only less so than the house, but still too large. To increase either of them would be to add greatly to the expense of legislation, and at the same time to congest the work of the legislature and impede its progress.

Senator T. M. Pugh of Duluth, who is entitled to the appellation of "father of the naval militia" because of the fact that ten years ago he introduced and pushed through the bill allowing the formation of a naval department of the state militia, will introduce shortly a bill appropriating $5,000 for a boat-house at Duluth for the Duluth divisions of the state's sea forces. The state's military seamen are pretty well provided with boats, between the federal and state donations, but it is quite shy on suitable housing facilities for the craft.

After prolonged debate, much bickering over amendments, mostly intended to kill the measure, the house yesterday afternoon passed the country agricultural school bill by Lawrence H. Johnson of Minneapolis by a vote of 78 to 37.

While the opposition to the bill was strong, and its pathway through the special order on which it came up yesterday afternoon was beset with pitfalls and perils in the shape of amendments intended to delay, destroy or defeat it, Mr. Johnson fought his fight gallantly and won handsomely.

The only amendment of importance that was added was one providing that instead of letting the board of county commissioners proceed to form a county agricultural school immediately upon receipt of a petition, the matter must be submitted to the people at a general election for their ratification.

This will complicate one feature of the bill. The idea was to provide for six schools, and give them to the counties that first complied with the terms of the law. Now no final action can be taken until the next election when, if the people of more than six counties vote for county agricultural schools, the state authorities may have some difficulty in determining which counties are first in the field, since they will all land at about the same time. However, there is still room for alacrity in meeting the formal requirements of the bill, and the choice may not be so difficult as it seems now.

The idea is that the counties must first establish their schools and show that they intend to provide for them, after which the state is to pay two-thirds of the cost of construction and two-thirds of the annual cost of maintenance, which is limited, however, to $6,000 a year. State aid for construction is fixed at $15,000 each. The bill carries an appropriation of $15,000 for each of the six schools, or $90,000, and $24,000 yearly for the annual maintenance of the six institutions.

While some of the speeches against the bill yesterday were actuated by complete opposition to the county agricultural school idea, the great majority of the house membership, including many of those who voted against the Johnson bill, seem to believe in the general idea. In view of the attempt being made by Congressman Davis to get $25,000 for a congressional district agricultural school in each of the nine congressional districts of the state, there were members who thought the state's plan ought to be based upon that scheme, and arranged so as to co-operate with it. However, if Mr. Davis gets the money, there will be no trouble in finding schools to use it. Friends of the county school idea believe that the time will come when there will not be many counties in the state without such institutions. It is believed that it will help solve the problem of keeping the boys and girls on the farm.

Representative Elmer Adams of Fergus Falls, who was against the Johnson bill, said more good could be done with less money by setting afloat a number of skilled experts to go about the state teaching farmers on their own farms.

It le believed that the St. Louis county judgeship matter will be harmoniously arranged, to the satisfaction of very nearly everybody.

The cause of the outbreak of the belligerent Robert Stratton of Hibbing at the Wednesday meeting of the St. Louis county delegation over the bill drafted by John G. Williams, giving the ranges four general terms of court yearly at Virginia, was that the bill did not consider Hibbing's case. Hibbing is the largest community on the range, has by far the greatest property valuation and a very large share of the litigation, and the delegation will be glad to help it out if it is possible. However, there are practical difficulties in the way of having general terms of district court at two range communities. It would practically mean three county seats, and it would involve great confusion over the location of records and the question of which court seat was nearest to the litigant. Mr. Stratton, it is said, will try to be contented if Hibbing is given part of the range terms, and the delegation will try manfully to fix it so that this can be done; and it will be unless the difficulties prove insurmountable. The matter will be taken up at an adjourned meeting of the St. Louis county delegation this afternoon. N. B. Arnold of Eveleth and Mr. Stratton are still here watching proceedings.

The prompt defeat of the county option bill yesterday was a surprise only insofar as its earliness in the session was concerned. It has been known from the beginning that the friends of count yoption were outnumbered in the house, and that when the test came they would be voted down.

In the past the method of defeating the bill has been to let it simmer in comittee until it was too late for action. This was largely because it was deemed better not to compel the members to go on record, thus exposing them to political perils at home. They usually had to go on record anyway, however, on a motion to pull the bill out of committee, so this time it was decided as better all around to put the bill out early and get it out of the way.

There will be some criticism, no doubt, of the action of the house in squelching debate upon the measure, but this move was not because there was any fear that debate would crowd the bill through. It was beaten, and everybody knew it. If debate had begun, it would probably have continued all day, and nothing else could have been accomplished. So the house voted to shut off debate, and killed the bill without talk. Some of the opponents of county option, however, voted against the foreclosing of debate. The vote on the motion to rescue the bill from the committee's adverse vote was as follows:

Yeas: Adams, Bendixen, Bicknell, Bjorge, Burnquist, Campbell, Carlson, Conley, Davies, Davis, Ferguson, Gates, Haugland, Holmberg, Holten, Horton, C. E. Johnson, J. N. Johnson, J. T. Johnson, Lee, Lobeck, Mattson, McGrath, McMartin, Melby, Nagel, O. B. Nelson, Noble, Opsahl, H. A. Putnam, W. H. Putnam, Rines, Robertson, Rosenwald, Rustad, Sampson, Saugstad, Sawyer, Spooner, Sulerud, Swendsen, Wallace, Ware, C. J. Wright—44.

Nays: Allen, Anderson, Austin, Baldwin, Borgen, Brady, Brown, Buck, Carey, Carley, Christenson, Congdon, Conroy, Dalzell, Deiner, Dorsey, Dower, Doyle, Duea, Emmel, Fitzpatrick, Friedman, Gartside, Goodspeed, Graham, Grant, Greene, Handlan, Henry, Herzberg, Hinds, L. H. Johnson, Jorgenson, Kelly, Kling, Krause, Leeds, Lennon, Mackenzie, McGarry, McNeill, Mork, Murphy, H. Nelson, Nimocks, Nolan, Nye, O'Brien, Perry, Peters, Peterson, Pfaender, Phillips, Rodenberg, Rowe, Sahler, Selb, Sikorski, Stence, Stone, Stuart, Sullivan, Thayer, Virtue, Washburn, Wells, Wetter, Westcott, White, Wohlhutter, F. B. Wright, Zelch, Mr. Speaker—73.

Though there were two days' notice of the fact that the vote was to be taken, it is noteworthy that only two members were absent, Messrs. Kneeland and Webb, and both had urgent business to keep them away, so that nobody "sucked" the vote.

It is said that the anti-saloon forces have another card up their sleeves, which will be produced shortly. This is a new township option law, which is upon practically the same lines as the county option plan, except that it is reduced to township size.

Under the present local option law, townships and villages may vote whenever they please upon whether or not saloons are to be licensed, but they are kept entirely separate. A township may have several villages carved out of its territory, yet the township license election and the village license elections are separate things.

Under the proposed new scheme, which is based upon the Illinois township law, the voters of a township may close down the saloons in villages within their geographical limits. If a village lies wholly or partly within a township, even if the township merely touches one corner, the town may call a license election, and if its no license vote outweighs the license vote of the village, the whole thing will go dry.

This may prove as vexatious to the liquor interests as the county option agitation, or even more so.

One result of the defeat of county option, growing out of the fit of pique into which its author, A. K. Ware of Northfield, was plunged by his defeat, was the disappearance of one of the tonnage tax bills. When Mr. Ware informed the house that he believed the cards were stacked against him, and that he would therefore introduce no more bills and try to do nothing more with those already before the house, he pulled back his primary election bill and his 10-cent tonnage tax bill, and consigned them to the waste basket.

Such fight as there is to be made on the tonnage tax idea, however, will be waged upon the Bjorge bill, and it is unlikely that the Ware bill would have gone far, anyway.

It is said that one avenue along which the Adams committee, appointed to investigate the school book trust and its operations in this state, will probe is the political highway. An attempt will be made to get hold of as many political committee financial accounts as possible, to see if the book trust has been donating anything to political campaign funds.

In this connection it is said that Maj. Clancy, who is a widely known agent for school book concerns in larger affairs, will not be present at the hearings of the committee. It was thought that he might be able to give valuable information, but word has been received from his employers that because of ill health he has been compelled to go South for the winter.

The house yesterday afternoon passed the Elwell senate resolution allowing the member of the state university faculty to come under the Carnegie pension fund. When the resolution came into the house it was held up temporarily because of a fear on the part of some of the members that it might obligate the state to pay part of the pensions provided. In vestigation showed that there was nothing of the sort behind the plan, so the resolution was adopted. Incidentally, Representative G. H. Mattson of Roseau county, one of the new members, showed strong oratorical powers in his talk in favor of the resolution.

The marvelous growth of the sale of Postum is principally due to the fact that when a man or woman learns that coffee is hurting them and that there's relief by changing to Postum, they are pretty sure to find out for themselves by trial.

"For six or eight years I had suffered from indigestion," writes a Va. lady, "until I was nothing but skin and bones. I tried nearly every patent medicine for stomach trouble, and several physicians, but without relief.

"Two years ago, I was nervous and weak when my last boy came, and couldn't nurse him. I had an attack of bilious colic one day and could taste nothing but coffee. I told my husband I would not drink any more coffee as I believed it caused my troubles.

"Having heard a lot about Postum I had him get some. I did not like it at first, but when we boiled it thoroughly according to direction on the pkg. I liked it, felt better, and the baby was better, too.

"At that time my husband was a slave to coffee, he had his coffee and I had Postum. One night he thought he was dying. I had had those attacks and told him he was only nervous from drinking coffee for supper.

"The next morning he told the cook not to make coffee, he would try Postum. When he came home that afternoon, he still wanted Postum, said he felt better than for a long time, and that night he rested better than for a good many nights.

"From that day till this he has been a Postum drinker and has better health than for years. I used to weigh 120 lbs. when I began to use Postum, now I weigh 150. All my children drink Postum and are healthy.

"Our grocer did not handle Postum but he got it for us. As our friends saw the good it had done us, they began to drink Postum, and now our grocery says he can hardly keep enough on hand.

"It is hard to down a good thing when the people find it out. I would not be without Postum for anything in reason."

SEVEN-HOUR DAY NOW LABOR'S AIM

Unions Will Start Organized Movement Throughout the Country.

Cleveland, Ohio., Feb. 5.—Organized labor throughout the United States has started a movement for the seven hour day in all lines of work.

Harry D. Thomas, secretary of the Cleveland United Trades & Labor Council of the Ohio Federation of Labor, announced yesterday that the agitation for an eight hour day was but a commencement of the larger movement.

The ultimate end is to reduce the hours of labor until all men are employed one hour a day if necessary to employ all. Only in this event, Thomas said, can workingmen share with their employers in the benefits of time and labor saving machinery.

His announcement was coincident with the meeting of the Cleveland Employers' association, called to consider the fight now being made by labor to get eight-hour legislation for women.

RACE THROUGH BAD BLIZZARD

Dominion Constable After Whisky Peddlers at Risk of Life.

Fort William, Ont., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—News has reached the city of a mad race in dog sleighs through a blinding snowstorm and over almost insurmountable drifts, engaged in by Dominion Constable A. M Stewart, the pursuer, and two alleged whisky peddlers, the pursued.

Acting upon instructions from Dominion Commissioner of Police Quibell, Constable Stewart, last Thursday morning, went to Wako, on the Grand Trunk Pacific, near where he picked up the trail of two men whom he had reason to believe were trafficking in liquor. He secured a dog sleigh and gave pursuit.

Nearly all day he followed the sleigh, and he had almost arrived to within hailing distance when darkness came on. Apparently thinkin that they could not escape, the fugitives threw away thirty quarts of Imperial whisky and twelve gallons of rye whisky. The storm by this time was so severe that the officer found it necessary to abandon the chase. The liquor was confiscated.

The whisky was being taken to Sturgeon Portage, east of Lake Superior Junction.

LITTLE BABY HORRIBLY BURNED

By Boiling Grease—Skin All Came off One Side of Face and Head—Tried an Ointment which Made It All Fester—Wee Sufferer Seemed Disfigured for Life.

CURED WITHOUT A MARK BY CUTICURA

"About a year and eight months ago my baby, aged ten months, was sitting on the mat beside the fender and we were preparing the breakfast when the frying-pan full of boiling grease was upset and it went all over one side of the baby's face and head. One of the family ran and wiped the scald with a towel and you may think what a mess she made, pulling the entire skin off. We took her to a chemist who told us to get a doctor, which w did. He tended her a week and gave me some stuff like lard to put on. But it all festered and I thought the baby was disfigured for life. A woman close beside me told me to try Cuticura Ointment. I used about three boxes and it was wonderful how it healed. In about five weeks it was better and there wasn't a mark to tell where the scald had been. People used to ask me if that was the baby that was scalded and they would hardly believe me when I told them she was and what cured her face. Her skin is just like velvet and I have never been without Cuticura since. Cuticura cured three other children of ringworm besides, so I have good cause to thank it for what it has done. Mrs. Hare, 1, Henry St., South Shields, Durham, England, March 22, 1908."

RIGHT IN ST. PAUL

The Tonic Treatment Has Cured a Severe Nervous Disorder and Here Is the Proof.

The cure of Mr. Arthur E. Dewar, a plumber, of No. 569 Goff avenue, St. Paul, Minn., is convincing proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do in this severe nervous disorder. He says:

"A few months ago I was laid up with inflammatory rheumatism. Following the four months of sickness with the rheumatism, I was in a very weak and nervous condition. I shook all over and could not dress myself. I then began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After I had taken three boxes of the pills, which helped me some, I was advised by my neighbors to again call in a doctor. This I did and he pronounced my case St. Vitus' dance. I was under his care for a month but his medicine did not help me at all and I could not take it without its upsetting my stomach.

"I was so nervous that I lost control of my hands and could not feed myself. My hands and feet were numb. I was always tired, did not have any strength and could not sleep at all. I had severe night sweats and was very pale and thin. I could not sit still.

"After giving up the doctor's treatment, I decided to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills again and nothing else. The pills were taken as the directions stated and soon I could see that they were helping me. I gave them a thorough trial and was cured. I am now well and strong and have gained ten pounds in weight. I strongly advise everyone suffering with any nervousness to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as they are worth their weight in gold."

There is absolutely no way of reaching the nerves with medicine except through the blood. The nerves receive all of their nourishment and support from the blood which, under healthful conditions, carries the elements needed to rebuild wasted nerve tissue. It is through the blood that all functional nerve troubles must be cured.

Those who are interested in the treatment which cured this case can obtain further information by writing for the booklet, "Nervous Disorders," which we send free on request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

LYCEUM—Louis James in "Peer Gynt."

SPLENDID PRODUCTION

Duluth Actress Delights Her Friends in "Peer Gynt."

Louis James and Company in Ibsen's Great Drama.

Miss Laura Frankenfield and Louis James—and it is no more than fair to place Miss Frankenfield first in the list of characters, this being her home town—were given a fine reception in Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" at the Lyceum last night. The house was filled, and the audience was of the kind to be expected at a first-class production of this character.

It may as well be said right at the start that there is no question about Miss Frankenfield being a success in the part of Ase, mother of Peer. The character is not by any means an easy one to play, and evidently Miss Frankenfield has given it much careful study, with highly gratifying results. Her's is a superb piece of acting, her host of Duluth friends were delighted with her success, and were not slow to show it last night. Her conception of the part is an achievement, and undoubtedly will secure for her a permanent position in higher theatricals.

Mr. James always has had a large following in Duluth. He has been seen here in parts in which he appeared to greater advantage, and which appealed more to the popular taste, but last night he found his usual favor in the eyes of Duluth friends and marks of their keen appreciation were evidenced by frequent applause. During the progress of the play, Mr. James grows from a young man into an old one. The different stages of Peer Gynt's life, first as a merry, laughing young man, abounding in health and vigor, and last as an old man, broken and discouraged, but finally content with the finding of his one true love, are splendidly depicted.

Miss Aphie James makes a pretty and lovable Solveig, and finds favor with the audience. No very great demands are made upon her abilities as an actress, however. Ida Werner is good as Ingrid, the stolen bride, and Arthur Weston gives a good, if short, account of himself as Mads Moen, the bridegroom. J. Arthur Young as king of the Trolls, makes a big success of a very grotesque and very difficult role. His voice is made to have fearful and wonderful inflections, and his laugh sounds as if his insides were made of rusty clock work.

Anne Schafer was satisfying as the Green Clad Woman, and William C. Andrews was good in the dual role of the stranger passenger and the button moulder. Kraft Walton also assumes a double role, and does well. Messrs. Lindsay, Hempel, Reynolds and Loomis as peasant lads got the most out of the parts allotted to them. The company is a large one, and all the parts are in capable hands.

"Peer Gynt" is not the type of play that a person would care to witness every night in the week. It is a huge production, staged in five acts and eleven scenes. The mounting is magnificent. To the average theatergoer, who attends simply for amusement, it is rather bewildering, and frankly speaking, somewhat tiresome. Such a person, however, in witnessing the production must realize that, if it is tiresome, it is because of the listener's own shortcomings, and not those of the author or the actors.

In the first place, as Miss Frankenfield stated in an interview with The Herald, earlier in the week, it is a question whether Ibsen's pessimism will ever allow him a permanent place in the American drama. It doesn't exactly jibe with the general spirit of optimism in this land of the free and home of the brave.

Ibsen is always described as the dramatists who makes you think. The audience last night went to the Lyceum prepared to follow out instructions, and think hard, but even with the assistance of a synopsis, considerately published in the program, many had difficulty in deciding just what it was all about. The production is so long, and the scenes so many and varied, and some of them are so disconnected, that a sustained interest cannot be maintained by the average theatergoer.

"This phantasmagoria, or comedy of human life, embraces all the elements of the serious, the pathetic, the grotesque, the real and the unreal, the actualities and the dreams, the facts and the consequences, the ambitions and the disappointments, the hopes and the disillusions, the dread and terror, and the resurrection, in love, of the human soul," says an explanatory note in the program. There you have it; why say more?

One thing upon which all can agree is the music. All of it is beautiful. The orchestra was under the direction of Theodore L. Currie, and the music at times held the audience entranced.

"Peer Gynt" will be repeated tonight, tomorrow afternoon and tomorrow night.

MENNONITES IN FARGO.

Dressed in Quaint Costumes Pass Through Dakota City.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dressed in quaint costumes, half a dozen Amish Mennonites were in Fargo yesterday en route from Barlow, this state, to Colorado.

They have a colony of thirty-eight families in North Dakota and some of them are thinking of locating on the irrigated lands in the Silver state. Their costumes are of the vintage of 300 years ago and patterned closely after those worn by their founder, Menno Simmons.

SELF-DEFENSE PLEA IN ST. CLOUD MURDER CASE.

St. Cloud, Minn., Feb. 5.—The state has nearly completed its side of the case in the trial of Martin Lahr, charged with the murder of Vinus Esser. Seven witnesses to the tragedy were on the stand yesterday, who told of the trouble at the saloon and of the shooting. All stated that Lahr shot five times at Esser from behind. It is denied that Esser did any shooting.

The defense is trying to show that Esser carried a gun, which he pointed at Lahr, and that the defendant shot in self-defense.

SIDE MONEY FOR INDIANS

Various Ways They Have of Adding to Their Income.

Abatement of Indian Bead Work Craze Means Cash Loss.

The abatement of the craze for Indian bead work, which reached its height three or four years ago, has meant a substantial decrease in the income of the several tribes of Northern Minnesota Indians, particularly those in the vicinity of Red Lake. While the bead work was in fashion, the Indians were able to sell, at good prices, all they were able to turn out, and their pin money fund grew at a considerable rate in consequence.

"It was a soft snap for the Reds, while it lasted," said G. L. Perkins of Bemidji, Minn., who was in the city during the early part of the week. "There was a big demand for the bead work, much of which was really pretty, and it kept the Indians around Bemidji turning the stuff out. Most of it from that territory came from the Red Lake reservation. One young fellow made it a business to visit all the Indians on the reservation regularly, buying up the finished product, and then he would send it to the large cities. There was a comfortable margin of profit in it for him.

"The Indians generally find some way to make side money. If it isn't bead work, it is something else. Just now it is trapping, and in the spring it will be maple sugar and birch bark novelties. It is a noticeable fact that the squaws do most of the work in this connection, while the bucks take most of the money. The making of birch bark canoes has been quite a source of revenue since traveling along northern lakes and streams became so popular with the white men, many of whom buy their canoes of the Indians rather than take factory made articles into the wilderness.

"With an Indian, time counts for nothing, and a canoe, which it takes a week or two to construct, he will sell for $6 to $10, unless the demand is good, when, of course, he will raise his prices, and get whatever he can. Indian-made maple sugar is quite a curiosity to tourists visiting Bemidji. It is the genuine article, and is put up in birch bark boxes, of attractive design. It is the best maple sugar I ever tasted, and fairly melts in a person's mouth.

"Wild rice is a source of revenue in the fall. The Indians put up a good deal of it for their own consumption, but whatever they can spare they sell to white traders, who take it to the cities and get a good price for it. One man in the Twin Cities, who conducts a large sporting goods store, handles thousands of pounds of the cereal every year. I never tasted any myself, but they say it is even more palatable than domestic rice, and there are certain people, mostly sportsmen, who keep it in the house all the time, if they are able to procure it, although they sometimes have to pay fancy prices to get it."

VALET STABS HIS EMPLOYER

Alleged to Have Been Fond of Anarchist Literature.

Paris, Feb. 5.—A valet, alleged to have been fond of Anarchistic literature, recently stabbed his master, the Marquis de la Ramee, in the back, and then ran away. It is evidently unsafe for noblemen to have servants who are fond of reading the panegyrics of Cesario and others.

The Marquis de la Ramee was busy with a heraldic publication and geneaological research. About a year ago he took a valet into his service, who in time became also his confidential man, and at odd hours a sort of secretary. The valet was frequently sent out to collect bills, and had deposited a guarantee in the form of a sum of $200.

Madame de la Ramee had noticed some time ago that the valet had a number of Anarchist pamphlets in his room. She told her husband, and also expressed her susprise that he should keep such a man in his service, but the marquis pand no attention to it. He nearly paid for it with his life.

He was sitting in his office, situated on the fourth floor in the Boulevard des Italiens, and was looking over his mail, when his valet entered and stood behind him as if he wished to look at the clock of a bank building on the opposite side of the boulevard. The Marquis de la Ramee took no notice of the man, when he was suddenly stabbed by a blow on the back, he fell forward on his desk for an instant and caught the handle of a dagger which the assailant had thrust in between his shoulders, and which he had left there. He drew it out, and, turning round, saw his valet at the door, glaring wildly at him. The man immediately banged the door and ran down the stairs.

The marquis had strength enough left to seize his revolver and run after the would-be assassin, but, on getting into the boulevard, lost sight of him. A crowd at once gathered, astonished to see the marquis in his shirtsleeves and with his back stained with blood. He was advised to go at once to a pharmacy, and while he was being attended there he fainted. The wound turned out to be serious, as the dagger reached one of the lungs. The marquis is a strong man, and may recover.

The valet gave himself up to the police. He alleges that he had been exasperated by his master's neglect to pay his wages. He also wanted his $200 returned.

Mix for Rheumatism

The following is a never failing recipe for rheumatism. To one-half pint of good whiskey, add one ounce syrup sarsaparilla and one ounce Toris compound, which can be procured of any druggist. Take in teaspoonful doses before each meal and before retiring.

Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a Civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." For severe colds, obstinate coughs, hemorrhages, asthma, and to prevent pneumonia it's unrivaled. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

SAY SLAIN MAN HAD THREE WIVES

Woman Makes Statements in Case of Frank Wilhelm.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 5.—There are sensational developments in the case of Frank Wilhelm, the contractor, who was found murdered in his home here Monday, though the clearing up of the mystery that surrounds the tragedy has not yet come. The revelations include the charge that Wilhelm has three wives living and that he had never been divorced. The allegations regarding the domestic life of the murdered man came during the progress of the funeral of Wilhelm, through Mrs. Frederick A. Wilhelm of No. 227 East Eighty-third street, New York, who claimed she was married to Wilhelm in Jersey City in 1894, soon after he had deserted his first wife, Hannah Wilhelm, who was also his stepsister. Two years later, she said, she discovered his perfidy.

When she accused him, he deserted her, she alleged, and her 1-year-old daughter and a baby soon to be born, and fled with his step-sister-wife. Since then she had not heard from him until the child, then unborn, and now a law of 12 years, read of his murder in a newspaper Tuesday and recognized his picture in the paper as that of the man whose picture in their home, he had been told was his father. Mrs. Frederick A. Wilhelm does not know what became of Hannah Wilhelm.

Mrs. Mary J. Wilhelm, the wife, now held in connection with the murder, was not permitted to attend the funeral.

NO LONGER A PROBLEM

Supply of Girls for Domestic Science Equals Demand.

Are Now Willing to Take Jobs Out of Town.

The "girl" questio nis no longer the puzzler it has been for the past eighteen months, and there no longer exists the dearth of domestic help so long complained of by the housekeepers in search of servants.

The supply is as fickle and vacillating in character, as that popularly ascribed to all things pertaining to the realm of women. Servants sometimes are so plentiful that the market is flooded, and then again there will be a long period of shortage, like the past year and a half.

According to Miss Pearl Ettinger, who has charge of the woman's department of the Minnesota State Free Employment agency at Duluth, her department for the first time since it has been established, is able to fill all orders it receives, and the supply of help seems about equal to the demand. It has heretofore always been the reverse. There have been more orders for girls than there have been girls to fill them. This is not exactly true of competent cooks, for they are always hard to get, but all orders for general housework servants can be filled without difficulty. The wages are the same as have been, so that will not explain the change.

beforezbesrgf....dmrocmfw cmf cm c

Another striking feature of the new order of things at the girl exchange, is that now no trouble is experienced in getting girls to take places out of town. This has always been a great problem with the agencies. Miss Ettinger says that lately she has filled a great many orders from the range towns, and has experienced little difficulty in doing so.

For over a year it has been so hard to get servants in Duluth and the call for them has been so great here and on the ranges, than from twenty to thirty orders a day would go unfilled at the state free agency. The woman's department of the agency is now doing from three to four times as much business as the men's department.

TO MAKE COLOR TEST.

Monkeys to be Used by Johns Hopkins Professor.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 5.—The graduate department of biology at the Johns Hopkins University is now the proud possessor of four monkeys. The monkeys are the especial pets of Prof. John B. Watson, formerly professor of experimental physiology at the University of Chicago, and now professor of that subject and head of the department at the Hopkins.

Dr. Watson is preparing to make some light and color experiments with the monkeys, testing the power of a high form of animal to distinguish between colors and different degrees of light.

The monkey is tempted to make this distinction through the medium of a Malaga grape, one of the chief of monkey delicacies, placed behind a red electric light and then behind a green one.

PLAY STIRS UP ALL ENGLAND

"An Englishman's Home" the Greatest Hit of a Generation.

London, Feb. 5.—It is many years since a play has made such a sensation as "An Englishman's Home," by "A Patriot," produced last week at the Wyndham theater by Gerald du Maurier, with the assistance of J. M. Barrie. All the seats have been booked in advance until the middle of March and the management is preparing to run the play at two theaters simultaneously, something no play has achieved with the memory of a generation.

The author is Guy du Maurier, a brother of the actor, who is producing the play, and the son of George du Maurier, the artist and author of "Trilby," "The Martian" and "Peter Ibbetson." The luck of du Mauriers is likely to become proverbial. George du Maurier had spent a lifetime making drawings for Punch and never dreamt that he had a talent for writing. He was the most surprised man in London over the success of his book. "An Englishman's Home" is the first attempt at writing of his son, who is a major in the Royal Fusiliers. His brother says the author, who is now in South Africa, will be "the most surprised man in the world when he hears of the success of his work."

Lord Roberts has devoted his whole time and energy since the Boer war to preaching to Englishmen the necessity for qualifying to take up a rifle and defend their homes in case of invasion. He has received some sort of general support, and it is well known that he and every prominent soldier in the country advocate compulsory service, but public opinion will not yet go so far.

This play is now generally recognized as the most powerful assistance yet given Lord Roberts in his propagandist campaign. It is devoid of the ordinary love interest, and shows a middle-class English home, shut up on a foggy bank, holiday. The father, sons and daughters depict the average British attitude on military questions. The father plays diabolo and the sons look on at football and cricket. A daughter's sweetheart alone feels it his duty to join the territorial army, and is much chaffed for his patriotism.

This quiet home is then suddenly entered by the soldiers of the Empress of the North, whose army has invaded England under cover of the fog. The uselessness of the old-fashioned volunteer officers is scathingly portrayed, and what has been a laughable, farcical comedy changes into a tragedy, when the football-watching son is shot through the heart, and the room collapses under shell fire. The father, seizing a rifle, fires on the enemy, and is shot on his own lawn, as "a civilian has no right to fire in defense of his own home."

Some of the critics, while acknowledging the strength of the play as a pamphlet, condemn it as crude, and also blame the author for not pushing the lesson home, for the play finishes with the bagpipes of the Highlanders heard approaching and the news that the enemy is surrounded.

RENT A YEAR IN ARREARS

Neil McInnis Ordered by the Probate Court to Collect.

Lessee Has Claim Against Estate and Refuses to Pay.

On the claim of Ella Nelson and Victoria Nystrom that Neil McInnis, administrator of the estate of Mary Erickson, was neglecting his duties and had failed to collect rents due the estate for nearly a year, Mr. McInnis was cited to appear before the probate court yesterday and show cause why he should not be removed from the position on account of such negligence.

On Mr. McInnis' appearance, it developed that he was up against a legal tangle that is pretty deep for any man to tackle. After the evidence was presented, Judge Middlecoff issued an order to Mr. McInnis directing him to take any steps that may be necessary to collect the rents, which are in arrears.

It seems that when Mrs. Erickson died, she left considerable property, including a lot at Eveleth. On the estate being taken into probate court, Frank Erickson put in a claim for $2,500 for improvements made on the property. The claim was disallowed by the probate court and Erickson carried it to district court. There it was allowed at first, but subsequently, the reversal of the decision of the probate court was vacated. Then Mr. Erickson appealed to the supreme court, where the case is still pending.

In the meantime, Erickson has been occupying the premises on a lease and on the strength of his claim, he has refused to pay rent. Mr. McInnis has been unable to collect from him by ordinary means, so it will probably be necessary for him to take legal steps. Mr. McInnis also lives at Eveleth and is chairman of the county board.

Revolts At Cold Steel.

"Your only hope," said three doctors to Mrs. M. E. Fisher, Detroit, Mich., suffering from severe rectal trouble, "lies in an operation;" "then I used Dr. King's New Life Pills," she writes, "till wholly cured." They prevent appendicitis, cure constipation, headache. 25c at all druggists.

YOUNG TURKS ARE POPULAR

Leaders Under 40, the Average Being 32 Years Old.

Constantinople, Feb. 5.—The young Turk leaders are exceedingly popular, and it would be next to an impossibility to carry out successfully any reactionary movement without their full knowledge. Only three of the young Turk leaders are over 40 years of age. One is only 20. The average would stand at about 32.

The best all-around education, somewhat curiously, is found among the military and naval men, for their course of study, such as it is, has been a complete one, whereas the teaching in the official and professional schools has been scrappy and badly organized, while those who have educated themselves in private have been subjected to the difficulties placed by a despotic and suspicious government in the way of obtaining books or exchanging ideas. The naval men are the best scholars.

These men refuse to speak of their exploits, and it is most difficult, even now, to ascertain how the revolution came about. They take the whole thing as a matter of course. One can hardly realize that, though the revolution was a "peaceable" one, hundreds of their comrades, men who strove—perhaps skilfully—for the same objects have suffered death; that they themselves schemed and plotted at the risk of their lives for years; that they expected and were fully prepared for a revolutionary war of six months at least, following the first outbreak.

Will the adventurous spirit of youth lead these men, inexperienced in government, suddenly invested with virtual responsibility for the administration of an empire, to dangerous lengths of radicalism? Will the middle-aged and the old rise up against them, and rrbel in their turn against this domination of the young? It is not thought so. For one thing, no man can yet forget what these men have done. It is they who brought Turkey on its own end. While others murdered and did nothing, they set to work, prepared the way, and struck the deadly blow. No freedom-loving people ever plotted against themselves, and assuredly the people are behind their leaders.

Of the older members of the committee, there is Ahmed Riza, now president of the chamber of deputies. For twenty-five years he was an exile in Paris, earning his living by teaching, conducting the Shura-i-Ummet, the organ of the Young Turk propaganda, which was circulated in Turkey through secret channels—a dangerous game, both for him and for his agents. In the long years of banishment he despaired again and again, as he told the chamber of deputies, of ever seeing the realization of his hopes From the first day of the parliament, even before his election as president, his tall, alert figure,, his keen face, with its neat, gray beard, and his quick intellect, dominated the assembly. His position as president does not preclude him from speaking, and he will, perhaps be the strongest personality in the house. He is recognized as the Young Turk leader par excellence.

IS RICHEST PEER OF ALL ENGLAND

Sir Richard Sutton, Aged 18, Owns Half of Piccadilly.

London, Feb. 5.—Sir Richard Sutton, the richest baronet in England, who is but 18 years of age, will shortly become still more wealthy through the falling in of leases of many of his houses in Straton and Curzon streets. Great rows of chambers, flats and shops will undoubtedly replace the existing small dwellings, and rental values will go up with a bound, as was the case in Down street a few years ago.

For eighteen years Sir Richard's enormous wealth has been growing by acumulation. His wants have been few and his expenditure but a small fraction of his immense annual income. He was a posthumous child, being born two months after the death of his father.

Just how tremendous his wealth is has probably been more nearly gauged by matchmaking mammas with schoolaughters than any one else, though any one who has ever visited London can give a fair guess of its magnitude when it is mentioned that to this youth belong the north side of Piccadilly and nearly all the streets off it—Sackville street, Vigo street, Bolton street, Clarges street, Half Moon street and part of Curzon street. In fact, all fashionable Mayfair which does not belong to the duke of Westminster is, with the exception of a small property which belongs to Lord Howe of the Penn-Curzon family, after whom Curzon street was named, owned by Sir Richard Sutton. There is also a large district of property north of Regent street which stands in his name.

A Ghostly Photograph.

While away from home at one time the late Lord Combermere let South Abbey, Whitechurch, Alsop, to the late Sir Richard Sutton. It was towards the end of the latter's tenancy that Lord Combermere died and his body was brought back home to be buried in the village churchyard. As Sir Richard and Lady Sutton were preparing to leave within a few days, Miss Corbett, who was staying with them and who is an enthusiastic amateur photographer, spent her time taking photographs of all the points of interest about the abbey. On the afternoon of the interment of the owner of the place, Miss Corbett decided to take a photograph of the fine old library, and, putting her camera into position, she locked the door.

Later on, while developing the negative of this photograph, Miss Corbett discovered a figure sitting in Lord Combermere's chair, though every other part of the photograph was exactly as she had expected it to be. That no one had been in the library she was absolutely certain, and the whole thing puzzled her and her sister, Lady Sutton, immensely. Then, to their overwhelming astonishment, one day a friend, looking over a group of photos which Miss Corbett had taken, said:

"I see you have poor old Lord Combermere in his library. That's awfully good of him—so" characteristic."

"Lord Combermere!" gasped the photographer. "Do you mean to say you think the figure in the chair is Lord Combermere?"

"I know it is," replied the other. "It is splendid of him, too." And he went on to explain that he was sitting in his favorite chair and in his favorite attitude. When it was averred that this photograph had been taken at the very moment when the body of Lord Combermere was being buried in the village churchyard, nothing seemed more mystifying, and the photograph was passed around among those who had known Lord Combermere well, all confirming that there was no doubt that it was he who appeared in the photo.

STORY OF LOST FORTUNE.

Marion, Ohio, Feb. 5.—Like a page plucked from "Arabian Nights" reads the story of a lost fortune, in quest of which W. A. Allen of Quincy, Ill., a college professor of that city, has arrived here.

Many years ago John Allen, great-grandfather of County Auditor Charles Allen, was stolen from his home in England by his uncle, John Clugston, who, disinherited, sought revenge. The mother died of grief. The examination of the port entry at Baltimore shows that Clugston landed there with the boy. He afterward located in West Moreland county, Pa., where he died when the lad was 14.

On his deathbed he made a confession, which was unbelieved, and the child was adopted by a poor family. According to Prof. Allen, the Clugstons at one time owned half of Kilkenny county, Ireland, while the Allen estate is in England, near London. Much of the latter is in railroad stock, and, altogether, is worth many millions.

A Simple But Sure Method of Developing a Well-Rounded Bust and Figure.

(From New York Journal.)

It is a simple but sure method of developing the bust, arms, neck, hips and shoulders of women, who through some defect of nutrition and circulation are forever being humiliated by their more fortunate sisters. First, it must be understood that the human skin is an enormous gland, richly endowed with nerves, secreting and excreting organs, and a network of minute blood vessels which contain at one time over one-third of all the blood in the body—that is, if nature is perfect.

The relation of the skin to the vital organs through the nervous system in controlling the blood supply is such as to put them as a team working together.

Get separately two ounces glycerine, three ounces of rosewater, one ounce tincture of cadomene compound (not cardamom) and 5 cents worth of borax. Mix the glycerine with tincture cadomene, shake and let stand two hours; then add a teaspoonful of borax and the rosewater. Apply to the parts needing development morning and night, rubbing until thoroughly absorbed; then wash off with hot water and soap and dry.

It is believed by expert dermatologists to be the most effective prescription ever conceived for the purpose.

TRAFFIC ON THE LAKES

Volume During the Season of 1908 Showed a Decrease.

Due Mainly to the Smaller Shipments of Iron Ore.

Washington, Feb. 5.—The volume of traffic on the Great Lakes during the season of 1908, as measured by domestic shipments of merchandise from the various lake ports, was 60,518,024 net tons, compared with 83,506,991 and 75,609,648 net tons shipped during the 1907 and 1906 seasons. The considerable decrease in the 1908 total was due mainly to the smaller shipments of iron ore, though the shipments of all other principal items, except hard coal and soft, also show smaller totals than a year ago.

The iron ore shipments by lake during the year, exclusive of 228,734 gross tons exported to Canada, as reported to the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, totaled 24,939,185 gross tons, compared with 40,727,972 gross tons reported for the 1907 season. The greater part of this ore, namely, 20,444,751 gross tons, was received at Lake Erie ports; the rest is credited mainly to Chicago, Indiana Harbor and aGry, thus placing Chicago and vicinity on practically the same level with Cleveland as an ore-receiving center.

The Grain Traffic.

Domestic grain shipments by lake during the past seaosn aggregated 111,213,910 bushels, of which 57,754,182 bushels constituted wheat, 22,546,793 bushels corn, 15,701,406 bushels oats, 13,516,156 bushels barley, and 1,695,379 bushels rye. The total 1908 grain movement by lake shows a 22.8 per cent decrease from the 1907 total. The largest relative loss of almost 50 per cent is shown in the shipmnts of corn. The lake shipments of oats declined about 24 per cent, while lake shipments of other grains likewise show perceptible decreases as compared with 1907 totals. The domestic shipments of flaxseed for the year, 15,910,219 bushels, differed but slightly from those of the preceding season, 15,647,509 bushels, and proceeded mainly from Duluth-Superior; the principal port of destination was Buffalo, which partook of over 84 per cent of the total domestic receipts of the article. The 1908 shipments of flour, 1,188,831 net tons of ten barrels each, likewise present a smaller total than for the preceding year.

The annual lumber shipments, 944,742,000 feet, were 32 per cent below the total reported for the year 1907. This decrease was due probably as much to the general business depression as to the gradual exhaustion of the lumber supply in the territory bordering on the lakes.

The movement of pig iron and iron manufacturers during the year reflected the prevailing industrial depression, the respective aggregates—90,407 gross tons of pig iron and 325,207 net tons of iron manufactures—falling far below like totals for the preceding year. The season shipments of salt, 619,788 net tons, and those of copper, 135,693 net tons, were in excess of corresponding totals for the 1907 season.

Hard Coal Shipments.

The shipments of hard coal, chiefly from Buffalo, Oswego and Erie, 4,189,672 net tons, were in excess of the 1907 figures. Over three-fourths of these shipments were consigned to Chicago, Milwaukee and Duluth-Superior. The shipments of soft coal, being chiefly for industrial purposes, present a less favorable showing for the year, the total for 1908, 13,204,009 net tons, being considerably below the 1907 total of 15,428,309 net tons. This coal proceeding from Lake Erie ports comes into competition with the soft coal mined in the Central Western states and carried by rail to consuming points. One advantage the lake-borne coal has over the coal carried by rail is the low freight rates charged on westward shipments of this article by returning ore and grain carrying vessels. The 1908 rates varied between 30 and 40 cents per net ton and differed but little from the 1907 rates, as distinct from grain rates, which were decidedly lower than during the 1907 season.

The above total for soft coal shipped does not include the quantity of fuel or bunker coal supplied to vessels for their own use. This quantity aggregated 1,477,902 net tons, compared with 2,017,231 net tons for the year 1907. The total just given comprises quantities taken by vessels engaged in the domestic trade proper and is exclusive of bunker coal supplied to vessels in the foreign trade, to tugs and other harbor vessels.

The shipments of unclassed freight, including mainly what is known as package freight—6,467,279 net tons—were about half a million tons below the total for the 1907 season. Buffalo, Chicago and Milwaukee were the principal shipping and receiving points of miscellaneous merchandise.

The total domestic receipts by lake during the year 1908, aggregated 58,909,345 net tons. About 73 per cent of the total merchandise tonnage received is credited to twelve ports. For the year 1908 the largest tonnage received is shown by Chicago, closely followed by Buffalo, which held first rank as a receiving port during the year 1907. The shipments appear to be less concentrated, the twelve ports in question shipping less than 59 per cent of the total tonnage. Notwithstanding the considerable increase in ore shipments for the past season, Duluth shows by far the largest tonnage of domestic lake shipments followed at some distance by Superior-West Superior and Buffalo. It should be noted that the figures just given comprise only domestic shipments, the aggregate weight of exported goods not being recorded by the custom-houses from which the bureau of statistics obtains its records of foreign commerce.

Smaller Vessel Movement.

The vessel movement on the Great Lakes during the year in question also shows a considerable decrease compared with 1907 figures. The total departures in the domestic trade numbered 65,624 vessels, of 83,378,323 net tons, compared with 73,769 vessels, of 99,166,409 tons, reported for the calendar year 1907. The average size of the vessels plying on the Great Lakes was 1,271 tons, compared with 925 tons for the year 1902 and 1,100 tons for the year 1905.

The freight movement through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Ontario, Can., during the 1908 season, 41,390,557 net tons, shows a relative decrease of about 29 per cent, or about the same as the decrease for the 1908 domestic lake shipments. The greatest loss appears under the head of iron ore. The quantities of eastbound iron ore locked through the canals during the year, 24,627,588 net tons, differ somewhat from the Lake Superior ore shipments reported to this office, for the reason that these figures do not take account of the Canadian, mainly Michipicoten ore, shipments nor of ore exports to Canada. There is a considerable difference between the volume of the eastbound grain movement reported by the canal authorities and that of the grain shipments from Lake Superior ports reported to this office, as both to American and Canadian lake ports, are quite considerable. From reports specially prepared for the use of the bureau of statistics by both the United States and Canadian Canal authorities it appears that during the past season 53,184,970 bushels of Canadian wheat and 14,609,844 bushels of other Canadian grains, including flaxseed, passed through the canals.

The Coal Tonnage.

About 90 per cent of the westbound freight tonnage passing through the canals was made up of coal. The totals for the calendar years 1908—1,384,743 net tons of hard coal and 8,517,717 net tons of soft coal—show a decline from the 1907 figures of 1,506,568 net tons of hard coal and 9,893,427 net tons of soft coal. These figures are considerably higher than the respective figures of domestic receipts at Lake Superior ports, since the canal figures include the westbound exports by lake of American coal from the lower lake ports to Canadian ports on Lake Superior In agreement with the smaller amount of freight passing through the canals, the number and tonnage of vessels reported by the canal authorities shows a decrease from 20,437 vessels, of 44,087,974 net tons, for the 1907 season, to 15,181 vessels, of 31,091,730 net tons register, for the past season. The average size of vessel using the canals, 2,048 tons, while considerably higher than the average obtained from the reports of this office, 1,271 net tons register, was, however, below the like average for the preceding year. This decrease is due to the smaller number of passages made during the past season by the larger-sized ore boats. As a matter of fact, many of these boats began their regular movements only during the middle of the summer, while in 1907 the movement started as soon as the ice had cleared from the approaches to the canals.

Detroit River Movements.

The freight and vessel movements on the Detroit river show a similar decrease. The merchandise traffic on this river for the past season aggregated 46,946,884 net tons, compared with 67,292,504 net tons reported for the 1907 season. A 30 per cent decrease of the river movement for the year corresponds closely to a 29 per cent decrease of the canal movement and a 28 per cent deacrease of the total lake shipments. Of the total, 29,260,914 net tons, represented a southbound and 17,685,970 net tons a northbound movement. As compared with the preceding year's totals, the southbound movement, comprising the ore traffic, shows by far the larger relative decrease. The vessel movement through the river for the year comprised 18,212 vessels of 36,290,089 net tons, compared with 23,271 vessels of 48,958,238 net tons for the 1907 season.

SHERIFFS MARRY MANY.

Civil Officers Tie Nuptial Knot for Only $2.50.

Glasgow, Feb. 5.—Civil marriages are greatly on the increase in Scotland, and their arrangement provides a lucrative business for a certain class of solicitors in Glasgaw and other large towns. All the newspapers, particularly those circulating in the country districts, contain many advertisements, of which the following is an example:

"Marriages privately completed, $2.50. Particulars sent free; experienced law agents; convenient all stations." That is to say, for the modest sum of $2.50 these men are prepared to secure the tying of the nuptial knot for any couple according to the law of Scotland. The extent of this business is shown by the figures for last year, when 3,368 couples in Glasgow were married before the sheriff—an increase of 121 over 1907, and an increase of 304 over 1906.

Therefore it is that Dr. Pierce's medicines, the makers of which print every ingredient entering into them upon the bottle-wrappers and attest its correctness under oath, are daily growing in favor. No Secrets. No Deception.

The composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines is open to everybody, Dr. Pierce being desirous of having the search light of investigation turned fully upon his formulæ, being confident that the better the composition of these medicines is known the more will their great curative merits be recognized.

Being wholly made of the active medicinal principles extracted from native forest roots, by exact processes original with Dr. Pierce, and without the use of a drop of alcohol, triple-refined and chemically pure glycerine being used instead in extracting and preserving the curative virtues residing in the roots employed, these medicines are entirely free from the objection of doing harm by creating an appetite for either alcoholic beverages or habit-forming drugs.

Examine the formula on their bottle-wrappers—the same as sworn to by Dr. Pierce, and you will find that his "Golden Medical Discovery," the great blood-purifier, stomach tonic and bowel regulator—the medicine which, while not recommended to cure consumption in its advanced stages (no medicine will do that) yet does cure all those catarrhal conditions of head and throat, weak stomach, torpid liver and bronchial troubles, weak lungs and hang-on-coughs, which, if neglected or badly treated lead up to and finally terminate in consumption.

Take the "Golden Medical Discovery" in time and it is not likely to disappoint you if only you give it a thorough and fair trial. Don't expect miracles. It won't do supernatural things. You must exercise your patience and persevere in its use for a reasonable length of time to get its full benefits. The ingredients of which Dr. Pierce's medicines are composed have the unqualified endorsement of scores of medical leaders—better than any amount of lay, or non-professional, testimonials although the latter are received by thousands.

Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of known composition. Ask your neighbors. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood.

World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R.V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

RAILROADS

OFFICIALLY CONFIRMED

Soo Road Now in Control of Wisconsin Central.

No Change Will Be Made in the Force or Policy.

The first official confirmation of the report that the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railroad has secured possession of the Wisconsin Central railway was received at the Duluth office of the Wisconsin Central this morning.

The confirmation is in the shape of an official announcement from Fred E. Signer, general freight agent of the Wisconsin Central, and states that the Soo has taken possession of the railroad property of the Wisconsin line, but that no changes in the organization of the road or its relations to its connections will result through the control of the Soo.

Since the announcement that the Soo had secured control of the Wisconsin Central was made, there has been more or less conjecture as what effect this would have upon the working force of the latter line, and also what difference it would make in the giving of business to lines that in the past have been receiving some of the business of the Wisconsin Central.

The statement received from Mr. Signer outlines the policy of the road under the new control of the Soo. From Mr. Signer's statement, it would seem that the headquarters of the road will not be moved to Minneapolis, and placed under the direct management of the main office of the Soo, as has been believed by railroad men, but will remain at Milwaukee.

Mr. Signer further states that there will be no change in the working organization of the road. There will also be the same relation between the Wisconsin Central and the lines that have been receiving business from it in the past. Many railroad men have made the prediction that the business on the Wisconsin Central will be thrown to the Soo, and that in this way many of the outside lines would be cut off from close business relations with the Wisconsin line. Mr. Signer's statement says the relations of the Wisconsin Central with outside lines will remain the same as it has been in the past.

This announcement, received at the various offices of the Wisconsin Central, will be relief to many of its employes, who had vague ideas as to a sweeping change both in the organization and the policy of the road, under the control of the Soo.

HILL MAY ENTER FRISCO.

Reported to be Negotiating for Denver & Rio Grande.

New York, Feb. 5.—With the consent of E. H. Harriman, George J. Gould is reported to have made a deal with Morgan & Co. whereby control of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad is to be acquired for the Burlington.

This is not officially confirmed.

As the Denver & Rio Grande controls the Western Pacific, this would mean that the Hill lines would reach the Pacific through California and touch San Francisco at the same time that the Harriman lines reach New York city over the Vanderbilt system.

There is also evndence that Edwin Hawley is acting for the Hill lines in acquiring the Chesapeake & Ohio. The Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad may be a link connecting the Chesapeake & Ohio with the Hill lines at Chicago.

Bankers familiar with the Hill railroads said that they can command at least $100,000,000 in cash, and perhaps $50,000,000 more, without borrowing a dollar.

IS CAUSING MUCH COMMENT

Interview With Albert Harrington Sets Duluth Men Talking.

The interview with A. Harrington, printed in The Herald of last night, has started many Duluthians thinking.

"Duluth certainly needs to wake up," said one business man this morning. "Not that the citizens of this hustling, energetic, Western city are not thoroughly up to date and willing to take advantage of things if they look feasible, but the great big trouble with Duluth people lies in the fact that they depend too much on the natural resources of the city, and its great location, and think that because of these advantages over other cities there is nothing to do but sit back and wait. The city is bound to be a big one, anyway, and what's the use of hustling when this is an assured fact?' they say.

"Every traveler says so. Every public speaker that sees Duluth says so. The general opinion of everyone is that Duluth is destined for great things. We are constantly patted on the back by prominent visiting business men of other cities and meanwhile the other cities continue to grow in population and wealth, while Duluth sits back and waits. Duluth is growing, there is no doubt, but she isn't growing as fast as she should, that's sure. Seattle was a village when Duluth had a good start, but compare the size of the two cities today.

"'Wake up' would be a good motto. I cannot think of a better one. We must not depend on our natural resources so much. We must all put our shoulder to the wheel and push."

CORSET RUSTS; GIRL SUES.

Demands $5,000 for an Operation Caused by Skin Being Infected.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—If the corset doesn't fit, or rusts, don't say things about the dealer that sold it to you. Just sue the man who guaranteed it.

That is what Miss Natalie Elbrecht, a stenographer, did. H. W. Gossard, & Co., had warranted it to give her a graceful appearance and prove a pleasure to wear, she says. Therefore she sued them for $5,000.

Besides being guaranteed to be perfect in shape and to produce a becoming figure, the corset's steel stays were guaranteed not to rust. However, the covering of one of the stays became red from rust, the complaint avers. The rust came in contact with Miss Elbrecht's body, the skin was infected, and an operation became necessary.

THE PASSING OF THE "HOUSE OF MIRTH"

Soon not a brick of the old Metropolitan theater will be left to remind its former patrons of the merry burlesquers and the rough and tumble comedians who used to disport themselves before the footlights.

The well known landmark is fast disappearing, and it will not be long before its old bricks, fashioned into new buildings, will, in their new guise, fail to recall even its memory.

Today the passerby sees only the foundations and the unsightly skeleton of the stage, where low comedians and chorus girls held sway less than a year ago. Tomorrow there will be less to see, and the next day less, and by next week the building should be entirely razed.

It will not be long until the masonry of a handsome depot will replace the walls of the old "House of Mirth." Passengers hurrying to and from trians will take the place of the old-time audiences, though the throngs at the depot can never be more varied than the audiences which applauded, laughed and smoked at the "Met."

No theater in Duluth ever held more mixed houses. Representatives from nearly every class of society at one time or another have darkened its entrances. When the Metropolitan was first built it was proposed to make it a grand opera house. But its fall was sudden. Drama, tragedy, stock companies, musical comedy, melodrama, and burlesque then followed. But still its audiences continued varied, including all classes, from prominent business men to the lumberjack and immigrant of the Bowery.

The history of the old playhouse is a story of rapid degeneration. It was a firetrap at the best, and many a man who knew the secrets of its construction has shivered at the thought of a fire there, when the house was crowded.

At present there is no talk of a new burlesque theater.

TOO MUCH FOR HIM.

Chicago Record-Herald: "Poor fellow!" said the lady who was being personally conducted through the asylum. "Poor fellow! He is so handsome; he has such noble features, such a splendid brow, such an aristocratic bearing. What a pity that his mind has been wrecked. Was he crossed in love?"

"No," replied the attendant. "He's a poet. It's a very sad case. His friends thought he was going to be the American Byron or Milton, or something like that; but one day he wrote a poem which he called 'Lines to a Water Fowl' and sent it to a newspaper or a magazine or something, and when it came out it was headed 'Lines to a Water Bowl.' The shock upset him and he ain't been right since."

NOT ALWAYS WHAT THEY SEEM.

Success Magazine: Prof. and Mrs. Hadley were on a train bound for New York, where Yale's president was to speak before a national convention. He made use of the hour and twenty minutes he spent in the train by rehearsing his speech in a low voice, using his hands to emphasize certain passages.

A kindly matron who was sitting directly behind Mr. and Mrs. Hadley, and who had been watching and listening, leaned forward, and, tapping Mrs. Hadley on the shoulder, said feelingly: "You have my sincere sympathy, my poor woman; I have one just like him at home."

FOUR PUPILS IN SCHOOL

Majority of Settlers in District No. 5 Get No Benefit.

Want New School or Division of the District.

Why should school district No. 5 maintain a school for four children in one part of the district, when fifteen children in another part of the district have no educational facilities?

Why, indeed?

That's what the people in five sections of town 51-14 want to know. They appeared before the county board this morning and asked to have a new school district organized out of the five sections. The resolution for the organization was drawn up and presented, but was laid on the table to give the people of district No. 5 a chance to give the relief asked by the dissenting sections. If they vote to build a school, there will be no division.

The situation is peculiar. The school is needed, and the people of the district recognize the need, but they refuse to turn out to school meetings. A majority of the voters of the county must attend a meeting and two-thirds of those present must vote favorably before a decision to build a new school is valid. The people of the southern part of No. 5 have been trying to get a meeting to vote for the erection of a new school, but they cannot get the required attendance. Tiring of their efforts, they decided to petition for a school district of their own.

No. 5 has two schools, one in the northern end of the district and the other some distance south. The second named has but four pupils. It's too far away for the people in the southern part of the district. The Arnold school is nearer, but the people of the Arnold district don't want them, and will not consent to their being attached. They are up against it.

The proposed division would about equally divide the assessed valuation of the district and the people in the northern part, when division threatens, will probably get out to a meeting and vote to build the new school.

The proposed division of School district No. 36, is met with the obstacle to which Superintendent of Schools Gilpin referred in his speech before the board this morning. The people of Towns 56 and 57-12 want to cut themselves off from the remainder of the district. There are about twenty-five settlers in the two towns and about thirty-five children, but the valuation is so small that enough money cannot be raised to support a school, in the opinion of Chairman McInnis of the county board, in whose district the two towns lie. Most of the land is in the hands of the state, the railroads and the lumber companies, all of which are exempt from taxation on lands to a greater or less extent. Nothing was done with the matter this morning.

Sermon Lecture.

The first of the series of sermon-lectures by the Rev. John Walker Powell, which will be given Friday evenings during February and March, will be given this evening at 8 o'clock at the Endion Methodist church. Any one interested is invited to attend the lectures, and there is no admission price, although a collection will be taken during the evening.

IT RAN AHEAD.

Oscar Hammerstein was talking in Philadelphia about the wonderful success that he has had with opera.

"And yet at first," he said, "success came very slowly—as slowly as the trains on that Southern line—you know the one. It doesn't advertise.

"I was waiting for the train in Nola Chucky one morning. One hour, two hours, three hours passed. The train was three hours late. I was indignant.

"After a while the ticket agent sauntered out of the office and lighted a cigarette.

"'Look here,' I said, 'won't that train be along soon?'

"The agent looked down the track and yawned.

"'Ah, yes,' he said, 'she'll soon be here now. Here comes the conductor's dog.'"

BURIED MONEY IN BANK.

Kansas City Star: A customer of the Pioneer Trust company handed in $7,000 in currency for deposit this morning.

"You have had this buried?" the receiving teller asked. The bills were mouldy and mildewed and had the appearance of having been underground.

"Yes, I buried it last year in October when the financial depression started," said the depositor. "Yesterday I dug it up."

REPLIES TO THE CRITICS

Chairman McInnis Quite Wrathy at the Commercial Club.

Says Expenditures for Roads Are Most Carefully Made.

"The commissioners of this county are elected to supervise the expenditure of county money, and they owe the duty of exercising that right and power to their constituents. Let the Commercial Club of Duluth, the County club or any other organization induce the legislature to organize a county road commission. They cannot take from us that right nor relieve us of the duty of supervising the expenditure of money on county roads or any other public undertaking in St. Louis county." — Neil McInnis, chairman of county board.

Giving up his chair to Commissioner Alex Fraser, Neil McInnis, chairman of the county board, this morning took the floor at the meeting of the commissioners, and gave answer to the critics of the board's expenditures on county road work. He took the floor ostensibly to speak on the school question. After remarking that the Commercial club and the County club might better look to laws, which would provide better school facilities in the county, rather than to criticism of the county board and its expenditures on road work, he launched into a denunciation of the county road commission bill and the attempt to usurp the powers of the board, as he characterized it.

"Our critics have charged that the board has been extravagant," he said. "Speakers have said that we have expended $150,000 a year and some have been extravagant enough to place the figures at $200,000. They say we only secured 15 cents' worth of value for every dollar expended and pulls with commissioners have governed the expenditures.

"I obtained this morning a statement of the amount expended in this county on roads for the last nine years. Here it is: 1900, $21,746.90; 1901, $25,851.13; 1902, $30,052; 1903, $46,268.59; 1904, $55,680; 1905, $55,554; 1906, $72,466; 1907, $96,280; 1908, $115,000. Though the amount has been increasing each year, the rate of taxation for road purposes has not been increased. Higher valuations gave greater amounts on the same rate, and at no time has it been necessary to levy a higher rate.

"I want to say here that since I have been on the board, every effort has been made to get full value for every cent expended on county roads. Conditions are peculiar and road building comes high in certain parts of the county. There was a time when the grand jurors thought we needed their attention, but they found that we didn't. No more do we need the aid or criticism of the Commercial club or the County club. We must answer to our constituents, and we are always ready to do that. We can use money to much better advantage than by paying salaries to the county road commissioners and their employes."

Winter Garments Being Sold Out Under Half Prices!

Enormous Crowds Attend the Opening of the GREAT FEBRUARY SALE

And everybody wears the "smile that won't come off"—a great big smile-all-over smile of genuine satisfaction over the wonderful bargains handed out at Moe's!

Now the Fact Is This:

The big two-page advertisement we had in last night's Herald didn't give one-fifth of the items we actually had stacked out on counters and tables. It's our way of running a sale; and therefore, the crowds that came from every part of Duluth and Superior were overflowing with enthusiasm, and over a layout of good things far beyond their rosiest expectations.

Every Department Is In It

The store looks fairly blue with sale cards (white lettering on blue cards) telling of the unusual reductions from regular low prices. It's our greatest effort and a huge success.

KEPT WEDDING A SECRET

Miss Maud Tender Became Mrs. Madsen Three Months Ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Madsen of 515 North Fifty-seventh avenue west, have managed to keep their marriage a secret for the past three months.

Mrs. Madsen was formerly Miss Maud Tender of West Duluth, and Mr. Madsen is a former resident of Eau Claire, Wis. The young people's courtship started last spring, when Mr. Madsen first met his future wife. It is said to have been love at first sight. On Nov. 7 they quietly slipped away to Carlton, where the nuptial knot was tied. They returned to West Duluth mand and wife, but in a spirit of romance, kept their marriage a secret. They did not remain in West Duluth long, but took their honeymoon to Eau Claire, where they remained until a short time ago.

The news has been announced to Mrs. Madsen's many West Duluth friends. Mr. Madsen is a mechanic and is employed in a Superior shop.

MASS MEETING.

SUPERIOR NEWS

FELL INTO HOLD OF STEAMER

August Lindquist, a laborer, fell from the upper deck into the hold of the steamer Woodruff, of the Gilchrist fleet, yesterday at about 6 o'clock, and sustained a fractured skull. He is now hovering between life and death at St. Mary's hospital, Superior.

Lindquist, who was employed by the shipbuilding company, was walking a plank across one of the hatches when he lost his balance and fell. He, with a number of carpenters, had just finished a piece of work on the boat which is anchored with the fleet opposite the White City, and were about to start for home.

The ambulance was summoned and the injured man carried to the St. Mary's hospital. He is 35 years old and single, and boards on Hammond avenue.

Wife Granted Divorce.

Judge Smith yesterday granted Mrs. Martha J. Chase a divorce from James E. Chase on the grounds of desertion. The plaintiff alleged that her husband had been away from home for over a year. He first went to Aitkin, Minn., telling her he intended to build a home for her there. Later she heard from him from Billings, Mont. He asked for money to come home with. She sent him the money and that was the last she heard from him.

"Four Twins" Arraigned.

The four Andersons, Charles, Oscar, Carl and Olaf, none of whom are related, were arraigned yesterday in the municipal court of Superior, charged with robbing John Walczak of a watch valued at $30. In default of $500 bail each, they were remanded to jail to await trial.

The alleged robbery took place in front of the Arthur hotel, instead of in the hotel as stated in The Herald last night, and the men were arrested when they left the street car in Duluth. During the process of searching them, the watch was found in Oscar Anderson's shoe. He claims to have found it on the street.

CLUB TO RETURN CALL.

On next Wednesday, Feb. 10, the members of the Superior Commercial club will take a trip to Ladysmith over the new Wisconsin Central line. The Superior club in doing this will repay the call made by a delegation of about 100 Ladysmith citizens at the opening of the new line.

The road has made special excursion rates for the occasion, and there will be several coaches added to the regular train, to accommodate the large crowd which it is expected will go.

COUNTY IS THE LOSER

Supreme Court Favors State in Suit for Taxes.

Batch of Other Northern Minnesota Decisions Handed Down.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—An action which was begun in 1899 in behalf of the state by W. B. Douglas, attorney general during Governor Van Sant's administration, to recover $17,157.14 from St. Louis county, alleged to be due as state taxes collected, was today decided in favor of the state by the supreme court. Justice Elliott wrote the opinion.

The action arose over the refusal of the treasurer of St. Louis county to honor a warrant drawn on him by the state treasurer for the whole of $117,075.54, which amount was alleged to be due from general and school taxes. The county treasurer paid $99,912.80, but refused to pay the balance because money previously collected for the state between 1890 and 1899 had been lost through the falures of the regularly designated county depositaries, such loss having been paid to the state by the county in the expectation that it would be made good by the banks and their bondsmen.

The supreme court does not determine whether the loss of the money must fall on the state or the county, but indirectly the county is the loser, since the court holds that the state cannot be sued without its consent, and the assertion of the county's claim as a set-off, is in effect, a suit against the state, because the set-off does not arise out of the same transaction.

The doctrine is that when the state institutes a suit in its own behalf, it subjects itself to the same rules which apply to ordinary suitors in its courts.

The claim the county is seeking to assert against the state in this proceeding did not arise out of, and is no way connected with the claim made by the state against the county, and it has not consented to submit any other controversy in litigation, says the court.

Other St. Louis county decisions were:

Bob Vukelis, respondent vs. Virginia Lumber company, a corporation, appellant, affirmed.

Nestor Raitila, respondent vs. the Consumers' Ore company, appellant, affirmed.

Victor L. Jacobson, by Walter G. Bonham, his guardian ad litem, plaintiff-respondent vs. Merrill & Rink Mill company, a corporation, defendant-appellant, affirmed.

GROWS MORE MYSTERIOUS

J. A. Sherwin Cannot Explain Disappearance of His Son.

Had Engagement to Call on Young Woman Saturday.

J. A. Sherwin of Knox, N. D., father of Frank T. Sherwin, who mysteriously disappeared from Duluth last Saturday night, leaving not the slightest clue to his whereabouts nor the slightest motive for his strange disappearance, is in Duluth investigating the mystery that is baffling the police.

Mr. Sherwin is much affected by the disappearance of his son. He can conceive of absolutely no reason for the young man leaving in such a sudden and mysterious manner, and says that he knew of nothing that would cause him to leave the city without notifying his parents and employes.

Frank T. Sherwin wrote his father about two weeks ago. Later he wrote a letter to his mother. In neither of these letters did he mention anything that would lead his parents to suspect that there was anything wrong in his affairs. The letters were cheerful and in no way differed from other letters received by the parents since Sherwin has been making his home in Duluth.

Mr. Sherwin says his son left the city without any of his personal effects. He drew $40 Saturday, and it is supposed that he had this money upon his person at the time of his disappearance. He had an engagement to call upon a coung lady Saturday evening. He failed to notify the young lady that he would not keep his engagement, and until long after the usual calling hour she looked for his appearance.

In company with Chief Troyer, Mr. Sherwin will make an investigation of the blood spot that was discovered yesterday in the vicinity of Lincoln park. Mr. Sherwin is firmly of the opinion that his son met with foul play.

"There was absolutely nothing in his private affairs that would lead him to disappear suddenly, without notifying either his parents or his employers," said Mr. Sherwin. "His disappearance is a complete mystery to his mother and me. We are both broken up over the matter, and we are both afraid that the boy has either met with an accident or foul play. That is the only theory upon which the boy's mother and I can possibly account for his strange disappearance."

Mr. Sherwin came to Duluth to render every assistance in the search for his son.

FAMOUS COACH IS IN DULUTH

Walter McCornack Says Football Is Distinctly a "Man's Game."

Walter McCornack, one of the most famous of the football players ever turned out by Dartmouth, who later coached that college, going from Dartmouth to Northwestern university, and being one of the leaders for a number of years in Western football, is at the Spalding today.

Mr. McCornack is at the present time employed by the interstate commerce commission, and it is in connection with a hearing in Duluth upon a number of small matters in connection with interstate business that Mr. McCornack is here.

While he has been out of active connection with football for a number of years, Mr. McCornack still takes a deep interest in the game. He stated that Michigan's scheduling a game with Minnesota showed that the Wolverine institution was trying to get back into the Western "Big Nine." "I believe Michigan is adopting a graceful way to get back into Western athletic circles," said Mr. McCornack. "The scheduling of a game with Minnesota would have that appearance, at least.

"The past season was one of the most successful ones in the history of the game. Football is not a brutal game; it is distinctly a man's game, scientific, requires brains, and will always be the great college game."

WILL HAVE FINE PLEASURE BOAT

Al Ribenack Orders a Thirty-Five Foot Gasoline Launch.

One of the finest combination pleasure and speed launches that will be at the Head of the Lakes the present season, has been purchased by Al Ribenack. The launch will be thirty-five feet over all, will have a wide beam and will have a twenty-three-foot cockpit. The launch will be fitted with a refrigerator and all modern improvements. It will have a speed of over twenty miles an hour.

Of great interest to water speed merchants is the announcement that a new motor boat will make its appearance at the Head of the Lakes this summer, which will be capable of attaining a speed of thirty-one miles an hour.

According to the man who will bring the new boat to Duluth, who wishes his name to be withheld for the time being, the new craft will run away from the boat operated by Dick Schell the past season. The man who is going to bring the boat to Duluth, states that if Mr. Schell wants to maintain his reputation as a driver of fast motor boats, he will be compelled to order a boat of greater speed than the one that held the Head of the Lakes supremacy last season.

THE SUGAR TAX.

The tax which the people of this country are paying by the eating of sugar is $134,000,000 annually; at least that is the estimate of Claus A. Spreckles, who has spent his life in the sugar business, who knows the workings of the sugar trust thoroughly and who ought to be competent to speak upon this topic. Mr. Spreckels bases his figures upon the fact that free sugar would mean a reduction of 2 cents per pound in the price paid by consumers for sugar. The annual consumption of sugar in the United States is 3,000,000 tons, and a reduction in price of 2 cents per pound, would save the consumer $134,000,000.

Suppose that Mr. Spreckels' figures are not entirely correct; it is evident, in any event, that there is a chance here for a big saving to the consumer. Let us lop off the thirty-four millions for instance and the saving of an even hundred million is not to be sneezed at.

Sugar is used by everybody. There are few articles of consumption of such general use. Moreover, sugar is used by all classes of people; the poor, in fact, consume the far greater proportion of it, so that the burden of the tax upon sugar falls, not upon the rich who might easily bear the tax, but upon the poor upon whom it is a heavy burden. Why not transfer this tax upon a necessity to a luxury and let those pay it who choose to expend their income for luxuries?

The tax upon sugar is equivalent to about 80 per cent ad valorem duty and it is the testimony of all independent sugar men that practically all of this 80 per cent tax finds its way into the pockets of the sugar trust. In reply to the demand for a reduction, if not an abolition of the duty on sugar, the sugar trust has addressed a letter of protest to the ways and means committee which is investigating the revision of the tariff and advances as its principal reason for objecting to any change in the sugar schedules the claim that the stockholders of the trust would be injured by any such reduction. That is, the sugar trust boldly asks congress to tax 90,000,000 people annually $134,000,000 for the benefit of 18,000 stockholders of the sugar trust.

The sugar trust, of course, uses the timeworn argument that home industries need the protection of the present 80 per cent tariff. They no longer talk of sugar as an "infant industry," inasmuch as sugar has been cultivated in this country since 1823 or nearly one hundred years. The beet sugar concerns are still convenient infants, however, and the other sugar interests simply "need" the protection. If the domestic sugar growers need protection why is it that they can sell their product to the sugar trust at an average of about 1 cent per pound under the market price and still make the business of sugar growing very profitable? Isn't it possible that if the 80 per cent duty on sugar is cut in two or taken off altogether and the domestic sugar growers sell their product in the open market, they can still find sugar growing a profitable business?

It is very certain that the country will not be at all satisfied with any revision of the tariff which does not provide for a material reduction in the sugar schedules. The sugar tariff puts the burden of taxation upon those who are the least able to bear it and is therefore directly in contravention of sound public policy. The testimony of all independent sugar concerns is to the effect that no tariff on sugar is needed. Under these conditions congress will be recreant to its trust if it does not make a radical revision of the sugar schedules one of its chiefest objects of concern in enacting a new tariff law.

A NOBLE RED MAN.

Despite all that song and story has done to sound the praises of the noble red man, the American Indian is rapidly perishing from off the face of the continent. A certain dignity, put on as a cloak at certain times, and contrasting strongly with other traits of the race, is all that has made the red man tolerable to the white.

Yet the race is not without its great men. One of them indeed was great enough, it seems, so that a state of the Union is planning to honor him in the most distinguished manner. This man is practically unknown; his name is not found in the roll of the native chiefs who have their place in the popular history of the North American continent. Indeed, he was held in contempt by his own race; he was not a war chief; few scalps, if any, ever hung at his belt.

This man was Sequoia Gigantea, a Cherokee Indian, a statue of whom will represent the state of Oklahoma in the national hall of fame. Each state may honor two of its citizens by granting them places at the national capitol in the hall of fame. Some of the states have availed themselves of this privilege and have chosen their most distinguished citizens and have erected statues to their memory in the hall of fame. Others, Minnesota among the number, have not yet found more than one of their sons sufficiently great to be accorded this honor. Still other states are not at all represented as yet in this national hall of fame. Ohio has there statues of James A. Garfield and William Allen; Pennsylvania of Robert Fulton and John P. Muhlenberg; New York of Governor Clinton and Robert R. Livingston; Michigan of Lewis Cass; Minnesota of Alexander Ramsey; and the first of its citizens to be so signally honored by the new state of Oklahoma will be Sequoia, inventor of the Cherokee alphabet.

Oklahoma claims that Sequoia was the most creditable member of the red race. He has been publicly honored for his achievements by the appropriation of his name for the botanical designation of the big trees of California on the ground that the man and the tree are the two biggest things native to the continent. Like other prophets Sequoia was without honor in his own country. He was looked down upon, abused and ridiculed by his own people. He was absolutely unlettered, could neither read nor write, and did not so much as know that such a thing as an alphabet existed. Yet he set himself to the task of devising a system by which the Cherokees might convey their ideas by characters as well as by word of mouth or by signs. He analyzed the sounds of the Cherokee tongue, and later by the use of an English spelling book, he secured the necessary characters to represent the sounds. He was obliged to invent additional characters inasmuch as he represented every sound by an individual character of its own. His alphabet, when completed, contained eighty-five letters and his system, while not as convenient as others, is described as the most perfect existing in any language. Within a few months after perfecting his alphabet it was learned by the entire tribe of Cherokees living in Georgia and all of the members of the tribe had learned to read and write.

"Measured by the most exacting standards," says the Detroit Free Press, "he was a man of greatness—great in his determination, his patience, his power of analysis and his inspiration to confer benefits on his fellow creatures." Oklahoma has done the nation a service in bringing it to know such a native American, a man more truly noble than the red man of the warpath and fabled peace pipe eloquence.

THOMAS LOWRY.

In the death of Thomas Lowry the Northwest loses one of its wisest builders.

Mr. Lowry came to Minneapolis in 1867 a poor man. By simple industry, the influence of his kindly personality and the application of a keen and active mind to the pioneer problems of his adopted city he became the most commanding figure in the development of its material life. Minneapolis probably owes more to Thomas Lowry than to any other man, and through Minneapolis his influence bent itself to the growth and development of the Northwest. His keenness of perception led him to seize upon that which was most important to the growing city. He realized its possibilities and the possibilities of the vast territory of which it is the metropolis. His brain it was that planned, and his influence it was that brought from the outside the large part of the capital necessary for that growth which has never been rivaled by any city outside of Chicago. Looking beyond his city's limits, Mr. Lowry saw the possibilities of the great Northwest and devoted his time, talents and influence to its upbuilding. He became the moving influence in a great railroad system, which has been a most powerful factor in the growth of the Northwest and he extended his wonderfully successful city transit system to other towns of the Northwest, including Duluth.

Few men, probably no others, are so widely known personally and so popular in the Northwest as Thomas Lowry. Devoted to the interests of his business, he was equally devoted to the general prosperity and to the welfare of every individual with whom he had to do. These qualities are such as men respect and they made him the tremendous influence that he was in the growth of the Northwest, a section in which his name will also be cherished as one of its principal benefactors. He made a great fortune for himself, but his services are a far greater fortune to the country in which he lived.

TREND OF THOUGHT.

Revolution used to be a terrible name. It meant blood, and tears, broken homes and broken hearts, the widow and the fatherless, the rack of the body and the wreck of souls. That day is past. The name has lost its terrors. Nowadays revolutions begin, run their course and hardly do we realize their existence until their ends are accomplished. Within a decade one of the most tremendous political revolutions that this country has known has taken place and it is only a twelve month that we have recognized it for a revolution. The revolution of which we speak had its springs, of course, in earlier years, but it is less than ten years since the people of this country have assumed a very different attitude of mind toward political campaigns, political methods and political men.

This revolution in political thought is the significant thing of the generation. People do not take any greater interest in politics today than they did fifty or one hundred years ago, but the character of their interest is very different.

How many years is it since the political organ was held in the highest esteem, since a newspaper to be influential must be strenuously, violently, rabidly partizan? Today such a newspaper is laughed at and discredited and there is scarce one of the old school to be found in the land. Now it is the aim of the partizan newspaper to cloak its partizanship as much as possible and to at least assume an independence of thought, if it has it not. But the really influential newspapers of the day are those that, while holding in the main, perhaps, to the cardinal principles of some great political party, hew hard to the line of the general welfare, let the chips fall where they will! There are today few newspapers that care, and almost none that dare, to support a party man in all his acts. Less than ten years ago it was very different.

Less than ten years ago, too, we asked no questions as to who supplied the funds for a political campaign, we thought more of the candidate's party record than of his public services, and we delegated the business of government to the political party. We were more concerned that the party should be in power than we were with the methods by which it got there. In short, we largely abrogated our right to think about matters of government and left the business of thinking to our party. The main thing was to "put the party in power;" it would do the rest.

A very great revolution has taken place in this respect. We are now more deeply concerned with the character of the man who represents us in the United States senate than we are with his politics; witness the people of Oregon compelling its Republican legislature to send a Democrat to the senate. We are more interested in the fiber of the first man of the state than we are in the texture of the cloak that he wears; witness Democratic Missouri electing a Republican governor for the first time in its history, and Republican Minnesota a Democratic governor three times running. We have grown terribly in earnest in the belief that what the man stands for is more important to us than what his party stands for; witness the intelligence of the nation dictating the election of Root to the senate by the New York legislature, unanimously by his party and without his so much as turning his hand in his own behalf; witness an utterly unknown man, a blind man at that, stumping the state of Oklahoma, and winning from the people a seat in the United States senate against the combined opposition of the most powerful men of the state; witness even the Solid South casting votes for Roosevelt.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Neil McInnis of Eveleth, one of the county commissioners, who is registered at the St. Louis, is an ardent advocate of good roads in St. Louis county.

Mr. McInnis says that the sooner we have better roads and more miles of them in St. Louis county the faster the progress of the county will be.

Mr. McInnis stated that in some parts of the northern part of the county many of the roads are impassable in the spring. He believes that this fact is due to the poor construction of the roads.

"In the more unsettled communities, in the more northern part of the county, the progress of the section depends in some measure upon the progress of road building," said Mr. McInnis. "It is obvious that when a man cannot get around because the roads are so bad that travel is very difficult, he is badly hampered in the handling of his products. With mere trials and bad roads to travel over, the farmers in the northern part of the state are liable to become discouraged and believe that as a farming community and the northern part of St. Louis county holds little inducement to them.

"If the dairy interests are to increase in the northern part of the county, it is very plain that better roads must be constructed. As a matter of fact, some of the men who sell eggs and dairy products at the present time up in that country, find it very difficult at times to get to and from their farms upon the roads.

"The better the roads and the more roads that are built in the northern part of the county the greater will be the progress of the county. I am not in favor of any extravagance in the matter of road building, but I am of the opinion that good roads are a good thing for any county and especially for a county like St. Louis."

P. J. Ryan of Hibbing, county commissioner, at the Spalding today, indorsed the sentiment of Mr. McInnis.

J. Lee Handy, a guest at the Spalding, once played the part of an English earl, don't you know. He says that it isn't difficult. He looked dense and acted stupid, and says he made a very strong impression with those who came to interview him.

You see it was in Boston, and he was assisting a newspaper friend of his. The friend in question had written a vivid story of the earl, who was supposed to be registered at a certain Boston hotel, and several people became so curious and so insistent about seeing the earl, that the newspaper man found it necessary to call his fictitious personage into material being at the time.

And so other newspaper men came to interview the earl of some place that had about ten awe-inspiring names, especially to the Bostonese, and Mr. Handy looked exceedingly stupid and uninteresting, through a monocle that his friend of the press had secured for him, and he says he got away with his little act very well.

One lady, just within the hearing of the "earl," remarked that he was so interesting. As a character study, Mr. Handy says he must have been immense, but he was as shy on cerversation as many Englishmen who have come to this country have proved to be. The cultured few who visited the earl decided that he was of a type most cultured and interesting, quite representing the type of English nobility. The newspaper man played the story in serial form for a week.

Upon Pierpont's appearance.

Frank Johnson, the colored man who has charge of the private car of W. F. Fitch, was telling some railroad men in the lobby of the Spalding yesterday, of how he came very near making the mistake of his life in believing J. P. Morgan an intruder, a butter in, in places where "cheap guys" had no place to be.

Johnson had been on a trip to California with Mrs. Morgan and the Morgan children, and a friend of Mrs. Morgan's. He had charge of the private car and administered to the wants of the wealthy travelers. When the train returned to New York, a man came aboard who didn't look good to Mr. Johnson. Neither his clothes or his appearance bore the stamp of gentle breeding, and as for an "air," he wasn't there.

Mr. Johnson was for bristling up to the stranger and telling him in no uncertain language to make hi'self scare around the precincts of the private cars. But, suddenly, some hunch warned him; warned him just in time, and he awaited developments.

How glad he was that he did. Suddenly he heard one of the children joyously call her parent by an endearing name and then suddenly the knowledge that this man was the greatest financier in the world, flashed across the mind of the colored man.

Later the financier came out to where the colored man was working. He thanked him for the attention he had shown to Mrs. Morgan and the children, and then slipped something to the colored man. This was one of those nice slips, that you like to see people make. When Mr. Johnson recovered from his awe, he glanced handwards and uncovered $100 in lucre.

"Pierpont ain't much on looks," says Johnson, "but my, child, he am jes dat geenurous wid dem dat he takes a fancy to."

THE WEATHER.

CLOUDY

The mild, cloudy weather continues, with continual threats of snow flurries, which fail to materialize. It will be a little colder tonight with the lowest temperatures from 5 to 10 above zero. There will be moderate westerly winds. A year ago today a blizzard was raging in Duluth.

The sun rose this morning at 7:28 a. m. and will set this afternoon at 5:17, making nine hours and forty-nine minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"A barometric depression of considerable depth is central over Lake Michigan, having advanced from the Eastern Dakotas since 7 a. m. Thursday. During the past twenty-four hours this disturbance caused warmer weather from the Mississippi river eastward to the Atlantic coast, together with light to heavy rains and thunder storms over the greater part of the Mississippi valley states and Oklahoma. Another disturbance that has developed over British Columbia is causing rain or snow in Pacific coast states and the plateau region. An incerase in pressure throughout the Rocky mountain districts and the Eastern slopes is attended by somewhat colder weather. The barometer is highest over California and Florida. Colder weather is indicated for St. Louis and Douglas counties tonight."

Our Trade With Japan.

New York World: What the nation has at stake in the maintenance of cordial relations with Japan is indicated by the Japanese trade returns for the last fiscal year. They show that the United States is still ahead of all other countries in the volume of Japanese trade. In 1907 our combined exports to Japan and imports from that that country exceeded $107,0000,000, an amount $30,000,000 in excess of Great Britain's trade with Japan. Last year our exports to Japan reached $41,432,327, an increase of approximately $3,000,000 over 1907.

The fearsome Jap is at our door,
'Tis plain he comes for loot and gore;
We need two battleships, or more!

And make the Philippines his prey?
We need those warships right away.

With stately walls all battered down
By those fierce fighters, small and brown!

How can we doubt that war is due?
Of battleships we need a slew—
But let us cmopromise on two!

DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Walker Enterprise: Duluth will become a great railroad center, if all the deals, extensions and rumors of deals and extensions come to pass. The Soo Line and its Canadian ally, the Canadian Pacific, figure quite prominently in these reports. This company is reputed to have purchased the Wisconsin Central and is trying to secure the control of the Chicago Great Western, and the Northern Pacific is said to have passed into the hands of the Chicago & Northwestern. If all these deals are carried out it means a good deal to the country traversed by these lines, as well as to Duluth.

Virginia Enterprise: The Duluth Herald decries the "misapprehension that has existed between the ranges and the city of Duluth" and sues for harmony between all parts of the county and the county seat. A law making it compulsory for the guilding spirits of Duluth to shed the bristles which have come to be a portion of their make-up would materially assist in regaining for Duluth the seemingly lost confidence and respect of the citizens of the tax-paying portions of the county.

Eveleth News: We have been disposed to regard Duluth's attitude of big brother won't give his little brother a bite, as more of ignorance and carelessness than design, but if that city blocks the desire of the ranges for a court—the only big thing we have asked of them in a long time—we shall join those who never fail to charge Duluth with downright hoggishness.

Eveleth Star: The Duluth dailies are certainly doing their part to create harmony in St. Louis county and if the rest of us do as much there will be little in the way of friction in the future. Let us love one another is the proper precept.

Sherburne Star-News: About the best legislative reports sent from the state capital are those to The Duluth Herald by Stillman H. Bingham. Bingham is an old hand at the business and nobody puts it over him at any stage of the proceedings.

Moose Lake Star-Gazette: As The Duluth Herald says "it takes a splendid imagination to realize what effect all the railroad building and steel plant will have on this part of the state."

Tower Weekly News: The Duluth Herald devoted considerable space in Tuesday's paper trying to square Duluth with the ranges and the range press gang. This sounds nice to read, but the range press gang don't set much by it. They don't get a look in at the county printing, not even being consulted in one particular. When you are trying to be square why don't you act in accordance. That's one way to keep annoying little editorials out of the range papers.

Little Falls Herald: The Duluth papers show symptoms of a desire to start a "secesh" movement, but the name of the new state has not yet been chosen. How would Columbus or Lincoln do? No state as yet bears the name of those epoch-makers. And Duluth would make a fine capital.

Stillwater Gazette: Duluth was the coldest place on this earth, except Winnipeg, according to the weather man's report. If Stillwater hadn't wafted a few wafts of warm weather up to that Lake Superior city they would no doubt have carried off the frigid honors.

Washington Star: "Which do you think affords greater pleasure, pursuit or possession?"

"I don't know," answered the man with a motor car. "Possession is a fine thing. But I have sometimes suspected that the police get more fun out of my machine than I do."

The Bystander: "What was that hymn I e'erd 'em a-singing at ould Garge the milkman's funeral?"

Mourner—"Shall We Gather at the River."

"Ah, passon knowed ould Garge!"

Washington Star: "What I want," said the fretful magnate, "is to find some way of forgetting my troubles."

"That is easy," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "Get them to put you in the witness chair during a trust investigation."

Chicago Tribune: "You get twice as much pay as I do," grumbled the elevator boy, "and it ain't fair!"

"There's a difference between us, kid," majestically answered the elevator starter, " you're merely a necessity. I'm a luxury."

Catholic Standard and Times: "Did I understand you to say," asked Miss Woodby, "that you don't go in for society—at all?"

"Quite so," replied Crabbe. "Society is simply a silly school in which every nobody is taught to try to be somebody."

Washington Herald: Said He—Young Smyths and Miss Browne are evidently in love with each other.

Said She—Judging by the way they look at each other?

Said He—No; judging by the way they don't look at anybody else.

Washington Herald: "Mr. Chairman," began the man who is unaccustomed to public speaking. "I—er—I—er—I—er—"

"Well," interrupted the chairman kindly, "to err is human."

Philadelphia Press: "Of course, Tommy," said the Sunday school teacher, "you'd like to be an angel, wouldn't you?"

"Well—er—yes'm," replied Tommy, "but I'd like to wait till I can be a full-grown angel with gray whiskers."

Pittsburg Post: "You don't seem to be keeping up your tennis."

"Well, I don't know so much about tennis," remarked the Washington official. "I don't know if it's as good a game as golf."

Brooklyn Life: Curate—And so, Mrs. Howard, you come to church every Sunday?

Mrs. Howard—Yes, Mr. Priestley, we're such strangers in town yet that we have no other engagements.

LONDON TO PAY TRIBUTE TO POE

Public Banquet by Authors' Club Scheduled for March 1.

London, Feb. 5.—Edgar Allan Poe's memory is to be publicly celebrated in England this year. His centenary will be honored by the Authors' club in a dinner on March 1, where his praises will be sounded by many distinguished English writers, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Charles Garvice and others. In addition to this, most of the prominent English newspapers and literary magazines are publishing flattering accounts of Poe's life and work, several of them alluding to him as "America's greatest literary genius." England has never before, perhaps, paid such honor to any American writer. Of course, this will not be the first occasion on which an American writer has been cordially recognized by England, as Washington Irving, Hawthorne, Emerson and Oliver Wendell Holmes have come in for their meed of praise, but it is doubtful if ever before any single American writer has been so universally conceded to represent the American literary genius—as distinguished from writers of mere talent—as has Poe.

The idea of publicly honoring Poe in London originated with the recently reconstructed Authors' club, which is a wide development of the one founded by Sir Walter Besant seventeen years ago. The principal moving spirit in the Poe celebration is Charles Garvice, whose work is so well known in America. He is chairman of the executive committee of the Authors' club, and it is mainly through his efforts that the revived club has been put on a successful footing. The club occupies splendid rooms over-looking the river, and here writers may meet on the most congenial terms, surrounded by every luxury, which may be enjoyed at very moderate outlay.

"Edgar Poe, in my opinion," says Mr. Garvice, "exerted a very remarkable formative influence on modern English letters, and we are celebrating his centenary in this country because we feel, in a measure, that, as a master of the English language, he belongs to us. It is to Poe that we owe the short story which has been most successful in these days—the deductive, analytical tale, with the following up of motives to a climax. Some of our most successful writers, consciously or unconsciously, are vastly indebted to him. In fact, Poe founded a school distinctly his own. His 'Gold Bug,' 'Murders in the Rue Morgue' and other tales have long been imitated, but never surpassed if equaled.

"In England, Poe's genius has been fully recognized. In fact, I think we were as quick to assign him his proper place in letters as the Americans. It was, I think, Mrs. Elizabeth Barrett Browning who first heralded 'The Raven' as the work of an undoubted genius; and since her time there has not been a dissentient voice to unstinted praise of Poe, both as story writer and poet.

"Poe so strongly appeals to the members of the Authors' club because of the bond of sympathy which both America and England hold in him. Writers on both sides of the Atlantic unite in recognizing him as belonging to the two nations, and the celebration of his centenary in England will do much toward a closer affiliation of the writers of the two countries."

As bearing on Mr. Garvice's last remarks, it will be remembered that Poe received part of his early education in London. After his adoption by the Allan family, his foster parents came to England, bringing Poe with them. He was then in his seventh year.

WILL GET PART OF OIL FINE

Prosecuting Attorney in Texas is to Receive $390,000.

Austin, Tex., Feb. 5.—John W. Brady of Austin, prosecuting attorney of Travis county, will soon receive a fee of $390,000. He is to be paid this sum out of the judgment for $1,623,900, which was obtained by Texas against the Waters-Pierce Oil company for violating trust laws.

The big judgment was recently affirmed by the United States supreme court, and in due course it will be paid over to the state. The state is amply protected by a supersedeas bond for $3,000,000, which is signed by a large surety company and John H. Kirby, the lumber king of Texas. The payment to Mr. Brady of this enormous fee is therefore assured.

No Such Fee Was Anticipated.

This fee is allowed under the anti-trust laws which formed the basis of the faction against the Waters-Pierce Oil company. The law of 1889 allows the district or county attorney 25 per cent of the judgment collected from anti-trust violators. The law of 1903 places this remuneration at 10 per cent. It was not supposed by the legislature at the time these liberal provisions for remuneration were embraced in the law that judgments so enormous as that in the Waters-Pierce Oil company case would ever be obtained and collected.

The suit against the latter company was brought in part under the law of 1889 and in part under the law of 1903. The fee which Mr. Brady shall receive for assisting the attorney general in prosecuting the case is, therefore, calculated partly at the rate of 25 per cent and partly at 10 per cent, amounting in all to $390,000.

A large part of the evidence upon which the Waters-Pierce Oil company was convicted was obtained through J. P. Gruett of St. Louis, ex-secretary of the company. Mr. Brady entered into a contract with Mr. Gruett whereby the latter is to receive one-third of the fee that he obtains. This contract is a matter of public record and played a part in the Democratic political campaign in Texas last year. When Mr. Brady receives his fee of $390,000 he will immediately pay over to Mr. Gruett $130,000. Mr. Brady also employed two firms of Austin lawyers to assist in the prosecution of the case against the defendant company. He is to pay these lawyers another one-third of his fee. This will leave him the net sum of $130,000 as his part of the amount to be paid out of the large judgment. This is said to be the largest fee ever earned in a single case by a local prosecuting officer in this country.

It Will Reduce Taxes.

Deducting the $390,000 from the judgment of $1,623,900 leaves $1,233,900, which will be paid into the state treasury and will go to help pay the expenses of the state government. To this sum must be added the interest for the period since the judgment was obtained and about $60,000 of state taxes now due from the company. Governor Campbell says that when the state receives this money from the Waters-Pierce Oil company the state tax rate will be materially reduced.

MERRY WIDOW IS DETHRONED

And a Lid Like a Flower Pot Takes Its Place.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—The Merry Widow hat, beloved by rhymsters and jokesmiths, has been dethroned.

The National Association of Retail Milliners has said the word that banishes the monarch of millinery connections to the limbo of last year's hats.

What the jests and the sneers and the pleadings of benighted mankind failed to do the milliners have accomplished.

Mme. Maerle, head of the reception committee for the National Association of Retail Milliners, which met in the Palmer house, sounds the death knell of the broad-brimmed hat.

"It is not the mode correct," says madame.

And femininity, subservient ever to the edict of the milliner, humbly bows to the decree.

The newest models in spring hats look like inverted flower pots. They are said to be copies of the fez-shaped hats of Servian officers. From Hungary to Servia is not so long a jump as is that from the 18-inch brims to the brimless shapes that will be in favor.

These hats are of rough, highly finished straw. A jaunty military medallion of braid, from which two gilt tassels droop below the edge of the hat, is the sole ornament.

There are protests, of course, from the women who survey the new models. The Merry Widow and its sisters of mammoth proportions covered a multitude of sins—and puffs.

The new hats demand slick, elegant coiffures. But the women will wear them, just as they wore the other extreme of millinery.

THE NUDITY MOVEMENT

Discussed at Length by the Prussian House of Deputies.

Some Say the "Beauty Evenings" Are Danger to Morals.

Berlin, Feb. 5.—Miss Olga Desmond, a young lady of graceful figure and other personal charms, looked down with wide-eyed wonderment on the members of the Prussian house of deputies the other afternoon. They were engaged in discussing a question that very nearly concerned herself. The last time she and they met, the roles were to some extent reversed. On that occasion the deputies were the observers, and Miss Desmond the observed. Moreover, they saw a great deal more of her than she could see of them, for the lady then wore a garment which represented absolutely the extreme minimum to which attire can be reduced, if it is to serve any purpose whatever.

The fact is that Miss Desmond is a disciple of the "nudity movement," and was seeking to persuade parliamentarians, grave and otherwise, that the cause of most, if not all, of the ills to which flesh is heir is the habit of covering is up.

Saw Nothing Artistic.

The lady's amazement at the course of the discussion was not unnatural, for she heard performances, for which she disclaimed any but moral or artistic values, denounced in most unequivocal terms. A National Liberal, who was a spectator at her exhibition, declared that there was nothing artistic about it; that, on the contrary, it was distinctly indecent, and calculated to offend the susceptibilities of a healthy-minded man. He had felt shame to the depths of his soul for the many women of all ages who were also present.

Herr Reeren, the introducer of the motion, is the same Center member whose conflict with Herr Dernburg led up to the dissolution of the reichstag in 1906. He was not less sparing of the feelings of Miss Desmond.

The movement, he declared, was making progress, and numerous societies existed with hundreds of members for the purpose of holding social gatherings at which those taking a part appeared without a stitch of clothing. It was true, he said, that the type of entertainment known as a "beauty evening" was no longer classed with picture exhibitions, but with theaters and music halls, and consequently now required a permit from the police, but the authorities had been very slow in interfering.

Get in by Paying Fee.

Herr Moltke, minister of interior, said he quite shared the standpoint of the Center speaker, but the task of the police in this case had not been an easy one. The first "beauty evening," had been advertised as only accessible to members of the Association for Ideal Physical Culture, and were consequently private performances. In such a case the police had no power to interfere. It was only discovered later that membership of the association could be obtained instantaneously by paying a modest fee at the door. But now the exhibitions were only allowed with the minimum of clothing prescribed by the authorities, which, it may be added, differs materially from that alluded to above.

It was in vain that Herr Moltke denounced "beauty evenings" as an abuse of a good principle, and a danger to public morality, in vain that he implied his disapproval of the refusal of the courts to order the confiscation of a certain pamphlet. The lighter hearted of his auditors roared with laughter at this claptrap, but graver deputies were not at all merrily disposed towards the minister.

The first of the latter to speak his mind was a Conservative, Herr Henning, who declared that portions of the minister's speech were simply unbelievable. "Is it true as I must assume," he asked, in stern tones, "that the attitude of the minister is connected with the sympathy of highly-placed ladies and gentlemen from our upper aristocracy with these beauty evenings? If so, then I ask, who are those aristocrats? Out with them."

Come to No Decision.

The speaker became more and more vigorous in his denunciations, and the bulk of the house shouted their agreement when he asserted that ladies of nobility who had taken part in private "beauty evenings" were no noble ladies. "These displays," he protested, "have no artistics significance, for the human form is always imperfect," which is certainly as true in Germany as it is anywhere else.

Herr Moltke was swift to reply that his views and his actions had been approved by numerous artists of unquestionable respectability and authority, and some attention had to be paid to opinions of such people. Without having reached any very concrete result, the debate was adjourned and Miss Desmond went home to think it over.

Enjoy Your Meals

By Simply Eating a Little Pleasant Tablet After Each of Them.

A TABLET DIGESTS A MEAL.

When digestion is perfect the fluids necessary to this process come naturally to the aid of the stomach. They are of right proportion and do their work speedily and well. When indigestion and dyspepsia are prevalent, these same juices come slowly if at all, are weak and insufficient or are filled with strong acids and alkalies.

When such a condition exists each meal is a hardship upon the digestive organs. The meal should strengthen the juices, but on the contrary it weakens them, so that man by the very act of eating causes conditions to arise which of themselves bring him pain and loathing for the next meal.

By eating one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets you mix the tablet with your saliva and it goes into your stomach a strong, vigorous fluid, many times more powerful than the natural digestive juices. These tablets are made up from natural vegetable and fruit essences and are composed from Hydrastis, Golden Seal, Lactose, Nux, Ascetic Pepsin, Bismuth and Jamaica Ginger. There is the formula and one grain of it will digest 3,000 grains of food in any stomach. Beside digesting the food it will give the blood the power to enrich the digestive fluids so after a time nature will take care of itself. Though you have no stomach trouble one of these tablets after each meal is a powerful assistance to nature and is an excellent habit to make.

Go to any druggist and ask his opinion of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. We will abide his answer if he be an honest man. They sell for 50c per age. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart building, Marshall, Mich.

IS AFTER A PARDON

German Nobleman Who Murdered His Wife in Oklahoma.

Slew the Peasant Girl He Deserted the Army to Wed.

Watonga, Okla., Feb. 5.—With the creation of a state board of pardons, whose duty it is to pass upon applications made for executive leniency, another effort is to be made to secure release from prison of Conrad Maas, a German nobleman, who is serving a ninety-nine year sentence for murdering his young wife in a Blaine county dug-out on Dec. 5, 1898.

The relatives in Germany have spent thousands of dollars in the fight for his freedom. They promise he will be immediately returned to Germany upon his release, where he will be kept under surveillance. During Oklahoma territory days applications for Maas' pardon were filed on several occasions, but the pardons were refused in turn by Governors C. M. Barnes, T. B. Ferguson and Frank Frantz.

After his conviction, Maas was sent to the Kansas penitentiary, where Oklahoma convicts were cared for under contract, but was returned from there when prison authorities declared him to be insane. By the order of Governor Ferguson he was placed in the Blaine county jail at Watonga, where he is still confined. Should the attempt to pardon him fail, Maas will in all probability be transferred to the state penitentiary at McAlester.

St. Louis Consul Urged Pardon.

During the administration of Governor Frank Frantz the attempt to secure a pardon for Maas was led by Frederick C. Rieloff, German consul at St. Louis, who argued for his release upon the ground that he is insane with possibility of recovery. The prisoner is an artist of no mean ability, and spends his time in painting, when he can secure materal.

Woven around the life of the former German officer is one of the strangest romances upon record. Romance, adventure, dishonor and crime figure in the details of the story.

Some years ago a sensation was created in German circles when Maj. Maas deserted his command. It leaked out that the officer had fallen in love with a peasant girl, whom he had met while stationed in a remote part of Germany. Maj. Maas moved in the most exclusive circles. His dashing ways, military appearance and splendid education made him one of the popular men in society.

Maj. Maas had graduated from the University of Berlin. He gained his rank in the army in a remarkably short time. His advancement was rapid and there were early promotions in the future. The family spared no effort to promote his fame and standing. When the news was brought to them that Maj. Maas was holding clandestine meetings with a peasant girl, the family made haste to interfere. Maj. Maas refused to heed their advice.

The family then exerted influence with the head of the German army. The result then was that Maj. Maas' regiment was ordered to duty in a distant part of the country. Meanwhile, the relatives had planned for the officer to wed a lady of high rank and vast fortune.

Elopes With Peasant Girl.

On the eventful night that the regiment was to move, Maj. Maas disappeared There was consternation in camp and couriers were dispatched to locate the truant officer. A search was made for the pretty peasant girl. She, too, had fled. No trace of them could be found. The relatives relied upon the supposition that they had fled to one of the German colonies. They thereupon ordered that all ships be guarded.

But Maj. Maas and his young sweetheart had embarked upon an immigrant ship for New York. When they reached New York the young officer feared to reside in the city. He thought the representatives of Germany might apprehend him and return him to the old country.

The officer had considerable money with him. He made his way to Oklahoma, seeking refuge in the most remote of the rural districts, where he purchased a farm. Then came a longing to return to the old country. Maas became moody. He refused to speak to his wife. Her beauty no longer attracted him. The couple began to quarrel

One afternoon a neighbor visited the house and found the lifeless body of Mrs. Maas on the floor. She was horribly mangled and her flesh had been eaten by the rats. The home was deserted. A large gunshot wound was in the woman's side and her head had been almost entirely blown off. His capture, trial and conviction followed.

SCANDAL IN JAP ROYAL HOUSE

Suitor for Princess' Hand Degraded for Deceiveing the Emperor.

London, Feb. 5.—The Tokio correspondent of the Standard relates a social scandal, indirectly involving the imperial house of Japan, which, it says, is causing a great stir in the Japanese capital. The story is that Count Todo, 23 years old, was sent to England two years ago to complete his education, and while there married a woman of Hungarian birth, the widow of an Englishman. His family, upon learning this, peremptorily ordered the count to return to Japan, and he did so, leaving his wife in England.

When he arrived home he found that his family, which shares the traditional aristocratic repugnance to mixed marriages, had in his absence started negotiations for his marriage to Princess Take, a member of a collateral branch of the imperial family. The advances were favorably received, owing to the exalted rank and good record of the Todos, and the count's divorce from his English wife was immediately resolved upon.

This was comparatively easy in Japan, and the idea was immediately carried out without consulting the wife. Count Todo, as soon as he was free, formally applied for the princess' hand, and in due course the emperor sanctioned an alliance between them. Congratulations were poured in upon the Todos, when the editor of a Tokio newspaper, hearing the facts, inconsiderately printed them.

General consternation followed. The nobles' disciplinary council investigated and found that the charges made by the editor were true. The emperor immediately revoked his consent to the betrothal of the count and princess, the former's patent of nobility was withdrawn, and the star of his family is in eclipse. Various penalties have been dealt out to others concerned in the affair, including a number of officials who had been "squared." All these were compelled to resign. It is stated that the incident is without precedent in Japan, and has caused intense indignation among the loyal populace.

The Standard says it has learned that the woman who was married to Count Todo was a widow of the name of Elena Addison, who is a Hungarian by birth. She is 29 years old. She was at Taormina in December and went to Messina after the earthquake to help the survivors.

ITS FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY.

Anniversary of Oldest Jewish Charity to be Celebrated.

London, Feb. 5.—On Feb. 17, the Jewish community of London will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the foundation of its premier metropolitan charity, by means of the time-honored custom which characterizes such events—the holding of a festival banquet.

This function is to be neither the only, nor the most striking feature of the celebration, for in connection therewith an attempt will be made to raise the large sum of $200,000 in aid of the funds. By the friends of the Jewish board of guardians it is urged that this is the smallest sum which will suffice to meet the pressing needs of the charity. By not a few, however, it has been held that the figure has been fixed so high mainly with the intention of impressing the charitable with the magnitude of the board's work and with the standard which should regulate their donations.

Another method of celebrating the event has been adopted—the publication of a small book by Mr. Lauric Magnus, joint honorary secretary to the board, which traces the history and development of the institution from its foundation in 1859 to the present day. In dealing with past workers of the institution, many names are mentioned, notable among them being the Baroness de Rothschild, who was the donor of the sewing machines in 1861; the Rev. A. L. Green, Ephraim Alex, Lionel Louis Cohen, F. D. Mocatta and Sir Benjamin L. Cohen.

Excessive Drinking

Excessive or continued use of alcoholic beverages always results in a diseased condition of the nervous system.

The drinking man is often heard to say, "I can stop of my own free will and when I wish," but the poor fellow is now devoid of the power to act at the proper time and in the right way—it's too late, the craving has secured a firm hold and because of the diseased nervous system he has not the ability for sustained effort. The result we all know.

Drunkenness is no longer considered a crime; eminent scientists and physicians have agreed that it is a disease and must be treated as such.

The home treatment that has been used for a number of years, and is highly successful, is Orrine. It is sold under a positive guarantee that if it does not effect a cure your money will be refunded.

Orrine is in two forms. When desiring to give secretly, purchase Orrine No. 1, and if the patient will voluntarily take the treatment, Orrine No. 2 should be given. NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

EX-SHERIFF TO THE PEN

Swan Torkelson Convicted of Crime and Sentenced at Bagley.

His Trial and Conviction Furnishes Sensation at Court Term.

Bagley, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the sensational trials of this term of the district court was that of the State of Minnesota vs. ex-Sheriff Swan Torkelson of this place, who has been found guilty on two serious charges. Mr. Torkelson was sentenced by Judge McClenahan to two years and a half in states prison. He was convicted of assault, with attempt to commit rape.

Judge McClenahan also sentenced O. A. Melland to twenty-four hours in jail and a forfeit of his per diem and mileage, and was excused from further service as a juryman, Melland having reported for duty in an intoxicated condition.

The jury sworn in the case of the State of Minnesota vs. J. H. Ferris, indicted for grand larceny in the second degree, brought in a verdict for the defendant.

Charles Payne indicted on a charge of grand larceny in the second degree, withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty of petit larceny. He was fined $100, or ninety days in the Beltrami county jail.

But little has been done as yet with the civil calendar. A number of minor cases have been settled out of court. A few of the more important cases will be tried at this term, and a number of cases have been set to be tried at chambers, at Bemidji, at some future date, suitable to the parties to the different suits.

Court work in this county has been behind for some time, owing to the vast amount of work devolving on the two judges. Judge McClenahan intends to clear as much of the work in this county as can be done at this time.

FAT BOY IS REDUCING.

Six Weeks' Diet on Milk and Crackers Takes Off Flesh.

Viroqua, Wis., Feb. 3.—"Charlie" Peters, the fattest boy in Wisconsin, has just completed a six weeks' diet of milk and crackers in an effort to reduce his weight. The experiment succeeded to some degree, but not enough to warrant "Charlie's" continuance of the fast, and he has once more reverted to three square meals a day. "Charlie" weighed 450 pounds before he started his fast, but became discouraged when after six weeks he lost only seventy-five pounds and he has at last become reconciled to his fat (e).

"Charlie" Peters is 19 years old and assumed his abnormal proportions several years ago. His size is all the more remarkable when it is taken into consideration that both his father and his mother are small in stature. All of Charlie's clothes are made to order for there is not a tailor, haberdasher or dry goods merchant in this part of the country who carries in stock clothing of sufficient size to fit the Viroqua monstrocity's elephantine form.

It is generally the custom of the Northwestern line to pay its taxes at one time, but the St. Paul always pays its taxes in installments. Approximately $1,500,000 will be collected from the different railroads in the state for taxes during the month of February.

JOE PELTIER NOT EXECUTED

Hanging of North Dakota "Breed" Set for Friday Is Delayed.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—This was to have been a black Friday for Joe Peltier, the half-breed sentenced from Bottineau county for murder in the first degree, and who was to have been hanged here today, for killing a merchant at Somberg and his young daughter. Owing to an appeal taken to the supreme court Feb. 1 the hanging is off for several months.

The appeal operates as a stay of the execution, but the clerk of the court failed to notify the warden of the penitentiary, who conducts all executions in this state, and that official was going ahead with his plans for the hanging when some one woke up and the clerk of court, late last evening, wired the warden official notice of the appeal. It will probably be several months before the supreme court reaches the case.

HIS CONDITION PITIABLE.

Italian in Port Arthur Hospital Armless, Legless and Blind.

Fort William, Ont., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—With both arms and legs broken and with both eyes removed, a friendless Italian, whose name even is not known to the doctors and nurses who have worked over him two days, is lying unconscious in St. Joseph's hospital, Port Arthur. The man is one of four who were hurt by an inadvertant explosion of dynamite on the railway construction work a few miles east of Lake Superior Junction, last Saturday, is perhaps, more frightfully injured than any person who was ever brought here for treatment. That he has survived the accident seems little short of a miracle.

Save an unverified rumor to the effect that the man once lived at the coal docks, no one in either city seems to know anything concerning his identity. One man was instantly killed by the explosion, while a third is unconscious at the Port Arthur hospital.

FAVOR COMMISSION PLAN.

St. Cloud People Would Change System of Local Government.

St. Cloud, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Following an interesting discussion as to the improvement of the commission plan of city government, as opposed to the present mayor and council system of city administration, the Commercial club has voted to request the charter commission to take up the matter and frame an amendment to the charter.

President Grinolds announced that he would name the committee which is to take this matter up with the charter commission in a few days. That there is a very strong sentiment in St. Cloud in favor of the commission plan was shown at the meeting last night, which was a fairly representative one, and every speaker who voiced an opinion at all declared in favor of the new departure.

Not only is there a very strong sentiment for the commission plan in some form, but the opinion was expressed by Charles F. Ladner and James E. Jenks, who are members of the charter commission, that it was their belief that the charter commission was unanimously of the same thought.

BANKERS BUY BANK STOCK.

Plans to Establish Another International Falls Bank, Dropped.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—President A. P. White of the Lumbermen's National bank of this city and J. E. Cowan, the Northome banker, have abandoned their intention of establishing another bank at International Falls. On the contrary they have bought stock in the International State bank, which was recently established by the late W. J. Mooney of Langdon, N. D., and other North Dakota men.

Mr. White returned this morning from International Falls and announced the change in his and Mr. Cowan's plans.

No election of officers has been held by the stockholders of this bank since the death of President W. J. Mooney, who was killed recently in the collision of steamships, Republic and Florida, off the coast of Massachusetts. The election will not be held until the return of J. W. Mooney, cashier of the bank and son of the late president, from the coast where he went after hearing of the accident.

During Mr. Mooney's absence, J. E. Cowan of Northome is attending to the duties of cahsier of the International State bank and Vice President R. F. McDonald of International Falls is acting as president.

CANNOT IDENTIFY SUICIDE.

Little Being Learned About Man Who Took Life in Cloquet Hotel.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Coroner Nyquist has been in communication with St. Ignace, Mich., in an endeavor to get some light as to the identification of the man who committed suicide at the St. Louis hotel in the city Tuesday night after registering from the Michigan town. The man's grip which has caused considerable comment from the fact that it was missing was found yesterday morning in a closet under the stairway where the man probably concealed it unobserved. It contained nothing of a nature to aid in identifying the owner, most of the articles being small, inexpensive nick-nacs, which a peddler would be liable to have, such as shoestrings, pencils, combs, pins, etc.

The police believe that the man was a peddler while many, judging from the queer way the man had of avoiding everybody, are inclined to believe that he may have been trying to escape the police. The proprietor of the hotel where he died states that he is positive the man concealed his face from policemen that entered the hotel office while he was there, by drawing his hat over his eyes and when the policeman's back was turned the fellow fled out of the door. When the policeman was informed of it the man was gone, but the next morning the corpse bore no resemblance to any description that the police are seeking. The body will be held until today in hopes of finding friends who will care for it.

GOOD NEWS HIS RUIN.

Walker Man Celebrates Inheritance and Wanders Off Undressed.

Walker, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The news he had fallen heir to $10,000, through the death of his parent at Detroit, Mich., proved too much for the sobriety of Joseph Chairpair, driver for a local livery, as he proceeded to get drunk and then wandered away in the woods undressed. He had been sent to a homesteader's cabin near here in the hope the quiet life in the woods would tend to sober him, but he was attacked with delirium and wandered away, and has probably perished.

You Buy
And I'll Buy

Simply buy of your grocer a trial cake of Galvanic Soap for the laundry, price 5c. Then I'll buy for you a full-sized cake of Palmolive Soap never sold for less than 10c—the daintiest toilet and bath soap made—soap that is really delightful.

I do this to introduce Galvanic Laundry Soap.
Yet Galvanic Soap is not new and untried.
It is an old and true soap.

300,000 Women Use It

I figure that 300,000 housewives now use it every day—use it for laundering and for dish-washing—use it because it is very much better than a merely good soap.

I want you housewives who use merely good soap to know Galvanic—the best—to judge by results which is the best soap.

Galvanic Soap cannot harm the clothes.

I've 36 years' experience crystallized in this soap.

Galvanic makes the clothes cleaner and whiter and goes twice as far as a yellow soap.

No boiling required. No rubbing—except very soiled spots.

Cocoanut oil is one reason.

I go 10,349 miles to Ceylon for this oil.

Others won't use it because it's expensive, yet it's immensely effective.

But nothing's too good for those 300,000 who use Galvanic Soap.

They deserve the best, so I make it.

They deserve a big cake for 5c, so I give it.

I can afford to make less profit, for they'll always use my soap.

Don't you want to know what they're getting?

Don't you want to try this soap?

It's Honest Soap

I'm asking a favor—in asking you to take my word till you try it. That's why I'm going to make the first cake worth while regardless of its own value. I'm going to give you 3 times what you pay for when you buy that first cake.

Don't pay 5c for a merely good laundry soap—soap not one-half so effective. Learn what you save and gain—using Galvanic Soap.

NO TRACE OF THE MISSING CASHIER

Mystery Still Surrounds the Disappearance of Frank L. Sherwin.

The whereabouts of Frank L. Sherwin, the cashier of the American Express company who disappeared Monday, are still unknown, and the mystery surrounding his disappearance is as deep as ever, in spite of the fact that the police and a number of the young man's friends are bending every energy to locate him. His father arrived this morning from North Dakota, but he can throw no light on the mystery.

Up to date not one clew has been discovered.

It is thought at his office that he had at the time of his disappearance about $50 on his person.

He is about 30 years old, six feet tall, slightly stooped and weighs about 150 pounds. When last seen he wore a black overcoat, a black business suit and a black derby. He has sark hair.

There are many who believe he has met with foul play, as that seems to be the only solution of his disappearance.

ON THE IRON RANGES

NEW HOTEL FOR TOWER ASSURED

Pittsburg Parties to Build It, Also Summer Resort on Lake Vermilion.

Tower, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—A hotel for Tower, and a summer resort on Lake Vermilion, seem assured. F. E. Kolb, N. J. Graf and W. A. Moser of Pittsburg, Pa., have been here looking over the situation and have already drawn up plans for a summer resort on Gold Island. Mr. Graf and Mr. Moser filed yesterday on some lands on the shores of Lake Vermilion, the descriptions not being available at the present time. A. S. Kitto, who owns the grounds whereon the old Vermilion hotel stood, which was burned down some four years ago, has offered the lots free of charge to the three Pittsburg men to erect the contemplated hotel on. The chimney, the cellar and the stone and brick foundation of the former hotel are as good as when built, and it is claimed by experts that the ground walls, and other improvements are worth at least $6,000, which is a good start for the new hotel. Messrs. Kolb, Graf and Moser are today drawing up plans and specifications for the new hotel. It will contain at least forty rooms and will be modern in every way. It is claimed by some, that the men represent the Westinghouse people. The people of Tower are today very enthusiastic over the prospects now in sight for the future of the oldest town on the Iron Range.

The old Minnesota mine at Soudan is looking better than it ever did. The Alger-Smith Lumber company, who last summer bought out the Tower Lumber company, also bought lots of timber north of here, which means a much longer lease of life for the mill here.

The prospects for the future of Tower look today brighter than ever before.

FAMILY'S HARD LUCK.

Father Recently Died, Mother and Child Are Starving.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Commissioner Trebilcock has a sad story relating to a Finnish family located near Big Sand lake.

As a member of the county relief committee he was called to visit the family of Jacob Olli. The home was inaccessible, and, being misdirected; he made three trops before the place was located, and then was piloted to the place by E. Gross. The commissioner found the head of the family had died the week before of tuberculosis, and that the woman, with a 6-months-old child, was on the verge of starvation. The commissioner took off his coat and chopped enough wood to prevent them from freezing, and the next day supplies were sent. There are no neighbors in the vicinity. It was one of the sad tragedies of pioneer life.

Numerous matters were placed in the hands of committees at the last meeting and the reports of the committees as most of them have vital bearing on important matters, will be of interest to the members of the club and others interested in the welfare of the city.

Other matters will also be taken up. It is the desire of the organization to get the expression of the ideas of the members and others on the best manner of helping the town.

At this time the club has seventy-three members who have paid up their dues, while numerous others are in prospect.

The Floodwood lineup last night was: H. Brandmier, rf.; W. Brandmier, lf.; Carey, c.; Butler, rg.; Canbrook, lg.; H. Brandmier and Butler each threw one goal. Carey shot five baskets and threw fouls. Grand Rapids lineup as follows: Meyers, rf.; Doran, lf.; Dickey, c.; McAlpine, lg.; La Frenlere, rg. Dickey shot three baskets and five fouls.

Floodwood will play Hibbing tonight with the high school team. Grand Rapids will meet the Hibbing bunch at Hibbing a week from today.

WOMAN ALLEGES ASSAULT.

Claims Two Hibbiag Men Choked and Cut Her With Knife.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Some sensational developments are expected when the hearing of Frank Gaultero and Joe Gaultero, his uncle, who were arrested yesterday charged with an assault upon Amlee Paulo, who lives on a homestead near Middlefork, a former resident of this place, comes up before Judge Brady next Tuesday. The men had some trouble with the woman over being paid for some work they did for her.

She alleges that Wednesday night, while walking near the Superior hotel, the men attacked her, one catching her about the neck and choking her while the other drew a knife and cut her lip, drawing the knife in the darkness across her mouth and over the other man's hand, which caused him to loosen his hold, permitting her to escape from their clutches, a policeman arriving at that juncture. The woman was taken to the hospital. Her injuries are not regarded as serious.

HIBBING ELECTION NOTES.

Various Candidates for Suffrages of People Discussed.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Interest in the approaching village election is getting lively as the number of reported candidates increases. Although it is still four weeks until election the wise ones are already making their predictions.

Dr. Weirick, the present president of the village council, is said to be a candidate for re-election. Frank Ansly, who was defeated last year, and Max Regasiky, a member of the council, are also said to be after the presidency. R. L. Giffin denies that he is a candidate.

A. D. Smith, village treasurer, is a candidate for re-election, while F. A. Klass would also like to handle the coin.

Miles Gandsey, the present village recorder, will probably be re-elected to the office, as he is willing, and no one seems to be opposing him. Mr. Gandsey has held the office for several terms.

Several are also out after the township offices. Dr. P. R. Thomas has declared himself a candidate for township treasurer. He is opposed by P. J. Somers. Mr. Somers is at present chairman of the board of supervisors, from which he retires this year. This is Dr. Thomas' first venture into the political arena.

Charles Calligan is expected to run for the office of township clerk.

EVELETH TAXES HAVE TO STAND

Commercial Club, Regretting Their Size, Bows to Inevitable.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The tax question was again brought up at last night's meeting of the Commercial club. Solomon Sax read a letter from County Auditor Halden, showing how the valuation of the Spruce mine was brought to the attention of the local assessor, and that both the county auditor and the city assessor were notified last April that the Spruce mine would be taxed on a valuation of about $1,000,000.

After a full discussion of the proposition to recommend to the city council a reduction in the city tax levy, it was the practically unanimous sentiment of those present that, while the tax was high, there should be no reduction, as the city was making extensive improvements, and any cut would seriously handicap the work. Mayor Smith stated that $30,000 was to be expended for a new water tank and other improvements in connection with the system, besides $4,000 for the new intake at St. Mary's lake, and there is $15,000 in the street improvement fund.

A communication was read from State Senator Vall relative to the proposed court on the range, and the suggestion that some representatives from the club go to St. Paul and try to help push the bill through. He also suggested the co-operation of the club with the mining companies relative to getting a bill passed giving towns the right to annex contiguous lands.

Because of the improvements in the waterworks system, the new fully paid fire department, and the new apparatus, many people think that the insurance rates should be reduced, and the matter was discussed last night.

The insurance men were here yesterday looking over the new improvements. It is the belief that there will be some reduction in the high rates of the past.

Quite a discussion of the road question resulted from a resolution which does not favor the bill pending in the legislature giving the county road fund into the hands of a commission. It is claimed most of the members would be appointed from Duluth, and with this advantage, Duluth would get the bulk of the money, while the range country, which needs roads the most, would fare worse under the new bill than under the present system.

FAY OPERA HOUSE TO BE REPAIRED

Frank Klink, Owner, Will Conform to the City Ordinance.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Klink, owner of the Fay opera house, has let the contract for rewiring the house to conform with the city ordinance regulating these matters. The house is still under condemnation, but as soon as this work is completed, the proceedings will be lifted. Fire escapes have recently been attached to the building an ureproof drop curtains added to the stage effects.

Mrs. Albert B. Coates departed on Thursday for Chicago, and later will be joined by Mr. Coates. From there they will go to Cleveland, Ohio, for a short visit, after which they will go to Hot Sprigs, Ark., for a short stay.

Mrs. R. M. McLean and Mrs. Ray O'Leary have returned from a visit among relatives and friends at Bemidji.

Mrs. R. Y. Hutchings of Duluth is a guest at the home of Senator P. R. Vail.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Tredway celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage Tuesday evening. A few friends were invited in to enjoy the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Tredway were the recipients of a number of beautiful presents.

Robert Benson, formerly a member of the Virginia baseball team, but now of Biwabik, was in the city this week. Mr. Benson says the fans of Biwabik have commenced the agitation for a team the coming season, and if their plans materialize will have an aggregation of players that will not be afraid to go against any team on the range.

Louis Lilenthal and Noah Miller, homsteaders, located near Ash Lake, returned last evening from Duluth, where they made a deal with a lumber concern of that city for the sale of hundred thousands feet of timber standing on their lands. They also took samples of iron ore found upon their property to Duluth, which assayists say is of a good quality.

Dr. Edward Amhurst Ott, the noted author and orator, will appear at the Roosevelt auditorium next Monday night.

No quorum being present at the charter commission meeting last evening, an adjournment was taken until next Tuesday night at the municipal court rooms, in the city hall.

LONGYEAR LAKE RACES.

Hibbing Sportsmen Expect Some Fine Fun Next Sunday Afternoon.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The shifting weather conditions having brought around the possibility of the ice on Longyear lake being in good shape for racing next Sunday, local horsemen are planning for a lively matinee on the ice. Many horses will go oved to the lake, including R. L. Giffin's 3-year-old Queen Alice, two of the Butchart boys' horses, Long Jim, the bay, and Mystic, the speedy bay pacer, O'Rourke's Mr. Johnson. Pomeroy is also planning to take over his bay pacer, George Scott. This is one of the swiftest racers out on the ice in this part of the country. He has made an easy mile in 2:29¼. But chart has good hopes of Mystic taking everything. She is a swift one and easily managed. She has done a half mile in 1:10 and won in a recent trial meet at Longyear against the local bunch.

The Eveleth horsemen had planned to come over to the meet next Sunday, but have called it off. They will be over the next Sunday, however, with four or five horses.

PLAN FINE SCHOOL.

Virginia School Board May Put Up Another High.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—In order to keep apace with the growing demand for more school room, it is reported the school board contemplates the erection of a $100,000 high school building on the lots just west of the present Roosevelt school, the idea being to use the latter structure for some of the grades. Whether the high school building is completed or not this year, it will be necessary to provide more room for the pupils next year or have half-day sessions in some of the buildings.

That Is Current Report in Aurora on the Property.

The mine has been closed since September, 1907. The company has invested here about $1,000,000 and has operated the mine but a few months. The business men here had figured strongly on the property re-opening this spring.

The Duluth Diamond Drill company, who have been drilling north of the Mohawk, are nearly through with their work. Only two drills are working, one having been pulled off Saturday. It is stated that the Pickands-Mather people are to start stripping this property for an open pit mine, in the spring.

EMPLOYMENT MAN ARRESTED

Is Charged With Assaulting Oscar Anderson, a Customer.

Leonard Hagberg, who runs a West Michigan street employment office, was arrested this morning, charged with assaulting Oscar Anedrson, a customer.

Anedrson complained to the police this morning that Hagberg was trying to break his word to him by shipping him to Michigan, and charging him a $2 employment office fee, instead of $1, as agreed. He had paid the $1, he said, with the understanding that he was to be given work in a Northern Minnesota camp, but when the time came for shipping, Hagberg asked for a nadditional dollar, and said he would have to go to Michigan.

Anderson refused to produce the second dollar, said he didn't want to go to Michigan, anyway, and asked for his dollar back, on the grounds of a breach of contract. His request was refused. He told his story at the police station, and Capt. Fiskett telephoned to Hagberg to either refund the money or give the man work at the first price of $1. Hagberg said he would do one or the other, and asked Anderson to come down.

When the young man arrived, he claims Hagberg abused him, and then struck him in the face with his fist. Anderson found Patrolman Hannot and had the emploment man arrested. His case will come up in municipal court late this afternoon.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

KETCHEL WILL FIGHT O'BRIEN

Interesting Match to Take Place in the Near Future.

Philadelphia, Feb. 5.—Willis Britt, manager of Stanley Ketchel, has wired to Matchmaker "Jack" McGuigan of the National Athletic club, that he is coming East with Stanley Ketchel, and will accept a date at the National Athletic club with "Philadelphia Jack" OBrien on the other end of the match.

Ketchel never has been at Philadelphia, and his coming will arouse the greatest interest in ring craft since the O'Brien-Ryan mill.

"Jack" McGuigan immediately began to keep the wires busy over the terms. He has closed the deal with "Philadelphia Jack" completely, and he has the West Philadelphian nailed definitely and specifically, and Britt's wire makes the match certain.

O'Brien says: "I will postpone my European trip until I have disposed of this wonder. He comes highly rated; so did Walcott, and Fitzsimmons, and the rest. I have started to train for the bout, and will win sure."

AUSTRALIANS TO KILL THE GAME

New Prize Fighting Law Will be Pushed Through.

New York, Feb. 5.—Australia is about to pass a law prohibiting infighting in prize contests. The Australian's idea of self-defense, as it should be taught and practiced, is that a man should stand off at long range and tap lightly and dexterously until his assailant desists. It's a pretty idea and should be tied in pink ribbons and hung up in the parlor. But it'll never become popular in America. The saddest part of it is that it precludes the possibility of a fight in kangaroo-land between Jeffries and Johnson. Australia isn't going to get Jeff under any ping pong rules. If Jeff ever gets into a ring with Johnson he will want to have things lined up so that he can tip Johnson's seconds the wink when it's time to send for the ambulance.

Jeff prefers "cellar rules" himself. A few years ago, when Johnson bothered the retired champion for a match Jeff called for $5,000, handed it to Harry Corbett to hold, and invited the negro into the cellar. Jeff was offering to donate the whole purse, the first man to emerge from the cellar to get it. "Ah ain't no cellar fighter,' said Johnson.

Tommy Burns took the American style of "infighting" into Australia. The Australians liked it fairly well, although they still stuck to the old English stand-off manner in their own contests.

ENGLISH FEAR FOR POLO CUP

Will Pick Out Best Players to Meet the Americans.

London, Feb. 5.—Despite reports to the contrary, English sportsmen are convinced that the coming visit of the Meadowbrook polo team is aimed at winning the American polo cup. Maj. Egerton Green, manager of the Hurlingham team says:

"It stands to reason that four of America's leading players will not return without trying to take the cup along, which I feel certain is their object. Foxhall Keene told me he intends to play regularly at Hurlingham and has engaged stabling. He and the Waterbury brothers are acknowledged to be as good as any of our players, while Milburn must have improved if he has been playing since he represented Oxford, when he was already a good player. With these four, besides Whitney, who is acknowledged to be up to first class English form, playing together regularly, the combination ought to be perfect when our championship tournament ends on June 26. The match would probably be the first week in July.

"I intend to draw the Hurlingham committee's attention to this and arrange our matches with a view of discovering the best players individually and as a team, that an English team defending the cup may combine as well as the Americans. Will Buckmaster will be playing regularly with a special view to these games and will be the pivot of the English team. Hurlingham, Ranelagh and Rochampton cannot definitely fix an American match program before the beginning of April, but I am doing all I can to insure them preliminary matches with all the strongest teams before meeting us for the cup."

Attell Puts Kelly Away.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 5.—Abe Attell of California, found no difficulty in retaining the featherweight championship, when he met Eddy Kelly of New York, in a scheduled ten-round bout before the Southern A. C., here last night, Kelly's seconds threw up the sponge in the seventh round.

At the start, Kelly assumed the aggressive, but was unable to administer any effective punishment to Attell.

THE ALEX MACRAE RINK OF THE DULUTH CURLING CLUB BY THE HERALD CARTOONIST

WILL ATTEND MILWAUKEE MEET

Carl Alroth Was Unable to Go to Saranac Lake.

On account of illness in his family, Carl Alroth, the speedy Duluth skater, who showed up so wonderfully at the St. Paul meet of the Northwestern Skating association, and who last year won many medals at the Eastern races, was unable to attend the Saranac Lake races this year.

He has been training steadily all winter, and his inability to take part in the Eastern races was a big disappointment to him and to his friends.

Lamy, the speedy skater who has been winning everything down East, was easy for Alroth last season, and he believes that had he been able to be present at the meet this year he would have found little trouble defeating the Eastern man. Last year Lamy had to make room for Alroth four times.

The skaters will race for the indoor championship at Milwaukee about the middle of the month, and Alroth hopes to be able to attend.

RACING GETS ITS DEATH BLOW

Otis Anti-Gambling Bill Passes Both California Houses.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 5.—Racing in the state of California received a vital blow when the senate yesterday, by a vote of 33 to 7, passed the Walker-Otis anti-gambling bill, which prohibits pool selling, bookmaking or gambling on horse races.

The bill having already passed the assembly, it will now go to the governor for his signature, after which it will become a law. Governor Gillett has signified his intention of signing the measure, if passed by both houses, but it is believed he will not take this action until thirty days shall have elapsed. As the bill permits pool dealers and bookmakers sixty days' time in which to close up their affairs, the present season of racing at the Emeryville and Santa Anita courses will not be disturbed.

The Walker-Otis anti-gambling bill is referred to as "The Hughes law of California," inasmuch as it follows closely the text of the Hugehs bill, which was passed by the last legislature of New York. Violation of the measure is made a felony, the punishment for which is imprisonment in the penitentiary and a heavy fine.

The senate galleries were packed yesterday afternoon when Senator Walker, sponser for the bill, presented the measure for consideration. He explained that it would not prevent horse racing, and would not injure the business of the state one iota. It was agreed by the supporters of the bill that there should be no debate on the part of those favorable to its passage. Senator Wolf made the principal speech in a last effort to turn the tide in favor of the bill for the race track owners and supporters.

If this Wisconsin-Minnesota league project goes through—and there is little doubt but that it will—Duluth will have its final test of ability to support a professional baseball team. It will be a conclusive test. Duluth will have a good team in a good league. There will be no reason in the world why the fans, if such there be in Duluth, should not turn out, and if by any chance past experiences should be repeated, it will and should be the end.

Followers of baseball have long asked themselves the question: "What's the matter with Duluth?"

Certain it is something has been the matter. Burgs of a few thousand people all over the country put out thousands of dollars each year for the support of ball teams, while Duluth contented itself with sitting down hard on the teams that attempted to represent it in shoestring circuits. The wonder is that the baseball germ has not been killed, buried and destroyed.

But it hasn't. This is what has been the matter with Duluth—it hasn't had a chance. Since the days of long ago, when Duluth held a proud place in the American association and there was real baseball by real top notchers, Duluth hasn't had proper opportunity to show what it could do.

What was the Northern league but a bush circuit, in which money governed? When Duluth put up the money, it ran away from the other teams. When the other towns put up the money, they ran away from Duluth. There weren't enough towns big enough and wealthy enough in the district to put out $2,000 or so a month, so naturally money held the whip hand and the teams that kept to the salary limit were lost in the slough. The salary limit ever was a joke. Why wouldn't it be, when in the last two years the towns in which the head of the league resided put it in the wastebasket and promptly forgot it?

This new league is a different proposition. It will be made up of live towns. Duluth is a live one. Winnipeg and the Copper country statements notwithstanding. Superior has been dormant, but not dead. Eau Claire and La Crosse made good in the Wisconsin-Illinois league. Winona has the earmarks of initiative and St. Paul and Minneapolis—there's nothing to it. The days of old will be lived over again and Duluth will be a baseball town once again, not a harboring place for bushers.

Canadians Win Again.

Glasgow, Feb. 5.—The Canadian curlers won a four-rink match yesterday at Crossmyloff against the players of Perth and Dundee provinces. The score was 77 to 31.

W. G. HALL WINS FROM A. H. SMITH

An Interesting Game is Pulled Off at the Curling Club.

At the Curling club yesterday afternoon one of the most interesting games of the season was played between the rinks skipped by Walter G. Hall and A. H. Smith.

Hall won by a score of 13 to 8, although for a time it looked as though Smith had his game cinched.

There has been a good deal of good natured rivalry between these two rinks for some time, and the skips finally agreed to come together in a practice game and settle the matter.

The contest aroused a good deal of interest among the curlers because of the fact that both rinks are among the strongest.

At the end of the sixth end the score was 7 to 2 in favor of Smith. His men were working well and it looked as though he would be an easy winner. Hall however, whipped his rink into line and during the next six heads allowed Smith to push in but one point.

Mr. Smith will take his rink to Winnipeg as it played against Hall and the following will constitute Hall's rink: Thomas Gibson, G. H. Feetham, C. F. Macdonald, Walter G. Hall, skip.

Both rinks will leave for Winnipeg Monday evening.

The ice yesterday afternoon was in the best of condition and the teams lined up as follows:

J. A. Todd,	William Craig,
H. H. Dinham,	E. R. Jacobi,
R. D. Bradley,	J. E. Catlin,
A. H. Smith, skip.	Walter Hall, skip

SUPERIOR MEN ON THE GROUND

Dr. C. H. Mason Is Being Boomed for National Presidency.

Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 5.—A bunch of Superior Skiers arrived in this city yesterday and went down in the afternoon to try the slide.

C. L. Flagstad, delegate of the Superior Ski club to the national meeting, also arrived yesterday and will be here until after the tournament. He is booming Dr. C. H. Mason of Superior for the presidency, and he says that he has sufficient pledges of support already to assure the doctor's election. There is very little doubt of the latter's election, he says. Eric Hoyseth, president of the Ishpeming Ski club, is the other candidate for the presidency.

Coleraine, Minn., wants the next annual tournament, and it is understood that the Minnesota city has the preference over any other candidate which may bob up.

Mr. Flagstad is confident that the national tournament, which will be held here Feb. 6 and 7, will be a record-breaker both in point of attendance and of breaking of ski records. Indications, he says, are that there will be an immense attendance from the various ski centers of the Northwest and all neighboring cities. Preparations are being made to house and feed the multitude which will be here.

Already things are commencing to look lively about the city. Delegations are commencing to arrive from various places and taking their quarters.

The fine weather conditions is one of the most favorable evidences that the event will turn out a great success.

Vast preparations are under way for the entertainment of the visitors, and no stone will be left unturned by the local officials in giving them a rousing reception.

Yesterday saw the arrival of John Rudd of Duluth, the only man in the world, who turns somersaults on skis. He will likely try the slide today. Rudd will give exhibitions of his daring at the tournament and will show the people here something new in the line of fearlessness and skill.

WITH THE CURLERS.

PROPOSE SCHOOLS FOR THE CUSTOMS TAILORS.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—Custom tailors are becoming scarce, and technical and manual training schools ought to teach tailoring to make up the deficiency, according to speakers at the Merchant Tailors' National Protective association. It was asserted that while custom tailoring business was on the increase, the ready-to-wear clothing manufacturers were acquiring a great deal of the available talent. The association elected Harvey A Patterson of New York president.

EARLY PAY OF AUTHORS

Hot Discussion Over Hall Caine's Struggle on $1,500 Yearly.

Leaders Made Next to Nothing on Their First Stories.

London, Feb. 5.—Hall Caine has stirred up a sort of literary hornet's nest by describing his early experience as a writer. His main offense consists in speaking of having had a stiff struggle on an income of $1,500 a year. Most of his critics—many of whom are prominent authors—describe this stipend as princely, and they give sombre insights into their own earnings. Hall Caine, when he started on the race for literary success, had a regular salary of $1,000 a year from the Liverpool Mercury; while he was making $500 on the side by contributions and reviews published in the Athenaeum and Academy. Out of his first book, he complains, he made only $850, while for his third book—"The Deemster"—he obtained only $750.

Edgar Jepson, author of the successful book, "Sybil Falcen," handles Hall Caine without gloves, and says that his income was comparatively greater than most aspirants to literary distinction. Speaking for himself, Jepson says: "Out of my first book I made exactly nothing at all; out of my second, 'The Passion of Romance,' which I am frequently assured is the best book I ever write, I made $10; out of my first five books, I made $836.52—or about $167.30 per book. They contain some of the best work I ever did, and I have kept the figures as a warning to young men and women desirous of essaying the gamble of fiction. It is my experience that not one beginner in twenty makes $300 out of his first novel. I believe that $100 is above the average."

Others Say the Same.

In a similar strain to that of Edgar Jepson, write Silas K. Hocking, Frankfort Moore, Gilbert Parker, Charles Marriott, Cutcliffe Hyne and others. The last-named writer, speaking of his own income, says:

"I wrote six long novels which did not advance past the manuscript stage. I then descended to writing boys' books and sold two to Blackie for something like $150 apiece. I was working six years before I made $750 a year, and during all that time I was traveling about the world, getting material at first hand."

Charles Marriott, now recognized as one of the English novelists who have arrived, gives some illuminating items which show the seamy side of literature. Among other things, he says: "When I wrote my first novel, my wife and I with two children were living on $750 a year. This took me from 9 till 6 evevy day to earn by a fairly exhausting occupation, so that I had only the evening for writing. I sold my first novel outright for $125. For the next two years my actual earnings by writing amounted to $1,830, or $915 a year. This sum represents two novels, twelve short stories, the same number of miscellaneous articles and a little reviewing."

Percy White, in similar language, touches up Hall Caine with a deft, sarcastic hand. "It seems to me," he says, "that Hall Caine marched to success in fiction by the easiest and least discouraging path, and that his dark days, illuminated by the cheerful gleam of $1,000 a year, are much less somber than those usually braved by beginners."

Percy White's Success.

Percy White describes his own success with his first book, "Mr. Bailey-Martin," brought out by Heinemann. It seems he made little from it, but his extremely modest opinion of his own book is so unusual as to be worth quoting, and commending, perhaps, to authors of great attainment and larger cranium. "'Mr. Martin-Bailey' was my first start. A commonplace writer on commonplace subjects, a commonplace success, on a small scale, has been the result of commonplace effort quite undisturbed by any of those tragic elements which seem to be reserved chiefly for writers of exceptional originality, whose talent the public is always slow to recognize."

This excursion into the holy of holies of literary reward throws a lurid light on the field of English letters. Warnings galore from the pens of the best men in the business are overwhelmingly discouraging to the person who thinks to make litelature pay. It proves more than anything else what Jepson calls the gamble of fiction. In fact, the same writer advises anyone who thinks of attempting to make a living by writing to try the American stock exchange instead.

DULUTH MAN HAS GREAT INVENTION

Stovepipe of "Antiswear" Variety Makes Patent Men Cuss.

Washington, Feb. 5.—If "the Jenkins antiswear stovepipe" makes officials of the patent office swear in trying to figure it out can it be said to be an entire success?

This is a problem confronting the commissioner of patents.

Rev. Jenkins lives in Duluth. He has written to Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs Valentine, to aid in perfecting his patent. He says the mechanic who put the model together for him forgot to put in the hole through which the lubricant that gives the stovepipe its antiswearing value was meant to be injected, and wants Valentine to assist in straightening out the tangle.

Incidentally, Rev. Jenkins mentions that he has now a new idea in the form of an artificial leg with clockwork in the knee joint, so that the artificial member will keep time with its human mate.

He asks that he be appointed Indian commissioner, and mentions he would be willing to work for nothing.

BOOT IS ON OTHER LEG.

Senators Who Would Gag La Follette Willing to Let Tillman Continue

Washington, Feb. 5.—Senator Aldrich's point of order that a senator cannot compel a test of a quorum merely to listen to him talk, brought up and sustained when Mr. La Follette made his famous filibuster speech, was again invoked when Senator Tillman started a speech against confirmation of W. D. Crum, colored, as collector at Charleston. Senators who quietly permitted the ruling against La Follette rose up in arms and intimated that they did not propose that ruling should be fixed in senate practice. It appears that the boot is on the other leg now and that those who wanted La Follette suppressed are now anxious to filibuster and prevent a vote on the confirmation of Crum.

S.S.S. BEST TREATMENT FOR CATARRH

S. S. S. is the best treatment for Catarrh because it is a perfect blood purifier. It is the only medicine that is able to get down into the circulation and entirely remove the catarrhal matter and impurities which produce the trouble. As long as the mucous membranes and tissues are kept inflamed and irritated by this impure and infected condition of the blood Catarrh will remain. Its disagreeable and dangerous symptoms, of ringing noises in the ears, mucus dropping back into the throat, headaches, watery eyes, difficult breathing, and even stomach disorders and weakened health, cannot be permanently relieved until the blood is purified. Nothing equals S. S. S. for this purpose. It goes down to the very root of the trouble, and removes every particle of the catarrhal matter from the blood and enriches this vital fluid so that all the mucous surfaces are supplied with nutritive, healthful qualities, instead of being constantly irritated and inflamed by impurities in the circulation. Then the symptoms begin to pass away and when S. S. S. has entirely purified the blood, Catarrh is permanently cured and the general health greatly built up. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

COUNTY MUST LEND AID TO COUNTRY SCHOOLS

Fifteen School Districts in County Bankrupt, Says Gilpin.

Their Valuation Too Low to Support Educational Institutions.

"When a school district is unable to raise sufficient money to maintain its schools by levying the maximum assessment allowed by law on its valuation, annul its organization and place it under the control of the county board of education.

"By levying an assessment against all of the taxable property in the county, create a fund for the aid of the impecunious school districts, the fund to be divided among the districts of the county, proportionately to the number of schools in each district."

Plans proposed by County Superintendent S. W. Gilpin for relieving school districts, which are hovering on the verge of bankruptcy.

Asserting that there are at least fifteen school districts in St. Louis county, whoch are practically bankrupt on account of inability to raise sufficient funds on their small valuation to support their schools, S. W. Gilpin, county superintendent of schools, appeared before the county board this morning and made a plea for their relief. His plea was coupled with a warning that if nothing is done to relieve the stricken districts, schools will have to close and children of poor settlers will go without education in a county which should provide its children with the best of educational facilities.

Mr. Gilpin ascribed the situation to the fact that much of the land in the poverty-stricken districts, is held by the state or by corporations, and is not taxable for school purposes. During the past few years, he said, he has been watching the conditions go from bad to worse, until it is time to call a halt and extend a helping hand where it is sorely needed.

"I have investigated the conditions in other parts of the state and I find that in some counties the conditions are similar and even worse," said Mr. Gilpin. "I have found school districts in other counties, which are bankrupt almost absolutely. They are five years behind. Their orders cannot be paid for five years after they are issued. It is not as bad in this county, but the problem will grow and in a few years we will be up against a far more serious proposition."

Mr. Gilpin cited cases. In school district No. 14 in the town of New Independence, the valuation is $44,000, and money must be raised to maintain two schools at present. Two other schools have been voted, and by levying the 15 mills maximum under the law, enough money cannot be raised to maintain two schools. In district No. 53, the valuation is $30,000, and there are four schools in the district. Three others are needed. District No. 52 is valued at $30,000 and there are three schools. One more is needed. District No. 53 has four schools to support on a valuation of about $12,000. The schools were all built by the people themselves without taxation, and they are maintained for the greater part by subscription among the settlers. District No. 65 has three schools on a valuation of $40,000, and district No. 67 has the "magnificent valuation of $7,000" to support one school.

"We hear much agitation for the advertisement of St. Louis county to induce settlers to come in and locate," said Mr. Gilpin. "What we need are roads and schools before we advertise. In fact, we do not need to advertise. St. Louis county is advertised enough. The thing to do is to devise ways and means of the people living when they do get here. We should give them facilities for raising their children properly and roads by which they may travel to the centers of civilization."

Mr. Gilpin said it was hard to hit upon a solution of the problem of relieving impoverished school districts. The state school fund of about $19,000,000 does not help them much, he said, as they must have schools and children in the schools before they can get a cent of it.

"In a few years, we will have nothing but cut-over lands in this county and nobody but poor settlers to tax in the outlying districts," continued Mr. Gilpin. "Now is the time to act. We should have legislation to relieve them. The relief must be equitable, but something must be done. A special levy is not advisable. I would suggest that districts, in which the valuation is so low that enough money cannot be raised by levying the 15 mills maximum allowed by law, should be annulled as organizations and placed under the county board of education.

"Another plan might be devised for the creation of a fund by an assessment on all the taxable property of the county, the fund to be divided among the school districts, proportioned on the number of schools in each district. The money now received by the county from sources other than taxation, such as fines, liquor licenses, etc., might also be apportioned among the school districts, according to the number of schools in each district and the situation would be much relieved.

"I believe this board should do something to protect those school districts in the future. Give the people a chance to maintain their schools and educate their children and the settlement of the land will come of itself."

SUPERIOR STEEL PRODUCED.

Can be Hardened in Oil or Paraffin as Well as Water.

London, Feb. 5.—A superior steel is announced which Prof. John Oliver Arnold predicted in a lecture before the royal institute would put the best product out of date.

It is a Sheffield product and said to be the result of experiments made after threatened American litigation for alleged infringement of patents covering the air hardening process. A revolution is claimed in that the metal can be hardened in oil or paraffin as well as in water.

Steel, hardened by the new process, it is claimed, will do six or seven times as much work as at present.

VERY RAPID INCREASE

Growth of New York's Population Shown by Railroads' Earnings.

Tubes Under Hudson Will But Slightly Relieve the Congestion.

New York, Feb. 5.—The great growth in population of this city is compelling attention in many ways, and despite the extraordinary increase in transportation facilities already available and considering the additions that are to come into service during the next twelve months, it is now apparent that far greater expansion of transit utilities will have to be provided for the people.

The report of the Interborough Rapid Transit company for the year ended with June 30, 1908, shows an increase during the year in passenger revenue alone of $1,696,495.18.

The total number of fares paying 5 cents were 466,870,268, an increase of 33,997,756 5-cent fares over the preceding year.

The Subway carried 200,429,776 passengers, the Third Avenue Elevated carried 122,624,928, and the Sixth Avenue Elevated was third, with 84,050,338 passengers.

These figures demonstrate the money earning power of the Subway and show the chaos that would have resulted if the surface and elevated roads had not been relieved by its operation. It is now under consideration to take steps looking to city and suburban rapid transit development upon a scale commensurate with the city's future needs, and it is thought that a district of fully 100 miles square must the requirements.

Opening Up Jersey.

While the city and the country at large has heard much of the crush at the Brooklyn bridge, and the morning and evening trains beyond the Harlem carry many thousands to and from the commercial district of the city daily, yet statistics show that fully 40 per cent of the travel to that district comes from or rather through the Jersey communications.

The opening up of the Huson River tubes is sure to largely increase the percentage from Jersey, as well as to increase the pressure upon the Subway and the elevated roads running north and south. When all the systems of tubes to Jersey are completed nearly the entire state will become a suburb of New York.

Today New York builders, constructors, manufacturing establishments and New York commercial enterprises of various kinds, have possession of the state from Camden to the most northern boundary of the state.

The project to connect up and complete the ocean driveway from the Atlantic Highlands to Cape May seems to be an assured success, and within the next three years will probably result in the greatest and best seaside drive in the world. When it is done it will mean the virtual annexation of Atlantic City and Cape May to this metropolis. Quiet Philadelphia, which so fondly cherished these resorts, will lose her supremacy over them, and this great octopus of a city reaching out regardless of state lines, will draw to herself the crowds of residents and the thousands of transients who come there to enjoy the open air. The steam roads, the electric lines, the highways, the driveways and the byways of New Jersey are now simply extensions of Greater New York. Just as much New York's as those of Long Island, and with the opening up of the tubes, the additions in every way to the electric lines of Jersey, and the completion of this projected driveway, as far as Jersey's trade and commerce is concerned, it will be monopolized by this city.

Gain In Railway Earnings.

No road's managers complained more of adverse railway legislation than did those of the Southern railway. There has been little, if any, change in the attitude of the federal and state governments toward railways for twelve months, but a gain in net earnings by the Southern in December, 1908, as compared with December, 1907, of $561,000 is not only evidence of good management but that the abused legislation has not materially injured the road's financial status.

Mr. Harriman's address in Georgia last week has not rendered it easier for his own railway interests or for geneal railway interests. He has furnished a text for agitators that they will interpret to his own disadvantage. The speech of Senator Bristow was not in accordance with Eastern ideas, but he knows his own people, and no doubt believes he voices their wishes and sentiments. The question of control of railways and the exercise of such control by governments, state or federal, is one that will be with the country for many years to come.

It will not harm, however, the investor in railway securities. Their rights to receive a reasonable return secures their investment. That feature saves the entire situation in a business way. The railway control may grow closer and firmer; it may eradicate methods and practices of long standing, but control or regulation cannot tend to any confiscatory measures.

Capital is safe under our courts. It it secure in its rights and entitled to reasonable earnings. It ought to be content with that.

Another great railway, as well as the Southern, comes to the front with a startling report for December, 1908. The Philadelphia & Reading company reports net earnings for December, 1908, as nearly $300,000 greater for the month than those of December, 1907.

Big Cash Dividends.

From the reports of the Union Cotton Manufacturers' Company of Fall River, Mass., it would seem those who manage it understand their business, and those who own stock in that company are fortunate investors. For the last ten years cash dividends of 122½ per cent have been declared, in addition to a stock dividend of 60 per cent in 1900. The company has a surplus account approximating half of the endre capital, which is $1,200,000. On the 27th of this month the company's directors declared a quarterly dividend of 25 per cent, which, amounting to $300,000, will be paid next Monday. There have been but few sales of stock of late years, as it is closely held. Throughout New England there are many manufacturing enterprises, not seeking nor needing notoriety, which, with energetic yet conservative management, are a mint to their shareholders.

Abundant capital is going into cotton manufacturing plants in both Carolinas, Virginia, Georgia and Alabama. North and South Carolina and Georgia mills already established are making large increases in their spindle and loom capacities, and there seems every reason to expect an annual increase in the number of mills and the number of operatives for many years to come in that section of the South. The majority of the enterprises have been successful, and as the mills incerase in number and additional operatives become trained in the work it results in better work, more work and greater profit to the operating companies.

South Picking Up.

The tide of travel for pleasure to Southern points, especially to Florida, was never so heavy as it is this year. As fine trains as are in the world are running daily to extreme Southern Florida direct from New York city. In addition to this travel for recreation, the business representatives of Northern companies and firms were never so numerous nor so successful in taking orders in that section as they are this year.

Railroad men from the South Atlantic and the Gulf states inform me that the prices of farming lands in the South are advancing, owing to the steady demand for them from new settlers. The desirable vegetable and fruit lands along the famed Indian river, in Florida, are being rapidly sold out to persons desiring twenty or forty acres each for cultivation and actual settlement. The orange and lemon growers are finding grape fruit to be in great demand and are supplementing their other fruits by this new favorite of the Northern and Eastern markets. Florida has almost forgotten the freeze of 1895, and throughout her entire boundaries is prospering and progressing at an amazing rate.

VON BERNSTORFF IS BANQUETTED

New German Ambassador and Herman Ridder Make Addresses.

New York, Feb. 5.—Addressing a banquet in his honor last night at the Manhattan club, German Ambassador von Bernstorff said, in part:

"I am sure the American press in general wishes to use the great power its wields in the interest of peace and good will between this nation and the others. I am convinced it is the case with regard to my country. But in order to be able to work in this direction, it is necessary that one should have as much direct friendly intercourse, between the two countries as possible. There are many channels through which such intercourse can be led. I hope to be one of them, and that you, gentlemen, will make as much use as possible of this channel. But I also should like you to see for yourself, and visit my counthy when you go to Europe. I am sure you will like it, and I need not say, that you will find the most cordial welcome and a people ready to live on the best of terms with their American cousins."

Herman Ridder, one of the speakers, said:

"All the American people recognize that Germany has had a lasting influence upon our national life. Through all our language and our literature run the song and story of the Fatherland. The warrior, the poet, the artist, the scientist, the statesman, the captain of industry—all have received inspiration from the nation represented by our guest of this evening. And in every one of these spheres of life the American of German descent has been a leader. Our millions of citizens in whose veins flow German blood constitute a strong bulwark of national defense and a strong impelling force toward our future greatness. These millions of Americans of German ancestry furnish a guarantee for the continuation of the long established friendship between the two nations. To perpetuate this friendship is one of the duties of our guest, and I know I can say with all sincerity that in performance of that duty the American people will enthusiastically join with him."

COMMITTEEMEN ARE FAR APART

Much Conflict Over Primary Election Probe in Wisconsin.

Madison, Wis., Feb 5.—The conference committee of primary election investigation having failed to reach an agreement on the method of procedure, got together again today in another attempt to reach an understanding.

About the only point on which the conferees agree is that the investigation shall apply to all senatorial candidates and legislators against whom charges are made. The principal point on which the committee seems unable to agree is the makeup of the assembly portion of the investigation committee.

HEPBURN GAINS THREE IN THE EARLY RECOUNT.

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 5.—Five precints in the Hepburn-Jamieson contest over the former's seat in congress, have been counted. They show a loss to Congressman Hepburn of thirteen and a gain of sixteen—a net gain of three. The result, so far, is disappointing to Hepburn's attorneys. The official canvass gave Jamieson 308 over Hepburn. The count will continue for several days.

A GREAT FINANCIER.

Supports Wife and Fifteen Children and Can't Afford to Drink.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—With a weekly income of $12, James Burke, 55 years old, father of fifteen children, a laborer of 401 Austin avenue, told Municipal Judge Newcomer that he could support his family and afford to get intoxicated once each week.

"Are all the children living?" asked the judge.

"Yes, Your Honor," replied Burke.

"Then you are a great financier."

"He suports his family," said Mrs. Burke. "He is a good husband and a loving father, too, but he takes too much liquor some times."

"I can get along without the booze," volunteered Burke.

"Will you take the pledge?' asked the court.

"I will," replied Burke, and he did, after which he was discharged. He was arrested, charged with being drunk and disorderly.

PETTY LARCENY.

Laborers Bring Charge Against the Stack Employment Company.

H. T. Stack, proprietor of the Stack Employment company, 515½ West Michigan street, and Carl Mandelin, his clerk, were arraigned in police court yesterday afternoon, charged with petty larceny. They pleaded not guilty, and their cases were set to come up Feb. 11.

The charge against them is that they received $1 each from four men, on a contract to send them to Bena, Minn., to work for the government. The four men claim they went to the place designated, but found no work there upon their arrival, and that when they returned to Duluth, Stack would not return the money they had paid him.

CASE AGAINST SUGAR COMPANY IS HEARD.

New York, Feb. 5.—Taking of testimony in the trial of the action brought against the American Sugar Refining company by the government, alleging fraud in the weighing of shipments during the past six years, was begun today before Judge Holt in the United States district court. The amount of custom duties in arrears sought to be recovered is $2,124,121.

VERMONT'S SHOOTERS HOIST THEIR LAUREL.

Gibraltar, Feb. 5.—The new "battle efficiency" flag, created as a trophy for the ship making the highest gunnery score, was hoisted on the Vermont today. The members of the crew of the battleship were drawn up on deck at general muster and, at the invitation of Rear Admiral Sperry, the division commanders, a majority of the captains, ordnance officers and gun pointers of the fleet were gathered on the quarter deck of the Vermont to witness the ceremony.

SUICIDE SUCCESSFUL.

Damp, Chill, Changing Weather Weakens the Kidneys

Changeable weather, exposure, grippe, colds and chills cause most of the kidney trouble that is so common in winter and spring. That is what causes those spells of lame back, backache, shooting pains, tired feelings, dizziness, nervousness, fits of irritability and "blues" The kidneys are clogged with impurities, set back in their great work of filtering the blood, congested, irritated or inflamed. Poisonous uric acid is collecting where it should not and setting up disturbances and pain. Cure the weakened kidneys—set them working right again. No need to experiment. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, which have proved their merit in thousands of cases.

"Stabbed in the Back"

Have you ever had one of those sudden twinges?

Have you ever had one of those "cricks" in the back?

Does your back ache with a dull, heavy draggy throb?

Is it hard to straighten up after stooping?

Hard to get up from a chair, or turn in bed?

Is the urine dark-colored? Passages too frequent, scanty or scalding?

Your kidneys need attention. Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has cured thousands.

Backache Gives You Warning of Treacherous Kidney Ills

Backache is likely to be the first sign noticed of kidney disorders that have been coming on for months. Kidney diseases start mysteriously and make silent, rapid headway. The advanced stages—dropsy, diabetes, gravel and Bright's disease—are usually fatal. The best time to cure kidney disease is in the beginning. Notice the first stab of pain in the back, the first irregularity of the urine. Then give the weakened kidneys prompt help. Neglect may mean a serious illness. Doan's Kidney Pills strengthen weak kidneys, cure bad backs, clear and regulate the urine, and restore natural kidney action. They relieve quickly and cure permanently.

DULUTH TESTIMONY PROVES THAT DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE SICK KIDNEYS

DULUTH PROOF

H. G. Hibke, 1123 Woodland avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble which I believe was brought on by constant driving and exposure to all kinds of weather. Severe pains in the small of my back made stooping or lifting difficult, and every could I caught settled in my kidneys, aggravating the complaint. I was subject to headaches and the kidney secretions often became highly colored and irregular in passage. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and today not a symptom of my trouble remains.

The above statement was given on Oct. 20, 1904, and on Nov. 20, 1908, Mr. Hibke added: "Since using Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago I have had no need of a kidney remedy. I willingly confirm all I have previously said about this preparation, as I know it is very effective in cases of kidney complaint."

DULUTH PROOF

Mrs. M. McGillivray, 1228½ Superior St., Duluth, Minn., says: "The statements I have previously given in favor of Doan's Kidney Pills have fully expressed my opinion of this remedy and at this time I gladly confirm all I have previously said."

On Oct. 20, 1904, Mrs. McGillivray gave the following statement: "Kidney complaint clung to me for a year or more and I suffered from dull, heavy pains through the small of my back. I also had headaches, did not rest well at night and was annoyed by irregular passages of the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the first and soon freed me from my trouble. I have had no need of a kidney remedy since."

DULUTH PEOPLE TELL HOW DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE BAD BACKS

DULUTH PROOF

Thomas G. Thompson, 624 West Second St., Duluth, Minn., says: "I was in poor health for several months and suffered a great deal from pains in the small of my back. I had often heard Doan's Kidney Pills recommended as a cure for such trouble, and believing that my kidneys were disordered, I decided to try this remedy. After using one box, I was improved in every way and since that time I have had no further need of a kidney remedy. As I have found that Doan's Kidney Pills, live up to the claims made for them, I do not hesitate to give this indorsement."

DULUTH PROOF

Mrs. O. B. Olsen, 517½ rear West Fourth street, Duluth, Minn., says: "I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they gave me such prompt relief from backache that I do not hesitate to recommend them. This remedy has also been used with good effect in my little daughter's case, and I know of several other instances where great benefit has been derived from its use."

CONCERNING WOMAN.

"For the working women of Minnesota I bespeak you individual interest; whatever assistance you can give her; your assistance in establishing in Minnesota a women's bureau of labor, assistance in securing better ventilation, and most of all the education of public opinion to keep the well-to-do girl in the home and to keep all girls of 16 to 18 years out of the industrial world."

Thus did Mrs. Perry Starkweather of the state department of labor close her talk this morning before the women at the public library, where she spoke on the conditions of the working women of Minnesota and what might be done by Duluth women to better conditions.

Mrs. Starkweather made a strong and eloquent plea for keeping girls out of the industrial world. "There is no higher law than public opinion," said the speaker. "It is paramount. By that alone, laws which are now on the statute books, are enforced when they are really unconstitutional. And it rests with you women here to make public opinion. It is deplorable that we are, and with justice, being called a nation of neurotics. The children are highly organized and nervous, unable to meet the demands of life. And it is due directly to the employment of the great per cent of the women of our nation in the industrial world. In Minnesota more than 50 per cent of the women are in the business world. Perhaps 10 per cent of the remainder are of the very wealthy leisure class and another 10 per cent may be in ill health. That leaves only 30 per cent of the women for healthy mothers.

"If the girl of well to do parents would stay at home and learn to cook and help her mother, conditions would be greatly improved among the girls, who through pressing poverty, must enter the world to gain a livelihood. The girl with the home and parents to care for her, who enters the business world brings a very serious problem with her. She has her money to spend upon herself, and the girl who is unable to do so is brought face to face with temptations which you can little realize. You can do much by creating public opinion in the matter of keeping girls at home.

"Another thing we must work for, is to keep the girl of less than 18 out of the business world. I have visited many of the hospitals and homes of the state where are cared for the girls to whom motherhood comes as a shame rather than a glory, and the average age of these mothers is little more than 17 years. At an age when they should have had about them the strong protection of the state, they faced the temptations of the world of which they were woefully ignorant. You can do much by creating public opinion, to keep the child women out of the business world."

Mrs. Starkweather spoke further of the efforts to have established proper ventilation in factories and stores, the efforts to establish a women's department of the state bureau of labor in which a woman shall be in charge, and women inspectors of factories provided, and of the early closing laws. Mrs. Starkweather said the oft-given reasons for store remaining open Saturday night for the laboring man was "the rankest fallacy ever pronounced." The union man wants eight hours of labor for himself" said the speaker "and he doesn't want fifteen hours for women. But the shop keeper is not remaining open Saturday evenings for his health or because it pleases him especially. He thinks he is answering a public need and only public opinion will bring him to realize his mistake."

Mrs. Starkweather was well received and her audience was keenly interested in the subject which she so ably presented.

Dr. F. J. Patton, health commissioner, also spoke. Dr. Patton told in detail of the proposed medical inspection of school children which has been so much discussed recently in the city. He also spoke of the need of visiting district nurses, the abatement of the smoke nuisance, and the needs of associated charities, all matters pertinent to the health of the city.

During the afternoon Mrs. James and Miss Frankenfield read the beautiful fourth act of "Brand," and seldom has a local reading received the compliment of such close and interested attention. NEW WEAVES.

The Spring Materials That Are Fashionable.

One of the most beautiful of the new materials for late winter and spring is an embossed mousseline de soie, which is a plain mousseline woven with sprays of roses, hydrangeas, lilies, peach blossoms, irises or marguerites, in silk velvet. Silver designs will be popular throughout the year. Though it is still too early to speak of summer goods, it is safe to say that flowered calico will be the favorite material of the summer.

The old calico patterns which have not been in use for twenty or thirty years, are now being woven for the season of 1909, and allthat is dainty and distinctly feminine in wearing apparel will predominate in the present year, with much that is practical and common sense. White will hold its own for summer wear and pique will be worn a great deal. This is good news, for, no matter how beautiful a linen suit may be, the eternal need of pressing it detracts from the pleasure of its possession. The majority of the advance summer gowns are in one piece—empire, directoire or princess.

Among the new materials for spring which are piled upon the counters at present, there is the usual number of new and attractive weaves. The wool goods are somewhat of a surprise after the long vogue of checks and stripes and the blotches generally of every possible combination. They are most of solid color and dark for the early spring season. English coarse tweeds and cheviots are quite out of the run as yet. Of the homespuns with smoky peat odor which permeated them when they were woven in peasant homes, nothing at all is seen as yet.

WELL-BRED PEOPLE

Are Quiet, Interested, Gracious and Reserved.

The well-bred girl does not gossip nor carry tales nor talk scandal. All the other girls may do it, and it may seem quite harmless and amusing, but it is something that the girl of truly refined feelings finds revolting.

If for no other reason, a girl should shun talk that she would not be willing to stand by, because it often leads to unpleasant scenes and involves others in a network of disagreeableness that is anything but a sign of good breeding.

The well-bred girl is not boastful, aggressive nor unduly self-assertive. Above all she is not a toady. There is no surer sign of lack of breeding than to strive to curry favor with one who, by force of circumstances, may have more money or influence than you have.

Gushing or disclosing one's private affairs to a scoffing world is anything but well-bred. A quiet, interested gracious manner that has its reserves leaves no doubt as to the claims of a girl or woman to good breeding.

Above all, the well-bred girl avoids scraps of any kind. She does not do things that are open to question, knowing that no girl can afford to ignore public opinion and get herself talked about.

The well-bred birl is the self-respecting girl; she will no more permit impertinences than she would think of offering them. She knows she is a lady and asks no more than to act the part and to be treated as a lady should be.

No one ever heard of a girl of good breeding speak of herself as well-bred. It is too much a matter of course, as much a part of her as eyes or hand.

COLORED BORDERS.

Handkerchief With Touch of Color is Proper.

Each month sees the colored handkerchief used more than the all-white one. The borders are in the different tones of the new colors, with pink lavender, blue and jade green leading.

They look attractive and seem to fit in with the color scheme of this season better than the plain white ones do.

They have an embroidered initial in the corner, usually inclosed in a circle, which is so much prettier than a wreath. The latter has been so steadily used in coarse, cheap handkerchiefs that one does not want it on fine, white linen. The broad circle is attractive, artistic, and fashionable.

Since it has become the fashion to allow the corners of a handkerchief to stick out of a coat pocket, the borders have taken on the new, dark tone to harmonize with the suit.

Among these the most stylish are emerald green, sapphire, blue and Egyptian red.

the EVENING STORY

THE HALLOWAY SKELETONS

By R. C. Pitzer.

(Copyrighted. All rights reserved.)

Massey entered the library, where his weazen, cynical uncle sat, and, after a momentary hesitation, drew a Morris chair near the grate. The uncle nodded and continued his nightly ceremony at the altar of nicotine. During every evening since his adoption into the bachelor's household Massey had passed an hour or more in silent reflection as he watched the gray smoke curl downward into the fireplace; and of late this enforced attendance on a whim had grown very irksome to him. It had become deeper than a mere annoyance, and this night in particular was hard to bear silently.

While the uncle puffed and scowled, Massey leaned his head against the chair back and started into the flickering fire.

Only that day he had asked the old gentleman for money, he wanted the next quarter's allowance advanced to him—a miserly amount at best, but for Rodney Halloway was a close-fisted man. Of course the money was refused. Massey had his own newly-painted and dusty law office; let him look to that for an extra income. Massey's thoughts ran on the very young, very foolish act that had placed him almost in a criminal position, and he groaned aloud.

"What an idiot I've been," he said, "not knowing he would hesitate long before refusing me. Not having a father, I must come to you. At least, you will acknowledge that heretofore my life has not been one of dissipation?"

"No," Halloway returned, as he stood up and quietly laid his pipe in its place on the mantel, "you have not been riotous. Partly for that reason, I have expected some such sudden tempest as this; and I have long had my mind made up. I will not do that least good to argue with me, sir. Either tell me why you wish this money—make me your full confidant, or let matters take their course. When the exposure comes, as I am confident it will, I will then be in a position to judge for myself, and if I descide that any help I can give will not be thrown away, I shall help you. When one begins to go to the dogs, one needs a severe lesson. That lesson you have."

He slowly crossed the room and stood at the door, looking back with a wrinkle of amusement between his eyes.

"Never cry, nephew," he said; "the Halloway blood is showing, and we must give it a chance for itself. Good-night."

Massey did not reply, nor did he look up when the door closed, and he was left alone. His thoughts were very black, and the reminiscences into which he unconsciously fell but tended to increase his anger against Rodney Halloway.

In late childhood Massey had been brought from a boarding school to his uncle's home; he always had been considered the heir of the house, and he looked upon the Halloway money as in some sort his own. As for his parents, he believed, from some unguarded expressions dropped from time to time, that they had constituted Halloway their son's guardian. Often Massey fancied that they must have left at least a little money behind, but he could gain no knowledge of any inheritance. Sometimes his thoughts of his cynical uncle were tinged with vague suspicions; but he had always put them by as unworthy. Now, however, they haunted him persistently.

"When I was a boy," he thought, "why did uncle always hint and joke about my inheritance? Why did he make me believe that he held father's fortune in trust? Then, when I was 21, he told me I had nothing but what he chose to leave me; that is, everything, if I was content to consider him my father. Everything?—nothing!" he muttered, half aloud, and sprang to his feet.

He paced back and forth over the rugs, while the clock called the quarters and the hour grew late. Suddenly the young man stopped and struck his hands together. When a boy, he had once seen a package of papers in the old desk in the corner, and his uncle had laughingly told him that that was his fortune; everything his mother had left him. Why had he forgotten so completely? Why had he so suddenly remembered? It were almost as if the time were ripe—as if his mother were calling him to receive his own.

He vacillated from one mood to another, now bodly examining the desk, and now moodily pacing the floor; but the desire grew stronger and stronger upon him. Why not? What harm could it do? Were his uncle in his place, would Rodney Halloway hesitate? To his weakness this seemed convincing argument, and he attacked the desk.

The old lock easily gave way to the pressure of a button-hook, and Massey searched through the pigeon holes. The desk seemed empty, but, after a moment, behind a locked drawer, the young man found a half-secret compartment, and there a small, dust-covered packet lay.

Massey trembled with irrespressible eagerness and anxiety as he closed the desk and returned to his seat. His lips twitched convulsively, and his breath grew labored.

The outer covering removed, Massey found himself in possession of a number of age-stained letters, and a hasty search convinced him that there was no foolscap or other legal-appearing paper among them. Somewhat disappointed, he turned to the beginning, where he found one of his uncle's cards. On the back was penned:

"Jennie's contribution to the Halloway skeleton. Massey's letters, and his locked closet; every one has his skeleton. Do not imagine that you stand alone. Your trouble, whatever it is—"

"But, uncle," Massey protested, "you have already acknowledged my request to be a business one. You will keep it on that basis, won't you?"

"Certainly," Halloway returned, soberly; "but perhaps you have a skeleton none the less; at least, you will some day have one. Let me tell you how I laid my ghost. I, too, had a familiar that haunted me, and in time I found that another knew of my trouble; money seemed necessary to close that man's mouth, and I tried to get money. I failed. Then, half by accident, I become convinced that my enemy—or business antagonist, let us say—had his own locked closet. I explored it, with the result that my own secret became perfectly safe."

"And your advice," Massey said, with a bitter smile, "is for me to ferret out my enemys' skeleton—always providing I ever have an enemy? Of course, your theory is that all men have done something that would cause them to be ostracized, imprisoned, mobbed or executed, were it made public. The theory has its weak points."

"I've heard or read of such an argument as this," Halloway reflected; "it ended in one of the disputants writing an anonymous note to his rector, urging him to fly before all was made public. The rector was never heard of again."

Massey impatiently moved his chair. "And this is aside from the question," he said, with growing irritability. "Whether for business or bribery, I must have money. You have never known me to prefer such a request before, though you have educated me in the belief that I am to be your heir. I've always tried to be a son to you, sir; I've always bowed to your least wishes. If I had a father I would go to him, and I am sure he would hesitate long before refusing me. Not having a father, I must come to you. At least, you will acknowledge that heretofore my life has not been one of dissipation?"

"No," Halloway returned, as he stood up and quietly laid his pipe in its place on the mantel, "you have not been riotous. Partly for that reason, I have expected some such sudden tempest as this; and I have long had my mind made up. I will not do that least good to argue with me, sir. Either tell me why you wish this money—make me your full confidant, or let matters take their course. The outer covering removed, Massey found himself in possession of a number of age-stained letters, and a hasty search convinced him that there was no foolscap or other legal-appearing paper among them. Somewhat disappointed, he turned to the beginning, where he found one of his uncle's cards. On the back was penned:

"Jennie's contribution to the Halloway skeleton. Massey's letters, and hers. What shall we do with them?"

Massey blankly stared at the card. His eagerness was all gone, and instead a gloomy foreboding of disappointment stole over him, mingled with an anxious fear of coming misfortune. Hastily summoning his resolution, he opened the first discolored note. It began without preface.

"Rodney," it read, "for God's sake take care of the child. Bring him up so that the world may respect him—so that he may respect himself. Withdraw out a lawful father, without inheritance or name, what will become of him unless you take him? Remember, however born, he is still your nephew—he is a Halloway, Rodney, and must not be forsaken."

Massey read no further. He crumpled the letter in his hand and threw it into the fire. The packet was on his lap, and in his sudden rage almost destroyed that, too, but he checked himself as he leaned forward with upraised hand. For a time he gazed into the fire, and then his hand slowly sank to his side, while he became lost in a somber reverie. Gradually, however, his sensitive lips grew hard, his eyes narrowed into oriental slits, and into his face sprang the Halloway expression, the look of bitter strength and cynical amusement that made him seem a young counterpart of his uncle.

His reverie ended, Massey quietly went to the desk and replaced the packet, but, as he withdrew his hand, it touched a minute knob. The pressure released a hidden spring, and the false bottom of the compartment moved slightly. Massey uttered a smothered exclamation, pushed the slide away and plunged his hand into the narrow opening. Another packet of papers—older, more stained and torn than the first—rewarded him. Without moving from his place, he plunged into a hasty perusal of them. An almost inaudible chuckle behind him caused him to whirl about and face Rodney Halloway, who stood beaming upon him.

The old gentleman was in a dressing gown and slippers, and his thin, wrinkled face looked out sardonically from beneath his fez smoking cap.

"He, he," Halloway chuckled, "you have your mother's memory, my child. Irat her fancied you would read the papers some day. Now we understand each other better. Pride goeth before a fall," he piously quoted. "We will sit down and hear all about the other matter, if you please. Stay—go to my bedroom and bring me the check book and wallet on my table. I rather fancy I'll see my way to help you. You'll be willing to tell me what you have done."

"Speaking of skeletons," Massey quietly said, "reminds me of this packet here. What was your advice, uncle? To ferret out the other man's skeleton, was it not? These old letters from—he held—let me see—well, no matter. This canceled note, now—"

Halloway interrupted him with a startled exclamation, and took a step forward, his hands outspread. The two men glared at each other, the same expression on their faces, until the elder dropped his arms and smoothed the wrinkles from his face.

"The Halloway bud has bloomed," he smiled. "Gad, I feel as if I had confronted the ghost of my dead self. I have reconsidered, nephew. If you will get my check book, please, we'll lay these skeletons. And, by the way," he added, as his nephew started towards the door, "you are so decidedly a Halloway that I see no reason to chanueg my will."

MRS. GEORGE KEPPEL,
One of the Intimate Friends of King Edward, Who Has Just Reported That She Was Robbed by a Man and Woman in Piccadilly During a Heavy Fog.

PLACES CHILD UPON A RED HOT STOVE.

Stanton, Ill., Feb. 5.—Julius Greenwalt, a coal miner, at this city, narrowly escaped rough handling at the hands of an enraged mob Wednesday night by being spirited away by the police of the village. Greenwalt placed the 4-year-old child of the lady, with whom he boarded, on the top of a red hot stove, because the child annoyed him. He was arrested later, and a number of his fellow workers heard of the act and started to give him what they thought he deserved.

Instead of taking Greenwalt to the jail, the village marshal hid him in a restaurant near the interurban station, and when a car arrived, he was rushed on board and brought to Carlinville, where he will await the action of the grand jury.

At the price that the market man unblushingly asks for shrimps, it would have to be just one or two on a single lettuce leaf.

RACE QUESTION STIRS ASSEMBLY

Resolution to Discharge Blacks Is Referred to Committee.

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb. 5.—After a warm debate on the race question, as it affects politics in Missouri, the lower branch of the general assembly today disposed of a resolution providing for the discharge of most of the negro employes of the house, by referring it to a committee. The vote was 61 to 52, the balloting being on strict party lines. The resolution was caused by the allegation that a negro employee of the house had insulted a white employe of the senate.

Representative Jesse J. Duncan presented the resolution, which asked for the discharge of all negro employes of the house, except those whose duties included the cleaning of spittoons.

A wide discussion of race equality followed, and then a motion by Hiram Lloyd of St. Louis, referring the resolution to the clerical force committee prevailed.

HERMIT THOUGHT TO BE INSANE

Civil War Veteran Lived All Alone at Fond du Lac.

Jonas Straus, who for over fifteen years made his home alone at Fond du Lac, will be examined in probate court this afternoon for insanity.

A veteran of the Civil war, 72 years old, Straus' mind has finally given out under the strain of irregular habits and old age. He fell and hurt his head a few years ago, and that also is believed to have contributed to his mental condition.

Straus was born in Pennsylvania, and served in Company G, Fifty-sixth New York, during the war. He enlisted Jan. 4, 1864, and was honorably discharged Oct. 17, 1865. He is a member of Willis A. Gorman post, G. A. R., and the members of the post have been caring for him lately.

He has been at St. Mary's hospital for some weeks, but difficulty has been experienced in restraining him. He wants to wander around, and is also inclined to break furniture and tear things to pieces.

WEST END

WOULD FIX GARFIELD

West End Republicans Would Like to See Street Improved.

Committee Is Appointed to Look Into the Matter.

The betterment of Garfield avenue, the through team route between Duluth and Superior, was thoroughly discussed at the meeting last evening of the West End Republican club, and so impressed were the member with the need of some improvements there that a committee was appointed to confer with the public affairs committee of the Commercial club to discuss ways and means.

For many years past, there has been an agitation t oclean up Garfield avenue and make it better traveling for the many teams which go there and now the different civic organizations are taking it up.

The committee appointed by the Republicans last night comprises Alderman Peter Olson, J. W. Preston, of the board of public works, and Roy Hood.

There have been many complaints about Garfield avenue. It has been referred to as a "river of mud" and in many terms not so polite or complimentary. Teamsters who are obliged to use the thoroughfare hurl long, picturesque curses at it.

It was argued last night that there were means of securing the money for fixing the street, and that the transfer companies, the wholesale houses and the firms doing business in the street should be willing to bear part of the burden.

The West enders will confer with the public affairs committee as soon as possible.

ANNIVERSARY SALE BEGINS

Crowds Take Advantage of the Big Bargains at "Moe's."

The first anniversary sale of J. J. Moe & Sons began this morning and will continue until Saturday evening. It has been just a year since the dissolution of the old firm of Johnson & Moe and the establishment of the big West end department store known as "Moe's."

For several days the store has been closed to the public, during the inventory, preliminary to the great sale, which is now under full blast.

The store is offering a regular maze of bargains, simply outdoing all previous efforts along that line in the West end, and the way the people are responding to the splendid buying inducements offered shows appreciation for the liberal policy of the management. Every indication points to an eclipse of the big store's annual February sale last year.

LINCOLN DAY PROGRAMS.

Appropriate Exercises in West End Schools Next Week.

The centennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln will be appropriately observed with patriotic exerceses in the public schools Thursday afternoon. There will be no school sessions Friday, so the program will be given Thursday.

In all the schools of the West end exercises are to be held. At the Adams, the Emerson, the Horace Mann, the Madison, the Bryant and the Lincoln, plans are being made for proper observances. Many of the children have bought Lincoln badges and are already wearing them.

At the upper class exercises in the Adams school the principal speaker will be Rev. J. L. McBride, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church.

JEFFERY NOT SATISFIED.

Wants a Recount of Votes in the Seventh Ward.

William Jeffrey, the Republican aldermanic candidate from the Seventh ward, who was defeated by Lucien Merritt, the Democratic nominee, at the city election this week, is not satisfied with the result.

He announced, at the meeting of the West End Republican club in President Jensen's office, a determination to contest the election of Mr. Merritt by demanding a recount of the votes.

The returns showed that Merritt had a plurality of but four votes and Jeffrey is of the opinion that a recount of the votes would tell a different story.

Identity a Mystery.

The identity of the man found dead, with his throat cut and his skull fractured, under the Missabe ore docks Sunday afternoon, still remains a mystery.

The body lies unclaimed at Forward & Co.'s undertaking rooms. Unless it is identified and claimed by relatives or friends tomorrow, the remains will be buried.

West End Shortrails.

The Young Men's Sodality of St. Clement's Catholic church, which met with much success in amateur theatricals before Christmas, is preparing another play for presentation in the spring.

Frank Bender of New York Mills, Minn., is spending a few days with friends in the West end.

At the union revival services held in the First Swedish Baptist church last evening, Rev. Edwin Stromberg was the speaker. The meeting this evening will be held in the Swedish Mission church, and Rev. H. K. Madsen will be the speaker.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Hudson of Virginia, who has been the guests of Mrs. N. Nelson of Twentieth avenue west, have gone to Chicago.

The boys in the eighth grade at the Adams school have oraagnized a glee club and are planning to give a concert in the West end.

The Ladies' Aid society of Zion Norwegian Lutheran church is planning a "secret social," to be given Feb. 23.

The religious rally Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of four Scandinavian churches in the West end, will be held in the First Norwegian-Danish M. E. church. The four pastors will make short talks. It has been decided to continue the meetings next week, commencing Tuesday evening.

The Gopher Glee club gave a roller skating party last evening at the Lincoln Park rink.

T. W. Robinson, the Northern Pacific engineer, who was thrown from his cab recently, has recovered from his injuries sufficiently to leave the hospital and go to his home.

The marriage at Brainerd this week of Emil Palmquist, a Northern Pacific engineer, and Miss Mary Swayles of this place, has been announced. After a trip to St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. Palmquist will make their home in the West end.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Griffin, aged 64 years, who died Wednesday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Mires of Twenty-fourth avenue west, will be held from there tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. Rev. R. J. Mooney will be in charge of the services, and the interment will take place at Forest Hill. She leaves a husband, three daughters and one son.

Everything drinkable. Telephone Sterling Wine company.

ORATORY IS UNLOADED

County Board Hears Vigorous Speeches on Many Subjects.

Saloon Keeper in Town of French Warmly Roasted.

Thirty or thirty-five separate petitions, similar to the one published in another column of The Herald this evening from people in Duluth and range towns, were presented to the county board this morning asking that St. Louis county provide some hospital facilities for its tuberculosis patients.

The communications were received, but no action was taken by the board.

Much oratory was unloaded on the county board this morning, but little actual business was done before adjournment was taken at noon. The school question brought out most of the speech-making, but William H. French, who applied for a saloon license in the town of French, came in for a vigorous scoring.

W. D. Bailey, appearing for the Virginia & Rainy Lake company, entered an objection to the granting of the license. He said French had secured a license once before and had demoralized the camps of the Virginia & Rainy Lake company in that vicinity. He was convicted of violation of the liquor laws and his license revoked, but he was afterwards convicted again of conducting a blind pig. He then applied for a license in Itasca county, proposing to move just across the line, but he was balked by the company. Now he seeks to secure a right to sell liquor from St. Louis county again.

Mr. Bailey pointed out that the only people to whom French could cater, would be the employes of the company. There are three camps, employing about 500 men, in the vicinity of the place, where French proposes to operate, and four train crews run in there daily. He said the conditions would be worse now than they were before and he asked the board that the license be not granted.

Only one bid was received for the present site of the courthouse, the proposed sale of which was advertised during the past month on authority from the board. N. J. Upham & Co. bid $13,000, with the provision that the county should pay $200 a month rental during the period the courthouse was occupied before the comletion of the new building. The bid was for cash in thirty days. No action was taken on it this morning.

John H. Mather of 10 East Fifth street applied for the position of janitor of the new courthouse, and George A. Bennison asked that he be given the cigar and news stand privilege.

On suggestion from the state auditor that an appraiser of state lands be appointed by the board, Charles Peterson was appointed.

The clerk announced that John G. Williams and John H. Hearding had qualified as members or the county school board. They, with Supt. of Schools S. W. Gilpin, make up the board to control the proposed new agricultural school.

The sum of $1,200 was set aside for the aid of the Duluth Humane society in its work. The sum will be paid in installments of $100 monthly.

EMPLOYED BY WHEELER

Civic League Leader Hired Detectives in Saloon Cases.

Came From a Private Detective Agency in Minneapolis.

Harry W. Ward, J. P. Brandt and George W. Johnson are the names of the three detectives who secured evidence in the fourteen cases brought against local saloon keepers, hotel and restaurant proprietors for the illegal sale of liquor, and they were employed by Bert N. Wheeler. They are connected with a private detective agency of Minneapolis.

These facts were brought out before Judge Cutting, in municipal court this morning, during the trial of Charles Carlson, charged with selling liquor on Sunday, in violation of law, at 509 West Superior street. Jan. 24 is the date of the alleged offense. The evidence was not all in at noon, and the case was continued until this afternoon.

Three of the liquor cases were set for yesterday afternoon, but none of them was taken up. The Carlson case is the first to be taken up. It will be immediately followed by either the Spalding hotel or Haley restaurant case, and all fourteen complaints will be taken up in order, until they all have been disposed of. Attorney McMahon is acting for the defense, and Assistant City Attorney Kenny is prosecuting attorney.

The cases are brought under the new city ordinance, under which a jury trial is not allowed. Most of the morning was taken up in getting evidence from the three detectives. On the witness stand they appeared to be possessed with a very big idea of their own importance, and became so flippant at times that it became necessary for the judge to tone them down a bit, and tell them to confine themselves to answering questions put to them.

Ward testified that he did not know where he was born. Brandt, who seemed to be leader of the three, testified that he was employed in Colorado during the big miners' strike there a few years ago. They said they had purchased intoxicants in Carlson's place on the Sunday in question. All three testified along the same line in this connection.

FURNITURE DISAPPEARS

Where Are the Furnishings Bought by the County?

The county board wants to know what has become of the hardwood tables, sideboards, and the like purchased when the houses formerly located on the site of the new courthouse were condemned last June.

At that time, all fixtures were purchased from the owners of the houses.

Fixtures valued at $3,000 have now disappeared from one house and the board wants to know where they have gone. W. J. Stevenson, attorney for the board, has looked around for them, but in his report to the board he says they are not to be found.

A committee has been appointed to look into the matter.

Another Assault in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 5.—Shortly after noon a report reached the police of another assault upon a young girl in the Herron Hill district.

CITY WOULD RECOVER

Files Suit for $34,200 From Interstate Traction Company.

Claims That Corporation Violated Terms of the Charter.

For the recovery of $34,200 alleged to be due the city from the Interstate Traction company on account of that corporation having ignored section 463 of the city charter, City Attorney C. S. Wilson today filed papers in a suit for the stated amount with T. H. Presnell of the federal court.

Section 463 provides for the filing with the comptroller on the first Monday in February of each year, by corporations holding city franchises, a sworn statement setting forth the actual cost of running the plant, the actual debts and obligations, the net income after deducting the expenses and the amount of stock each holder owns. The section also provides for a forfeit of $100 for each day elapsing after the failure to file the report.

Last year the company did not file the report until thirty-five days after the time set forth in the section of the city charter, and even when it was filed, it was not satisfactory.

The statement was not sworn to, neither were many of the facts required by the charter set forth.

Suit has therefore been brought for the sum of $34,200.

Knows Nothing of Cases.
In regard to the report that five Chisholm families are in want, Mayor Haven, chairman of the fire relief committee, says no word of such a state of things has been communicated to him, or any member of the relief committee. If the cases are a result of the fire, he says there is still money on hand for the relief of the families, but thinks it strange the local committee has not reported, if the people really are entitled to relief.

New Place of Meeting.
The Hillside Improvement club has secured the Polish hall, corner of Fourth avenue east and Fourth street, as a place for holding future meetings. The site for the proposed new hillside fire hall will be taken up at the meeting next week.

Vagrancy Charge.
William Fox was sentenced to forty days in jail this morning on a vagrancy charge. He was arrested a month or two ago, but was released in municipal court upon the understanding that he would leave Duluth and stay away. The attractions of this city proved too strong, however, and he returned, only to be arrested again yesterday. He is suspected of having committed thefts in the past, and the police regard him as being a generally undesirable character.

New Pavement.
Property owners, who petitioned for the paving of East Sixth street with tar macadam, from Woodland to Wallace streets, this morning submitted a communication to the board of public works asking that, in view of the city's trouble with Warren Bros. over tar macadam patents, bids be asked for on Telford macadam and patent granitoid for paving the street.

Costume Ball.

Mayor Bats Home Run.
Mayor R. D. Haven and W. E. Richardson joined the business men's physical culture class at the Y. M. C. A. this week, and now their associates are all asking them if they are afflicted with rheumatism. Both men went at the exercise too hard the first day, and their stiffened muscles almost laid them up in consequence, but they are sticking to the class, just the same. The mayor batted a home run in an indoor baseball game after the exercise yesterday.

Committee Will Meet.

POOR FISHER BOY GETS $600,000

Receives Fortune From Mother Whom He Cannot Remember.

San Sebastian, Spain, Feb. 5.—A poor fisherboy of San Sebastian named Le Jabeita, has inherited a fortune under the most romantic circumstances.

Upon returning from a cruise in a fishing schooner he was met on the wharf by two strangers who asked him if he knew who his parents were. The boy replied that he had been brought up by the parish and was ignorant of his origin.

The strangers then told him they were the executors of the will of his mother, an American woman, who died a few weeks ago in Mundaca, near Bilboa, leaving him $600,000.

TORNADO STRIKES MISSISSIPPI

Four Persons Killed and Heavy Loss of Property.

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 5.—A telephone message received here this afternoon states that a tornado struck the town of Rolling Fork, Sharkey county, today, and that four persons had been killed. Up to this time it has been impossible to secure details. The report states that there has been a heavy property loss in addition to the fatalities.

Rolling Fork is a town of about 1,200 inhabitants and the county seat of Sharkey county.

Hits Arkansas.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 5.—A dispatch to the News Scimitar, from Stuttgart, Ark., says a storm struck that place today, killing two persons and injuring a number of others. Two residences and a barn were blown down.

WILD TURKEY HIS SPECIALTY.

Philadelphia Record: Daniel K. Coder of Calvin, Huntington county, is a hunter with a predilection for shooting wild turkeys. He has killed two this year, weighing 19½ and 19 pounds respectively. This leaves him free to shoot two more before the close of the season, and these he expects to get quite handily.

Mr. Coder is the most successful wild turkey hunter in the central part of the state, as his own record show that since he began gunning for them over thirty years ago he has shot 291. In one year he got twenty-one and in another nineteen, which were his banner records. Under the present law the limit is four a year.

BURYING CABLES IN RIVER.

Marine Journal: It seems odd that telegraph and telephone companies should be forced to bury their cables in the bed of a large river, yet this became necessary in places along the Ohio during the recent drought.

The river was so low that boys could and did play ball in the very channel bed, and the exposure left the telephone cables entirely unprotected. To avoid a repetition of the incident, therefore, the companies have dug trenches in the river bed, in which the cables have been securely covered.

The Old Way

Manufacturers sell their product to brokers; brokers take their profit, and sell to jobbers; jobbers take their profit and sell to retailers; retailers take their profit and sell to consumers.

The New Way

Manufacturers sell direct to Barthe-Martin Co., and Barthe-Martin Co. sell to you.

Why pay your money "the old way"?

Wake up, to the fact that you can get fresher, better and newer stock for less money when you buy direct, than by buying through several who take the profits, deliver old and shelf-worn goods.

FRICASSE RABBIT.

Clean two young rabbits, cut into joints and soak in salt and water half an hour. Put into a saucepan with a pint of cold water a bunch of sweet herbs, an onion finely minced, a pinch of mace, half a nutmeg, a pinch of pepper and half a pound of salt pork cut in small thin slices. Cover and stew until tender. Take out rabbits and set on a dish where they will keep warm. Add to the gravy a cup of cream or milk, two well beaten eggs, stirred in a little at at time, a tablespoonful of butter, and a thickening made of a tablespoonful of flour and a little milk. Boil up once; remove the saucepan from the fire, squeeze in the juice of a lemon, stirring all the while, and pour over the rabbits. Do not cook the head or neck.

CHARLOTTE RUSSE.

Whip one quart of rich cream to a stiff froth and drain well on a nice sieve. To one scant pint of milk add six eggs beaten very lightly; make very sweet, flavor high with vanila. Cook over hot water until it is a thick custard. Soak one full ounce of Gelatine into a very little water and warm over hot water. When the custard is very cold beat in lightly the geintine and the whipped cream. Line the bottom of your mold with buttered paper, to slide with sponge cake or lady fingers fastened together with the white of an egg. Fill with the cream, put in a cold place, or in summer on ice. Turn out, dip the mold for a moment in hot water. In draining the whipped cream all that drips through can be re-whipped.

SPEAKER RAPS MINISTERS' BODY

Invites Pastor to Pray Whom Association Has Barred.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 5.—The city of Madison and the local Ministerial association got a hard rap today when at the opening of the assembly Speaker Bancroft left the chair and introduced a resolution inviting Rev. Thomas Foulkes, who is not a member of the Ministerial association to offer prayer. The resolution passed.

Mr. Bancroft said, in speaking of Madison, "It wants all the money to come but allows none of it to go outside of the corporate limits." He appealed from the decision of Rev. Howard Gold, president of the Ministerial association, that Foulkes could not be placed on the list. Bancroft said he was impressed by the significance of the reverend gentleman's name.

"I know that the Rev. Mr. Gold is one of the most highly esteemed and estimable gentlemen, and that his name is absolutely above reproach," said Bancroft. "I am sure that in this country today there is not a single man more highly esteemed or more often referred to by our people in terms of highest praise than 'Gold.' Nevertheless, the nature of the refusal carries my mind back over the centuries to the good old days of Jerusalem, the city of David, when the democratic double standard prevailed, when Caiphas was high priest in the temple and he entered into a covenant with one Judas Iscariot to betray his Savior for thirty pieces of silver.

"The Madison Ministerial association should not be singled out for criticism for having adopted the sentiment that when one is in Rome he should do as the Romans do. Everything in this capital city seems to be controlled in the same way."

MINNESOTA FOOD LAW IS UPHELD

State Supreme Court Affirms Decision Against Oil Company.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—The pure food law of Minnesota was upheld by the state supreme court today when it affirmed the decision of the Hennepin district court, which granted judgment in favor of Jacob Meshbesher against the Channelene Oil & Manufacturing company, in an action for damages on account of sickness caused from eating oil sold by the defendant concern.

Another phase of the decision is to make the manufacturer, instead of the dealer, liable for violations of the act.

The defendant sold the oil to a retail grocer of Minneapolis and the plaintiff purchased a quarter of it for cooking purposes. It was guaranteed to obe pure, but an analysis showed it consisted of 40 per cent of mineral oil and 60 per cent of cotton seed oil. In the lower court the plaintiff was awarrded $99 damages.

The court also holds that even though there was no expressed warranty that the oil was pure, the defendant was liable in an implied warranty, since it was sold for cooking purposes.

WHEAT HAS A DECLINE

Options Are Off Half a Point in Duluth Market.

Flax Has an Easier Tone During the Session Here.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 5.—Lower cables, liberal shipments from Argentina and a general bearish feeling in America caused wheat prices to weaken today. Closing prices were fractionally lower than yesterday's in all of the American markets.

Argentine shipments of wheat were 5,564,000 bu, against 4,696,000 bu last week and 5,720,000 bu a year ago.

Liverpool closed ⅝d to ¾d lower. Budapest ¼c higher and Berlin ¼c lower.

The May option closed ½c lower in Duluth, ¾c lower in Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City, ⅝c lower in Minneapolis and New York and ⅝c off in Winnipeg. The July option closed ½c lower in Duluth, a shade off in Chicago, ¾c lower in Minneapolis, New York and St. Louis, unchanged in Kansas City and ⅝c lower in Winnipeg.

May corn closed a shade higher in Chicago and unchanged to ⅛d lower in Liverpool. May oats closed unchanged in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat—The disappointing American cables yesterday, together with the heavier Argentine shipments than were expected, and the heavy increase in the visible supply there, caused some pressure at the opening, with values ⅝d lower, although the undertone was steady. Following the opening and during the early trading, firmness developed as offerings became lighter and prices showed a gain of ⅛d to ⅜d, the principal strength being in the near-by month. The disappointing shipments from Australia, light stocks, firmness in country markets, strength in cash, and particularly La Plata, caused shorts to cover. Toward midday, however, there was another reaction, the less active demand for both cargoes and parcels, and prices at this time were unchanged from the opening at ⅝d lower than yesterday.

"Corn was steady at the start and unchanged. Later, values lost ⅛d, owing to more liberal offerings of La Plata."

Car receipts at Duluth were 12, against 76 last year, and at Minneapolis 269, against 205 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 281 against 281 last year. Chicago received 16 against 11 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 462,000 bu; last year, 450,000 bu. Shipments, 214,000 bu; last year, 528,000.

Primary receipts of corn were 485,000 bu; last year, 566,000 bu. Shipments, 505,000 bu; last year, 502,000 bu.

In Duluth, May wheat opened ⅝c lower at $1.08⅝, declined to $1.08¾, rallied to $1.09⅛, declined to $1.08⅝ and closed there, a loss of ½c from yesterday. July wheat was inactive and closed ½c lower than yesterday at $1.09⅛.

Durum wheat closed ⅝c lower and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

Flax was slightly easier. May flax opened unchanged at $1.59½, declined to $1.59¾, rallied to $1.59¼ and closed there, a loss of ¼c from yesterday. July flax opened unchanged at $1.59½, advanced to $1.59¾, declined to $1.58½ and closed there, a loss of 1c from yesterday. October flax sold at $1.53 and closed there, a loss of ½c from yesterday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Pit Sentiment Is Bearish, Owing to Liberal Shipments.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 5.—Sentiment in the wheat pit today was a trifle bearish, owing to liberal shipments during the week from Argentina, and to a small decline in the price of wheat at Liverpool. May opened ⅛ to¼c lower, at $1.09⅝ to $1.09¾, and for a time, held within that range.

After touching $1.10¼ for May, the market slumped sharply on selling brought out by the Bradstreet statement of exports for the week for the United States, the total amount being extremely light. The market closed easy, with May ¼c lower at $1.09⅝.

Wet weather throughout the corn belt caused a fairly firm tone in corn at the opening, but the market soon eased off on selling based on increased offerings of the cash grain from Nebraska. Prices at the start were unchanged to ¼c higher, with May at 63¾ to 63⅞c. Later the price declined to 63⅜@63¾.

The market held steady the balance of the day, closing steady, with May a shade higher at 63¾@⅞c.

Talk of importations of Argentine oats had a bearish effect again today on the oat market. May opened ¼c lower at 51⅞c and sold at 51⅞@52c.

Smaller receipts here of live hogs ing effect on provisions. Prices opened unchanged to 2½@5c higher.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Big Total of Wheat Reached With Aid of Argentine Shipments.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 5.—Cables came ⅜d lower this morning and Minneapolis got 269 cars against 205 a year ago. The Argentine shipments jumped to 5,584,000 bushels for the week and although this was under the corresponding week of a year ago, when 5,729,000 bushels went forward, it was nevertheless a big total of wheat. The market opened easy and May sold under $1.09. The bulls got under it and rallied it to $1.09⅜. Winnipeg received 100 cars against 84; Duluth, 12 and 76. Minneapolis elevator stocks promised a decrease of about 75,000 bushels this week. May opened $1.08¾; high, $1.09⅜; low, $1.08¾; close, $1.08⅞. July opened $1.09⅛; high, $1.09⅜; low, $1.09⅛; close, $1.09⅛@1.09¼.

Cash demand was fair at 2c over May for No. 1 northern, and May price for No. 2. There was milling inquiry for the good wheat. Close: No. 1 northern, $1.10⅜@1.10⅝; to arrive, $1.10⅜@1.10⅝; No 2 northern spot, $1.08@1.08⅝; to arrive, $1.08@1.08⅝. No. 3 wheat, $1.06⅜@1.07½. Barley, receipts, 48 cars against 5; shipments, 5. Ninety cars were on the cash tables o nearly twice as many as yesterday. Prices were softer. More was carried over again today, unsold. Close, 57@59c.

Flax receipts, 30 cars against 25; shipments, none. No. 1 flax sold ½c to 1c over Duluth May, either spot or to arrive. Close, $1.59½.

Millstuffs shipments, 1,371 tons. Millers advanced prices, reporting increasing demand, good business and quote bran in bulk at $22.00@22.50.

Flour is quoted higher in line with higher cost of wheat and is not due, millers say, to any improvement of consequence in demand. Business has improved, however, and is better than last week. Shipments 46,321 barrels; first patents, $5.40@5.60; second patents, $5.30@5.50; first clears, $4.00@4.10; second clears, $2.90@3.05.

HEARD ON THE FLOOR.

Sequel to the Romantic Story of Chicago Stock Broker.

It now appears, if news from Chicago is to be credited, that the retirement of the well known firm of stock and grain brokers, Sidney C. Love & Co., did not come about exactly as Mr. Love made it appear when he closed up his offices and paid off his obligations.

He announced that he was closing out his business because he was tired of business, he'd made enough money to satisfy him and he proposed to enjoy life with his wife by traveling and having a good time generally.

Mr. Love's brethern of the brokerage and financial cult accepted this statement with a grain of salt. They could not digest all that Mr. Love had said, but true enough, the obligations of the retiring firm were paid and the trades transferred to other firms. But everybody wondered what the real reason at the bottom of things was.

Now that curiosity is satisfied by the news that W. H. Moore, of Diamond Match and Rock Island fame, who was really the backer of the Love firm, deliberately closed out the business.

According to the Chicago Tribune, it came about in this way. Mr. Moore, being fond of Love and a sort of godfather of his firm, had a "paid up" account with Sidney C. Love & Co., which means that he had bought securities through the firm, but had left them in the broker's strong box.

"You might as well leave them in my strong box," Mr. Love probably said, "they will help my credit and you can get them any time."

Mr. Moore did and went on his way, contented in the belief that he had some $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 worth of securities safe in the Love vaults.

Then, it seems, Love got to be quite a social high flyer. He had a couple of big establishments in the East, plenty of horses, servants and other expensive necessities of life. He got to be well known in national horse show circles.

Then somebody must have tipped Mr. Moore off to the fact that his securities needed looking after, or perhaps the idea was original with Mr. Moore. At any rate, the Chicago Tribune says he discovered, upon investigation, that his store in the Love strong box had dwindled without his knowledge to a paltry $1,500,000 or so, whereat he closed up the Love concern's business, but, being a good sport, and not wanting to put the rest of the financial crowd on to the fact that he had been so easy, he kept mum, and it was announced that Love was tired of business.

The Tribune says Love was on the wrong side of both the stock and grain markets for nearly a year, although the stock market is credited with having accomplished his downfall.

GYPSIES SHOWMEN.

Journal of the Gypsy Lore Society: Nothing identifies a gypsy with certainty except his language. The true gypsy speaks Romany, and nobody but a gypsy ever speaks it. But there are other matters of great moment.

In the Orient sieve making for country farmers is entirely in the hands of the gypsies, and they make wooden spoons, bowls and such like utensils. All the common people in Syria, Egypt and parts of Persia are tattooed. The gypsies are the experts, and do most of it, even among the Bedouins.

The gypsies are the showmen of the East, where there are no circuses, theaters or concert halls. The gypsies fill their place. If people wish to buy wild animals or snakes in Egypt they go to the gypsies, who either have or catch them.

Arab gypsies from Syria and Egypt are frequently seen all over Europe. They are easily recognized by their shows music and tattoo marks. They are found all over the United States and Canada, even in Winnipeg.

A party of some thirty men, formerly sailors on the Russian cruiser Knaiz Potemkin, who have been employed in the petroleum factories in Roumania, have left for Canada. It will be remembered that the crew of the Knaiz Potemkin mutinied and many of the men took refuge in Roumania.

Hardened Toward Close, Which Was Fairly Steady and Dull.

New York, Feb. 5.—Opening transactions in stocks today were light and the price movement irregular and generally within a narrow range. Missouri Pacific and Colorado & Southern rose 1 and Wisconsin Central preferred and Twin City Rapid Transit large fractions.

Buying was confined in a few stocks and the rest of the market was barely steady while this absorption was going on. Twin Rapid Transit jumped 2¼. Traders sold the market later on rumors that E. H. Harriman was ill. Large selling orders were distributed in Reading and other active stocks.

The decline was arrested by a spurt in Brooklyn Transit from 69½ to 71¼ on the declaration of an initial dividend. That stock reacted before the recovery in the general list had done far. Union Pacific lost 1⅝. St. Paul, New York Central and Illinois Central 1. Brooklyn Union aGs advanced 2¾ and Consolidated Gas 1½. Bonds were irregular.

The market losed fairly active and dull. There were advances in Texas & Pacific of 1¾, Peoples Gas 1⅝, American Linseed preferred 1¾ and Rock Island preferred 1¼. The general market hardened a fraction in sympathy with these movements, but the tone was languid.

FRIDAY, FEB. 5, 1909.

Do not let them fool you for one minute on Butte-Montana. Hold your stock and wait for results, for when it comes you will have another Butte-Balaklava proposition. These two mines are pretty much the same only that the Butte-Montana is now a shipper of ore to the smelters and is now making enough money so that the mine pays its own way and at the same time develops new ore bodies. In a short time the owners of the Butte-Montana mine will have $100,000 in the treasury and instead of having so many shares scattered around you will find only a few to contend with and those shares will begin going into strong hands and it will not be very long before they will command a big price for all the Butte-Montana company has needed is a strong management and this they will have in a few days. I am going to deliver the goods to the people that have bought the stock and it will not be many days before the Butte-Montana will look pretty much the same to the people as the Butte-Balilaklava looms now. Here is one of the greatest propositions now before us which is an absolute sure thing. The mine is one of the best on Butte Hill and many of your best men have seen it. I understand Mr. Dwight Woodbridge has also been in this mine and you can see Wm. A. Farrlah's report at my office. This is no cheap affair. The Butte-Montana has had to go through a big struggle but every day brings us closer to the goal. We can only tell you the facts and if after you read this statement and think you had better part with your stock, then go ahead and sell it, but you will regret the day for this, I again say, is another such proposition as the Balilaklava and who were the wise men who sold this stock at $3.00? The comparison is now about the same. The Butte-Montana should make about $2,000,000 for the people at the Head of the Lakes. Wait and see. We generally win in the end.

Calumet & Sonora was listed on the Boston curb today. The East will soon be taking this issue and then you can expect much higher prices for its shares. Here is a stock worth at least $60. We are trading around $18. It only takes a little movement in the big stocks to drive this one along several points.

Calumet & Corbin strong at $2.62 bid.

Copper Queen is hard to find at $1.50 and should be bought. Black Mountain is getting down to business again and when the people begin to understand the magnitude of this proposition they will surely begin taking on the stock in chunks.

Butte & Superior is being bought in Butte. Buy it.

Carman closed $2.00 bid and is well taken.

Again I say Butte-Montana will soon be one of the most active stocks on the board. To my friends I say keep on buying the stock and you will all thank me shortly.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 5.—Barrett & Zimmerman report: Market less active in tone than a week ago, with values $5.00@10.00 lower owing to the large number of consignments left over from the mid-week sale. Several carload shipments, which were held in the country on account of the recent storm, are beginnig to arrive with horses of all classes and the market is well supplied.

On account of the large supply of horses on the market, dealers do not look for any advance in values until after the next Wednesday auction. Farm mares and good mules have the call.

HOSPITAL IS DESIRED

Tuberculosis Committee Will Take Matter Up With County Board.

State Association Looks With Favor on the Cottage Plan.

In order to secure for St. Louis county a hospital, for the care of consumptives, the Minnesota association for the prevention and relief of tuberculosis, has taken the matter up and will at the next meeting of the county commissioners ask that they make some provision for a public hospital, built on the cottage plan.

With this end in view, they are sending out letters, which they ask shall be signed by the taxpayers and mailed in to the board so that the matter will come up for discussion at the next meeting.

The letter is as follows:

"Last year there were 173 deaths from tuberculosis in the county, representing a much higher death rate than in the state at large. Looking ahead a few years there will soon be 200 deaths. This number of deaths represents a tuberculous population of about 1,000 persons. About one-fourth, or 250 of these persons, or fifty of the deaths are of the destitute and vagrant class—a class which the poor authorities should care for and restrain in institutions at any cost. But we, as citizens, are mainly interested in the care of the remaining three-fourths or about 750 cases, most of which are among persons of modest means and the self-respecting poor.

"Of these cases eventually at least half should be given institutional care—at least for three months. This would mean an institution of about 100 beds, and costing the county in the neighborhood of $35,000 a year for maintenance.

At present we believe a hospital at least half that size should be built at public expense, or part public and part private expense. In any case, it should be under public management. It should be built on the cottage plan for two reasons: This plan would admit of enlarging the bed capacity at any time: it would admit of classification of patients according to congeniality, and also according to the stage of the disease, for it would care for all stages and all social classes except the absolutely destitute, and the vagrant, and vicious, which elements of the consumptive population much experience has shown cannot be successfully mingled with the other elements."

MAGNATE LED TRIPLE LIFE

Pittsburg Woman Suing for Widow's Share in His Estate.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 5.—Astonishing revelations are being made here in the suit of Mrs. William Phillips on behalf of her two children and herself for a share of the large estate of the late William Vincent Callery, brother of James D. Callery, president of the Pittsburg Railway company, and himself largely interested in the traction monopolies of Pittsburg, Philadelphia and San Francisco.

Mr. Callery was known up to the time of his death as a bachelor, but Mrs. Phillips claims that he lived a triple life. She declares he persuaded her that she was his legal wife, and lived with her for three years, and up to the time of his death in September, 1905, at the Colonial, one of the fashionable hotels of the city. There, she alleges, they were known as Mr. and Mrs. William Phillips.

In her testimony Mrs. Phillips declared that Mr. Callery also had another residence in the East end, where he lived with a woman who believed herself to be his wife. At this address he was known as William White.

What lends strength to the charges of Mrs. Phillips is the fact that her counsel are Watson & Freeman, the senior member of which firm is David T. Watson, who has appeared for the Standard Oil in notable actions, and is one of the greatest legal authorities in the United States and withal a lawyer of unassailable standing. His partner is personally conducting the case in court.

The action is brought in spite of an alleged settlement by which Mrs. Phillips alleges she was induced to accept $30,000 for herself and $10,000 for her children on the representation that the estate of Mr. Callery amounted to only $100,000. Later she learned that the personal property alone was appraised at $832,000 and that the real property brought the value of the estate up into the millions, and she brought the second suit.

It was at the Colonial that the first child was born. Callery, she testified, insisted upon calling the baby "William Vincent, Jr.," after himself. The second child was born in November, 1905, nearly two months after the death of Callery.

Mary Murphy, a nurse employed by Mrs. Phillips during the time she lived at the Colonial, was a witness and declared that she always believed Mr. and Mrs. Phillips were married. She said she had heard them quarrel once, and heard Mrs. Phillips say that she would leave Mr. Phillips if he did not give up "that Mrs. White in the East end."

Neville Bailey, the broker and friend of the late Mr. Callery, was called. He said that the party had been drinking when Callery first met Mrs. Phillips, but admitted that practically everything she had said about the meeting was true.

J. D. Callery said his brother always had been regarded as a single man and that he did not believe he ever had been married to Mrs. Phillips.

BELMONT HOTEL BURNS.

Camp Douglas, Wisconsin Resort, Is Reduced to Ashes.

Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 5.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is general regret here over the burning and total destruction, early Tuesday, of the Belmont hotel at Camp Douglas. An overheated stove caused the fire.

Soon after the alarm was sounded the guests in the hotel come running out together with the girls and other help. The guests and others who assembled then began the work of saving what furniture could be rescued and some of it was carried to a place of safety. The building and most of the contents, however, are a total loss, the loss being between $6,000 and $6,500. The building was owned by the Sauerbach Brewing company of Madison.

The Belmont was the frame hotel opposite the depot, and the heat was so intense that the depot was ignited, as was the building opposite containing the meat market and jewelry store, and also the postoffice. However, the fire in these buildings was put out before any damage was done

The New Battleship Goes British Dreadnaught Better by 2,100 Tons.

Vessel Designed by Board of Construction Is Launched.

Newport News, Va., Feb. 6.—Compared with the battleships, completed or under construction, of the navy of any foreign power, the Delaware, launched today, surpasses all. She is one of four sister ships authorized by congress which will form an indomitable squadron. The other vessels are the North Dakota, being built at Quincy, Mass.; the Florida, which will be built at the New York navy yard, and the Utah, to be built at Camden, N. J.

The Delaware is to carry as heavy armor and as powerful armament as any known vessel of its class; will have a speed of twenty-one knots, which is believed to be the highest

GERMAN FLOODS CAUSE DEATHS

Forests Under Water—Masses of Ice Create Destruction.

Berlin, Feb. 6.—The flood situation in Germany, resulting from heavy rains and melting snow, still is serious. Many cases of loss of life continue to be reported from various parts of the country.

The lower sections of Frankfort-on-the-Main are flooded. A terrific hurricane raged in the Rhine valley last night and destroyed the Weisbaden hall and other buildings in course of erection for an exhibition this summer. The rains along the Rhine valley ceased this morning and today the confluents of the Rhine are falling.

The river police of Cologne have stationed steamers at various points along the Rhine to give assistance as required. The Elbe, the Main and the Oder are also rising. Several villages are cut off from communication from the outside world, and are threatened with partial destruction. The Elbe is carrying down great masses of ice, which have partly destroyed the scaffolding of the new bridge being erected at Dresden. The Mulde, a confluent of the Elbe, has flooded the country around Dessau. The Ducal forests are under water and a number of deer have been drowned. The Oder is rising rapidly and many barges, frozen into the ice several weeks ago, are threatened with destruction.

MAY BAR BOOK; RACE PREJUDICE

Objection to Literature Calling for Booker Washington Essay.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 6.—Because one of the textbooks submitted for use in the schools of Louisiana contains a direction to pupils to write an essay on Booker T. Washington, it is declared the book will get into the schools only over the vigorous protests of the Confederate bodies of this state.

Gen. Lewis Glon, chairman of the historical committee of the United Confederate veterans, is engaged in his quadrennial examination as to whether there are reflections on the South or its leaders, or any matter objectionable to Southern sentiment in books used in the public schools. He has noted the Booker T. Washington reference.

FOR FOURTH JUDGESHIP

St. Louis County Delegation Decides for Another District Judge.

Lawyers in Legislature Against Creation of a Superior Court.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special The Herald.)—The St. Louis county delegation held another meeting yesterday afternoon on the judgeship question, and it was decided to introduce a bill next week as a delegation measure authorizing the creation of a fourth judgeship of the district court. Robert Stratton of Hibbing and N. B. Arnold of Virginia again argued in favor of a superior court for the iron ranges exclusively, but the delegation decided that, as a superior court in Minnesota would be an innovation, and any attempt to create such a court would meet with strong opposition from the lawyers in the legislature from other sections of the state, it would be practically impossible to put through such a bill. On the other hand, it can be conclusively shown that the work of the district court in the Eleventh district is so heavy that a fourth judge is a necessity, and it is believed that on this showing the legislature can be persuaded to add another judge. It is expected the bill will provide for terms of court at both Virginia and Hibbing. The appointment of the new judge will rest with Governor Johnson, and there are many who believe that he would be likely to name Martin Hughes of Hibbing, but other names have been mentioned in this connection.

Some time ago the St. Louis county board found that the county had been assessed $10,000 in a judicial ditch proceeding by Judge McClenahan, although no notice of the proceeding had ever been received by the county officials. In view of this, the delegation has decided to introduce a bill providing that, when a district court grants a hearing on a petition for a judicial ditch, notice must be served on the county auditors of all counties affected, so that they may be represented at the hearing, if they so desire.

Other bills approved by the delegation and which will be introduced at an early date are: Allowing municipal corporations and counties to register title to land; requiring parties who claim title to land by adverse possession, to have paid the taxes thereon for at least five years preceding; appointment of a county examiner of the accounts of all public institutions, of all charitable institutions which receive public aid in any way, and all township and school districts.

CONSTITUTIONAL OBJECTION MADE

To Putting North Dakota Men on Grain Appeals Boards.

(From a Staff Correspondent.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—It looks very much now as though the proposal to put representatives of the North Dakota wheat growers upon the Duluth and Minneapolis boards of grain appeals, would be confronted at the outset by a constitutional objection. The house and senate committees of the Minnesota legislature, after hearing the request of a delegation from the North Dakota legislature that this be done, adopted a resolution approving the plan warmly, and recommending that it be adopted if it proved legal and practicable.

Attorney General Simpson was asked to pass on the legal phase of it, and it is said that he will be compelled to report that, under the constitution of this state, office holders must be residents of Minnesota. He will suggest that it may be possible to get around the difficulty by making some sort of a joint arrangement between the two states, but he will show that the passage of a law adding North Dakota men to these boards would be futile, because they could draw no pay and the acts of boards so constituted would be void.

The falling off in iron ore production the past year is registered in the earnings of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railroad company, which filed its report of gross earnings with the state auditor this morning. They were $8,214,276 as against $11,930,262.32 last year, and the tax of 4 per cent will be $328,571.04, against $477,210.49 last year, a falling off of nearly $150,000.

Gibraltar, Feb. 6.—The American battleship fleet began preparations for getting under way at 9 this morning, and at 11 the ships left, bound for Hampton Roads, where they are to arrive Feb. 22.

Capt. Edward F. Qualtrough of the battleship Georgia, having been found guilty by court-martial of being intoxicated while on duty and of conduct prejudicial to the good of the navy, has been suspended from duty for six months, with an additional punishment of the loss of ten numbers in rank. Rear Admiral Sperry has approved the findings of the court-martial, but the secretary of the navy must take official action on the recommendation for loss of numbers.

Capt. Qualtrough has been detached from the fleet and ordered home. He will go as a passenger on the Georgia. Lieut. Commander George W. Kline, who was placed in command of the Georgia, will continue in command on the homeward journey.

Lumberman Editor Says They Have Interests in Canada.

Resents Testimony They Gave as to Duty Repeal.

Washington, Feb. 6.—In a statement filed with the house ways and means committee, today, by James Elliot Defebaugh of Chicago, editor of the American Lumberman, regarding the efforts that are being made to induce congress to remove the duty on lumber, it is asserted that the principal witnesses who appeared before the committee in advocacy of free lumber are officers of a British Columbia lumber company.

The statement contains the announcement of the organization of the American Timber Holding company, with a capitalization of $6,000,000, holding title to about 1,500,000,000 feet of timber, located principally in Western British Columbia, accessible to tidewater. The purpose of the company is to float, it is stated, a considerable part of the stock on the American market, particularly in the event of the removal or material reduction of the duty on lumber.

"One of the chief witnesses on Nov. 20 was M. J. Scanlon of Minneapolis, who is president of the new company," says Mr. Defebaugh. "The leading witness of Nov. 20 was Theodore M. Knappen of Minenapolis, who is now announced as secretary of the British of Columbia company. Another important witness was F. B. Lynch of St Paul, who is one of the directors. Further, an exhaustive written brief, printed Dec. 10, was by W. S. Dwinnell, who is treasurer of this timber company.

"Since the hearing of Nov. 20, the country has been flooded with literature sent out by the 'Forest Conservation league,' of which Mr. Knappen admitted himself to be the chief constituent. It seems evident that if these gentlemen can break the tariff lumber cocoanut they hope to be able to claim the milk as Canadian."

JAP TOTAL IN DISPUTE

Denver Police Chief Disagrees With Oriental Official There.

Cabinet Discusses the Anti-Alien Issue With Roosevelt.

Denver, Colo., Feb. 6.—Equality with other foreign nationalities in the United States, or a very good and efficient reason why not, is the demand of the Japanese in America, according to Takeo Sagora, secretary of the Japanese Association of Colorado.

"We consider ourselves superior as a race to the Chinese, Koreans, and other Asiatics and we do not want to be classed with them. We will demand our rights granted the Japanese by treaty, and under the constitution of the United States, to be treated on equal terms with the French, German or American of any other nation," said the secretary.

"The Asiatic scare of the Pacific coast amounts to little," he continued. "The number of Japanese in the United States is decreasing and will probably continue to do so. There are about 4,000 in Colorado and 500 in Denver."

Danville, Ky., Feb. 6.—Barry Simpson, Reuben West and George Stanley are still at large, although the officers were positive they had them in their clutches.

Reports were sent broadcast yesterday that their arrest had been effected. Simpson, West and Stanley are in Scott county, Tennessee, near Oneida, where they have been barricaded since the fatal riot at Stearns, Christmas day.

The men sent word through their attorney that they would surrender, but did not meet the officers at the place and time agreed.

Tenement House Wrecked, But Scarlet Fever Patients Saved.

New York, Feb. 6.—Scores of people were thrown into a panic and the lives of several little scarlet fever sufferers imperiled as the result of the explosion of a bomb outside the vestibule of an East Seventy-fifth street tenement house today. The police believe the Black Hand is responsible.

The bomb was found in the vestibule by Police Sergeant Birmingham, who saw the sputtering spark as he was passing. The sergeant entered the hallway to investigate, but when he saw the bomb was about to explode, fled and had hardly reached the curb when the explosion occurred. The vestibule doors were blown out, the ceiling fell, and the windows in the front of the building smashed.

The tenants fled to the street, carrying several children ill with scarlet fever.

Ashland, Wis., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—A man, who cut his throat at the hotel at Grandview yesterday, dying at Ashland last night, was identified today as Charles Ness, foreman for the Stearns Lumber company at Odanah.

Ness was well known at Washburn and throughout Northern Wisconsin for years. He was supposed to be in charge of loggers on the reservation until he was found with his throat cut at Grandview.

MAY BE PASSED OVER THE VETO

House Leaders Plan to Yet Enact the Census Bill.

Washington, Feb. 6.—An attempt will be made in the house, according to the plans of house leaders, to pass the census bill over the veto of the president, it is said.

The action on the veto will be postponed probably until an opportune time next week.

The first business of importance to claim the attention of the house of representatives today was the president's message vetoing the census bill. Mr. Crumpacker moved the reference of the bill and message to the census committee. Mr. Gillett of Massachusetts objected, saying that inasmuch as the bill could not be amended, there was no reason for its reference.

Mr. Crumpacker said the alternative was offered of reporting the bill back either with a recommendation that it pass, the president's veto to the contrary notwithstanding, or with a recommendation that it did not pass.

An effort by Mr. Parsons of New York to amend the bill in accordance with the president's suggestions failed, and without further debate the bill and messages were referred.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 6.—To bring to justice the perpetrators of the many recent attacks on white women and girls in this city, and to take steps to prevent a recurrence of the crimes, the better element of the negroes here has issued a call for a general mass meeting to be held Tuesday night. The feeling betwen the white people and the negroes is becoming more acute as each day brings its quota of attacks and reported attacks on white girls by negroes.

Chen Pi Down and Out.

Pekin, Feb. 6.—Chen Pi, president of the board of communications, and three under secretaries of the board, were today dismissed in disgrace. The recent failure of the board of communications to float a domestic loan of $5,000 for the purpose of paying the shareholders of the national telegraph system embarrassed the government seriously and Chen Pi, in December, began negotiations with British, French and German banks for this money. The terms were described as humiliating to the central government.

INCLINED TO PUBLISH IT

Senate Sees No Reason for Concealing Cortelyou's Reply.

Likely to Refuse Roosevelt's Request to This Effect.

Washington, Feb. 6. — President Roosevelt's request that the reply of the secretary of the treasury to the Foraker resolution calling for an itemized statement of expenditures made from the war deficiency fund of 1899 be confidential may be ignored by the senate. Since the document has been reposing in the files of the committee of military affairs, it has been examined by a number of senators who say that they are not impressed with the importance of concealing from the public the information it contains.

The reason given by President Roosevelt for the request that the information should be kept as executive matter is that the war fund has been used to send military agents into foreign countries to gather material for the secret use of this government. While it is said that this is true in regard to some expenditures, certain senators have declared that the report so hides the details connected with such expenditures that the publication of the report could not result in any diplomatic estrangements with other governments.

The resolution bringing the statement to the senate was introduced by Foraker after he learned that the detectives used in working on the Brownsville case had been paid from the war deficiency fund. It is declared by several senators who have examined the treasury statement that the information sent in shows that the fund had been used as "a financial junk heap." It is asserted that the statement show that several "junkets" were paid for from this fund and that in certain instances the fund was used to pay for the entertainment of military visitors from other countries.

Although a number of senators are disposed to make the document public

MEN HELD FOR DEATH OF GIRL

Dayton Police, However, Admit Case Against Them Weak.

Dayton, Ohio, Feb. 6.—The discovery of the partly decomposed body of pretty Lizzie Fulhart of Vandalia, Ohio, in a cistern almost in the heart of the business district of this city, adds another to the list of Dayton's mysteriously murdered women.

Albert Wilkie, the girl's sweetheart, was arrested and held on suspicion, although the police say that they have little hope of being able to fasten the crime on him. Wilkie, whose reputation has always been beyond reproach, denies having seen the girl since her arrival in Dayton, Dec. 29.

After a postmortem examination, Coroner Swisher said: "On account of the decomposition of the body, it is impossible to say whether the girl was criminally assaulted. Neither can it be determined as to how long the body was in the water. There is a possibility the girl was not dead when she was put in the sack and cast into the cistern."

The girl left her aunt's here to search for work, and was expected to return for dinner at noon, but failed to do so.

Roy Cooley has also been arrested, but it is admitted there is nothing tangible upon which to base a charge against him.

UNDER ENGINE WHEN IT STARTS, FIREMAN CLIMBS INTO THE CAB

Americus, Ga., Feb. 6.—A negro stole a detached locomotive of a freight train on the Central of Georgia railway in the Smithville yards, and started the ponderous engine out.

Beneath the locomotive, at work, was the fireman. When it began to move, he grasped for and clung to the driving rods, his only chance for escape from death.

Whirled up and down within a few inches of death for several minutes, he succeeded in climbing over the rods to the running board along the engine, and then gained the cab, while the engine, with throttle wide open, was making fast time toward Dawson.

At sight of the fireman, the negro jumped from the cab. A crowd of men, who saw the fireman's narrow escape, pursued and caught the negro. He was brought here to jail.

FOUR WOMEN CLAIM CORPSE; SHOW THEIR MARRIAGE CERTIFICATES

New York, Feb. 6.—Each bearing a marriage certificate, four women appeared at a local undertaking establishment to claim the body of W. S. King, who was a well known figure in the Tenderloin district.

He died Wednesday in St. Joseph's hospital, and it was the general belief among his friends that he was a bachelor.

Three of the "Mrs. Kings" viewed the body together, having arrived at the undertaking establishment within a few minutes of one another. A hysterical scene ensued, and each woman was positive the body before her was that of her husband.

The third woman became so excited when she was informed that two other women had already claimed the body, that the undertaker requested all three to leave the place.

They had scarcely departed when a fourth came and another scene was enacted. The undertaker was in a quandary for a while, but finally decided to recognize only the first Mrs. King.

CAUSES OF BLINDNESS.

Woman's Home Companion: The dangers to which the modern eye is exposed fall into two great classes—disease and overuse from near work. Here another great consoling fact faces us, and that is that while overwork and consequent eye strain are by far the commonest troubles that befall the modern eye, discomfort and inefficiency are as far as they go in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred. It is a fact that ninety-nine and nine-tenths per cent of all blindness is due to disease and not to overwork.

More significent yet, seven-tenths of the diseases which produce blindness are the acute infections, against which civilization wages an unceasing and victorious conflict.

SUICIDE IS UNCLAIMED

Woodsman, Unidentified and Unmourned, Taken to His Grave.

Identity of Man Found Near Ore Docks a Mystery.

All this week there has rested on a table in the undertaking establishment of R. R. Forward & Co. the body of the suicide who was found under the Missabe ore docks last Sunday. It was carried, unidentified and unmourned, to the grave this afternoon.

Ever since the coroner's autopsy the man's body has lain on the undertakers' slab, awaiting the arrival of friend or relative who never came. Many people came and viewed the remains, but they were unable to identify him.

Although the coroner decided this man had committed suicide by cutting his throat, his death was in a measure as much of a mystery as his identity.

The slashes in the throat, not so very long or deep, indicated that the man had cut himself with a sharp knife or a razor, and had died from the effect of the injuries. But there were also concussions on his head, indicating a fracture of the skull, and wounds on his right arm and his legs. The supposition is that he fell off the dock after he had cut his throat.

The dead man's clothing consisted of a regulation lumberjack's outfit, all in good condition. Careful search of them failed to yield a single clue as to his name, whence he came, or his motive for ending his existence.

He was buried by the county today.

The body was not that of Frank Sherwin, the missing cashier.

SENATORS HONOR W. B. ALLISON

Eulogies for Dead Iowan Are Led by Senator Dolliver.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Eulogies in honor of the late Senator William B. Allison of Iowa, occupied the attention of the senate today. Splendid tributes to the public service of the Iowa statesman, extending over half a century, were paid alike by Republican and Democratic senators. The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. Edward Everett Hale, the chaplain. Senator Dolliver, colleague of the late senator, reviewed the public events of Mr. Allison's life. He said the people of Iowa would build a monument to Senator Allison in his own state and would ask permission to erect a statue to him in this city.

Among others who spoke were Senators Hale, Teller, Aldrich, Daniel, Cullom, Bacon, Gallinger, Lodge, Tillman, Perkins, Nelson, Kean, Depew, Burkett, William Alden Smith, Borah and Cummins, the latter, Senator Allison's successor.

Comparing Senator Allison's career with that of English statesmen, Senator Lodge declared that had his labor been performed in England his statue would have its place in the capitol as at Westminster are found statues of English prime ministers and parliamentary leaders, many of whom, he added, "Mr. Allison surpassed in all that goes to make a statesman."

Mr. Cummins told his own mission from President McKinley in urging Mr. Allison to become secretary of state and of his declination because of the affection he felt for his old associates in the senate.

"An acknowledged leader," Mr. Aldrich declared, "Senator Allison never paraded his powers of leadership and was apparently unconscious of their existence. His position in the senate was unique. He was oldest in service, wisest in council, the friend and mentor of all."

The division of the tax payments, it seems, is not being given very hearty support by the farmers of the state, judging from the remarks of several of the legislators in the house, when the Skulason bill was killed.

The defeat of the Skulason initiative and referendum bill in the house Friday still leaves one measure of this nature before the assembly, that of Senator Plain of Cavalier. His bill makes the initiative and referendum applicable only to general laws, excepting the Constitution, appropriation laws and special, health and local laws.

The public lands committee on Friday gave consideration to the bill introduced by Representative Lucke of Grand Forks, which gives a person holding a contract for state school land the power of prosecuting for encroachments upon the land for which he holds a contract. In holding a contract of this nature, the title of the land is vested in the state, and the holder of such contract is therefore unable to collect damages for any encroachments upon the property. The bill, it is understood, has the indorsement of the state land department.

WOULD VACATE THE STREETS

East End Matter Again to Come Before Council.

The matter of vacating certain streets and alleys in the vicinity of Twenty-fourth avenue east and Greysolon road, to allow the building of a handsome private residence, probably the finest in Duluth, will come before the council again next Monday evening.

The question came up several weeks ago, upon the petition of property owners in that neighborhood, and was referred to the proper committee for investigation. This committee is now ready for a report. None of the streets upon which vacations are asked, are used at the present time, it is said, and the claim is made that they never will be used to any great extent.

The fire committee also will be ready with a report on the Dr. McKay matter, and will make recommendations in connection with the suit now pending in district court, brought by the city against Dr. McKay, to compel the return of the money paid him for fire horses while he was acting as city veterinarian. The question before the council will be whether to dismiss the suit or press it.

At the meeting Monday the council will canvass election returns, and declare the successful candidates to municipal offices elected.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from the house, and 2:30 p. m. from the Norwegian church. Interment will be at Park Hill cemetery.

Railroad Hearing.
The condemnation proceedings brought by the Duluth Terminal Railroad company to secure a right-of-way for an approach to the interstate bridge was up before Judge Dibell in district court this morning. Some testimony was introduced touching on the alleged early grant of the land sought under a franchise from the city, and the arguments will probably be made this afternoon. The city is opposing the condemnation proceedings on the ground that the city is empowered to govern the right-of-way by franchise.

Suit Is Dismissed.
The suit of A. L. Preston against the Cloquet Tie & Post company and A. R. Randall was dismissed by Judge Ensign in district court yesterday afternoon. Mr. Preston sued for $1,600 damages for trespass, claiming that Mr. Randall had cut a quantity of timber from him and the Tie & Post company had removed it. It was shown that Preston had not obtained his patent from the government, on the land, which was homesteaded, so the court decided that it had no jurisdiction.

WILL WORK WITH THE PRESIDENT

California Senators Support Him in Anti-Jap Agitation.

Washington, Feb. 6. — President Roosevelt is by no means relaxing his efforts to prevent anti-Japanese legislation in California and Nevada. He had conferences today with Senators Flint of California and Nixon of Nevada, and persisted in his representations to them that the situation would become critical if their states insisted on legislation that would be insulting to the Japanese, who were referred to as acting with dignity under the strain. The senators agreed to continue their efforts to influence the legislatures of their states against action of any sort and went away from the White House to send telegrams to the leaders of those bodies, urging postponement for the present of any legislation.

"I feel that we ought not to try to resist the strong appeals of the chief executive," said Senator Flint. "I agree with him that the time is inopportune for legislation and am trying to do what I can to help him in his efforts. The president is talking in the interest of the nation at large, and I am sure that California's patriotism will care for the nation's interest before her own."

Calumet & Arizona opened at $105.50, declined to $105, rallied to $105.62½ and closed firm at $105 bid and $106 asked. Giroux opened at $8.75 and closed at 8.62½ bid and $8.87½ asked. Anaconda opened at $45.25, declined to $44.75, rallied to $45.12½ and closed at $45.12½ bid.

Superior & Pittsburg sold at $15.37½ and closed at $15.37½ bid; Caman at $2.12½ and closed at $2.12½ and $2.12½ asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.37½ and closed at $1.37½ bid and $1.50 asked; Lion Gulch at $11.87½ and closed at $11.75 bid and $12 asked, and Superior & Boston at $14.50 and closed at $14.50 bid and $14.75 asked.

Denn-Arizona was inactive and closed at $3.62½ bid and $3.87½ asked. Globe at $5.75 bid and $6.12½ asked, Butte Superior at 88 cents bid and 92 cents asked, Calumet & Sonora at $15 bid and $15.50 asked, Mowitza at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked, Red Warrior at $2.50 bid and $2.75 asked, National at 66 cents bid and 70 cents asked, Savanna at $2.75 bid and $3 asked, Butte-Ballaklava at $17 bid and $17.50 asked and Cactus at 95 cents bid and 99 cents asked.

Black Mountain sold at $2.62½ and closed at $2.75 and $2.87½ asked.

Walker's copper letter in Saturday's Boston Commercial says:

"Copper is weak and lower. Lake can now be bought at 13¾ cents, and electrolytic at 13½ cents per pound. It is reported that the largest selling agency has offered electrolytic at 13½ cents, and made a sale of 3,000,000 pounds. According to the best information obtainable, the business of the consuming interests in this country continues exceedingly disappointing, and domestic buying, therefore, is very light. American interests are now offering electrolytic in Europe on the basis of 13.70 cents per pound, and even at this price only a little is being sold.

"It is as if a dark cloud had suddenly spread itself over the copper situation, as for the time being certainly all is gloom and despondency. In my opinion this is the extreme of the depression which always immediately precedes the beginning of improvement. I think the market will continue to be depressed and unsatisfactory a month or so longer, and it is possible that some of the largest producing companies will curtail their output somewhat. There is every basis for the belief, however, that the last half of this year will witness a revival in general business in this country, and that the demand for copper will then be greater than ever previously in the history of the trade. Just now, however, the atmosphere in trade circles is exceedingly blue, and many consumers believe that they will be able to buy copper soon at 13 cents per pound.

"As I have stated previously, the surplus supplies of copper are not especially large, and the actual statistical position of the metal is not nearly as bad as has been represented. When the improvement comes, the whole situation will change abruptly. I should not be surprised to see copper selling at 16 or 17 cents twelve months hence."

Copper Gossip.

New York to Piper, Johnson & Case: The market was a very narrow affair, but the same sagging tendency continued, and while the selling was not urgent, lower prices were touched in some of the leading rails. The specialties moved with a narrow limit and Denver, C. & O. and Texas Pacific showed the effect of professional profit-taking sales and slowing down of manipulation. The passage of the anti-Jap bill in the Nevada legislature did not appear to affect the market much, but traders went home short, expecting a Jap war scare over Sunday. We do not look for acts of the Nevada legislature to take on international importance. The bond market occupied a large part of the dealings today, many of the junior issues of the low-priced rails are in demand and this one fact of the strength in bonds encourage those who believe the ultimate outcome will be a spring recovery in prices. The banks lost heavily in reserves owing to government withdrawals.

Excursion to Washington

Irrigated Fruit Lands

ATTALIA

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY. 16th

For information—this company will continue to run excursions owing to the number of inquiries we receive for wanting to go out at this time.

Special Car—Free Fare to Buyers

Free fare means we deduct the cost of the ticket from the first payment and if you should find that our statements in our booklets are not in every way authentic with the true conditions at Attalia, your trip will cost you nothing. Furthermore, I will buy the ticket and pay the expenses for any man having a shadow of doubt as to the genuineness of our proposition, providing his doubts and intentions are really sincere. This is the greatest wealth and health bringing country in America, where men have gone in large numbers to investigate for investments the almost unbelievable reports on productions and receipts gained therefrom, and who have all been forced to believe the evidence of their own eyes, which I think is the surest proof and deserves the greatest and kindest consideration.

Attalia is the finest tract of irrigated land that has ever been placed on the market. It is fertile, has the location and the very best of transportation facilties, making a ready market for all.

Located on the beautiful one-mile wide Columbia river in the Columbia river valley in the western part of Walla Walla county, at the junction of the Washington and Columbia rivers, Oregon Railway & Navigation company, North Coast and Northern Pacific railways, through which connections are made with the Union Pacific and the Burlington systems, thus producing the finest transportation enjoyed in the great Northwest. In addition, Attalia lies at the head of navigation on the Columbia river.

Water supply is sufficient for three times the amount of land covered by the Columbia canal, and supplied entirely by gravity. The canal has been in operation for a year. The head works and all construction are approved by irrigation experts and admitted to be the best in the Northwest.

The soil is the rich volcanic ash soil, twenty to thirty feet deep, the greatest fruit producer known, and is the richest agricultural soil found in the United States.

Climate conditions for health in this valley and county have long been known by the medical profession as the most favorable in the United States. Hundreds of severe cases of rheumatism and asthma have been entirely cured in Walla Walla county, Wash., and likewise has lung trouble in its earlier stage. The summers are very comfortable and free from the sultry heat, the short winter season, a slight modification of north and south, the over 300 days of sunshine. Early frosts are not known and we mature two vegetable crops a year.

For productions of strawberries, nuts and fruits of the fanciest varieties, this land is unexcelled. It grows walnuts, pecans, almonds, apples, peaches, apricots, prunes, grapes, vegetables, tobacco, alfalfa, etc., with equal results. The orchards that are now bearing, and only 4 to 5 years old, produce a clear income of from $500 to $700 an acre per annum. These are official figures and older orchards produce more, and as high as $1,500 an acre annually. You can make a living from the start from vegetable productions, while trees are growing. Terms are most favorable, one-quarter down, (no payment for two years), balance two, three and four years.

Employment—Carpenters, plumbers and all classes of mechanics can secure work in their vocations. The wage for ordinary labor is $2.50 a day.

There are no crop failures and an absolute freedom from insects, bugs, etc. Prices will always be high, as we have an early and fancy production with the mentioned superior shipping facilities. Of the large numbers that have been out and bought our lands, we have right here in Duluth now many prominent men who will be glad to tell you of what they saw and what they think of Attalia on the beautiful Columbia river, where conditions for outdoor life the entire year are so favorable to health and comfort.

No floods at Attalia, no annoying sand storms like in some parts of the West, or other peculiar features of discomfort.

Last two excursions, in which over fifty people participated, have not come to grief over their trip or investments, neither have any prior participants, but are happy over making Attalia on the Columbia their home some day soon. First class irrigable lands are scarce and are selling very fast. That kind of land has and is advancing in price rapidly and like Wenatchee, Yakima and Kennewicks' upward of 6-year-old orchard lands that are now selling for from $2,000 to $3,000 an acre. "Attalia lands are as good, lie much better, have better railroad facilities," and conditions in general favoring home life. I do not wilfully make these comparisons, but they are extracts from a letter written fraternally by a prominent Washington man to a business man here in reply to an inquiry regarding our lands.

I trust you will, to save you money, realize the importance of an early investment and come along on Feb. 16th. Don't wait until the price has mounted higher and you can't get what you like.

Perpetual water right with every sale of land. If you cannot go out to remain, we will improve the lands with orchard, caring for same any specified time, giving you one-half the gross receipts every year. Among other experienced fruit men, A. Kohl of Wenatchee, an expert fruit raiser, has settled at Attalia. In addition to farming his own tract, he will oversee the planting and caring for trees and vines belonging to novices in that business.

Attalia is the natural shipping point for Walla Walla county and the South, and is bound to become a large town in the near future and will hold the commercial prestige of this well known and productive county.

For further particulars and booklets, call on or address, before Feb. 16th

LOSS OF POWER

It Is a Self Evident Fact That the Continual and Protracted Loss of Vital Principle of Life Will Cause a Corresponding Loss of Power to "Do Things."

The man who is continually drawing on his reserve stock of vitality will certainly, sooner or later, suffer from a total collapse — this is inevitable.

When that collapse comes what chance do you think he will have of recovery, when his force of resistance is reduced to the minimum and his system is overworked to the limit? Very little!

The time to start thinking about a cure is not just before overtaxed Nature gives up the struggle altogether, but as soon as the dread symptoms are recognized.

Now let us consider the question of cost—if you were offered in return for an investment of, say, $40, a continual addition to your salary of from $10 to $20 a week, would you not be foolish to refuse? And yet, what enables you to earn any salary at all?—your power to "DO THINGS."

When, whoever can add to a great extent to your power to DO THINGS IS adding to your salary to the same extent.

By enabling you to throw off the effect of weakening and debilitating excesses, the PROGRESSIVE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION OF NO. 1 W. SUPERIOR STREET IS ACTUALLY ADDING TO YOUR SALARY TWO OR THREE HUNDRED PER CENT WHAT THEY CHARGE YOU FOR THE CURE!

Remember, all cases handled by the PROGRESSIVE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION receive a WRITTEN GUARANTEE that a cure will be effected.

THE PROGRESSIVE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION'S treatment for WEAK MEN is unsurpassed in the United States of America.

Hours: 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., Sundays, 10 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Two million dollars will be spent in improvements on the great steel plant in the United States Steel Corporation at Emsley, Ala.

A man can hire a horse in Japan, keep two servants and live on the fat of the land, all for a little over $20 a month.

SIX CASES DISMISSED

Only One Conviction Secured to Date in Saloon Cases.

Restaurant Keepers Have Right to Send Out for Liquor.

Following the decision of Judge Cutting in municipal court this morning that J. J. Haley and D. C. Eaton were not guilty of selling liquor without a license in Haley's restaurant, cases started against five other restaurants and pool halls, upon the same charge, were ordered dismissed, upon motion of Prosecuting Attorney Kenny.

Up to the present time, out of eleven complaints sworn to by three private detectives, who claim to have been employed by Bert N. Wheeler to secure evidence against local saloons and restaurants, in violations of the liquor ordinance, only one conviction has been secured, that of Charles Carlson, 509 West Superior street. Sentence has not yet been pronounced in this case. Eight saloon and hotelkeepers remain to be tried. All are charged with selling intoxicants on Sunday.

Cases were dismissed this morning, following the decision in the Haley restaurant case, as follows: F. M. Norman, pool hall, 208 West Superior street, charged in two complaints with selling liquor without a license; Herman Brown, 312 West Superior street, pool hall, charged with selling liquor without a license; two complaints against T. H Beaton, proprietor of the Club restaurant, 217 West Superior street, charged with selling intoxicants without a license; Charles Lee, proprietor of the chop suey house over Haley's restaurant, charged with selling liquor without a license, and William Taylor, proprietor of the Alvarado hotel, 219 West Superior street, same charge.

J. B. Cargill and Joseph Kenny, proprietors of the Metropole hotel, on Lake avenue, were charged in three complaints with the sale of liquor on Sunday. The case on one complaint was dismissed for lack of evidence. Upon another, the men were found not guilty, and the hearing upon the third complaint was set for next Monday morning. All the cases remaining to be tried are on the charge of the Sunday sale of liquor. Evidence in the cases dismissed was exactly of the same nature as that in the Haley restaurant case, so it would have been only a waste of time to prosecute them.

In the Haley case, the evidence showed that the detectives had had beer served with their meals in the restaurant. According to the defense, the beer came from Cook's saloon, immediately adjoining Haley's upon the west, and Haley received no profit by its sale. Attorney Kenny contended that Haley acted as an agent in securing the liquor, and was guilty of a violation of the law. Attorney McMahon contended that a person had a perfect right to send another person from a restaurant, or anywhere else, for a bottle of beer, and that in drinking the beer off the premises where it was purchased, was no violation of the law. He was sustained in this contention by the court.

J. P. Brandt, one of the detectives employed to secure evidence, this morning explained to the reporters that yesterday he was made to appear in the published reports as having been employed as a strike breaker in Colorado. Mr. Brandt asked for a correction. The Herald said he "was employed in Colorado during the big miners' strike," making no statement as to the kind of work he was employed at.

LIVELY GAMES EXPECTED.

Proctor and Two Harbors First and Seconds to Meet.

Proctor, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Interest is keen over the basket ball games to be played at the Y. M. C. A. hall here tonight between the Two Harbors and the local Y. M. C. A. first and second teams. About three weeks ago the locals beat the Two Harbors boys on their own ground, and the rivalry between the respective teams is so keen that tonight's contest will be watched with much interest. The first game tonight will be called at 8 o'clock.

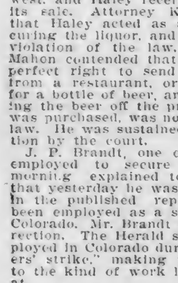

One of the successful social functions of the week was the dance given by the Uneeda club at the village hall Thursday evening. La Brosse's orchestra furnished the music and the affair was one of the most successful of the winter.

Miss C. W. Sheldon has returned from Virginia and has as her guest Miss Stella Bottineau of Superior.

NO PAPERS FOR JOHAN

Must Learn Language Before He Can Become Citizen.

Thirteen Out of Sixteen Applicants Are Given Papers.

Johan Tavett Hattunen has been in this country long enough to be a citizen, which is something over five years, but he cannot talk the English language. Judge Ensign and the United States counsel in charge of naturalization hearings in district court believe that Johan isn't overly anxious to learn English. They hold that a man, who doesn't want to or will not speak the language of the country, isn't fit to be one of its citizens, so when Johan appeared this morning and sought to take out his second citizenship papers, he was turned down.

Hattunen is an intelligent appearing sort of a fellow. He wants to be a citizen of the United States and forswear all allegiance to the czar of the Russias. When it came to a test in Americanized English, he wasn't there for a minute. An interpreter had to be used and the proceeding found no favor with the court. Johan has been in this country long enough to learn the rudiments of the language. He was given ninety days more to get a working knowledge, and if he appears in that time able to understand and make himself understood, he will be placed under the protection of the flag.

Sixteen applications for citizenship were heard at a special session of court last evening and thirteen were granted. One witness didn't know the applicant, to whom he was attached, long enough, so the applicant must hunt up another witness and go through the proceedings again. Two of the applicants didn't appear at all. Sixteen more applications were heard this morning and Johan Tavett Hattunen was the onl yone turned down. The United States has twenty-eight more citizens today and a few more will be added this afternoon.

PARK POINT UP IN ARMS

Patience of Residents Sorely Tried by the Aerial Bridge.

Car Has Been Repaired and Is Again in Commission.

According to members of the board of public works, the aerial ferry bridge is, this afternoon, in first-class condition, and there is nothing to indicate that it will not continue in operation indefinitely, without further interruption.

The car was started running again this afternoon, at 1 o'clock, after having been out of commission since 12:30 o'clock last night. Members of the board say it was through no defect or fault of the bridge that it stopped last night. The trouble, was due to a grounded wire, which switched off the electric current needed to keep the machinery moving.

Electricians were set to work this morning, and shortly after noon had the leak located, and damage repaired. Park Point residents have been buzzing all day like a lot of hornets, and city officials do not blame them for allowing their feelings to become somewhat ruffled, for it is anything but a pleasant adventure to be hung up for a couple of hours in the middle of the night, over the center of the canal.

Secretary Murchison of the board says first reports of the affair were greatly exaggerated, and that the first stop of the car, shortly after 6 o'clock in the evening, caused no very great inconvenience. He says the second break in operations did not occur until 12:30 o'clock, when most of the Park Pointers had gone home, so that only a few were caught on the car, which it took some little time to get to shore.

City Engineer McGilvray, when asked about the trouble, said he knew nothing about it, for he has had absolutely nothing to do with the bridge since its completion and has no more interest in its operation than any private citizen. The structure is entirely under the supervision of the board of public works. Mr. McGilvray took part in the construction, but that is all.

Despite annoying breaks that have occurred during the last few months, at uncertain intervals, the aerial ferry is still regarded as a success by city officials. They say accidents are bound to happen anywhere, and that Duluth has merely had a streak of hard luck lately, so far as the bridge is concerned.

Park Pointers have been fairly patient so far, but they say the limit was reached last night, when the handpower refused to work. They will ask that hereafter a hand-power drill be conducted at the bridge every week, to do away with further danger of being hung in mid air for indifinite periods. Several women and children were on the car last night.

JIM JEFFRIES UNCHALLENGED

White Champion Has Had No Word From Johnson.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 6.—"I have heard nothing nor seen anything in reference to a challenge from Jack Johnson," said James J. Jeffries today when asked regarding the purported cabling of a challenge to him from Australia by Champion Johnson.

THE FUTURE OF ALASKA

Fairbanks Man Says Vast Sums Are Being Spent There.

Settlers Are Going in There to Make Homes.

James T. Smith of Fairbanks, Alaska, who is at the St. Louis hotel today, says the northern possession of the United States is entering upon its first great period of commercial activity. The great development of Alaska, Mr. Smith says, is in the hands of great corporate interests, which have unlimited capital to push the development of the latest resources of the country.

Mr. Smith mentions particularly the Guggenheim and J. P. Morgan interests, which own copper deposits that they are developing upon a scale never known in the history of copper mining in the states.

They are building a railroad to their northern copper possession; are planning to have steamboats carry the copper ore to the coast points, and are placing millions of dollars into the development of the great mineral deposits in their possession.

"Copper is not the only great mineral interest of Alaska, said Mr. Smith. "Of course, gold was the original metal that attracted the attention of the outside world to Alaska. But gold will never result in the permanent development of a country, and the people who are in Alaska to stay, the people who have made their homes there, realize that Alaska's future does not depend either upon gold or copper.

"There are great and extensive coal deposits near the sea coast, and these deposits are being developed at the present time. It will not be very long before coal will be shipped from Alaska to Pacific coast points. There is lumber, more lumber than you have here in the states, and some day this lumber supply will be shipped to the United States.

"You know that the future or the wealth of any country depends upon its agricultural interests. Alaska is developing along this line as rapidly as it is along the other lines—though you of the outside world do not hear so much about this part of it.

"We are getting more settlers every year. We are not getting adventurers, like the first men who treked through the passes in search of sudden wealth; but men who have come to a new country to make their homes. They are farming up there and they are raising crops that people never dreamed could be raised in Alaska.

"You must understand that upon the coast of Alaska it is very mild. During most of the present winter the thermometer has not gone very far below zero upon the southern coast points. The water is warmed by the Japan current, the winters are not long or rigorous, while the summers are as pleasant as the summers of California. "There is a great future for Alaska, not alone in the mineral wealth of the country, but in the agricultural growth and the vast lumber interests."

Mr. Smith says that the coal strikes that tied up the mines in the Fairbanks region a year ago are practically over, and that at the present time the mines of this group are shipping coal to Alaskan coast points.

WORLD OWED HIM LIVING

But When Ed Malancy Tried to Collect, He Was Pinched.

Stole a Steed at Meadowlands and Rode Away.

Ed Malancy has been held to the grand jury for horse stealing, but he may be examined for insanity instead. Judging from his actions and conversation, Malancy is either filled with dime novel ideas, a follower of Bill Haywood, or crazy. Opinion leans toward the latter theory.

Malancy was arrested in the town of Meadowlands and brought to Duluth by Deputy Sheriff Owen Gately yesterday. He was accused of the theft of a horse and cutter, with harness, robes, etc. He was given a hearing in municipal court and held to the grand jury. The property alleged to have been stolen is valued at about $225.

According to Malancy's own statements and the story by the Meadowlands authorities, who arrested him, the affair had peculiar and somewhat ludicrous features. Malancy was "boning it" around the country, it is said, and struck Minnesota coming back from Dakota. He and a couple of companions wandered into Meadowlands and landed "on the rocks."

Malancy, it is said, had a hunch the whole world was down on him. He was hungry, thirsty, ragged and he thought that even his companions had turned against him. He figured that the world owed him a living and, according to the stories, he determined to take it out on the town of Meadowlands. Going still farther down, Calvin C. Speece was the integral part of the world selected to supply Malancy with the necessities of life. Speece's horse and cutter were standing in the road. Malancy, it is charged, climbed in and drove away. The outfit would bring a good price, and a good price would bring grub.

Malancy didn't get very far. When he realized the chase was getting hot, he unhitched the horse and, bareback on the animal, pounded along the frozen road. The steed wasn't fast enough and Malancy fell into the grasp of the law.

His actions since his arrest have made the jailers at the county jail suspicious. He unloads cynical observation on the way the world has treated him. He says when a man is hungry he ought to be fed at any expense. He is being fed now, at the expense of the county, and if the suspicions as to his mental condition are correct, he will be fed at the expense of the state for some time to come.

JAPAN LIKELY TO ADD KOREA

Annexation Will Probably Be the Result of Rioting.

Seoul, Feb. 6.—The emperor of Korea paid a visit to the Japanese residency today and had luncheon with Prince Ito, the resident general. His majesty thanked Prince Ito for his great service to Korea and particularly during their recent tours through the country. Later, Prince Ito returned the emperor's visit. Ito will sail for home on a Japanese warship next Wednesday. The report is prevalent that he will not return, but will be succeeded by Viscount Terauchi, at present minister of war.

The probability of annexation of Korea to Japan has been indicated in Prince Ito's recent utterances, owing to sporadic rioting among the disaffected elements.

They Fight for You in Your Blood

Science is assured that the white corpuscles in the blood, popularly called "Little Soldiers," defend you against infectious and contagious diseases.

And that they do so only when they themselves are healthy and strong.

And that to make and keep them healthy and strong is to purify and enrich the blood.

The white corpuscles in your blood destroy the micro-organisms that attack the red corpuscles and the bodily tissues.

In this way they defend you.

But they are not in condition to defend you, to fight for you, if you are troubled with eruptions, scrofula, eczema, catarrh, rheumatism, that tired feeling, loss of appetite, nervousness or general debility,—all of which are indications that your blood is impure and impoverished and your system run-down.

It is good to kill two birds with one stone, whenever you can.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla and it will cure any indication of impure and impoverished blood from which you suffer and at the same time make the little soldiers in your blood healthy and strong.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest preventive as well as curative medicine.

Its record shows this.

"I have sold the different Sarsaparillas for the past fifteen years, and consider Hood's not only the best sarsaparilla, but the best seller on the market. I use it in my family with the best results. Let a man use Hood's Sarsaparilla as an internal cleanser and Hood's Soap externally and he will be a clean man." C. F. WEBB, Northumberland, N. H.

Hood's Sarsaparilla effects its wonderful cures, not simply because it contains sarsaparilla, but because it combines the utmost remedial values of more than 20 different ingredients, each greatly strengthened and enriched by this peculiar combination. These ingredients are the very remedies that successful physicians prescribe for the same diseases and ailments. There is no real substitute for Hood's Sarsaparilla. If urged to buy any preparation said to be "just as good," you may be sure it is inferior, costs less to make, and yields the dealer a larger profit.

THE LONDON ROAD FREE SKATING RINK.

The five free skating rinks being maintained in Duluth this winter by the park board and by money raised through private subscription are being more liberally patronized than their enthusiastic backers earlier in the season predicted.

Large crowds are to be seen at all the rinks daily, but the biggest attendance is apparent at the one located at Twelfth avenue east and London road. This is the largest free rink ever maintained in Duluth, and as there is a man in charge at all times there is always a fine sheet of ice for the skaters.

Other rinks of the city, at Lakeside, in the West end, on Fourth street, and in West Duluth, are also under the care of attendants, and pains are taken to see that the ice is kept in first class condition. During the day the patrons of these places consist principally of children, but in the evening adults are out by the score.

There is not an evening in the week, when the weather is favorable, that crowds do not throng the ice, and Saturday and Sunday afternoons the crowds are even larger. The Twelfth avenue east rink is so centrally located that it draws from a large territory, and there generally is a good crowd of spectators, who, out for a walk, stop a while to witness the fun. A part of the ice at Twelfth avenue is divided off so the boys may play hockey. The ice-covered area is large enough to make this possible without cramping the skaters.

The success of the free rinks has been so great this winter that they will be a regular feature hereafter. It is expected that in future the park board will be in a position to maintain the rinks without assistance, a special fund being provided for the purpose. It is claimed they really are resulting in greater benefits than the summer public playgrounds, which proved to be a success in the Zenith City last summer.

THE HERALD'S HUMANE CORNER

THE WOOD THRUSH—SOMETHING ABOUT THE HABITS OF COMMON WOODLAND SONGSTER.

WHEN you visit the woods or parks don't forget to look for the wood thrush. He is a modest little fellow who will not display himself, so if you wish to get acquainted with him you will have to hunt him. This trush is a lovable bird, with a voice suited to his disposition. His calm, restful song rings through the woods like a hymn of praise, rising pure and clear from a thankful heart. It is a message of hope and good cheer in the morning, a benediction at the close of day. Who, that has heard the song of the wood thrush, can fail to desire a more intimate acquaintance with "God's out-of-doors." Its flutelike opening notes are an invitation to his haunts.

"Come to me," he sings, in tenor notes of wonderful sweetness. The exquisite quality of the tone of his song cannot be described by words. It must be heard. It has been called a "symphony in nature," but its character is much more than that of a tone poem.

Hearing such a song, wafted on the air, one cannot fail to witness the gladness of nature, and say with Mr. Bryant:

"There's a dance of leaves in that aspen bower,
"There's a titter of winds in that beechen tree,
"There's a smile on the fruit, and a smile on the flower,
"And a laugh from the brook that runs to the sea."

There is a richness, a depth of inspiration, a pure melodious quality in the liquid notes of the wood thrush's song that is indescribably fascinating. Mr. Wilson speaks of the prelude or symphony of its song as strongly resembling the German flute, and sometimes the tinkling of a small bell; the whole song consists of five or six parts, the last notes of each of which is in such a tone as to have a conclusion evidently suspended; the finale is finely managed, and with such charming effect as to soothe and tranquilize the mind, and to seem sweeter and mellower at each successive repetition."

While the wood thrush is by nature a woodland bird, it will also frequent the shaded lawns, avenues and parks of our cities and towns. This is especially true during its migrations. If we may so speak of bird life, this gentle bird shows high breeding. It is graceful in every motion, and even its confidence in good will of man is expressed by a quiet dignity and watchfulness. It some times seems unconscious of our presence, but if the observer becomes too bold it is ever ready to fly to the protecting shelter of trees. Its daintiness is even shown when it is feeding. An observer has said: "A wriggling beetle is eaten as daintily as variare at the king's table." The only time that the wood thrush seems at all spiteful or excited, is when its nest is approached too closely. Then its anxiety is expressed by the sharply uttered and rapidly repeated notes, "Pit, pit, pit," the sound of which has been likened to the striking of pebbles together. But even in its excited moments, this birdr does not lack in dignity and grace. Approach the wood thrush in its forest retreats and it will use the same note as a quiet call of inquiry, or possibly of greeting, as it comes towards you.

While the range of the wood thrush covers nearly the whole of the United States east of the great plains, it is altogether too true that its admirable habits and character are known to but few persons other than those who are close students of bird life. Its song may be familiar as that of a woodland songster, but it is not associated with the bird. This need not be the case, for it may be studied in the wooded parks and lawns of cities and towns. There it may warble silvery notes and there it has even been known to nest in quiet neighborhoods. It must be remembered, however, that while it may lose some of its woodland shyness, it has a solitary disposition.

The wood thrush should be protected and their nesting in this vicinity encouraged by the farmer and gardener. This has been proven by the investigation of Dr. S. A. Forbes, who has found that they do a great deal of good by eating large numbers of insects and great quantities of weed seeds of various kinds.

DAMPER ON CHILD LABOR

Decision of Supreme Court May Keep Boys Out of Mills.

Judgment of $1,000 Against the Company Is Affirmed.

The supreme court in affirming of the verdict of the district court in the personal injury case of Victor L. Jacobson, against the Merrill & Ring Mill company, has gone a step farther in the prosecution of minors than has ever been taken in this state before, according to Harry W. Lanners, who, with Theodore Hollister acted for the plaintiff.

The case was first tried in the district court, where a verdict of $1,500 was obtained for the plaintiff. The defendants then moved for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. This was denied, and then they appealed to the supreme court, which yesterday affirmed the verdict of the district court.

The plaintiff, for whom Walter G. Bonham acted as guardian, had his arm cut by a circular saw on April 19, 1906, while employed at the Merrill & Ring mill. He was then, according to the testimony, three months less than 15 years old and consequently a minor. His work was near a lath cutting machine. These saws were claimed to have been improperly guarded. In the first place, according to the law, "every dangerous place in or about factories, mills, workshops and engineering work, near to which an employe is obliged to pass or to be employed, shall be securely fenced, enclosed or otherwise protected." Besides this, according to the state laws, no one may employ a boy under 16 years old about dangerous machinery.

On these clauses the attorneys for the plaintiff based their arguments. The testimony brought out that the boy up to 5 o'clock on the afternoon of the accident had bundled 14,000 laths, and was very tired. To obtain a moment's rest he sat down on an iron bar near his working table, and next to the circular saw. When he arose, he stepped on the catch which released the saw buck, and fell back on the saw, so severely cutting his elbow, that the arm has ben made practically useless.

Jacobson, who resides with his father in West Duluth, besides being a minor, had no permit from the school board to work at the mill. Formerly when he had worked at the match factory on a job, which had no danger connected with it, he had such a permit, but it had expired at the time he went to work at the mill. It was alleged that it was his first experience at mill work, and he only worked there four days previous to the accident.

DEMURRER FILED BY COMPANY

Traction Company Wants the City's $34,000 Case Dismissed.

The Interstate Traction company by its attorneys, Washburn, Bailey & Mitchell yesterday in federal court, filed a demurrer to the suit begun Thursday against it by the city of Duluth. The demurrer takes the ground that the complaint does not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause for action. The case will be heard in open court, Feb. 13.

The amount of money involved is something over $34,000. The city claims that the traction company neglected to file a statement relative to its business on the first Monday in February of the year 1907. Not until thirty-five days had gone by did the street car company file the report and it was then unsatisfactory.

The city wants to collect the penalty of $100 a day, under the city charter.

UNION BREAKS FROM THE CANADIAN CONGRESS.

Lethbridge, Alberta, Feb. 6.—The seventh annual convention of the United Mine Workers of District 18, comprising Western Canada, was held here yesterday. It was decided to allow Orientals to become members of the union. North Dakota was made a subdivision of this district.

The union decided to break away from the Trades and Labor congress of Canada on the ground that the congress is unprogressive.

The convention advised the men not to go on strike when their agreement expired in seven weeks, but to ask for a board of conciliation under the Lemlux act.

provision for a national highway commission which will have power to condemn or purchase right of way for roads.

It is proposed to divide the appproriation among the state and the portion to go to each state may be as high as $100,000. The object of the better road movement is to promote traffic and to better the rural postal service.

It is suggested that the senators and congressmen be urged to support the measure, and that the clubs create a sentiment in favor of the roads movement.

A committee was appointed by the club to study the subject and report the result of its investigation at the next meeting.

GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT.

West Duluth Commecial Club Considers Bill Before Congress.

The West Duluth Commercial club at its meeting last evening had meat for a lively discussion in a communication from the National Grange on the good roads question.

The communication stated that in house bill No. 15837 a fund is proposed to be expended at the rate of $10,000,000 a year for the next five years, in the improvement of the highways now existing and constructing new roads. It also contains a

TAINTED BREATH

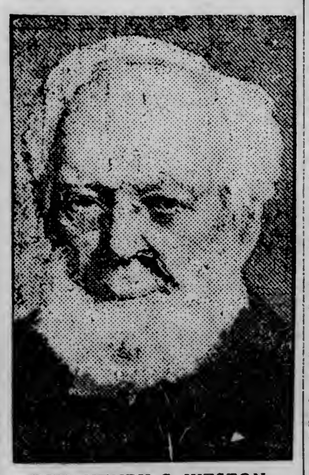

Everyone should take care to keep the breath sweet. It is a personal matter that should have constant attention. Nothing is more disagreeable to others than a person with tainted breath. It is usually caused by simple neglect of nature's laws, and is without excuse. Keep the stomach sweet and the bowels open with Beecham's Pills, and the breath is as pure as an infant's. Bad taste in the mouth and coated tongue disappear after Beecham's Pills have been used. Take them occasionally as a sure preventive against tainted breath.

REV. HENRY G. WESTON DIES

Known as "Grand Old Man of the Baptist Church."

The Rev. Dr. Henry Griggs Weston, father of Dr. J. B. Weston of Duluth, died this morning at his home in Chester, Pa. Dr. Weston of this city was with his father when death came.

of Crozer seminary ever since its foundation in 1868. Many of the most prominent clergymen of that faith in the East received their tuition under him. Of late years the condition of his health made it necessary for him to turn over the active management of the seminary to the dean. Dr. Weston was in his 89th year, and was a sufferer from rheumatism for many years. His last illness was a severe one, and death was not unexpected.

He has frequently visited in Duluth, and was a well known figure here.

BILL PROPOSES TO BAR "SICK" NURSERY STOCK.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Having for its object the prevention of the importation of diseased nursery stock, a bill has been introduced by Representative John Lamb of Virginia.

It authorizes the secretary of agriculture to extend the inspection of the fruits and vegetables or bulbs or other plants not specified in the bill, whenever he shall deem it necessary. The measure makes it unlawful to offer for entry at any port any nursery stock not accompanied by a certificate of inspection by an official expert of the country from which the importation is made. Such stock is to be held in quarantine until its freedom from dangerous insect pests or plant diseases shall have been fully established. When a subject is found to be infected with infectious disease it will be cleaned.

COURT TERM FOR HIBBING

New Plan Agreed Upon by Bar Association Committee.

Fourth Judge Will Hold Court in Both Towns.

At a meeting this morning of the committee of the St. Louis County Bar association, an agreement was made that will provide for the holding of court at both Virginia and Hibbing. This agreement upon the part of the committee represents the sentiment of the association as a whole, and it will be forwarded as a recommendation to the St. Louis county legislative delegation.

The former agreement was that court should be held at Virginia by the fourth judge for the Eleventh judicial district. The people of Hibbing objected to this arrangement, stating that most of the litigation originated at Hibbing, and demanded that they have terms of court there. The meeting this morning was for the purpose of reaching some agreement regarding this contention.

Present at the meeting, which was held in the law offices of Clarence B. Miller, were John G. Williams, Clarence B. Miller, H. Oldenberg of Carlton, Robert Stratton of Hibbing and N. B. Arnold of Eveleth.

The agreement is that when it is more convenient for the parties to the litigation, the terms of the court may be held at Hibbing. This arrangement will give terms of court at both Virginia and Hibbing. The judge will have the riglit to move the court to the most convenient place for holding the session.

The plan agreed upon this morning has the backing of the range delegation, according to Robert Stratton, who was one of the most determined members of the range delegation to hold out for a superior court upon the range, with equal and concurrent jurisdiction with the district court. N. B. Arnold of Eveleth, who has also worked faithfully for a court upon the range, expressed the opinion that the plan suggested would meet with the approval of the interests of the iron range district.

While some members of the iron range delegation have held out for the establishment of a superior court, with equal jurisdiction with the district court, they are of the opinion that such a move would not be permitted by the state legislature, and are satisfied to accept the arrangement that was agreed upon today.

There is no doubt among the members of the bar committee but that the St. Louis county legislative delegation will recommend the present plan to the legislature. It has the backing of the bar association and the representatives from the range; it will give both Virginia and Hibbing terms of court, and it will preclude the expense to litigants of traveling to Duluth for civil cases.

What promised to widen into a serious breach between the demands of the iron range delegation and the Duluth attorneys over the superior court plan, has been obviated by the agreement of the bar committee, and both the range people and the attorneys of this city are satisfied that the present arrangement is the best that could possibly be presented to the state legislature.

Both Mr. Stratton and Mr. Arnold express themselves as satisfied that the present form of request is the best possible one that the range interests could hope to secure from the legislature.

NEW TRIAL IS REFUSED

Judge Dibell Declines to Set Aside Verdict for Child.

The motion of Thomas Wood, attorney for the Duluth Street Railway company, for a new trial in the case of William McKay against the company, was denied by Judge Ensign in district court this morning.

Mr. McKay brought suit against the company for injuries sustained by his little daughter, who was struck by a street car on Lake avenue last June. The little girl's leg was amputated as a result of the accident, which, it was alleged, was due to the carelessness of the company's employes. The jury awarded $7,000 damages.

Mr. Wood based his application for a new trial on the contention that the evidence did not justify the verdict and the fact that new evidence had been discovered. The court held that the new evidence was not such that the result would have been different had it been introduced in the original trial and he denied the motion. A stay of twenty days was secured and the company will probably appeal to the supreme court.

ROOSEVELT VETOES THE CENSUS BILL; SCENTING PLAN FOR HUGE FRAUD

Decries Spoils System in Special Message to House.

Declares Taking of Count Must be Above Suspicion.

Insists That Eight-Hour Law Apply in Printing.

Washington, Feb. 6.—President Roosevelt yesterday returned to the house of representatives, without approval, the bill to provide for the thirteenth and subsequent decennial census. The president says he vetoes the bill with extreme reluctance, realizing the value of time in beginning the census, but declares it is of high consequence that it shall be conducted with exereme accuracy, that it shall not be open to the suspicion of bias on personal and political grounds, nor to being a waste of the people's money and a fraud.

"Section 7 of the act," he says, "provides in effect that appointments to the census shall be under the spoils system, for this is the real meaning of the provision that they shall be subject only to non-competitive examination. The proviso is added that they shall be selected without regard to political party affiliations. But there is only one way to guarantee that they shall be selected without regard to politics and on merit, and that is by choosing them after competitive examination from the lists of eligibles provided by the civil service examination."

Continuing, the message says:

"To provide that the clerks and other employes shall be appointed after non-competitive examination, and yet to provide that they shall be selected without regard to political party affiliations, means merely that the appointments shall be treated as the perquisites of the politicians of both parties, instead of as to the perquisites of the politicians of one party. I do not believe in the doctrine that to the victor belong the spoils, but I think even less of the doctrine that the spoils shall be divided without a fight by the professional politicians on both sides; and this would be the result of permitting the bill in its present shape to become a law.

"Both of the last censuses, the eleventh and the twelfth, were taken under a provision of law excluding competition; that is, necessitating the appointments being made under the spoils system. Every man competent to speak with authority because of his knowledge of and familiarity with the work of those censuses, has stated that the result was to produce extravagance and demoralization."

After quoting from official reports in support of his position, the president continues:

"In view of the temporary character of the work, it would be well to waive the requirements of the civil service law as regards geographical apportionment, but the appointees should be chosen by competitive examination from the lists provided by the civil service commission. The non-competitive examination in a case like this is not only vicious, but is in effect a fraud upon the public. No essential change is effected by providing that it be conducted by the civil service commission and to provide that the employes shall be selected without regard to political party affiliations is empty and misleading, unless, at the same time, it is made effective in the only way in which it is possible to make it effective, that is by providing that the examination shall be made competitive.

"I also recommend that if provision is made that the census printing work may be done outside the government printing office, it shall be explicitly provided that the government authorities shall see that the eight-hour law is applied in effective fashion to these outside offices.

"Outside of these matters, I believe that the bill is, on the whole, satisfactory and represents an improvement upon previous legislation on the subject."

NEWS OF THE WEEK AT THE CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL

Much Anxiety Felt Over Condition of Principal Smith.

Members of Public Speaking Club Hold a Debate.

Serious apprehensions are felt at the school over the condition of Principal Smith. Mr. Smith has suffered a great deal from stomach trouble, but he hung on until last Friday, when he was forced to be absent from school. At that time it was not thought it was so serious and it was expected that he would be back Monday, but his condition did not improve so he was operated upon Friday morning. The doctors operated for gall stone, but it is not known yet what the result was. At noon Friday, a bulletin appeared at school saying that Mr. Smith had survived the operation and was doing nicely. Up to this time the students had not realized that the condition of Mr. Smith was as critical as it was, and the news came as a surprise to them, and much anxiety and sympathy was felt last Monday, and the Sophomores at their meeting Wednesday sent flowers and messages to him, for which each received a note of thanks.

During his absence, Miss Taylor will act as principal, with the assistance of Mr. Denfeld.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Public Speaking club was held last Monday afternoon in the assembly room. There was a full attendance and several new members were enrolled. The meeting was opened by one of the new features of the club. This is the Public Speaking Club quartet, which has been organized and will perform at all of the meetings hereafter. The quartet does not devote itself to classical music, but gives popular airs. It is composed of Erling Mostue, tenor; Charles Evans, bass; Rodger Lerch, alto, and Cecil Gilliland, soprano and accompanist. Their first selection "Bohunkus and Josephus," was received with tremendous applause and they were compelled to answer to an encore, and sang "The Noble Duke of York." Then Charles Evans gave Lincoln's Gettysburg address, and Harlow Watkins gave Senator Beveridge's speech on "Imperialism." After this a regular debate was held on the question that "A System of Postal Savings Banks Should Be Established in the United States." Those on the affirmative were John Skadberg, Loy Levinne and Oliver Grettum, and those on the negative were Harry Altman, Stanley Lamb and Albert Codding. The contest was very exciting and the leaders on both sides were very bitter in their denunciations of each other. They would not stop in the time allowed to them and even continued their arguments after the debate was over and the decision rendered. The decision was in favor of the affirmative by a vote of two to one by the judges, Mr. Baker, Mr. Watkins and Mr. McHugh. After the program was completed, Mr. Baker announced that two suitable prizes would be given to the two men who did the best work in debate for this semester. The one thing which keeps debating from becoming very popular with the students is that there are no direct benefits, and that debaters are not appreciated nor rewarded for their work, as are athletes and others, so these prizes and honors may help a great deal to get up interest in this line. Attention was called to the fact that Pine City debaters will be here on the evening of Friday, Feb. 19. This ought to draw out a good crowd of students, for the Duluth speakers will be under a great handicap, if they are not met by a good sized audience.

Now that the first rehearsals have been held and all the parts tried out, the cast for the senior play has been announced by Mr. Custance. It is as follows: Bernice Halstead, a young lady of 18, with an affection of the heart, a love of fun and a hatred of arithmetic; Cleo Fenton, Aimy Halstead, her sister, two years younger, fond of frolic; Ruth Davis, Inez Gray, a young lady visitor, willing to share in the fun; Marjory Shipherd, Mrs. Halstead, a widow and stepmother to the Halstead girls, Dorothy Olcott; Hannah Mary Barnes, "Sis," a malden lady who keeps house for her brother, Gladys Clarke. Dwight Bradley, a fortune hunter and Mrs. Halstead's son by a former marriage, Robert Ely; Dr Burton, a young physician, Jack Hurdon; Sammy, a darky bellboy in the Halstead house, Leonard McHugh. Abraham Barnes, "Bub," a Yankee farmer still unmarried at 40, a diamond in the rough, John Quinn; attorney, Harvard Rockwell. Sheriff, Roy Kent. Several new features will be added by Mr. Custance, among them being the "Country Choir," which will add greatly to the play. It will be given Friday night, March 5.

The Zenith board enjoyed its first "fudge party" Friday afternoon. William Eckland, the business manager, entertained the board at his home and a very pleasant afternoon was spent, discussing Zeniths between bites of fudge. Miss Wells chaperoned the party and amused them by telling stories and her experiences in getting out a high school annual.

Next week the musical society will resume its work after a vacation of several weeks. Mr. Custance will endeavor to procure Miss Gladys Reynolds as the soloist for the occasion. It is not definitely known whether the usual mid-year concert will be given this year or not, but anyway Mr. Custance will do his best to get it ready for production. At chapel Friday morning the choir gave a very beautiful selection, "The Last Chord," by Sir Arthur Sullivan.

Tonight the J. Q. H. M. R. club of the high school is having its first hop at Flaaten's hall. This club is composed of boys of the senior class, who are giving this hop to take the place of the regular class dance. It with be conducted on the same plan and will be attended by the same students who usually attend the class hops. The dancing will be from 8 o'clock until 11.

The "D's" for the second football team, which were promised during the football season, and which no one expected to ever get, at last seem a reality. These "Ds" will be different than the others and very pretty. They will be white letters on a red football and there will be a "2" on one side of the D and "nd" on the other, thus signifying second team. Giving these out will help a great deal in securing second teams in future years

The sophomore class held its regular meeting last Wednesday, but there was not much business to be transacted. The hop question was not brought up, but it is understood that they will not give any at all.

NOT TO PAY FOR GRAIN SHORTAGE

Action Will be Taken by Dominion Marine Association.

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 6.—An important page in the regulations regarding the shipment of grain from lake ports will come into effect next season.

In years past the vessel owners of the Great Lakes have been compelled to submit to claims for shortages in the out-turn of grain, cargoes that in some cases made a very serious inroad on the earnings of the vessels engaged. The discrepancies between the quantity of grain alleged to have been taken on board at Port Arthur and Fort William, and the amount delivered became so great and of such frequent occurrence that some action to protect the lake carriers was deemed absolutely imperative. The matter has been discussed by vessel owners on both sides of the line, and recently, at a meeting of the Lake Carriers' association at Detroit, it was decided upon by the course of action decided upon by the Dominion Marine association.

A few days ago the grain section of the Canadian organization met at the King Edward hotel and agreed that what is known as the "flax seed" clause should be substituted for the ordianry shortage clause in bills of lading on cargoes from Fort William and Port Arthur. This clause provides for a limitation of the liability of the out-turn on every cargo to one-half bushel on every thousand, and will be insisted upon by all lake carriers next season. In return the vessel owners agree to abandon any claim in the future for over-run, where they have been accustomed to collect freight charges for the surplus load.

The matter will be pretty well discussed at the annual meeting of the Dominion Marine association, to be held in the board of trade room at Ottawa, on the 11th inst.

TWO HARBORS MAN FALLS TO DEATH

Louis Larson Killed by Falling From Trestle Near Gilbert.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Louis Larson, aged 30, was almost instantly killed yesterday afternoon while working on a trestle at Crooked Lake, near Gilbert.

Larson was working with a gang of men on the trestle and was walking a plank when he slipped and fell to the ground, about eighteen feet below, striking on his head. He was brought to the Fabiola hospital here, where it was found he had a fractured skull. He lived only a short while after reaching the hospital. Deputy Coroner Gleason was summoned and he took charge of the body which was taken to Two Harbors. His parents came for the body. Larson was a single man.

Charles Welcome, a local restaurant keeper, died yesterday afternoon of rheumatism. Mr. Welcome came here from Sparta a short while ago, where he had been for a year, and had been suffering from rheumatism for some time, his wife, who survives him, having charge of the restaurant. Mr. Welcome was about 45 years old, and his death came as a surprise to his friends. The body was shipped to Ashland, Wis., today.

SANITARY DAIRY IS NOW ASSURED

Virginia Commercial Club Proceeding With Many Needs of Hour.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Commercial club last night instructed the secretary to request the board of county commissioners to build a hospital for consumptives.

An order was issued at the same time for $330, payable to the council, to be used toward the improvement of the Gilbert road. President Osborn, of the city council, was present and asked for an expression of the club as to the advisability of making the Gilbert road permanent. A motion to that effect showed the sense of the club meeting to be unanimous.

The president was authorized to send an additional committee to St. Paul to help the range in getting a district judge, provided the committee which is there now, desired further assistance.

An invitation was extended to the St. Louis county club, which includes all the commercial and farmers's clubs of the range and Duluth, to hold its next meeting in Virginia. The County club's next meeting will be held some time in April.

A bill for $15 was received from the State Commercial club as the Virginia club's membership fee. It was allowed.

Dr. Lenont, chairman of the committee to look up the matter of establishing a sanitary dairy, reported that the capital stock for such a concern should be placed at $10,000 and that $5,000 be paid in before any steps be taken to establish such a dairy. He said the United States Steel company would offer them any lands they desired to locate on that did not contain ore. Shares in this stock are to be placed at $100. The articles of association have been drawn up. Dr. Lenont's associates on the committee are: R. C. Pickering, B. F. Britts, J. D. Lenont and O. H. Griggs.

The council was requested to delay repairing the city hall until the legislature took some definite action in regard to establishing a district court for the range.

President Lenont states that he has had a conversation with W. H. Cook, president of the Rainy Lake railroad, in regard to the Canadian Pacific establishing its shops and terminals in Virginia, and that Mr. Cook told him that Virginia should have every consideration. Mr. Cook said he would do all he could to influence the other officials of the road in favor of Virginia.

Up to last night's meeting only twenty-eight of the club's members had paid their dues. There are 128 members in the club and some 200 letters had been sent out a week ago, requesting members to come to last night's meeting and pay up. The club has appointed a committee, consisting of William Rooney and F. C. Whitney, to go out and collect this money and to solicit new members.

The meeting being an annual affair new officers were elected as follows: President, Dr. C. B. Lenont, re-elected by acclamation; vice president, A. C. Osborn; secretary, O. H. Griggs, re-elected by acclamation; treasurer, D. W. Stebbins. The secretary declined any pay for his services.

DOING MUCH LOGGING.

Extensive Operations Being Carried On North of Virginia.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Patrick Greaney, proprietor of a general merchandise store in the valley of the Willow, west of Gheen, was here last evening on his way home from Duluth. Mr. Greaney, who owns several forties of timber lands in that section, is numbered among the very earliest of Mesaba explorers, having sunk the first pit to the ore body near the old Mesaba in 1892, at which time he was engaged in running a logging camp for the Howe Lumber company. He has followed the life of a cruiser and estimator for many years and was at one time connected with W. H. Cook in the early days of the Rainy Lake road, going over the proposed route of the new line before the work of construction started, about seven years ago. Mr Greaney says the north country is holding out great inducements in the way of agriculture, which is bound to attract the industrious and lead to its development in the near future. He also says that a great amount of logging is being done in that section this winter, besides numerous contractors being engaged in getting out ties and pulpwood.

Frank Gilmor, manager of the logging operations for the Northern Lumber company, is making preparations to establish several camps in the district north of Buhl, and has a crew of men there engaged in doing repair work preparatory to logging the coming summer. This tract contains about 100,000,000 feet of white pine, and the cut will be shipped to Cloquet for manufacture. About 300 men will be put on the job.

GILBERT WILL GROW.

Annexation of Sparta Addition Will Help the Range Village.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Indications are Gilbert will grow by leaps this year. With the taking in of the Sparta addition, there will now be more friendship between the two sections. The Steel corporation has promised to install a water works system from the lake through the whole town, and the cost for water will be at a minimum. This means a great saving to the town. A large number of Sparta residents who contemplated moving away will now move to the Gilbert, materially increasing the size of the town.

The Virginia Water & Light company is already in the field looking over the lighting proposition. If they get a suitable franchise from the council it is believed that they will furnish the light from their Virginia plant.

The annual election in the village will take place March 9, and some hot fights are looked for, especially as there are some very well known men in the Sparta part who know how to run the affairs of the village. James Falk, a former Eveleth resident, is already in the field for president, while others are thinking about entering the field.

ATTACKED BY AN OWL.

Explorers Have Unusual Experience With Peaceful Bird.

Tower, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—While an owl is credited with being a peaceful bird rather given to wisdom than to fighting, Messrs. Scott and Berier, timber explorers, who have a camp in the Rice Lake country contend that the bird is not as harmless as many contend.

They have been in town this week and have related to their friends an incident that they say shows the owl can be quite ferocious if it wants to be. Without any claims to nature-faking they say that a few nights ago while Mr. Scott left their camp to procure some firewood he was set upon by a huge owl, which dug at him with its powerful talons, scratching his face, tearing his coat and making things so interesting that he had to cry for help. Mr. Berirer came running to the rescue and proceeded to unfasten the talons of the bird, which were sunk into his partner's clothing. They tied the bird's legs together and bringing it to camp placed it in a cage and may leter present it to some public park. The incident is said to be unheard of by all old hunters.

REMARKS INDISCREET

President Codding Takes Superintendent Denfeld to Task.

Claims His Speech at Commercial Club May Do Harm.

Dr. Charles L. Codding, president of the Duluth school board provided unexpected excitement at the meeting of that body last night in the board room of the Central high school, when he openly criticised Supt. R. E. Denfeld for certain remarks made by him at the Commercial club, last week, before a gathering of Duluth business men.

In the talk for which the president of the board took the superintendent to task, Mr. Denfeld took up the matter of the underpaid teachers, the incompetency of some of them, laying stress on the fact that the teachers are the foundation on which a school system either makes good or falls down. He said that the great curse of the school system from the Atlantic to the Pacific was the small amount of money paid for instruction, and predicted that the system would not be what it should be until more money was offered, so that the best talent could be secured.

It was for these sayings that Dr. Codding took Mr. Denfeld to task.

He characterized the superintendent's remarks as "indiscreet" and said that "great harm" might come from them.

Supt. Denfeld replied briefly to Mr. Codding. He said that Mr. Codding had not heard the speech and that he had taken "disjointed statements" published in the papers as a basis for criticism.

"I object seriously to being misquoted and misrepresented," said the superintendent, as he concluded his remarks.

Mr. Codding drew a newspaper clipping from his pocket and asked if the superintendent had uttered certain passages printed there. Mr. Denfeld said "not in those words."

Mr. Codding said that Mr. Denfeld had made his remarks openly, and that he had chosen that time to state what he had to say. He said that there was but one man responsible for the school system, and let it be inferred that the superintendent was shifting his responsibility on the teachers by calling them the "fundamental principle in the school system."

The meeting up to the time of the clash had been of a routine nature. The plans for the new C. C. Salter school were received from the architects, German & Lignell. The structure as now planned will be two stories high. The cost has not been estimated. An effort will be made to have the structure ready by the opening of the next fall term.

In his monthly report to the board, Mr. Denfeld said that the schools had been kept running with difficulty during the past month on account of illness among the instructors and lack of substitutes. He again laid stress on the fact that good teachers were hard to obtain.

He also said that the great inflow of the younger children into the schools was crowding some of the buildings. He said that in both the East and West ends the schools were taxed to the limit.

ARNOLD TELLS ABOUT FARMING

Delivers Stereopticon Lecture Before Boys at the Y. M. C. A.

A stereopticon lecture on farming in St. Louis county was given before fifty boys at the Y. M. C. A. last night by L. B. Arnold, land commissioner for the Duluth & Iron Range railroad. The boys were greatly interested. A number of men were also in the audience.

Mr. Arnold showed how, in a few years, a young man could make a forty or fifty-acre tract of St. Louis county land pay $2,500 to $3,000 a year, besides supporting himself. He contrasted the farmer's life of freedom with the life of drudgery of the office man in town, and the difference in earnings of the two men.

The speaker said the citizens of St. Louis county have not awakened to the importance of land culture and the magnitude that it had assumed near Duluth. Stereopticon views of the dairy farm of John Uno Sebenius, the celery farm of G. G. Hartley at Island, and the farm of S. F. Snively, were shown.

There were also numerous other views, showing farming conditions in different parts of the country, and other views, still more interesting to the boys, showing fish and game to be found in the Whiteface river district. The talk was supplementary to the series which provides for discourses on agriculture every two weeks by well known men who are posted on farming, and agricultural conditions in this portion of the state.

BRIDGE CAR NOT RUNNING

Aerial Ferry Passengers Are Imprisoned Over the Canal.

Two Loads of People Caught During the Night.

The aerial bridge went out of commission again last night, and a crowd of about fifteen people hung over the canal for three hours before they could get ashore. The ferry is still out of order today.

The bridge first went out of commission shortly after 6 o'clock last night, and about twenty-five people were imprisoned on the car, as it hung over the center of the canal. One of the motors was out of order, which caused the stopping of the ferry.

It took about an hour for the car to be operated to the bridge approach at the side of the canal by hand power. When it got to within ten feet of the side it stopped, and some of the bolder spirits climbed ashore on a ladder, stretched from the car to the approach.

Those who remained upon the car, however, were released shortly after 7 o'clock, and before 8 o'clock the bridge was in operation again. The operator said it was all right, and could be depended upon to continue in service during the remainder of the night, but before midnight it was again out of commission, and hanging over the canal, with fifteen people, on their way to their Park Point homes, on board.

There was again some difficulty in getting the car to shore by hand power, and it was after 2 o'clock before the last passenger had left the car, and wended his weary way homeward.

The passengers experienced no discomfort from the cold, for the heating plant was in good working order, but the men and women were naturally in anything but a pleasant frame of mind, and the time dragged very slowly to those on the car. To add to the dreariness of the situation, smoke caused by burning insulation on some of the wires filled the cabins. When the car stopped each time, the lights went out, making the situation all the more disagreeable, but the fault was remedied, and the lights turned on again.

Park Point residents were much disgusted today with the conditions of affairs. They were greatly inconvenienced, and in order to be at work on time, some of them walked across the ice to Superior, and then came to Duluth on the street cars. Ice near the canal is not sufficiently strong to safely bear the weight of a man. It is understood the Park Point Improvement club will take the matter up at its next meeting, and recommend to the city that the bridge be placed in charge of the city engineering department, with the hiring of no one left to that department, instead of leaving it with the board of public works.

The board of public works this morning, about 10 o'clock, put a gasoline launch in commission to ferry people across the canal, and it will continue in operation until the bridge is repaired.

Back From the West.

Capt. August Isaacson, vice president of the Lake Superior & Nevada Development company, returned yesterday from a trip to the West, where he visited the U. S. Grant mine. found that the pavement of the main street was under seven inches of rain water, with more falling, and though Columbia, Sacramento, San Francisco and other cities visited were not under quite so much water, they were wetter than necessary to insure the success of next season's crops.

On his return trip Capt. Isaacson stopped off at Reno, Nev., with the idea of going over to Lida to visit the Big Blue, another property belonging to his company, but owing to the snow in the mountains he concluded that this would be a useless journey at this season of the year.

ICE CUTTING ABOUT DONE

Companies No Longer Count on Lake Freezing Over.

Reserve Supply in Duluth Completely Exhausted Last Year.

Thousands of tons of winter's coldness, in the form of crystalized blocks of St. Louis river water, have been stored away by the ice companies of Duluth, in preparation for the hot months of summer.

This winter has been a most auspicious one for the dealer in ice. Sharp cold spells have frozen the surface of the river to a good depth, and the ice is clear and unbroken for long stretches. There has also been little snow to hinder the cutting operations.

Under such favorable conditions the ice men are now, at this early date, about through with their season's cut, and have stored away a big enough supply of ice to meet the demands of next summer, even though it should be exceptionally hot. In every respect this has been a good season for the ice man.

According to Edward L. Hart, manager of the Duluth Ice company, that company has cut and stored in its ice houses up the river 35,000 tons of ice, and besides that, for the past week or more, have shipped over the Northern Pacific to Duluth packing and cold storage houses on the average of thirty carloads per day.

Duluth's total consumption of ice a year is approximately 50,000 tons. The entire supply put up by the ice companies of this city is probably about 75,000 tons each year, which allows for about a one-third shrinkage.

"If the lake should not freeze to a depth right for ice cutting this winter, we will probably cut more ice up the river later in the season," said Mr. Hart. "We always attempt to fill our icehouses in the East end each season as a reserve store, and have always managed to keep them at least partially filled until last summer, when every icehouse in the East end was emptied. This reserve supply amounts to about 10,000 to 15,000 tons, or at least we try to keep it at that; but for the past three winters we have been unable to cut ice on the lake, as it never froze to a greater depth than five or six inches."

Few people know how close Duluth came to an ice famine last summer. At the end of the season there was practically no ice in the city, and the only supply of any size near at hand was about 200 tons at Proctor. The continued hot weather, late into September, caused Minneapolis and the range towns to call on Duluth to aid them in making their supplies last through the season. This, with the home demand, dragged the Duluth supply almost down to nothing.

The new ordinance prohibiting ice-cutting on the bay has forced the ice companies to get all their ice up the river. For this reason there are now in the city empty icehouses of about 30,000 tons capacity. For this reason, if the lake does not freeze this year, additions will have to be made on the icehouses up the river to take care of the reserve supply.

Not many years ago every block of ice used in Duluth was cut from Lake Superior. The lake could then be counted on to freeze regularly every winter. But for some unaccountable reason the winters at the Head of the Lakes are growing milder, and the freezing of Lake Superior is no longer a certainty, by a good deal.

YAKIMA VALLEY FRUIT LANDS

Few sections of the country are blessed so abundantly by nature as the YAKIMA VALLEY which lies in the Cascade range. The soil is a volcanic ash, rich in the elements necessary to a vigorous plant growth. Man working in harmony with nature has supplied the means whereby this wonderful soil, hitherto productive only in a mediocre way, has been changed into one of the most fertile tracts in the world. Without water, the land is only moderately productive. Through a wonderful system of irrigating canals this land has been converted into a fruit growing country that is renowned from coast to coast. YAKIMA FRUIT is known everywhere, and the markets of the world demand it.

As an investment, YAKIMA VALLEY land is high class and profitable. As a place to go and live with the idea of making fruit growing a business, it is without parallel. The climate is healthful.

Yakima Valley Grapes

The YAKIMA FRUITS command the highest prices in the world. A 10-acre tract of this malvelous land will easily net from $3,000 to $10,000 a year income.

TUESDAY, FEB. 16, round trip tickets to NORTH YAKIMA will be on sale by the Northern Pacific company, for $52.50, good for 25 days from date of issue. This is about one-half the regular fare. For particulars, call on or write to it is known that such action would be opposed by others and therefore a motion to print the statement as a public document may be accompanied by sharp and acrimonious debate.

Naval Appropriation Bill.

It is expected the naval appropriation bill will be reported to the senate Monday, and that it will contain the provisions adopted by the house for the construction of two 26,000-ton battleships, and putting the marine corps back on battleships.

The senate and house are in substantial agreement on both of these propositions, and therefore it appears that the bill will be passed without much debate, and that agreement in conference will be comparatively easy.

The harmony prevailing between the two branches of congress in regard to practically every important feature of the bill is said to be due largely to the work of Secretary Newberry in appearing personally before the two naval committees.

Gaines Is Squelched.

Private claimants by the score had their innings in the house of representatives. Mr. Mann provoked laughter by questioning the value of two Kentucky thoroughbred horses, and he charged that the committee had accepted the valuation of the animals as fixed by "an idiot" as against that of the claimants' committee to conduct his affairs.

But it was left to Hepburn of Iowa, Macon of Arkansas and Gaines of Tennessee to furnish the excitement. The Iowa member protested against the reservation of objections to bills, claiming that objections should be made outright or not at all. Mr. Macon, who was doing much of the reserving, declared that his sole object was to elicit explanations which would enable him to "object intelligently." The speaker became involved in the controversy and was called upon to make a ruling, and then Mr. Gaines threw the house into an uproar by charging that the rules prohibited a "square deal" to claimants. He grew so vehement that the speaker ordered a deputy sergeant-at-arms to require him to take his seat. Mr. Gaines, however, sat down before the official reached him.

Waterways Commission.

Provision for a waterways commission probably will be made in the rivers and rabors bill, which is to be reported to the house within a few days. The sub-committee which has had the matter under consideration, has agreed upon a tentative plan, which is for a committee consisting entirely of members of the senate and house.

According to this plan, the body will be similar to the present monetary commission, acting entirely in an advisory capacity to congress. It will be empowered to summon witnesses and to gather information from every possible source. The majority of the members of the house committee on rivers and harbors improvements are understood to favor the plan

Another long session over the nomination of William D. Crum, the negro collector of customs at Charleston, S. C., who was reappointed by President Roosevelt, was held by the senate and no vote was reached.

The Democrats made it clear they do not intend that the appointment should be voted upon at the present session.

Autos For Taft.

The senate concluded consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill, carrying an aggregate of about $11,500,000. A conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was agreed to. It appropriates $12,000 for the purchase, care and maintenance of automobiles for the president, and $150,000 to enable the secretary of agriculture to continue to combat the foot and mouth disease in horses and cattle.

A resolution was adopted directing the committee on military affairs to investigate military posts and various phases of army administration.

NO MORE LIQUOR AT COUNTRY CLUB

Directors Decide to Stop Practice of Selling Drinks.

No more will fancy drinks be served to golfers on the links of the Northland Country club, for at a meeting of the directors yesterday, it was decided to stop the practice of selling liquor in any form, at the club.

All the liquors in stock will be disposed of, or sent back to the wholesale dealers.

The matter of membership was also taken up, and it was decided to limit the membership to 225 men, and the same number of women. There are now 400 members.

FLEET ON LAST LAP

world. It left Hampton Roads Dec. 16, 1907, and when it again anchors in that port, Feb. 22, it will have been gone one year and sixty-eight days. No accident has marked the progress of the greatest armed fleet that ever made such a long voyage. The cruise has been in every respect an unqualified success.

The trip has been watched with the greatest interest by all foreign powers and wherever the vessels called, South America, Australia, Japan, China, Ceylon, Egypt and the ports of the Mediterranean, the officers have been given hearty official and private welcome.

The fleet left Hampton Roads under Admiral Robley D. Evans, who conducted it as far as San Francisco. Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas then took command, but was succeeded May 15 by Rear Admiral Sperry, who brought the vessels home.

Rear Admiral Arnold's third squadron of the Atlantic fleet, consisting of the battleships Maine, Mississippi, New Hampshire and Idaho and the scout cruisers Chester, Birmingham and Salem, will meet Admiral Sperry's fleet in the Atlantic about 1,000 miles from the coast and then, with Admiral Arnold's ships as an escort, the world touring vessels will proceed towards Hampton Roads, where they will be received by President Roosevelt on Washington's birthday.

The difficult operation of getting the sixteen huge battleships out of the narrow war basin of the port and under way was accomplished with a skill and perfection of maneuvering and detail which won the admiration of all the foreign naval officers who witnessed the proceedings critically from land and sea.

Admiral Sperry directed the whole operation from the after-bridge of the Connecticut. At 8:30 the signal to unmoor was given, and the great chains holding the ships to the buoys were loosened one by one until the vessels were held to their anchorage by only a single strand.

At 8:55 a stream of multi-colored signal flags on the flagship communicated the order to get under the way the Georgia, Nebraska, the New Jersey, the Rhode Island and the Virginia, lying at the rear of the basin. As the flags came fluttering down five minutes later the designated battleships cast off their last lines and freed Leviathans seeking escape, they slowly swung their noses in the direction of the breaches in the breakwater.

Twisting and turning to the clanging of engine gongs, they crept out, the Georgia leading the way with Lieut. Commander George W. Kline on the bridge.

practicable for a vessel of this type and class, and will have the highest practicable radius of action. The arrangement of her main battery guns is such as to permit a broadside fire 25 per cent greater than that of the broadside fire of any battleship now built, or, so far as is known, under construction. Her defensive qualities, other than those dependent upon armor protection, are such as to give the maximum degree of protection to all the vital portions by means of unusually effective compartmental subdivision, so that in conjunction with her armor protection, the defensive qualities of this vessel are believed to be distinctly superior to those of any battleship hitherto designed. The hull is protected by a water line belt or armor eight feet in width, whose maximum thickness is eleven inches. This armor belt gives effective protection to the boilers, machinery and magazine spaces.

The plans for the Delaware were prepared by the board of construction in competition with plans submitted by various naval architects and shipbuilding companies, and submitted to a special board under the presidency of ex-Assistant Secretary of the Navy Newberry, and later approved by congress.

The ship's armament will consist of a main battery of ten 12-inch breech-loading rifles, and her secondary battery will be fourteen 5-inch rapid-fire guns, four 3-pounder saluting guns, four 1-pounder semi-automatic guns, two 3-inch field pieces and two machines of 30-caliber. She has two submerged torpedo tubes.

The Delaware will have a displacement on trial of 20,000 tons, or 2,100 tons greater than the British Dreadnaught, and 750 tons greater than Great Britain's latest vessel of that type, the Vanguard.

REPORTERS ARE HELD IN HAMMERSTEIN'S CASE.

New York, Feb. 6.—Frederick M. Hall and James J. Doyle, accused of assaulting Oscar Hammerstein, the impresario, in front of the Knickerbocker hotel, were held in $300 bail for trial in special sessions by Magistrate Finn.

Finn, before announcing the decision, reviewed the testimony and referred scathingly to the letter written by Mr. Hammerstein regarding the reporters.

"Any man with a drop of red blood in his veins," he said, "would naturally resent such a letter."

JAP TOTAL IN DISPUTE

Favorable Report Sure.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 6.—Nothing new has developed in the California legislature in regard to the anti-Japanese measures since the assembly decided to postpone further consideration of the segregation bill until next Wednesday.

Governor Gillette is here and will be until the first of next week, when he will return to Sacramento. He refused to divulge the reasons which led Speaker Phillip Stanton of the assembly, yesterday to make a dramatic appeal for delay.

It is considered significant that Senator Caminetti, who introduced the school bill in the upper house should have referred the measure to the committee on education. He is himself a member of this committee and it is generally believed no matter what the fate of the bill may be later, it will, at least, receive a favorable report.

Speaker Stanton said:

"Regardless of the merits of this bill, I believe it should at least be given re-consideration. We are treading on very dangerous ground, and I have information, although my lips are sealed, that leads me to make this appeal for postponement. Let it go over until Wednesday, at which time it is probable the governor will be in a position to explain more fully the reasons of the federal government's request for delay on the matter."

Senator Caminetti, who introduced the Johnson Japanese school segregation bill in the upper branch said:

"Since the question of admitting Japanese children in our public schools is again the subject of consideration and it is claimed that the state has no jurisdiction thereof, owing to our treaty with Japan, it becomes the duty of the legislature to consider it if for no other reason than to assert the sovereignty of California and the right to conduct and control our public school system rights which are not and cannot, under our system of government, be the subject of treaty stipulation with any foreign government. This is appears to me, we should do, lest, by acquiescence and silence, we stimulate the movement now encroaching upon the rights of the states."

Anti-Alien Bill Passes.

Carson, Nev., Feb. 6.—The Nevada assembly has passed the Giffen anti-alien land bill, which provides that no Asiatic, including the Japanese, shall own land or land mortgages in the state.

The senate showed its feeling concerning anti-Japanese legislation when the Dodge resolution from the assembly, asking for a war fleet in the Pacific, which also referred to the Japanese as a "menace to America's peace," came up. The resolution passed the assembly unanimously, and was reported favorably by the committee in the senate, but when it was placed on third reading, Woodbury, a Republican, moved that the measure be tabled and his motion prevailed without a dissenting vote.

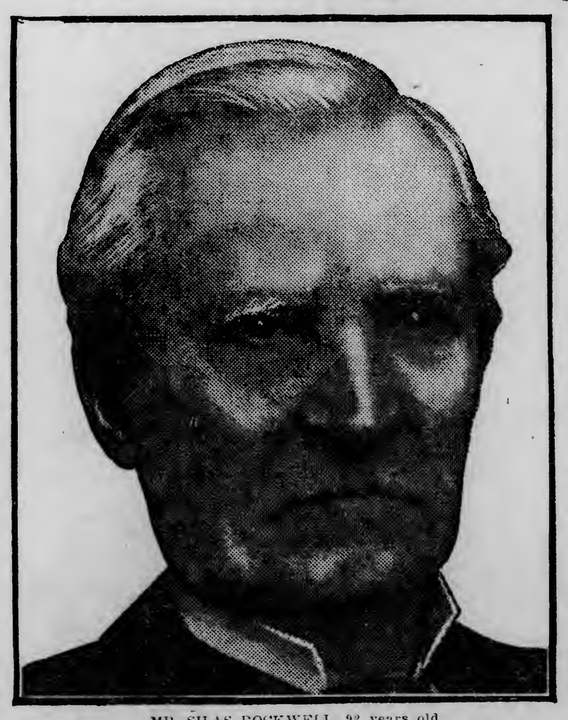

The Giffen anti-Japanese resolution is held in the committee on judiciary and prediction is made that should the committee release it, it will meet with defeat.

Cabinet Discusses Japs.

Washington, Feb. 6.—While President Roosevelt is greatly displeased with the action yesterday of the California assembly, in passing the Japanese school segregation bill, he is apparently satisfied that Governor Gillette and Speaker Stanton take his view of the situation, and that they will impress upon the assembly the importance of reconsidering its action, when the matter comes up again next Wednesday.

The Japanese question occupied much of the time of the regular cabinet meeting yesterday, though it probably did not get beyond the discussion stage.

LONGBOAT THE WINNER

The Indian Defeats Alfred Shrubb, the English Runner.

The Race Is Exciting and Thousands Go Wild With Delight.

Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Feb. 6.—Maintaining an even, swinging stride, that rarely varied throughout the race, Tom Longboat the Onondago Indian from Canada, wrested the laurels of an indoor race last night at Madison Square Garden when victory seemed almost within the grasp of the plucky Englishman, Alfred Shrubb, who collapsed in the twenty-fifth mile, leaving the Indian to finish the long race of twenty-six miles and 385 yards alone.

Longboat's time for the race was 2 hours, 53 minutes, 40 2-5 seconds, which is nearly eight minutes behind the record made by Dorando, the Italian, in his race with Johnny Hayes, the Olympic marathon winner, last fall. The Indian finished in fine fettle and was in no wise distressed.

The vast garden was thronged with excited thousands, who cheered the two contestants almost continually throughout the race. Shrubb, as was predicted by his followers, went out in front at the gun fire, and with a pace that was remarkable, he gained lap after lap on his Indian rival, who continued to run in even, steady fashion. Only once or twice, and that after the first fifteen miles had been passed, did Longboat increase his pace as if to test the endurance of his English rival. Then finding that Shrubb was still strong, he fell back into the old stride again. Nearing the twenty-fifth mile, Shrubb became visibly distressed and frequently had to walk, during which periods Longboat regained several laps. Longboat now cut out a fast pace and the Englishman unable to follow, lost his lead. In the fifth lap of the twenty-fifth mile, Shrubb collapsed and gave up the contest.

Shrubb's almost perfect action in running brought him the admiration of the crowd, expressed frequently in cheers and shouts of encouragement. Longboat, with his graceful lope, however, had a host of friends, who did not seem to lose confidence as the Englishman drew into a comfortable lead.

"Shrubb can never stand that gait to the end," shouted one of the Indian's admirers, and it truly seemed as if this must be so, especially as Shrubb finished the five-mile distance in 27:54, not so very far from the time it takes to cover the distance when trained men are running at their best. Shrubb was two and one-half laps ahead at this time.

It was noted here that while Shrubb had gained two laps in the first three miles, he had added only an additional half-lap in the next two miles.

Maintaining his fast pace, Shrubb increased his lead to six laps at the twelfth mile, but the Indian was not to be worried out of his long, swinging stride, until near the fifteenth mile, when he shook himself out and picked up about fifty yards. Shrubb, however, continued to open the distance between himself and the pursuing Indian, and the fifteenth mile found the Englishman six and a half laps ahead. His time for the fifteen miles was 1 hour, 28 minutes and 28 4-5 seconds.

Shrubb's running was a revelation to the spectators, who continually cheered the flying Englishman as he moved around the track with a machine-like motion that carried him steadily further away from Longboat. The Indian sought further to cut down his adversary's lead, but Shrubb showed no traces of weakening and continued his fast pace undiminished. Unable to keep up, Longboat dropped his sprint and fell back to his old pace with the result that Shrubb secured another lap, making seven laps in all, at the seventeenth mile.

During the running of the nineteenth and twentieth miles, Shrubb put on a fine burst of speed and, though the Indian responded gamely, he placed the eighth lap between himself and Longboat. The time for the 20-mile mark was 2 hours, 1 minute and 24 4-5 seconds.

The Englishman's cheering admirers were given a heart thrill when Shrubb, in the twenty-first mile, suddenly stopped to change his shoes! During his brief absence from the track, Longboat gained one of his lost laps, but Shrubb, coming on the course again, started out at a lively clip, with the evident intention of regaining the lost lap.

Tom Flanagan, the Indian's old manager, brought Longboat's wife out on the track to encourage her husband.

Pandemonium broke loose in the garden during the twenty-second mile, when Shrubb came down to a walk for a few yards. It was apparent that he was in some distress, but he was soon off again with a swinging stride, though it could be seen that his pace had slowed perceptibly. Cheered on by his bride, and the shouts of his friends, Longboat increased his pace and soon began to rapidly cut down the lead of the now fast tiring Englishman.

The end of the twenty-third mile found Longboat, now only four laps behind Shrubb, who frequently broke his pace and walked to rest himself. The Indian kept relentlessly on and in the first half of the twenty-fourth mile brought forth a hurricane of applause, by regaining another lap on his rival.

Shrubb was in evident distress and it was only a game effort on his part that kept him struggling on. Longboat regained another lap at the end of the twenty-fourth mile, and was now setting pace with Shrubb following him manfully.

The thousands of spectators were now in a turmoil of excitement. They yelled and cheered as the Indian slowly moved up abreast of the Englishman, who was now but a scant lap ahead as the pair moved on in the second lap of the twenty-fifth mile. Longboat ran without any seeming distress, while Shrubb, unable to run any farther fell back into a walk.

Longboat quickly took the lead and the Englishman unable to continue further, collapsed on the track, leaving the triumphant Longboat to finish the race alone, a winner.

Previous to the Marathon the five-mile match race between Robert Hallen of New York and Mike Spring of Brooklyn, in which Spring was allowed a handicap of ten seconds, was won by Hallen by 1¾ laps. Time, 27:20 1-5.

HARD AFTER JEFFRIES

Hugh McIntosh, Fight Promoter, Coming Over to Get Champion.

Takes No Stock in Statement That Jeff Won't Fight.

New York, Feb. 6.—Despite the many offers that Jim Jeffries is receiving from fight promoters from coast to coast and the former champion's declaration that in the event of his re-entering the ring he will fight in this country and not in Australia, Hugh McIntosh, the enterprising promoter of the Antipodes who staged the Burns-Johnson match, is headed for this country with the expressed intention of signing up the one-time boilermaker for a bout with the big negro at his stadium at Rushcutters Bay. McIntosh is not at all perturbed by Jeffries' persistent statement that he will never again take up the sport that made his name famous among sporting men the world over, and insists that he will offer big Jim a purse the magnitude of which will cause him to reconsider his decision.

The gloved sport is booming in the island continent and the far-seeing promoter plans to maintain the interest that has already been evidenced by staging the great attraction at his new stadium. He also has made public the announcement that he has taken Tommy Burns in charge and that the shrewd Canadian will be managed by him from now on. It is planned to send Burns on a tour of the world as the leading man of a proposed play, but as yet nothing definite has been determined upon. This, in a manner, bears out the reports from Australia that Burns backs McIntosh and McIntosh is backing Burns.

Sporting men are continually talking about the proposed Jeffries-Johnson match, and the great interest that contest would create were it finally held is foreshadowed by the betting that is already in evidence, although there is, of course, the proviso of the men meeting attached to all wagers. Hearing that the negro sporting contingent of Chicago has raised $25,000 to place on their hero, fight fans of the far coast have collected an equal amount and stand ready to place it at even figures that Jeffries will defeat the negro should they meet. Several well-known followers of the ring game in the West have expressed their opinion of Jeffries and, judging from their statements, the confidence of his backers does not papear to have been misplaced.

Jim Coffroth, the well-known fight promoter, declares himself as follows: "Jeffries was a surprise to me. Of course, I have seen him many times in Los Angeles, but I was afraid that he would lose that speed. He's as lively on his feet as a schoolboy and he has not forgotten how to fight. All I want is to handle the match when he signs with Johnson."

Sam Berger, manager, promoter and heavyweight boxer, believes that Jeffries would win easily. He said: "There was never another man like Jeffries. He can be as good as he ever was if he wants to knuckle down, and in the old days there was no man who worked as hard as Jeff. All he needs to fit himself for a fight is for him to go on the road."

It is a notable fact, the manner in which the manager of Sam Langford speaks of the prowess of the former heavyweight king. His statement is as follows: "There is only one man in the world barred by Langford, and that fellow is Jim Jeffries. After seeing him in action on the stage I am more firmly convinced than ever that Langford has done the right thing in drawing the Jeffries line. He can get back any time he wants to, and when he does it will be a sorry day for Johnson."

MAY SUTTON TO DEFEND TITLE

Woman Tennis Champion to Enter Philadelphia Tourney.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 6.—Miss May Sutton, world's champion woman tennis player, is planning to play in the national championship tournament which will be held at Wissahickon Heights, near Philadelphia, early in June. For several years she has not competed for the championship of the United States, but has played for the world's championship, winning this honor twice. She may also decide to go to England this year to take part in the next Wimbledon contests for the world's championship again.

Miss Sutton plans to play in the Niagara-on-the-lake tournament for Canadian championship this summer, but will not enter the tri-state championship at Cincinnati. She has won the tri-state honors, and has a $350 silver trophy cup to serve as a reminder of her skill at the courts of Cincinnati.

COLLEGE SPORTS ON THE GRILL

Important Football Rules and Schedules to be Changed.

(By Edward R. Bushnell.)

Football has come into the limelight of the winter athletic season with the approach of the annual meeting of the football rules committee and the perennial report that Harvard and Princeton are about to patch up old differences and meet on the gridiron this fall for the first time in about a dozen years. Unusual interest is attached to both of these circumstances. It is understood that some radical propositions will be presented soon by the committee for the amendment of the present rules, and if half of them become rules, the character of the game will be greatly changed. As for the Harvard-Princeton alliance, if it should become a reality it will result in a decided shakeup in the schedules of the big colleges the coming season, and may result in some hard feeling as well.

The changes proposed in the football rules, upon which there is unanimity of opinion, are two in number:

First—That the forward pass should be changed in order to bring about more kicking in the regular forward pass formations, and that the other restrictions upon its use should be greatly modified.

Second—That the value of a field goal should be reduced.

The most pronounced advocate of changes in the forward pass is Glenn S. Warner of the Carlisle Indians. Warner has probably done more to develop the forward pass than any other man in the coaching business, and whatever he suggests is entitled to respectful attention. Warner's most radical suggestion in this connection is that the committee should abolish the rule which provides that the forward pass shall always cross the line of scrimmage five yards from center. There is no doubt that this change would be welcomed everywhere, for there is hardly a single championship game played in which one or more touchdowns are not disallowed on this account. And when such a decision is made, the dissatisfaction is deep. Michigan's coaches have not yet gotten over their anger at a decision of this kind, which took away from them their only touchdown against Pennsylvania in 1907.

Warner has one more suggestion, to the effect that the forward pass be eliminated altogether, and that a rule be passed permitting a kicked ball to be caught on the fly by either side. This, Warner says, would eliminate the basketball feature of the game and would make it football in reality. Another change the Indian coach suggests is that the rule makers repeal the provision that the runner in taking the ball on a direct pass go five yards outside of center.

In reference to reducing the value of the drop and place kick there has long been a feeling that such legislation should be passed, some even contending that two points are enough for a goal from field. The demand for this change became stronger than ever last fall because of the great increase in the number of field goals, especially goals from placement. The increase in kicking has been received with pleasure in all sections. The committee may feel that reducing the value of the field goal from four points to two, or even reducing it at all would be unwise at this time. But if the kickers continue to score as consistently as during 1907 some reduction will have to be made sooner or later.

FAST ICEBOATS ARE TO CONTEST

Greatest Regatta Held on Green Bay, Saturday and Sunday.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The two greatest iceboat regattas ever held on Green Bay will occur within twenty-four hours of each other when seventy Menominee and Marinette boats will battle for the costly trophies offered by the Menominee yacht club and Marinette citizens.

The first regatta will take place this afternoon off the Menominee shore, the second annual held under the auspices of the local yacht club. The big silver cup won by Johnson brothers of Menekaune with the Fleet Greyhound last year will again be battled for the Marinette boats is one of the most feared. Boats of all sizes of sail area will enter into this regatta and time allowances will be made to boats carrying less than 600 square feet of sail.

The Fusser, the Wall & Racine yacht, which won last Sunday's regatta in handy fashion, will be the only scratch entry and although a dark horse is feared by some, the individual battle between the Fusser and Greyhound is expected to be the most thrilling event of the afternoon. On Sunday the same boats will race off the Marinette shore. The regatta will be divided into A and B classes and two new silver cups recently purchased by popular subscription are to be raced for. Excitement is at fever heat. The ice is better than it has been in twenty years and the yatchsmen fearing the sport will soon be wrecked by a snowstorm or a thaw, are to pull off the two biggest racing events of the winter on succeeding days.

Pool Tournament.

Monday evening a pool tournament will be started at the Brown billiard parlors. M. Canfield, manager of the parlors, will meet four of the fastest players in the city, and to the one getting the highest number of points while Mr. Canfield is running 125 balls, a prize will be given. Monday evening Williams will play; Tuesday, Teske; Wednesday, David, and Thursday evening Mr. Canfield will meet an unknown. Mr. Canfield will go with the bowling teams to St. Paul next week, and while there will arrange games with the leading pool players of that city.

Not Fighter's Brother.

New York, Feb. 6.—Lawson Johnson of Galveston, Tex., father of Jack Johnson, the heavyweight champion prize fighter, telegraphed here last night that the dead negro, who was first thought to be Roscoe Johnson, brother of the fighter, was no relative of the champion. The negro died here a few days ago.

PROMOTOR OF THE JOHNSON-BURNS GO

HUGH D. McINTOSH.

Mr. McIntosh denies that he was only a figurehead in promoting the fight which made Jack Johnson champion of the world and that Burns himself was the real promoter. McIntosh is still hopeful of inducing Jeffries to emerge from his retirement and re-enter the "squared circle" in Sydney. He will visit the United States in March.

FOREIGNERS TO ENTER CONTEST

Across Water Countries to be Represented in Six-Day Walk.

New York, Feb. 6.—Interest abroad, aroused by the announcement of the international six-day walking race in Madison Square garden, beginning March 8, has brought offers of entries far in excess of the limits fixed for the number of teams that are to be admitted as starters.

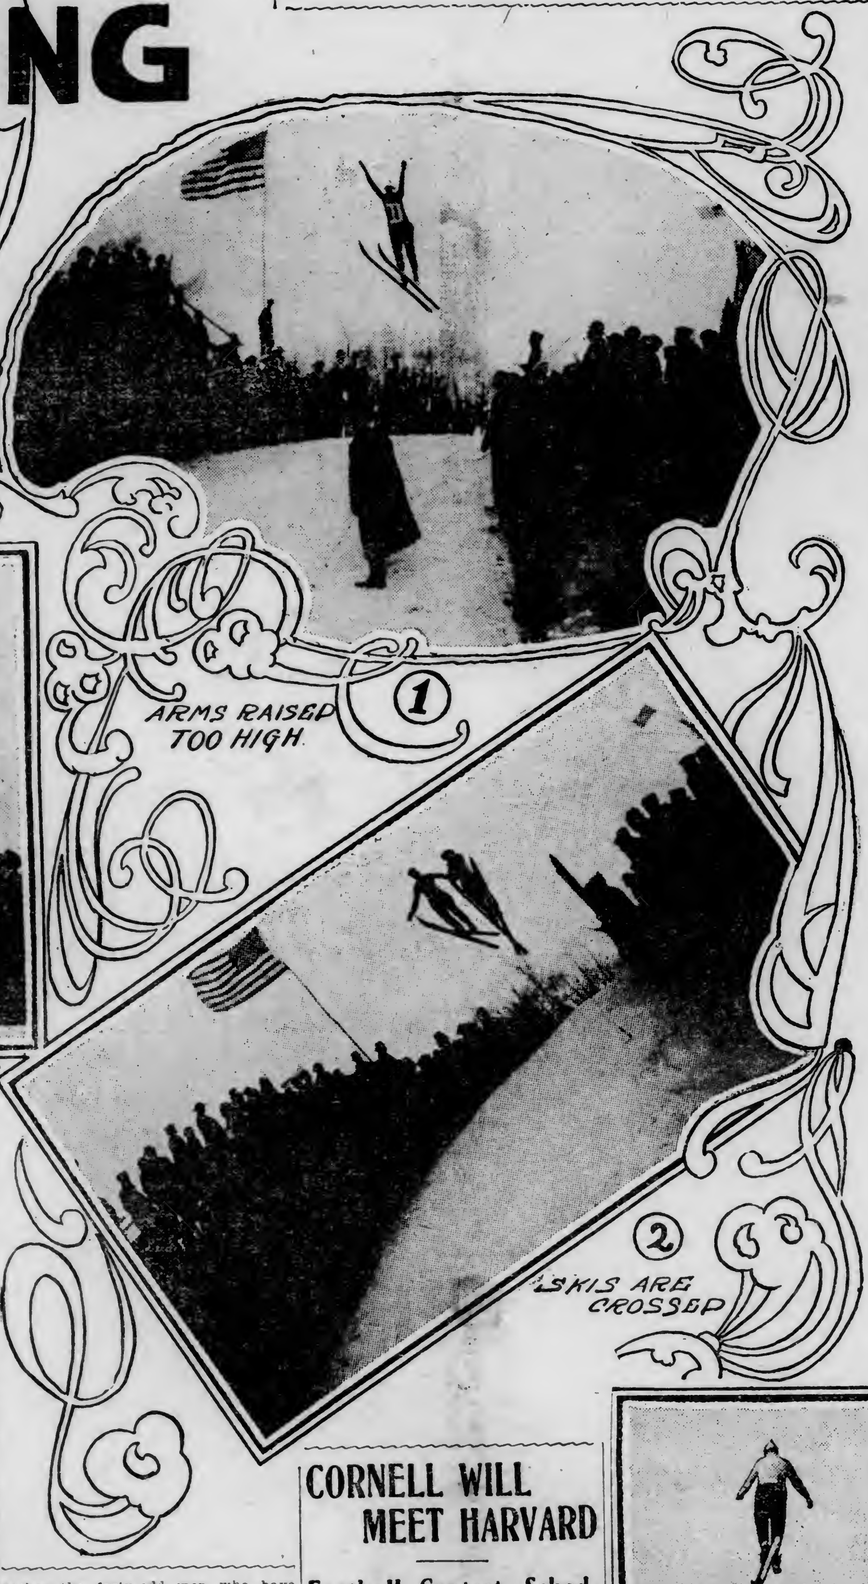

A process of elimination by trials, which bring out the best walkers and runners, has begun in France and Germany, and is so generally approved that it is to be tried in tach of the other countries where the number of candidates for entry is large enough to cause doubt, in the selection of the best material. It will be an absolute necessity to adopt the method of elimination by trial in Italy and in England, Scotland and Ireland, where the enthusiasm by the international competitions in long-distance racing started by the Marathon race of the English Olympic games, has developed great interest and activity in pedestrianism.

In Italy and Ireland especially so many entries have been offered that it will be a difficult task to pick the national teams. Among the oddest of the entries that have been offered are a French team of deaf mutes, and a team of Iggorotes for both of which unusual powers of endurance and ability to cover ground is claimed. In the plan for the race it was announced that not more than three teams representing the United States would be admitted, to be selected from New York, Chicago and California. Applications from army posts by soldiers and former soldiers for at least one military team will be admitted. A marked characteristic of these men who have offered their entries is the youth and enthusiasm evidenced.

Nebraska Gets Trounced.

Minneapolis, Feb. 6.—The University of Minnesota basket ball team defeated the University of Nebraska team last night in the first of a series of two games by a score of 24 to 17. The score at the end of the first half favored the Cornhuskers 10 to 8.

THE ART OF SKI JUMPING

What constitutes good ski riding?

In the skill contests so common to Duluth people, how are the riders marked?

For the same length of jump, how is it possible to decide the winner?

Of the thousands of Duluth people who have stood on the banks of Chester creek and watched this thrilling sport, there are very few who know just what constitutes the game, and how the riders are marked.

Different from most sports, it is every man for himself, and he gets marked according to his own ability and skill shown.

In the first place, the length of the jump counts for as many points as the number of feet he jumps. If he falls, it means a certain number of points off and the number of points varies according to what the directors decide before the tournament.

The whole number of points is decided after the jump. For instance, if a man should jump 120 feet, glide gracefully through the air, land gracefully on his feet and slide down the steep embankment in good shape he would get twenty points for character, probably a number of additional points for gracefulness, and 120 points for the jump.

On the other hand, should he jump 120 feet and fall, he would get the 120 points, but from that total there would be deducted probably twenty points on account of the fall, and also some more for a lack of character, although this is always decided by the judges.

The part of the judges is not a smooth one in a ski tournament. It is very hard to gauge every jumper just right. Everything is done so swiftly and they have to make up their minds in such a short time, that there are often mistakes. Sometimes a rider gets more than he deserves and at other times he doesn't get all that he should have, although the judges usually try to do their best and classify each man correctly.

At different tournaments the marks given each rider differ, and these are always settled by the judges at a meeting held before the tournament.

Picture number 1 was taken just a trifle too soon to show in just what form the rider was jumping, but he looks as though he had himself fairly well in hand. The riders are not judged for character and gracefulness until after they are in mid-air. The rider shown in this picture has thrown up his hands, a fault most riders have, although it is not good form.

In picture 2, the men have just left the landing and are still on their way up in the air. Both riders have their skis crossed and it looks as though both would fall before they landed. This picture shows but little character.

In picture 3, the rider is shown in a perfect position. He holds himself as though he were standing on a solid foundation, his skis are held directly under him and his body is in the most graceful possible position.

In number 4, the rider has almost as perfect a pose, but for the fact that his skis are crossed.

WESTERN COAST ATHLETES BUSY

Leland Stanford University Will Have a Fast Crew.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 6.—The athletes of Leland Stanford university are among the busiest in the country just now. What is known as the spring season of sports is already under way on the coast, and each afternoon the crew, track and field and baseball candidates are busily engaged in their various specialties. The sweep swingers have got the jump on the rest of the aspirants for athletic honors. Dan Murphy, who has coached the crews of the California institution for the past three seasons, has gathered together the forty-odd men who have reported for work on the water, and has overhauled the boats which comprise the cardinal fleet. Already the men have been boated on Lake Lagunita, and since several veterans who have won their varsity insignia form a nucleus for the 1909 boat, the prospects for a good boat are bright.

game with the Adams team last night, and won out by superior team work. The score was 3 to 1, and it shows the relative strength of the teams.

The regular goal tender for the Adams team was out of the game and the members of this team claim that the loss of this man hindered them considerably, and lay their defeat to this fact.

The members of the Bryant team kept the puck pretty well in the Adams territory most of the time, although at times Grenner and Helmer, the two star players of the Adams team, rushed the puck down to the Bryant goal and would have scored but for the great playing of Woods, the Bryant goal tender.

The contest was witnessed by the largest crowd of the year, and they went away enthusiastic over amateur hockey.

Steinbeck refereed the game.

The line-up follows:

Poisant	right wing	Al Olson

Billiard Tournament.

Monday evening, at the St. Louis hotel billiard room, a billiard tournament will be begun. To the player who, during the time set, piles up the largest score against W. F. Hatley while he is running 300 points, a pair of Florsheim shoes, donated by the Stanley Shoe company, will be given as a prize. There is a good deal of interest in the game by the billiard players of the city, and the tournament promises to be a big success.

MISSOURI TO HAVE LONG RACE

Marathon Bug Hits the Enthusiasts at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 4.—The Missouri Athletic club is arranging for its annual Marathon race, which is scheduled for May 1. The race will be run over the Frechold course and the finish will be at the clubhouse. All the prominent Western long distance men have promised to enter, and the committee is attempting to secure the entries of prominent runners of the East. The club reports that Tom Morrisey of New York, the winner of the 1908 Boston Marathon, has announced his intention of entering, and it is probable that several of his rivals of Eastern races will also compete. Sidney Hatch, who has won the event for the last two years, Alex Thibeau of Chicago and Joseph Forshaw of this city are well known Marathoners of this section who have expressed their intention of competing. An attempt is being made to secure an unusually large number of contestants and present signs point toward a successful holding of the classic event.

MINNESOTA UNIVERSITY

Seniors Make Their First Appearance in Caps and Gowns.

New Swimming Pool Is Opened—Second Issue of the Engineer.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—Thursday at chapel time the seniors made their first appearance in caps and gowns. Headed by their president, William W. Norton, they filed from Folwell hall across the campus to the library and into chapel, and were seated in the center of the auditorium. About 200 dignified upper classmen were attired in their graduation togas, but the engineers were particularly conspicuous by their absence. President Northrop said a few words of advice and Harvey Samuels gave two cello solos. The greatest audience since the first day of college was assembled in chapel, and in closing "Minnesota" was sung with spirit.

The new swimming pool was formally opened at 5:15 Wednesday afternoon, when Dr. Cooke vociferated "Hooray" and plunged in. He was quickly followed by Professors Foster and Constant, and members of the gymn team. Races were held Thursday morning, and of the twenty-five men tested only two failed to swim the length of the pool and back.

Dr. Cooke states that requirements for admission to the pool are simple. Every man must take a shower bath and then put on bathing trunks. Regulation suits are not required as was at first reported. Unlimited pool privileges will be allowed to those who can swim the length of the pool and return without stopping. It is reported that freshmen who cannot do this will be given an incomplete in their work.

The second issue of the Minnesota Engineer the new quarterly published by the Engineers' society, has made its appearance. The Engineers' society and the quarterly take a definite place in the engineering colleges' educational scheme. The quarterly is a logical development of the work of the society. It represents the society's past work and greatly increases its efficiency and usefulness by putting before the members in a permanent form, certain parts of its technical work.

The first article is by H. C. Chalmers on "Aeronautics and the Engineering Profession." H. J. Gille of the Minneapolis General Electric company presents an article on "Business Qualifications of the Engineer," Prof. B. F. Breat in his contribution "New Methods in Backwater Computations," applies a new formula for steam flows to the problem of backwater, and advances mechanical and graphical methods which greatly reduces the usual amount of labor necessary in order to obtain cross-section areas for various degrees of backwater.

The recent veto message of President Roosevelt, condemning the granting of certain water power privileges and in which the conclusion was drawn that a far-reaching water power trust is in formation, has aroused universal interest in water power and done much to make people recognize their value. L. P. Zimmerman has contributed an article on "Water Power Development in the Pacific Northwest," which bears on this subject.

Ex-President Eliot of Harvard university will deliver an address at chapel Saturday, Feb. 13. In order to give the students an opportunity to hear a talk of more than ordinary length, the third hour classes on that day will be excused and the fourth hour classes shortened.

By virtue of Manager Frank Priest's determination to give over the Princess theater, one night each week to university students, who are known to have ability as entertainers, Minnesota will have for the first time a near approach to an "opery" house. The first university night will be Wednesday evening, Feb. 10. Mr. Priest has secured a number of excellent features from the local institutions which will be presented in addition to the regular bill. Prizes in the shape of monetary renumeration will be awarded the three best acts, and the award will be determined by the amount of applause the performers receive. Accordingly every university man feels it incumbant upon him to get out and support his favorite by a liberal use of his hands. A number of the embryonic actors are fraternity men and it is said that these fraternities will attend the performance in a body in order to out-applaud each other. All in all an exciting session and a hot old time is promised every one.

The annual sunlight dance will be given by the Woman's league in the Armory, Feb. 13, from 3 to 6 o'clock. The four corners of the Armory will be decorated by bib and tucher, pinafore, tam-a-shanter and caps and gown societies, respectively. The prize, which will be a large Minnesota banner with the class numerals on it, will be awarded for the best corner by a vote of the women present. The most popular man on the campus, to be found out by the lists handed in will present the prize to the most artistic class.

Five hundred guests are expected and in the receiving line will be the cornered girls and the faculty advisors. A surprise is in store in the form of two mysterious people who will be at the dance and whose identity will not be disclosed.

Australian Defeated.

New York, Feb. 6.—Charley Griffin, the Australian fighter, was beaten by Battling Hurley, the New Jersey lightweight, at the National Athletic club last night. It was a hammer-and-tongs affair throughout the six rounds, and with body blows Hurley sent his man repeatedly to the floor, while he punished the Australian with blows over the heart. Griffin lasted the six rounds under difficulty.

NOVEL APPOINTMENT.

Professor of Automobilism at Technical College in Bristol.

London, Feb. 6.—The first professor of automobilism in England is W. Morgan, who has just been given that novel appointment at the Merchant Venturers' Technical college in Bristol. He is a bachelor of science of London, and after some years work in science teaching at Coventry secondary school, he two years ago undertook the research and advisory work for the Daimler Motor company, and has managed the company's pupils' department. Interviewed on the subject of his appointment yesterday, Mr. Morgan said the new buildings which Merchant Venturers erected after the fire are now almost completed.

"And what is the scheme in view?" he was asked. "The fact is," said the professor, "the governors want to give Western men especially the opportunity of entering the profession, and the curriculum of teaching is to be both in higher theory and in the practical work of motor car building. While motor-car engineering receives attention at several centers—Cambridge, Birmingham and Bradford, if not Manchester also—there has nowhere been up to now a professor of motor car engineering. Bristol has in view the combining of the technical college with the university, and thus motor car theory work will go on alongside the practical."

One way in which the department at Bristol will keep in touch with all that is going on practically in the motor car world is by the arrangement which has been entered into, by which the professor will carry out at the college the purely scientific side of any investigations required by Daimler, and apply the practical results in the Coventry work. Thus university and workshop will be in close alliance. Mr. Morgan will enter upon this appointment at Bristol some time during the coming spring.

OFF FOR THE BIG TOURNAMENT

Six Duluth Ski Riders Leave for Eau Claire.

Six Duluth ski riders left yesterday for Eau Claire, Wis., where they will take part in the national ski tournament which takes place in that city today and Sunday. They are: John Mangseth, Olaf Larsor Ole Fiering, John Evenson, George Jacobson and J. Hindrum.

Although hampered by the fact that they have had but little practice this year, they expect to do things at the Eau Claire meet.

Next Sunday the Duluth club will pull off its local meet, and indications now point to a large attendance of ski riders, representing fifty clubs from nearby towns.

CORNELL WILL MEET HARVARD

Football Contest Scheduled Between Two Colleges for 1909.

New York, Feb. 6.—Cornell's football schedule will be greatly strengthened next fall by the game with Harvard, and it is cause for congratulation that the meeting has been arranged. It will come at a time when both elevens are working up to their top form, and should not only furnish an interesting struggle, but a good line for comparison as to the relative strength of the various teams. It will be the first time that Cornell and Harvard have met on the gridiron, although relations between the two institutions have been friendly for years in baseball and rowing. When Cornell and Princeton could not agree on a date last fall it left the schedule of the Ithacans rather barren. It may be said in passing that the Harvard team, which went through last season without a defeat, even though the schedule was a stiff one, will find it difficult to repeat, with West Point, the Carlisle Indians, Cornell, Dartmouth, Yale and possibly Brown to face next season.

Lynch vs. Lavigne.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 6.—Johnny Lynch of Boston, and Tommy Lavigne of Chicago, will meet in a ten-round bout tonight at the Royal Athletic club, at 126 pounds.

Players Reinstated.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 6.—The National Baseball commission yesterday re-instated Players Frank M. Owen and William Purtell, who had been on the ineligible list for having participated in games against the Logan Squares of Chicago last fall, on condition that they pay a fine of $50 each.

DOLLAR TO MOTHERS FOR EVERY BABY IS LEGISLATOR'S PLAN

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 6.—One dollar to the mother of every baby born in Iowa—Representative Fullham, a doctor, has introduced such a bill as a substitute to the tax on babies' measure. It provides that the mother of a new-born baby shall be paid $1 by the county treasurer, upon receipt of a certificate signed by the mother and the attending physician.

AT THE BIJOU

MANUEL ROMAIN, THE FAMOUS MINSTREL SINGER AND HIS CLEVER COMPANY, WILL BE THE FEATURE OF NEXT WEEK'S VAUDEVILLE ATTRACTIONS. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

The bill of vaudeville offered at the Bijou, commencing Monday afternoon and lasting all week, will comprise several well known vaudeville headliners. Heading the list will be the famous minstrel singer, Manuel Romain, and his talented company, including the Foley Brothers and Palmer Sisters, in the one-act musical skit entitled "Down Music Row.". The first scene shows Twenty-eighth street, New York city; the second an up-to-date music publishing house, and the third scene the grand minstrel review. Manuel Romain and his company played the Bijou a year ago, and were

ANN CREWE,
In "My Lady Raffles," at the Bijou Next Week.

one of the biggest musical hits Manager Maitland has ever engaged. Every one was humming or whistling Mr. Romain's songs, and this year he has a new repertoire of his favorite hits.

A dramatic sketch of considerable merit will be "My Lady Raffles," which is played by the clever actress, Ann Crewe and company. This sketch is one of the few hits of a dramatic nature that has been playing vaudeville this season, and the idea and story of the sketch is away from the usual run.

A good act will be given by Ira Donette and her dog "Pick."

A good comedy feature will be Fat and Hattie Coley in their roaring comedy sensation, "In a Penny Arcade."

A gymnastic feature that is one of the best of its kind before the public, is given by Delmore and Oneida, who present their artistic posing upon the Japanese perch.

Isadore Silver will sing the newest illustrated song hit, entitled "That Good Old Dollar Bill."

The moving pictures will be all new and up-to-date films.

Matinees are given daily at 2:45, and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. Seats will be reserved in advance by either telephone.

A school children's matinee will be given Saturday at 2:30, and performances Sunday afternoon and night.

The "Boy Mayor."

Something entirely new in the way of an illustrated story is promised at the Lyceum on Feb. 21, when Sherburn H. Becker, the famous "Boy Mayor" of Milwaukee, delivers his his two-hour talk on the Italian earthquake.

This young man, according to all reports, has twice circled the globe; has been several hundred miles further north than the point from which Andree started on his ill-fated balloon voyage; has broken broncos and "roped" on the Western plains; has raced an automobile from Chicago to New York; has created a sensation in politics by his anti-graft campaign in his own city.

As an example of his thorough methods in attacking questions in which he is interested, may be mentioned his connection with the Milwaukee fire department. He had a fire alarm system rigged up in his bedroom, converted a stanhope into a fire wagon, purchased a quick-hitch harness and hired a driver, whose sole duty it was to take him to fires, which, by the way, he frequently reached before the chief of the department. In this way, before he became mayor, he learned more about the workings of the department than many who had been in its service for years.

The two-hour story, which he tells at the Lyceum on Sunday evening, was compiled in a similar manner and with the same degree of thoroughness. His were the first photographs of the disaster to reach this country. They were immediately made into beautifully colored slides. More than 100 of these show scenes in the stricken cities after the earthquake, and are preceded by fifty more showing the beautiful cities and towns before the catastrophe.

In addition, Mr. Becker has moving pictures showing the work of rescue among the ruins, and motion pictures of the arrival upon the scene of the American battleship fleet.

The whole combines to make a remarkably vivid and dramatic story of intense interest since Mr. Becker adds to it a personal note in his own description of a country that is as familiar to him as New York is to most travelers.

"The Girl Question."

A startling electric novelty, which will be seen in the third act of "The Girl Question," which comes to the Lyceum on Feb. 22 and 23, under the management of the Askin-Singer company, is the phantom chimes. They are introduced first in the chorus of the song, "I Hate To Work on Monday," sung by twenty-four pretty girls seated at typewriters and clicking off an accompaniment to the words of the song. The chimes, by means of electrical attachments, are made to ring all over the house, under the seats, up in the gallery, on the walls, etc., making a most novel effect.

Francis Wilson Coming.

John E. Trevor, an actor of unusual merit, is playing the "near villian" of the roaring farce, "When Knights Were Bold," in which Francis Wilson, the popular comedian, has scored so signal a success. Sir Brian Ballymote is the character played by Mr. Trevor and he brings to it a brogue and light-hearted voice that it would be pleasant to have in more likable roles. Last season Mr. Trevor was seen in the support of Mary Mannering playing a similar character part. Mr. Trevor is very tall, and Mr. Wilson below the medium height, so that when both are encased in heavy suits of armor fighting a supposed duel to death at the end of the second act, there occurs one of the most amusing scenes the stage has seen in many years. Charles Frohman will present Francis Wilson in "When Knights Were Bold" at the Lyceum very soon.

Prima Donna Chauffeur.

Much has been written about Lora Lieb's automobile that the press agent of John Cort's comic opera, "The Alaskan," has said is carried by the company for the prima donna's special use. When it comes right down to facts, Lora Lieb doesn't carry any automobile at all. The nearest Miss Lieb ever came to carrying an automobile was when she hired one in Los Angeles, Cal., recently, and insisted upon being her own chauffeur. After she had backed into a street car, gone scooting through the plate glass window of an artistic millinery establishment, "skiddooed" for more than a block along the sidewalk of the principal thoroughfare and ended by backing right up to the desk of the Hayward hotel, she wired Mr. Cort to make the agent behave himself and cried "quits" with a vengeance.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

New York, Feb. 6.—New York is truly a city of cosmopolitan tastes—or, let us say, our general civilization is of the most cosmopolitan character—as concerns the drama. Englishmen say we are far more tolerant than their own country, and France, which is to say Paris, never discovers that there are other great artists in other countries until every other country has acknowledged their genius.

The miscellaneous taste is well set forth this week in the varied character of the pieces that are offered at the leading houses. There was almost as much good will in the welcome given to Eleanor Robson in a pretty little slum drama of London life as there was in the wonderful demonstration which greeted Mrs. Leslie Carter's reappearance on Broadway in one of those somber, heroic and heavy poetic melodramas which John Luther Long knows so well how to write. The public is buying seats weeks in advance to "The Easiest Way," this heart play of the New York slums and theatrical boarding houses, and applauding George P. Huntley at the New Amsterdam in an English musical comedy, "Kitty Grey." So long as it is something new, it matters little what the subject, or where the scene is laid.

In the many years that he has gone to the theater, this scribe fails to recall another demonstration as was given to Mrs. Carter on the opening night of "Kassa" at the Liberty theater. Just as many of her old friends and admirers as could crowd into the playhouse were on hand to do her honor. You could hardly find rooms to pull off your overcoat. As the actress appeared in the first act in flowing white vesture—for she is a vestal virgin consecrated to the convent of Saint Lauka—carrying a golden crown in her hands which the assembled pilgrims imagine to embody miraculous healing powers, the thunderous greeting began. She has not a word of dialogue in this act, but never appears like a white spirit against the gray walls of the old convent on the dawn of an Easter morning.

Again and again Mrs. Carter had to bow, not daring to vary her statue-like attitude for fear of destroying the illusion and not daring to speak lest she should break the spell of solemnity. In the next act, representing a forest of almost primeval grandeur, with but a few hours interval until she must part forever from Prince Bela to immure herself in the convent, she listens to the pleadings of her lover, and follows him out into the merry world, intending to return by vespers. Here she was still the white childish novice. But when the third act is revealed we find that Kassa is a mother and living deserted by Bela in his castle in the Wallenwold mountains. Here the dramatic stress of situation begins. Told by Bela that their marriage was a mockery, and persecuted by the intriguing Prime Minister Varsova, Kassa becomes Patient Grisel indeed. The actress portrayed the forlorn state of the heroine with such vivid power of agonizing grief and passionate vociferation that her audience was swept away by her torrential outbursts of hysterics, and the curtain had to be raised again and again.

This was only a foreaste of what the next act was to bring. In this act she takes revenge by appearing suddenly through a window in the midst of the festivities given by Varsova and denounces Bela for his treachery. When, too, late, it is made apparent to her that she has thereby condemned Bela to death. She is remorse-stricken. But she saves him by appearing to yield to the designs of the rascally prime minister. But when Bela is safe she reminds Varsova that death is the penalty of the man who defiles a betrothed of the convent.

After this scene the enthusiasm of the audience burst all restraint. From twenty to twenty-five curtain calls followed. Mrs. Carter brought out the author. He met with a warm reception, but still the applause continued, and at last Mrs. Carter spoke. She said it was the happiest hour of her life, and, panting and smiling, she added how grateful she felt toward those in front, whom she could thus meet again after an absence of two years and a half.

Even after that the tumult continued, and several times she thrust her face through the curtain folds to bow and smile.

It is quite inconceivable that much of this furore was inspired by sympathy for a woman who is making a life and death fight for survival, rather than by the dynamic power of the interest inspired by the acting and the play. But Mrs. Carter showed that she has lost none of those qualities of expressing long-sustained agony, of which she was mistress in her Belasco days, and never in those days was she the center of a more pretentious scenic production, which, after much cutting, has now been compressed to within the limits of an evening which ends a little after 11 o'clock.

Although in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow" we are introduced to a low section of London town, with alleys, grogshops and garrets, in the midst of a London fog, peopled with convicts, pickpockets, policemen and detectives, Mrs. Hodgson Burnett, the author, has abstained from any attempt to reproduce either the language or the manners of the depraved. Everything is veiled in the delicate glamour of romance and the interest is centered in the cheerful personality and bracing optimism of the red-headed bundle of pink rags known as Glad—short for Gladys—which Miss Robson impersonates with a success which she has not approached since her well-remembered portrayal of the scullion, Mary Ann.

This sprightly creature falls like a stray sunbeam athwart the path of the mighty Sir Oliver Holt, who has just left a consultation of physicians that there is spoken his doom, believing he cannot recover from a serious affliction of neurosis. He has disguised himself as a tramp, armed himself with a pistol and in a fit of eccentric despondency seeks the underworld to end his life and vanish forever, when chance throws Glad into his path, and by her cheerful philosophy she makes Sir Oliver forget his megrims and defy the somber prophecy of his physicians.

It is some time since such a stimulating personality as Miss Robson's Glad has appeared in any play in New York; and it was her work even more than the play, o rthe superb scenery representing this Five Points of the London slums. Glad's garret and the sumptuous apartment of the rich lord, that made for the undoubted success which the performance scored before a brilliant audience. She manifested a vivacity and a knowledge and command of the Whitechapel cockney dialect that enabled her to make the character of the street waif peculiarly sympathetic.

Of course, there is a love interest. Glad's lover is Dandy, who is hunted all over London by the police for a murder which Glad in the end proves was not committed by him. The part was played by Harry Stanford. Lord Oliver was excellently played by Fuller Mellish.

The play scored an immediate triumph. Miss Robson had to answer a dozen curtain calls, and Mrs. Burnett had to show herself again and again in one of the stage boxes. Originally Christian Science was largely an element in the web of the story, but this has been minimized to the extent of the simple faith shown by Glad in the maxim that if you wish real hard for a thing it will happen. This is the basis of her philisophy, which is perhaps better than going into metaphysics and running the risk of overdoing things in the way of thought transference, telepathy and vampirism, just now the vogue in dramatics.

"Kitty Grey," which has come to the New Amsterdam to take the place of "Little Nemo," is one of those light-waisted but exceedingly pretty English musical comedies with which Lionel Monckton's name has become familiar as the musical purveyor. It is a cheerful affair, with a lot of good-looking girls, and all of them English except Julia Sanderson. And Julia has been so long identified with this sort of pieces in the British capital, where she played Kitty Grey the better part of a year, that she says "cawn't" as smartly as the best cockney.

The chief character is George P. Huntley, who has been cleverly imitated by Joe Coyne for many years. When Huntley visited the United States in "Three Little Maids," some years ago, we discovered where Coyne had got his material for his silly ass lording. It was from Huntley. And here he is the original in a silly ass lord part, and more comical than ever. They like him in that sort of a role in London, where they look indulgently upon the exaggeration. Naturally he is approved here in Nen York. He is tremendously amusing in a scene in which he invades the prima donna's dressing room during her absence on the stage, tries on some of her costumes, dons one of her wigs and gives us a funny little dance. Extremely absurd, but really most laughable. The show has a good deal of swing, and is likely to prove popular.

"A Stubborn Cinderella," is the title of an American musical piece now playing at the Broadway, which has come into New York after a long run in Chicago. John Barrymore and Sally Fisher are the principals in the performance. Barrymore is not a delicious singer, but he is clever at the comedy work he has to do, and he has a good deal of a following among the smart set in town, who help to swell the attendance nightly. The piece is fairly amusing, and will stay long enough to get the benefit of a New York run, when it will be taken on tour, which means ready money.

Henrietta Crosman, who has been playing in vaudeville in and about New York in an abbreviated "Mistress Nell" part, in which she wears trousers and brandishes a sword, is soon to resume her place at the head of a regular production, and will open in Washington in the course of a few weeks.

I learn on good authority that John Luther Long is disgusted with the way his play for Mrs. Carter has been mutilated. As compared with the poetic drama he originally wrote, the present form of "Kassa" owes its creation to E. E. Rose and Eugene Presbrey, who have trimmed it so handsomely that its author figuratively has to get out a search warrant to find the points of identification. Long is a poet, and the average stage carpenter thinks he knows more about playwriting than the author of "Madame Butterfly."

It was stated that the eminent Italian tragedienne, Eleanor Duse, will appear at the new theater in New York early in its life in a repertoire of Italian plays. Her engagement is to be for six weeks. By inviting prominent European organizations to appear at times, the new theater hopes to extend the scope of its usefulness.

Edward Childa Carpenter is to write a sequel to "The Barber of New Orleans" for Mr. Faversham, in which Jallot will be the hero of new romantic adventure. Meanwhile the present play is to be transformed into a novel.

Alexandre Bisson's play, "La Femme," in which Madame Jane Hading has been appearing in Paris, has been secured by Henry W. Savage, who will produce it in this country next season.

Arthur Collins, the director of the famous Drury Lane theater in London, is to arrive in this country during the coming week. The chief interest of his visit is to confer with Brooks and Dingwell, who are to produce the big Drury Lane melodrama, "The Sins of Society," in this country. The spectacular production is to be brought out some time in March, and the probability is that New York, and not McVicker's theater, Chicago, will be the scene of the premiere. Dorothy Donnelly is to be a member of the cast. Miss Donnelly has been on tour this season with "The Lion and the Mouse." Leslie Kenyon and Louise Closser also have been added to the company.

William Winter, the critic, is at work upon a volume to be called "The Life and Art of Richard Mansfield."

Miss Ada Lewis, who was a popular member of the famous Harrigan & Hart company years ago and who has since scored big personal hits in the various productions in which she has appeared, will become a star under the direction of Liebler & Co. very shortly. This firm has secured for Miss Lewis's debut a play by Edward W. Townsend, to be called "The Head of the House." A strong supporting company is being engaged and rehearsals will begin within the next fortnight.

The eccentric George Bernard Shaw, who, in spite of his paradoxical whims, has become a factor in the development of the English drama. The first reports were not so alarming, but he is now reported to be in bad shape. He has been in poor health for some time.

Margaret Illington, who was compelled to retire from her role in "The Thief" on account of ill health, and who went in search of repose to Southern California, has returned to New York. At the time of her retirement it was announced that she had left the stage for good. Thus far no announcements have been made of her return and it is generally believed that she will rest at least for some time.

Doris Keane, who is to be the principal in Clyde Fitch's new play, "The Happy Marriage," met with a serious accident last week while rehearsing. In the third act of the play Miss Keane, acting the role of a high-strung youthful wife, jumps over the back of a sofa in a moment representing the ecstasy of the young woman at the return of her husband. Miss Keane has performed the feat successfully dozens of times. In fact, nothing about it ever was regarded as particularly difficult.

The other day's rehearsal went through smoothly, even including this scene. It was at the close of the afternoon that Miss Keane and Edwin Arden, who plays the part of the husband, decided between them on further rehearsing, but as Miss Keane again attempted the feat her shoe caught in the back of the sofa, she lost her balance and in falling struck the back of her neck squarely against the woodwork of the sofa. She was unconscious for over an hour and was removed to her home in a carriage. The accident temporarily suspended the rehearsals, but it is thought there will be no bad effects resulting therefrom.

Anna Held and her Miss Innocence company may leave for London and Paris for lengthy stays there immediately after their run in New York and before visiting any other American cities. Negotiations are pending to that effect.

There is a new woman wriggler at Hammerstein's Victoria theater. She is called Princess Rajah, but looks like a product of the Bowery. Her costume, which consists of several strings of beads, a couple of breast plates, and a property smile, leaves little to the imagination, which is nothing more than a contortion act. A live snake is the most attractive feature of the dance. (?)

Franz Molnar, the brilliant author of "The Devil," is a leading journalist of Budapest, and also one of the best known publicists in Hungary. As a writer on physiological topics he holds high position, and he is also a noted public speaker. Herr Molnar is not yet 35 years old.

Henry W. Savage, after successively and successfully producing, in "Madame Butterfly," a grand opera; "The Merry Widow," an operetta, and "The Devil," a comedy, three European sensations from the pens of foreign authors, selected for his most recent production an American play, "Mary Jane's Pa," by an American author, Miss Edith Ellis, with one of America's most talented stars, Henry E. Dixey. The combination proved most happy—player, playwright and play were accorded unanimous approval by the New York press and public.

"I am the Prince of Darkness," observed Edwin Stevens, in Henry W. Savage's "The Devil," "and I'll tell you a 'darkness' story," with a Mephistophelian grin.

"A debutante was describing to her mother a week-end visit she had made to a smart house in Devon.

"'At dinner on Sunday night,' she said, 'the lights went out, and—wasn't it funny, mamma?—the women didn't want the butler to light them again.'

"'How do you know they didn't?' asked the mother.

"'Because they were all crying out 'Don't!' and 'stop!' And the men didn't say a word.'"

Andrew Springer, general musical director for Henry W. Savage, has introduced his latest composition, "Valse Gracieuse" (graceful waltz), during the intermission between the first and second acts of "Mary Jane's Pa," at the Garden theater. Mr. Springer only recently came from Hungary, where he is known as "Serlegi Andor," and conducted for the last six years all the latest light operas, including "Gipsy Baron," "San-Toy," "The Gelsha," "Belle of New York," "Prince Bob," "Mikado," "Chimes of Normandie," "Rip Van Winkle," and also the famous "Rastelbinder," by Lehar, composer of "The Merry Widow."

Dazey's latest farce, "The Fascinating Widow," in which he will star Otis B. Thayer. Mr. Thayer's last successful play was "A Square Deal," which was produced at the Bijou theater in New York a couple of years ago.

Fannie Ward, the clever American actress, who has been a London vogue for several years, has captured critics and audiences alike on her first appearances in her own country in "The New Lady Bantock," a comedy by Jerome K. Jerome. Miss Ward gave the first performance of her American tour the first day of the new year in Troy. She was received with the utmost cordiality by the Trojans. Her managers deferred judgment, however, until Chicago was reached. Here she won the unanimous praise of the critics of the reputable papers. No player or play has been received recently in Chicago so heartily as was Miss Ward in her Jerome comedy.

James O'Donnell Bennett of the Record-Herald compared her work with that of Marie Tempest, praising her diction, directness and lack of affectation. Burns Mantle of the Tribune called her a natural comedienne with heart, predicting for her a wonderful future. Charles W. Collins, in the Inter-Ocean, dwelt upon her directness of method. The scholarly Francis Hackett, who wrote the Post's review, declared the Jerome comedy must "divide honors ungrudgingly with the new comedienne." O. L. Hall of the Journal pronounced Miss Ward to be Billie Burke's only rival. Amy Leslie wrote of Miss Ward "as American as prairie golden rod and as pretty as a rose."

Fannie Ward made her debut in Chicago under the late Dave Henderson's management. When the opportunity came to head her own company, she asked for a first hearing in Chicago. It was a bit of womanly sentiment, and her success makes her triumph all the sweeter. Miss Ward will play two weeks at the Park theater, Boston, before she enters New York with one of the most whimsical and amusing plays presented in several seasons. Charles Cartwright as the butler was warmly praised by the many who took the opportunity to see the play during its stay in Chicago. In fact, the company generally was pronounced one of the best polite comedy casts seen in many years.

"Little Nemo" is playing its last two weeks at the New Amsterdam theater in New Yor... Klaw & Erlanger's big musical comedy has proved a worthy successor to "The Merry Widow." It goes to Boston with the same comedians, Joseph Cawthorn, Billy Van and Harry Kelly, who made the entertainment famous in New York. The only changes made in the comedy since the first night were the introduction of a new song by Victor Herbert, "I Was the Irish," and the adding of a funny scene by Harry B. Smith for the comedians, in which the organization of a trust is happily satirized. The New York engagement was ended because it was necessary for Klaw & Erlanger to keep their contracts with Messrs. Rich & Harris, which called for "Little Nemo" at the Colonial theater, or something equally as good. "Little Nemo," with its stirring marches, melodious tunes and magnificent scenic effects, is the biggest and best musical comedy of the current season. It surpasses any spectacle or pantomime ever produced in London. Usually audiences find in this style of entertainment either music without a book or vice versa, or both music and book but no comedians. Happily, in "Little Nemo" music, book and comedians are of the highest order. The New York run ended Jan. 23 and the Boston engagement began Jan. 25. "Little Nemo" will visit Chicago after the Boston run.

It is said that Charles Frohman was for some time trying to pin George Ade down to write "Father and the Boys" for W. H. Crane, who will be seen in the play at the Willis Wood next week. Mr. Frohman and Mr. Ade would talk it over together, and then the author would depart, enthusiastically determined to begin work at once. But he would get out to his Indiana farm, and then it was good-by to the play. Later on Mr. Crane would succeed in rounding up Mr. Ade, there would be severe lengthy discussions about the play, Mr. Ade would promise reform in his methods of work, or, rather, in his seeming indifference to work, and once more he would disappear, filled with good resolutions. And so it went on, until finally, when Mr. Frohman and Mr. Crane had both given up in despair, Mr. Ade appeared one day with a roll of manuscript labeled "Father and the Boys." Mr. Frohman and Mr. Crane got busy on the production, and after the triumphant first night performance, Crane said to Ade: "It's all right now, my boy; but, really, from the way you treated me, I felt very much injured." "I realized that," the author replied, "and that made me come to time. I wanted to be first Ade to the injured."

While making the trip from New York to Chicago with her father, John Russell of the Russell Bros. at the Orpheum theater this week, Miss Flora noticed an army officer in one of the sections of the Pullman, whose lack of congenality made him the subject for discussion by the ladies in the car.

First one of the fair sex, then another, tried to engage the officer in conversation, but each was checkmated and received monosyllabic answers to their queries. Finally Miss Russell wagered gloves, bonbons and other stakes peculiar to feminine bets, that she could and would engage the officer in conversation without her speaking the first word. The only condition she imposed was that she was to have twelve hours wherein to accomplish her task ere a decision was to be rendered. The next morning Miss Flora was the first up, and a little later the military man made his appearance only to be greeted by the "Reveille," given in a shrill whistle that startled the sleepers. Of course the morning call was acknowledged by the soldier man with a cheery "good morning," much to the disgust of the losers of the wager, and by the time they had gotten through their morning ablutions, the resourceful Miss Flora and the man of "Mars," with her mother and father, were enjoying a sumptuous breakfast in the diner. Miss Russell is now the richer by several pairs of gloves, a lace collar and a couple of pounds of candy, besides having added to her friends an attache to the adjutant general's office in Washington.

Klaw & Erlanger will have a new play for Lillian Russell when she appears in New York next winter.

Fannie Ward made a great success when she appeared in a scene from "The Marriage of William Ashe" at the Italian benefit performance at the Auditorium in Chicago.

Theodore Roberts, who plays the part of Joe Portugais in Klaw & Erlanger's great play, "The Right of Way," is eager to appear in the role of the Moor in "Othello." He has made a study of the role—not only of the lines, but also the make-up of the famous warrior. Mr. Roberts would give a wonderful impersonation of the part, as he is a great interpreter of character roles. His work opposite Guy Standing in "The Right of Way" meets with praise wherever he appears. The play has been a great success in the South. The company begins this week a tour which will extend to the Pacific coast.

Lillian Russell is playing to record business at the Broadway theater, Brooklyn. Her comedy, "Wildfire," seems to be liked even better this season than it was last year. After the Brooklyn engagement Miss Russell will start her continental tour, traveling in her private car. Her engagements will continue until the middle of June. While en route she will work on the compilation of her love letters, which will be issued in two volumes—pleasant and otherwise. In Cincinnati, Miss Russell will return to vaudeville for one afternoon for the benefit of the Press club.

"Ben Hur" has been received with as much cordiality on the Pacific coast this season as it was on its first trip West. One of the unusual features of the present tour has been the interest shown by the rising generation of theater-goers in the great Biblical production. Klaw & Erlanger first produced this play ten years ago. It would seem that every theater-goer in the country had witnessed the production, yet this year the audiences are larger than ever. School children have become interested in the play, flocking to the matinees in great numbers. "Ben Hur," considered merely as a play, without the chariot race, shipwreck or wonderful scene of the Mount of Olives, possesses literary value. Its success as a Biblical spectacle makes the auditor forget what a splendid library as well as acting play it is. "Ben Hur" will stay another month on the Pacific coast before the company heads Eastward. Its tour for next year has already been booked.

Klaw & Erlanger's great play of the Arizona desert, "The 'Round Up," is back in Chicago playing to receipts equalling those of two years ago, when it opened in that city at McVicker's. On Christmas night at the Nixon theater in Pittsburg, "The Round Up" played to $3,770. This play is one of the most massive ever staged. The battle scene in the third act equals the equipment of an ordinary show; yet Klaw & Erlanger's forces are so well organized that they were able to give the full performance in Cincinnati on Saturday night, load the play into five baggage and two horse cars, fill two sleepers and a coach with company and stage crew, run a special to Chicago in record time, haul and set up the show in McVicker's theater and ring the curtain up on time Sunday night. The performance ended only five minutes later than usual time for the fall of the curtain. You can get a line on the size of the task when you consider how much trouble you were put to the last time you moved or packed your trunk to make a trip equally as long as the distance between Cincinnati and Chicago.

Marion Louise Harlan, 4-year-old daughter of Otis Harlan of "A Broken Idol," does not like to see her father climb a tree in the last act of that comedy. She fears that he might fall. "Papa," she said the other day, "don't go up in the tree. Let Mr. —— go up, if he falls I won't care. I don't like him, anyway."

"In the Lyceum production of 'King Rene's Daughter,' in which Ellen Terry acted most charmingly the part which is being played in a revival by Doretha Baird," relates Bram Stoker, "the late Mr. Mead impersonated one Eben Jaira, an Eastern wizard, and at one part of the piece, where things look black, indeed, for the happiness of the blind girl, he had to say: 'All shall be well in that immortal land where God hath his dwelling.' One night he got shaky with his words and surprised the audience with: 'In that immortal land where God hath his—ah—um—his—apartments.'"

NEW TYPE OF PRISON

To be Erected by English Authorities on Isle of Wight.

London, Feb. 6.—Preparations are being made in Parkhurst Forest, Isle of Wight, for the creation of the new type of prison instituted by last year's prevention of crime act. As Mr. Gladstone explained his proposal, professional criminals, after serving a term of penal servitude for their latest offense, will be detained for an indeterminate time in the new building. There they remain until the authorities are assured that they will henceforth lead an honest life or until, by age or infirmity, they are incapable of resuming a life of crime. In this new type of prison, however, the habitual criminal will be subject to less rigorous discipline than in prison. The hours of labor will be less, he will be allowed more liberty to talk, get better food, be able to earn wages, and have an opportunity of recreative occupation. Some thirty acres of forest land on the site of a disused rifle range will be cleared for the new prison, and the work will start before long.

COMPLETING LINCOLN'S WORK IN THE SUNNY SOUTH

THE SECOND EMANCIPATION---NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR NEGROES---GREAT WORK OF THE FREEDMEN'S AID SOCIETY OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

M. C. B. MASON,
Corresponding Secretary.

P. J. MAVEETY,
Corresponding Secretary.

The greatest single event in the history of Abraham Lincoln was the emancipation of the slaves. Any celebration, therefore, of the centennial of the birth of the great president would be incomplete without a full consideration of the responsibility and obligations that rest upon the nation to make of these emancipated millions useful and intelligent citizens. One of the most successful agencies at work in the South for the uplift of the negro is the Freedmen's Aid society, with headquarters at Cincinnati. The work of this organization has been enlarged from time to time until at present it has twenty-four institutions of learning, 600 teachers and 9,000 students. The aggregate holdings of the society in landings and buildings are estimated at $1,342,698.

Important Centers in the Black Belt.

With a desire to reach the largest possible number, these schools are planted in strategic centers in the black belt in South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas. Claflin university, with nearly one thousand students, at Orangeburg, S. C., Clark university at Atlanta, Ga., Gilbert Industrial college, at Baldwin, La., Morristown Industrial college at Morristown, Tenn., Rust university at Holly Springs Miss., Philander Smith college at Little Rock, Ark., and Wiley university at Marshall, Texas, are among the larger institutions. There are in smaller towns and villages, academies and schools for primary pupils, which serve as feeders for the larger and more important schools as centers. Thus it may be seen that the schools are within easy reach of the people, and long distance traveling, with correspondingly increased expense, is entirely unnecessary.

Methods Sane and Comprehensive.

The methods which have characterized the work in these schools have become as many sided as is the problem itself. Consequently, there are industrial schools for training the masses, normal schools for the preparation of teachers, theological seminaries for a stronger and more intelligent ministry, medical schools for training young men and women as physicians, pharmacists and dentists—the work of the physician being so important among the negro peoples—a special department in domestic economy for training negro girls in practical lines of dressmaking, cooking, general housekeeping and nurse training. As will be seen, therefore, the work is comprehensive and touches the problem at the very heart. President-elect Taft, in that remarkable address before the North Carolina society recently, indorsed very heartily this comprehensive scheme of education for negroes when he said:

"Primary and industrial education for the masses, higher education for the leaders of the race, for their professional men, their clergymen, their lawyers, their physicians, their teachers, are making up a system, under which their improvement, which statistics show has been most noteworthy in the last forty years, will continue at the same rate."

Industrial Education an Important Feature.

While the society recognizes the necessity of schools for the higher training of the negro, its industrial work for the masses has always been an important feature. Forty-three years ago, there were, here and there, only a few shops and a few tools, now the manual trade buildings in connection with Claflin university at Orangeburg, S. C., Morristown Industrial college at Morristown, Tenn., and Rust university at Holly Springs, Miss., are among the largest in the South. At present there are 3,149 students in these industrial schools taking instruction in twenty-four different lines of industrial pursuits.

Model Homes for Negro Girls.

In addition to the general work of industrial education, special attention is given to industrial work for girls. Perhaps no work which this society is doing is more important and far-reaching in its results than this special training for negro women, for no system of education, industrial or otherwise, which leaves out the woman is complete. No race can be raised higher than its women, and in the education of the negro in America this fact is of prime importance. Accordingly, this society, through the Woman's Home Missionary society, has established model homes in connection with institutions where colored girls can be trained in cooking, sewing, millinery, housekeeping, in cleanliness and in personal purity. Special care is given to the training in the cooking schools. The kitchens are fitted with up-to-date facilities and the teachers are from the best cooking schools in the North. Everything is done on a scientific basis, and the examinations are as rigid and strict as in other branches of the school. As a result, none but thoroughly trained cooks are sent out, and as might be expected, they are in great demand. Many of these girls are at work in Northern homes and are giving perfect satisfaction. In this way, the Freedman's Aid society is helping to solve the servant problem in the North.

Some Material Results.

The influence which these schools, with such training, have had on the material life of the people, is apparent. Indeed, there is no comparison, from a material point of view, of the negro of yesterday and the negro of today. When Lincoln signed the Emancipation proclamation he had nothing, not a foot of land. The very clothes on his back did not belong to him. Today he owns 160,000 farms, valued at $400,000,000 and pays taxes on real estate and personal property to the amount of $450,000,000. This as a matter of course, does not represent his entire belongings, for he has learned to imitate the white man and does not put in his property at its full taxable value. He owns sixty-three banks, nine of which are in the state of Mississippi, and seven of these have been chartered since Governor Vardeman became the governor.

Some Moral Results.

What have these schools done for the negro morally? Is the educated negro a criminal, This after all, is the real test, for if the progress of the race morally has not kept pace with the progress mentally and materially, the progress is of no value. Considering all the circumstances, that the negro had little or no moral training before the war, and no real home life, his moral development is not discouraging. What are the facts? The last census shows that there were present, of all races, in the penitentiaries of the United States, 45,233, of which number 9,687 were colored (including Indians, Chinese and Japanese); in county jail, 29,538, of which 5,575 were colored; inmates in juvenile reformatories, 14,846, of which 1,943 were colored. Of a total of 73,045 almshouse paupers, only 6,467 were colored; and of the 45,233 criminals in the penitentiaries previously referred to, 253 were persons who had enjoyed higher educational advantages, and not a single educated negro is in the enumeration.

Educated Negroes Helping the People.

Perhaps the most encouraging feature of the whole matter of negro education since emancipation is that the educated ones are joining with the best men of the North and South for the uplift of their unfortunate fellows. In several cities of the South recently, the Second Emancipation league has been organized, whose duty it is to reach the unreached, to help the needy, to lift up the fallen, and in a practical way to help the industrious and thrifty in the purchase of homes, and urging them as far as possible to stay on the farm rather than to crowd into the large cities to live in it salleys and die of consumption, which has already become the "black plague" of the negro race. It is this work of the educated negroes that is supplementing the work done by the Freedmen's Aid society and similar institutions in the South.

The two corresponding secretaries of this organization are Dr. P. J. Maveety and Dr. M. C. B. Mason. Dr. Mason, who is himself a negro, was born a slave, and was 12 years of age before he ever saw a schoolhouse. By hard struggles he graduated from the New Orleans university, one of the schools of the society of which he is now corresponding secretary, and is the first man of his race to hold such a position of great responsibility in an organization under the management and control of white men. He believes that industrial education for the masses of his people, professional education for the leaders, fair play and tolerance on the part of the white man, will solve the problem. He does not believe there will be a race war in this country, and cautions his people to be patient, industrious, law-abiding and optimistic.

MAXIM TALKS OF AIRSHIP MOTOR

Thinks Air Machines Will be Used in Next War.

London, Feb. 6.—Sir Hiram Maxim is busy now working on the problem of the airship motor. In conversation with a press representative yesterday, he said he had examined every motor in the market and found he could make one considerably lighter than any of the existing types and still preserve a large factor of safety. "The very cleverest engineer in France recently assured me," Sir Hiram continued, "that they are practically dead certain that within considerably less than a year from the present time they will have machines in Paris with 100 horse-power motors that will travel at a stretch. They say that certainly within a year they will make machines that will fly easily from Boulogne to London and return without stopping."

The inventor laughed at the suggestion that aeroplanes would presently be obtainable for $500. "No," he said, "I have told several people that machines like the Wright machine would be easily built at a profit for $5,000 each. Gen. Miles of the United States army, now retired, said that he had seen the Wright machine, and it appeared to him that such a machine would not cost more than a few hundred dollars. As a matter of fact the motor would probably cost $500. I told him so. The motive power costs more than all the rest of the machine. I think that Barriquand et Marre of Paris, have recently received orders, and are now making twenty-five motors for Wright machines. These will be much more efficient for the same weight than the motor made by the Wrights themselves. A large number of engines are being made in France that are four times as powerful as the Wright motor. I have been told that some 100 horse-power motors are being made at $3,750 each, a rather stiff price. There are several thousand of the cleverest men in the world working on the problem at the present time, and what the French engineer has claimed stands a fair chance of taking place inside the next year." Asked when he thought air machines would be utilized for purposes of warfare, Sir Hiram replied, emphatically, "The next war."

NEW USE FOR GOATS; TO GRAZE A FIRE LINE.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Three thousand Angora goats will soon be doing yoeman service for Uncle Sam by grazing mile after mile of fire line through the bushy chaparral growth of the Lassen national forest of California.

The goats will be given two years to "make good" on the job. If they come up to Uncle Sam's exacting requirements they will be permanently placed on the government's rolls.

The scheme is to run fire lines parallel with the contour of the slopes by cutting trails about eighty rods apart to serve as guides for the Angoras. The animals will graze in each direction from the trails, killing, it is esimated, a strip of brush about thirty yards wide.

The wide lanes cut out and grazed by the goats will serve as ideal fire lines in protecting the forest covered lands lying beyond and around the chaparral areas, and also make a place for reproduction of merchantable trees.

FROM THE MINES AND THE SMELTERS

AT THE ARIZONA & MICHIGAN

Capt. James Chynoweth Visiting the Property and Discussing Plans for Its Development---Satisfactory Progress With Sinking of the Shaft.

Globe, Ariz., Feb. 6.—Capt. James Chynoweth and his eldest son, William Chynoweth, of Calumet, Mich., have arrived here. Capt. Chynoweth is president of the Arizona & Michigan Mining company, which was organized at Calumet in December last, to develop and operate a promising property adjoining the Arizona Commercial and Superior & Boston on the north.

Capt. Chynoweth is one of the best known mining men of the Lake Michigan district, having for many years been superintendent of several of the prominent Michigan copper mines. About two and a half years ago he retired from active participation in the mining affairs of the Lake district, and has since taken quite an interest in the development of copper properties in the Globe district. He was influential in the organization of the Superior & Boston Copper company, which has achieved a large measure of success, and was its first president. The Arizona & Michigan was floated with the greatest success, the stock being many times oversubscribed.

Capt. Chynoweth and his son will remain here about ten days, which will afford the captain ample time to examine the company's property and confer with the local management regarding plans for its development and equipment. A three-compartment shaft was started soon after the commencement of the year and in sinking which satisfactory progress is being made. Mine Foreman N. A. Nelson is in charge of the work, General Manager S. W. Clawson being temporarily absent in Los Angeles. The new shaft is being sunk for the purpose of developing the western part of the company's ground, through which there runs several strong and well mineralized leads. Some work is also being done near the eastern end of the property.

WORK GOING ON AT CARMAN

Will Resume the Shipment of Ore at an Early Date, and President Casey Has Confidence in the Property.

Bisbee, Ariz., Feb. 6.—J. P. Casey, president of the Carman Consolidated Copper company, which is located in the Arizpe district, passed through a few days ago to his properties where he will remain for several days.

Mr. Casey states that there is considerable work going on at his properties, although very little has been done for some time past.

"Owing to the general depression which has been experienced over the entire country for the past two years, little has been done at our properties. We have not tried to force the work, but we expect to begin actively very soon.

"We have not shipped any ore from the Carman for some time, but hope to get some to the market as soon as we again get under motion. The most of the stock of the Carman is owned in the north, and thet stockholders up there have been buying up a great deal of the outstanding stock.

Mr. Casey, who has recently returned from the East, states that conditions are getting better every day, and capital is again looking for investment. "I expect to see everything moving along finely out here again and believe the mining districts will receive a greater impetus than it has ever done in its history. The Cananea district will resume operations at many of the new properties, and several new pay rolls will be added during the next few weeks."

SALOME DISTRICT'S WEALTH

Arizona & California Railroad Infusing New Life Into Country—Alvin Development Company of Houghton Has Good Prospect in Ultimatum Group.

Salome, Ariz., Feb. 4.—Mining activity along the new Arizona & California railroad is increasing rapidly as the winter advances, and many new deals are reported and considerable new development work is being ttarted. The immense copper lodges and deposits of this section are fast becoming known to the outside world, and many representatives of the large copper operators are now investigating numerous properties in various parts of the district. The large bodies of ore being opened up on the Signal property, belonging to the Clara Consolidated Mining company, has induced the company to ship in a 200-ton smelter, which is now being hauled out to the property from Bouse and will be erected as soon as possible.

The Alvin Development company of Houghton, Mich., has men at work erecting tents and other buildings for the accommodation of workmen on the Ultimatum group in the Harcuvars, which it has under bond. They have already done a small amount of development and are now preparing to sink a number of drill holes to further determine the size and extent of the ore bodies. A combination churn and core Cyclone drill will be used for the work and holes will be sunk along the mineralized line reef to cut it at depths of from 300 to 500 feet. The company has 4,500 feet lengthwise along the outcrop, which is characterized by numerous heavy outcrops of hemitite and limonite gossan, carrying small gold and copper values on the surface, and increasing rapidly with depth as far as development has proceeded. Further west on the same reef the Cobralla company has opened up sulphide ores averaging 4 per cent copper, $8 gold and 5 ounces silver to the ton, and the future of the Ultimatum group and the Alvin Development company now seems bright. Heaton H. Wright of New Haven, Conn., is temporarily in charge of the development work, while A. T. Pryor and Ward Smith of Houghton are the officers of the company in Michigan.

The Cobralla company, joining the Alvin Development company on the west, has opened up the best body of sulphide ore in that section, and has been visited by a number of prominent mining men during the past few weeks. Numerous offers have been made on the property of late, and it is said that a large deal is now being negotiated for the control of the Cobralla by an Eastern syndicate. The Cobralla ground is crosscut by a series of disabase dikes and the mineralization of the limestones seems to be uniform and extensive as far as development.

THE COLORADO DISTRICTS

Lower Rates on Low Grade Ores Wanted From the Railroads---Rich Ore Bodies Encountered Along the Newhouse Tunnel.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Feb. 6.—The allied Cripple Creek railroads have been petitioned by mine owners and others for lower rates on low grade ores to mills located at Colorado Springs, Canon City, Florence and other points, namely 50 cents a ton on $8 ore and 75 cents on $8 to $15 ore.

At Leadville the Progressive property is opening up a large ore body. The Penn, with a large percentage of lead with its silver-gold values, is shipping regularly. The Pioneer is in $400 gold ore in an eight inch streak.

One of the largest and richest ore bodies ever encountered along the Newhouse tunnel, Central City, has been tapped at 1,500 feet depth, but a survey must determine if on the Pocahontas, Dexter or Ingalls claims. The ore runs seventeen ounces in gold and sufficient in silver to toti $400 a ton.

The upraise from the Centurion tunnel to the Champion works on the Road tunnel level, Idaho Springs, Colo., has been completed. Drifting will be started at once for the main ore shoot, seventy-five to one hundred feet distant.

Work on the Smuggler mine, Aspen, Colo., is to be resumed. The shaft on the Della S. claim will be sunk to 1,000 feet depth and an electric hoist installed. At 1,000 feet depth a station will be cut and a large stationary pump installed. Fire in the upper Smuggler workings, together with constant pumping of 2,200 gallons of water a minute, has caused the company much expenses for ten years.

The Golden Cycle Gold Mining company is installing the most powerful hoisting plant yet introduced into Cripple Creek. It will have a guaranteed speed of 2,500 feet a minute at a depth of 3,000 feet. The Cycle shaft is down 1,400 feet, although no ore is being mined below 1,000 feet.

The Accident mine, Frank Watts, lessee, Cripple Creek, is in eighteen inches of ore, assaying thirtty-two ounces in gold and twenty-one ounces in silver a ton. An electric hoist will be installed and shipments made. The property is owned by A. McDougall of Brooklyn, N. Y.

A committee representing the Boulder, Colo., chamber of commerce, is looking for a location for a cyanide mill to treat ores from mines adjacent to the city.

The Portland Gold Mining company, Crippkle Creek, disbursed its regular quarterly dividend, 4 cents a share, on the 15th, bringing the company's total to date to $8,227,080.

The Vindicator Consolidated, also of Cripple Creek, disbursed dividend forty-three, 3 cents a share, or $45,000, on the 25th, making a total to date $1,980,000.

F. J. Altvader and John C. Jenkins have sold the Colorado lode in Russell district to the Gilpin County Land & Mines company, for $10,000. The transfer adjusts litigation which has been pending for months. The property is now in ore assaying $15 to $300.

The recent strike in the Abe Lincoln mine, near Bowerman, is holding out well. The new mill is working satisfactorily, only five stamps being used. The plant is located 125 feet from the portal of No. 1 tunnel. Much ore is in the bins and the mill will be kept running regularly for some time.

NO CURTAILMENT OF OUTPUT

Large Proportion of Lake Superior Copper Smelter Product in Form of Cakes, Indicating Specific Orders—Being Shipped at the Rate of About 500,000 Pounds Daily.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—With a steady decline in the price of all grades of copper, and reported large accumulations of the metal at home and abroad, it is a noteworthy fact that the Lake Superior companies continue production without any attempt at curtailment. And of even greater significance is the fact that an unusually large proportion of the smelter product is in the form of cakes, a form seldom made unless a specific order exists therefor, stock copper usually being cast in the shape of ingots. Furthermore the finished metal is being shipped at the rate of about 500,000 pounds daily and is going directly into the hands of consumers. The stocks of metal in evidence at the various smelters of the district are about normal.

North Lake.

Compelled to abandon one sand pipe at a depth of 410 feet because of an unpenetrable overburden, the North Lake company finally succeeded in getting its No. 2 pipe down through nearly 280 feet of overburden to bed rock and diamond drilling in rock is now in progress. A second diamond drill outfit is sinking another hole through an outeropping of the ledge about 1,000 feet distant from the first dimaond drill and a complete cross section of the property will be made.

The Lake.

At the Lake mine developments underground continue to reveal ground of apparently undiminished copper content. Altogether about 800 feet of laterals havo been created and so far as opened the mine presents a veritable "jewelry shop" in appearance. The shaft is sinking for the third level, which will be established at a depth of 450 feet.

Victoria's exploratory operations continue with rather indifferent results. An unidentified copper bearing lode was recently disclosed to which attention will be given later. The cross cut and tunnel driving across the formation are progressing favorably and less than 300 feet remains to complete the first cross section of this end of the property. A second cross section of the property 1,000 feet distant is being made with the aid of diamond drills. Mining operations disclose somewhat richer ground on the twenty-second level, but on the whole, conditions underground are far from satisfactory.

Rhode Island.

Rhode Island is engaged in crosscutting os the tenth level. The crosscut has attained a length of about 300 feet and discloses an epidotal amygdaloid 150 feet west of the present workings upon which a limited amount of drifting has been done with encouraging results. The new discovery is believed to be identical with the so-called west lode mined by the Quincy company.

Hancock.

Hancock's vertical shaft is approaching the 1,500-foot level, about one-half the distance necessary to reach the No. 1 lode upon which the older incline shaft is opened. Drifts tributary to the incline shaft reveal copper rock of exceptional richness, especially on the thirteenth level and in the winze sinking from that depth. The Quincy lode will be reached by the vertical shaft at approximately 3,600 feet from surface.

Gratiot

Gratiot is employing the largest number of men in its history and is prosecuting development work vigorously. The mine is now opened to an average depth of 1,000 feet. Ten rock drills are regularly in service. A very fair grade of copper rock is noted on the stock pile accumulating entirely from opening work. No stoping is in progress.

Wyandot.

Wyandotte has begun drifting on the No. 2 lode encountered in the 700-foot level crosscut, but work at that point has not progressed sufficiently to warrant statements regarding value. Drifting on the No. 1 lode continues to show good milling rock.

Mass.

Mass has a diamond drill outfit rigged up on the surface and is sinking a vertical hole through the lode recently encountered by diamond drill operations underground in A shaft. While nothing definite regarding the cores obtained by these operations has been made public, it is unofficially stated that the showing of copper was highly encouraging.

The Atlantic.

The situation underground at the Atlantic's Section 16 mine remains unchanged. The shaft is now well over 2,000 feet deep, and creditable

DECREASE IN BUTTE OUTPUT

Production of the Mines in January Was 2,500,000 Pounds of Copper Less Than in December—North Butte Leads in Yield of Copper Per Ton of Ore.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the Boston & Montana company, the largest producer of copper operating in the district, closed for eleven days during the month, the Butte mines produced 26,502,608 pounds of copper in January, or nearly 2,500,000 pounds less than was produced by the district in December. The different companies contributed to the totals of ore mined and copper produced about as follows:

Company—	Tons of ore.	Pounds copper.
Boston & Montana ..	70,000	5,250,000
Anaconda	112,840	7,108,920
Butte & Boston	20,770	1,287,740
Washoe	17,050	1,023,000
Parrot	12,555	728,190
Trenton	13,578	760,368
North Butte	43,400	3,992,800
Butte Coalition	38,750	3,138,750
Original	28,055	2,188,290
Pittsburg & Mont. ..	8,370	627,750
Miscellaneous	4,960	396,800
Totals	370,328	26,502,608

The average daily tonnage of ore from all the mines was 13,188 tons, and the average daily output of copper was 948,068 pounds. The yield of copper per ton of ore was about: Boston & Montana, 75 ponuds to the ton; Anaconda, 63; Butte & Boston, 62; Washoe, 60; Parrot, 58; Trenton, 56; North Butte, 92; Butte Coalition, 81; Original, 78; Pittsburg & Montana, 75.

The Washoe Smelter.

The decision of Judge Hunt of the United States court for the district of Montana refusing to grant an injunction against the Washoe smelter of the Amalgamated Copper company, and closing down that plant, is also an effective answer to the charges made to President Roosevelt that the smelter smoke was killing the timber on the national forest reserve. Judge Hunt based his decision on a close examination of a great mass of testimony as well as a personal trip over the "smoke zone" country, and he finds that the damage that can actually be attributed to the smelter smoke is very small. The "smoke farmers" had relied heavily on the court decision in the Tennessee and Utah smelter cases, but Judge Hunt finds that conditions there and in Montana are not identical; not even similar. In Utah hundreds of farmers joined in the suit against the smelter, and the evidence left no room to doubt the damage done by the smelter smoke; the evidence was that the smoke was so bad that even human life was made unbearable. Nothing like that exists in the Washoe "smoke zone."

The only contention has been that the smoke in places has killed vegetation and that by deposits of arsenic on fodder some live stock sickened and died. Judge Hunt found, however, that the finest looking live stock in Montana is raised within the smoke zone and that dairymen with big herds of cattle are anxious to rent farms for dairying purposes, showing conclusively that experienced cattlemen have no reason to fear the smoke. However, the decision, refusing to close the big smelting plant, is largely based on the broader ground of the greatest good to the greatest number, and the untold damage that would be done by closing the smelter. He finds that more than half of the assessed property value of the county in which the smelter is situated is assessed to the Amalgamated company, and that the latter therefore pays more than half of the county and state taxes for that county, and this property would be made practically valueless by the closing of the smelter by injunction.

The city of Butte with its population of 70,000 is almost wholly dependent on the operations of the smelter and mines of the Amalgamated company and in the county in which Butte is situated the Amalgamated interests pay about 30 per cent of all the taxes. With the valuations of the two counties reduced, as would result from the injunction and closing of the mines, the revenues of the state would be most seriously reduced and the state materially affected. The company employs 5,000 men in the Butte and 2,500 at the smelter, and several thousand more are employed in handling the ore an dsupplies in transportation, several thousand more in the coal mines, lumber camps and sawmills of the company. The company pays more than $1,000,000 a month in wages, and about $5,000,000 a year to the railroads in freight.

Magnitude of Interests.

As further evidence of the magnitude of the interests involved Judge Hunt cited the fact that the smelter alone, since 1902, and up to June, 1906, expended more than $7,000,000 for labor, more than $4,000,000 for coal, $4,000,000 for coke, $740,000 for lime rock, $1,300,000 for machinery, and $53,000 for lumber; that up to June 30, 1906, the ores treated at the Washoe smelter yielded 590,000,000 pounds of copper, more than 25,000,000 ounces in silver and more than 164,000,000 ounces of gold and that annually from 17 to 20 per cent of the output of the United States has been produced by the Washoe smelter. Al lthese vast interests are involved on one side, while on the other are about 100 farmers, ownin gover 90 per cent of the lands in the valley, who place their total damage and value of property at $1,120,731, for which they had demanded payment from the company as a settlement

LAKE SUPERIOR IRON MINES

Interstate Mining Company to Conduct Extensive Explorations on the Cuyuna Range---Canadian Northern May Become Important Factor in Ore Traffic—Important Iron River Find.

The Interstate Mining company, a subsidiary concern of the Jones & Laughlin steel interests of Pittsburg, Pa., has extended its operations to the Cuyuna range and will conduct extensive exploratory work in the new iron district. Options have been secured on a number of favorably located tracts, and these properties will be thoroughly tested, three diamond drills to be operated at the start. While no shipping mines have yet been opened on hte Cuyuna, the range is considered of much promise, and it is being given steadily increased attention.

The first exploratory work on the Cuyuna was done near Deerwood in 1904. This operation was successful, in that it was found an iron formation existed in the vicinity, and since that time the exploration of the field has broadened in scope until now the search for merchantable bodies of ore has extended over a very considerable stretch of country. There are probably two score of drills in commission at the present time, and this number will be materially augumented with the advent of the summer season. Some of the best known operating companies and individual mining men in the Lake Superior region are concerned in the exploitation of the district.

Although ore has been tapped by drills in various portions of the range, probably the best showing to date has been in the vicinity of Deerwood, both to the north and the south of the village. Near Rabbit lake, six miles from Deerwood, the Rogers-Brown ore interests are at work at the only mine that has yet been brought to the producing stage. This property is in section 30, 47-28. The shaft is down 150 feet, at which depth lateral development is in progress. The ore is of very good quality and apparently it is sufficient in quantity to assure that the mine will be a good-sized producer. It is still a question, however, that shipments will be made this year, not because the stockpile now being accumulated will not permit it, but because railroad facilities are lacking, no move having yet been made to build the Northern Pacific's projected extension to the property. Rogers, Brown & Co. also have a promising tract in section 30, 45-28. Shaft sinking was started here last year, but was temporarily abandoned at a depth of sixty feet on account of the inadequacy of the pumping facilities to care for the water. Additional equipment has now been delivered, and it is expected that work will be resumed in the spring.

The State Interested.

As a holder of realty on the Cuyuna, the state of Minnesota is itself much interested in the development of the region. A very large acreage is owned in fee by the commonwealth, and with mines opened on these lands the income derived from the royalties on the ore produced would doubtless be an important addition to the rapidly increasing school fund of the state. Iron indications have been found as far west as the Mississippi river and even beyond it. The state also has important land holdings in the country to the west of Vermillion lake and to the north of Ashawa, between that point and the international boundary, in which region no little interest has been aroused latteraly by reports of ore discoveries. The territory in question lies well to the north of the Mesaba, and if it is to develop that there exists an extensive iron formation another new range will have been added to the list of Lake Superior districts. The exploratory work in the Ashawa country will be watched with interest by mining men generally; a number of drills are in commission already and many mines will be started following the disappearance of snow in the spring.

An interesting possibility in this connection is that the Canadian Northern will become an important factor in the ore carrying traffic. Through its recently acquired Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg line, extending from Virginia, on the Mesaba, to the international border, this railroad of the Mackenzie & Mann interests is the only one which now serves the Ashawa region. It will also be in position to serve a portion of the Mesaba range with the completion of the proposed extension of the Rainy Lake road from Virginia to Duluth, and it will be no surprise to see the Canadian Northern folks making a bid for the ore tonnage of various independent Mesaba producers. The Rainy Lake line already handles the product of the Sliver mine of M. A. Hanna & Co. of Cleveland, but only to the extent of transporting it a distance of a dozen miles, the ore being delivered to the docks at Duluth by the Steel corporation's Missabe road. It is the Canadian Northern, too, that serves the ore properties which John W. Gates and associates are developing in the Moose mountain district of Ontario.

On the Menominee.

M. A. Hanna & Co. of Cleveland, who are developing the Hollister mine, in the Crystall Falls district, are preparing to extend their operations in that portion of the Menomine range. Options on lands in the Amasa field have been secured, and arrangements are being made to begin exploratory work in the spring. The Amasa

THE SILVER CITY DISTRICT

Report That Cole-Ryan Interests Are After Leopold Properties---Savanna Pushing Repairs on Big Smelter Which Will Start Soon.

Silver City, N. M., Feb. 6.—Silver City is starting the new year with a renewal of activity in all its tributary mining districts, and the present outlook is for a year of great prosperity.

The best known mining districts tributary to this city are the Mongollon, Socorro county; the Little Burro, Santa Rita, Central, Fierro Hanover and Pions Altos districts, with the Mongollon, Burro mountain and Santa Rita districts showing the greatest activity.

The Socorro Mines company, operating in the Mogollon district, is erecting a 30-stamp mill for the treatment of its gold and silver ores and the machinery is now being hauled from this city to the company properties. The company will use the cyanide process in addition to its other methods of ore handling.

The Last Chance property in the same district, continues its activity and is a strong producer.

The best information obtainable is to the effect that the Leopold properties, belonging to the Burro Mountain Copper company, which has made the district famous, are under option to the Cole-Ryan copper syndicate. Rumors are numerous as to the sale of the property and a sale may be announced any day. The company has a 300-ton mill on these properties and has probably 2,000,000 tons of ore blocked out above the 200-foot level.

According to rumor the same people have acquired the Tyrone properties, also with a very large tonnage blocked out.

The Savanna Copper company, which is a consolidation of the Copper Gulf company with the old Comanche Mining & Smelting company, is pushing repair work on the big smelter, which indicates an early resumption of smelting operations.

The present capacity of the smelter of the Savanna company is about 250 tons daily, and with it in operation, the mining districts tributary are all active. A narrow gauge railroad connects the smelter and concentrator with the mines of Pinos, Altos, and ores and concentrates from the other districts are hauled in by wagons.

With the Sovanna smelter in full operation, Silver City will be the best mining town in New Mexico, and one of the best in the Southwest.

A number of large mining deals are now pending here, with the probabilities in favor of two good sales being closed soon.

SUPERIOR & GLOBE COMPANY

Officials Well Pleased With Conditions They Found at the Property---Feel That It is of Great Prospective Value.

Globe, Ariz., Feb. 6.—J. W. Selden and Charles Chynoweth, treasurer and secretary, respectively, of the Superior & Globe Copper company, after a visit here of nearly a week, during which time they inspected the company's mining property, have left for the East. It was Mr. Selden's first visit to Globe, and before leaving he expressed himself as not only favorably impressed with the camp, but highly pleased with the company's property, as well. Both Mr. Chynoweth and he are satisfied that the company has secured ground of great prospective value, and are confident that with intelligent and systematic development an important copper mine will be opened up, and in this opinion several local mining men of standing concur.

Henry V. Snell, who was appointed general manager for the Superior & Globe company, is now in Michigan conferring with other directors of the company in regard to the development work about to be undertaken, and upon his return to Globe the work will be promptly started and pushed with vigor. It has practically been decided to sink a three-compartment shaft to a depth of 1,000 feet and open levels every one hundred or two hundred feet below 300 feet. Other work of an explanatory character will also be carried on. At the present time the claims are being surveyed for the purpose of locating the outcrops and obtaining the necessary data to make application for patent.

The Superior & Globe property is well situated, adjoining the Yuma claim of the Old Dominion company, and the Mineral Farm, on the northeast, and immediately north of the holdings of the Arizona-Michigan Mining company. The Big Johnny-O'Dougherty Yuma fault runs through the Superior & Globe for a length of three claims or 4,500 feet, and is strong and persistent, and is richly impregnated with iron. This fault where prospected on the Superior & Globe ground, shows silver values and a small percentage of cop-

THE COPPER CREEK COMPANY

Property Adjoins the Calumet & Arizona's Holdings Near Mammoth, Arizona---Expected That Mill Will be Completed During the Early Summer.

Douglas, Ariz., Feb. 6.—There is every reason for believing that another producing mine will be added to the list of those along the Upper Gila and its adjacent country during the present year. Reference is made to the property of the Copper Creek Mining company, adjoining the Calumet & Arizona holdings, near Mammoth, and of which company R. Roy Sibley is the superintendent. A private letter was recently received here from Mr. Sibley enclosing photographs of the camp and company buildings and with a short account of the company's operations. Considerable new machinery is being installed and the pictures indicate that the camp is a model of neatness and pleasantly situated in a little valley surrounded by hills. Concerning the property Mr. Sibley says:

"The Copper Creek Mining company is the pioneer in the field and owns by far the largest and most important mining properties of this new district. We constructed the road into the district at a cost of $21,000, practically without aid from any of the other companies.

"We have in process of construction a 500-kilowatt Corliss central power station of which the first unit 200 capacity has just been completed. We are also constructing a thorough, modern and up-to-date concentrating mill, which will have a capacity of 250 tons daily, when completed. We have a very fine double drum electric hoist at our American Eagle shaft, and the shaft is first class in every respect, at present there being three compartments, timbered with 10 by 10 timbers. This is one of the best equipped mining shafts in this section of the country. On the property are found some of the largest and best ore bodies of this remarkable new district, which is destined to come into very large production during the next three to five years.

"The ore bodies run from 3 per cent ot 5 per cent for a width of from 40 to 150 feet in places, the same being in great porphyry masses, between diorite walls.

"The Copper Creek company's mill will be completed during the early summer and will produce a considerable amount of concentrates during the last six months of the year. Upon the completion of the concentrating mill, work will commence on the first smelter unit 250 tons daily capacity, plans and specifications for which are now completely in hand."

TO DOUBLE SASCO SMELTER

Capacity, Which is Now 700 Tons Daily, to be Increased to 1,400---Three Furnaces Operating for Arizona Copper Company.

Tombstone, Ariz., Feb. 6.—The officers of the Tombstone Consolidated company, who are the same as those of the Imperial Copper company, confirm the following report, which was recently published, regarding the increasing of the capacity of the Southern Arizona Smelting company at Sasco:

"The capacity of the smelter, which at the present is 700 tons, will be increased to 1,400 tons daily.

"When the Sasco smelter was built its capacity was but thirty tons. It was but a short time, however, until there was a necessity for an enlarged plant and a second furnace was added, giving a capacity of 700 tons. This mount of ore is furnished from the Imperial mines and customs ores could not be handled.

"It has been found that the Imperial mines can over supply the smelter with its present capacity and it is said that this is the reason the plant will he enlarged, as there are a number of mines in the Silverbell district that are anxious to ship ore when the smelter is able to handle their products.

"The smelter company is shipping in a great quantity of coke. Last week nearly 300 cars were received, and this week there was also a large consignment of the fuel for the Sasco smelter."

Clifton, Ariz., Feb. 6.—The ore bins, trestle works and other property of hte Arizona Copper company, that was recently destroyed by fire, is now about replaced with new structures, and while the improvements lack a great deal of being completed, they are far enough advanced to permit the company to operate thre furnaces, the leacher and several converter stands. Ore trains were put on this week and the concentrators at Clifton will be going at full capacity. Practically all of the men who were laid off in Clifton on account of the fire have again been put to work. The greatest losses in time to the laboring men was witnessed at Metcalf and Coronado, where the company was forced to close down the mines on account of having insufficient bin capacity to store the ore. The Arizona Copper company, though the report was circulated outside of this camp that the close down would last several months, no doubt made a production of more than 1,000 tons of copper for January. The most of the mines resumed operations last week.

CLUB IDEA EXTENDED

Pickands-Mather Company Will Provide Rooms for Employes.

Nearly Every Big Mining Location Now Has Clubhouse.

The Pickands-Mather company which operates a string of mines on the Michigan iron ranges, has decided to extend its clubhouse plan to all mines under its management. Bray & Nystrom, the Duluth architects, have received the commission to draw plans for another clubhouse, to be erected near Iron River, Mich., on the Menominee range and clubhouses will be built at other locations later.

The first clubhouse was built by the Pickands-Mather company at one of its Michigan mines about three years ago and it has proved a big success. The houses are large, commodious, well appointed and well equipped. They include tub and shower baths, reading rooms, library, billiard rooms and other club features. The miners and office employes alike are given the privileges and they are expected to bring about much better conditions.

The plan, which was adopted by the Pickands-Mather company three years ago, is also being followed by the Oliver Iron Mining company at Hibbing, where a clubhouse has been erected for the office employes. One has also been erected at Evelch and theOliver is gradually extending its string of clubs to take in all the big mining locations on the range.

"The club idea has worked to promote much better feeling among the men at the mines and the big corporations have come to recognize it as almost a necessity in maintaining the high standard of conditions they set at their mining properties and maintaining the good feeling between employer and employes.

TRADE DULLNESS IS PRONOUNCED

Dun Notes Unusual Quietude—Iron-Steel Conditions Disappoint.

New York, Feb. 6.—R. G. Dun & Co's. weekly Review of Trade today says:

Dullness of retail trade is somewhat more pronounced than usual at this session, and distribution in wholesale lines continues considerably restricted, although there is urgency in the demand for some varities of cotton and woolen goods to provide for immediate requirements and Eastern manufacturers are very busy. Future orders in most lines are still placed with great caution, but confidence in the future is stronger.

Conditions in iron and steel continue disappointing. The leading interests still maintain established quotations, yet price cutting is general in several lines and even with this new business, is slowly developing. Some of the larger mills are operating at about 60 per cent of capacity, although largely on contracts. Stocks of pig iron are increasing and prices show a sagging tendency in consequence. Structural materials continue quiet.

In the primary market for drygoods the feature of importance is the increasing evidence of shortness of stocks in jobbers' hands, supplies in the West especially having been reduced to a minimum. Export business has ceased for the present, owing to advanced prices in nearly all lines bought for China. The market for print cloth yarn goods is unusually strong, and although prices have advanced, converters are placing orders for wide goods as far ahead as possible. The market for bleached goods is only moderately active, but ginghams show an improvement especially in Southern lines of staples. There has been a very general opening of the higher grades of fancy worsted in the mens' wear market this week and clothing buyers are showing increased interest and activity. While the trend of the market for woolen goods has not been fully determined, the tendency appears to be in favor of better grade fabrics.

Prices for footwear are firm at the advanced rates demanded by manufacturers owing to high cost of leather, but purchases by visiting buyers in the aggregate continue disappointing. Shipments of over 91,000 cases from Boston are the largest weekly movement for over a year. Prices of domestic hides are somewhat easier, with the exception of branded stock, which continues strong.

A Magic Elixir of Beauty.

For ages womankind have been longing for an elixir of beauty—for a distillation from herbs, minerals, or for any product of nature or art, that would preserve the sweet, lovely complexion of healthy girlhood. Dr. T. MUST HITCH THEIR HORSES

Twenty-four Teamsters Given Warning by the Humane Officer.

Henry Cleveland, special officer in the employ of the Humane society, yesterday induced twenty-four drivers of horses to buy hitching straps and promise to use them, where they did not already have straps.

Mr. Cleveland got the names and addresses of all the men, after he had found them breaking the ordinance governing the tying of horses, and told them they would be arrested and prosecuted unless they did better in future. They promised faithfully.

The names of yesterday's offenders are to be kept on file, and if they are found disobeying instructions in future they will be hauled into court.

RUDDER ON WRIGHT'S AEROPLANE IS BROKEN.

Pau, France, Feb. 6.—While leaving the ground with Paul Tissandier as a passenger, Wilbur Wright broke the rudder of his aeroplane. Neither Wright nor Tissandier was injured. The accident was due to the imperfect placing of the rail over which the aeroplane runs to gain momentum, which caused the machine to sag to the left and strike the ground.

How to Get Rid of Catarrh

A Simple, Safe, Reliable Way, and it Costs Nothing to Try.

Those who suffer from catarrh know its miseries. There is no need of this suffering. You can get rid of it by a simple, safe, inexpensive, home treatment discovered by Dr. Blosser, who, for over thirty-four years, has been treating catarrh successfully.

His treatment is unlike any other. It is not a spray, douche, salve, cream, or inhaler, but is a more direct and thorough treatment than any of them. It cleans out the head, nose, throat and lungs so that you can again breathe freely and sleep without that stopped-up feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It heals the diseased membranes and makes a radical cure, so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting, and at the same time it does not poison the system and ruin the stomach, as internal medicines do.

If you want to test this treatment without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. Blosser, 692 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga., and he will send you by return mail enough of the medicine to satisfy you that it is all he claims for it as a remedy for catarrh, catarrhal headaches, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis, colds and all catarrhal complications. He will also send you free an illustrated booklet, Write him immediately.

AMENDING THE ANTI-TRUST LAW.

The prize for the most comic editorial of the season should be at once awarded to the Springfield Republican, which takes a column to voice its satisfaction and dissatisfaction with the senate judiciary report condemning the proposals for the amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The Republican is rejoiced at the attitude of the committee because that attitude disapproves of President Roosevelt's recommendation for the amendment of the law; when it thinks about this feature of the committee's report it is just as tickled as it can be. It draws a very long face over the conclusion of the committee that the law does not need amendment, however. The attitude of the Republican is about as consistent as any argument which has yet been advanced fro the amendment of the law. It indorses the committee for its rejection of the "Roosevelt scheme" which, it declares, "would establish a government by men instead of a government by law. It would place all interstate business at the mercy of the judgment of an administrative officer at Washington, and heaven only knows by what political and other influences that judgment might be swayed." The Republican then turns about and berates the committee for its refusal to inject the word "unreasonable" in the anti-trust law so as to make illegal only such combinations as are in "unreasonable restraint of trade." If the senate judiciary committee had approved the use of the word "unreasonable" in this connection, and if the anti-trust law were so amended, the effect would be exactly what the Republican deplores in the "Roosevelt scheme." It would be for the head of the bureau of corporations, or for the attorney general, or for some other administrative officer to decide in the first instance whether any particular combination is "unreasonable." Upon that decision would hinge the prosecution or the immunity from prosecution of the trust. The Republican is simply, in its argument, pulling down with its left hand what its right hand is building up.

There is probably no law upon our statute books today for the amendment of which there is pressure from so many widely different sources. The desire to make the law more definite, to distinguish between good trusts and bad trusts, is responsible for the recommendations for amendment from such sincere sources as President Roosevelt, the National Civic Federation and the Springfield Republican and other influential newspapers. Capital also ardently desires the amendment of the law in order that there may be a loophole through which great combinations of capital may escape. Labor is even more violently vociferous in its demand that it be accorded special privileges by the anti-trust law. There seems to be a striking parallel between this law and the tariff law. Everybody wants the tariff law revised,—except as to his particular article of manufacture. Everybody wants the anti-trust law to stand as it is,—except as to his own particular activities.

The Springfield Republican, in its desire to let down the bars of the anti-trust law, sneers at the declaration of the senate judiciary committee that "the act as it exists is clear, comprehensive, certain and highly remedial." To disprove this statement of the committee it cites ex-Congressman William G. Brantley of Georgia as saying that the act is not clear in what it prohibits, that trusts have enjoyed their greatest prosperity since its enactment, that the supreme court has never had a single occasion to declare what the penal provisions of the law mean, and that the law was never intended to apply to labor unions. All of which statements are either untrue or not essential. Untrue as to definiteness, for the law provides that "every combination in restraint of trade is unlawful." Untrue, in that the supreme court has ruled upon the law nearly sixty times. Untrue, in that Senator Edmunds, the dominating personality in the drafting of the law, specifically declared that the law must apply to labor unions as well as to capital and that if it did not it would utterly fail of its purpose. Not essential, as to the prosperity of trusts in the past eighteen years, for it is only in the past few years that the government has vigorously attempted to enforce the law. Not essential, for no law can be condemned simply because it has not been ruled upon by the supreme court.

No proposal has yet been offered for the amendment of the law which does not practically nullify it; until amendments which will better the law without breaking it can be offered, the Sherman anti-trust law will probably stand as it is.

WILL MISSOURI SHOW US?

What is going to be done with big business corporations? Are they to go their own way and submit to punishment when the state is clever enough to catch them red handed in their sins, or are they to submit to the regulation of all their affairs by the public?

The state of Missouri appears to be in a position where it must answer these questions at once. It has come to a parting of the ways. It must either reject or adopt at once the principle of governmental regulation of corporations.

Missouri's necessity arises from a most remarkable request made to the supreme court of the state by the Standard Oil company. Three of the Standard's subsidiary companies were ousted from Missouri last December, the Standard Oil company of Indiana, the Republic Oil company of Ohio and the Waters-Pierce company of Missouri. The Missouri supreme court in its opinion ousting these companies from the state, said that the records of the cases abounded in instances "where this unlawful combination has withered the energies of competitors, blighted individual investments in business, driven small and honest dealers out of business for themselves and made them 'hewers of wood and drawers of water' for the trust." Rather than lose its property and get out of the state the Standard Oil company now asks the supreme court to authorize the appointment of two receivers to take over its property and business in Missouri and to conduct its business there "under the vigilant supervision" of the court.

What is Missouri to do? If the court denys the request, the state practically turns its back upon the principle of state regulation. It destroys the trust and all its business but makes no provision for anything to take its place. If it agrees to the request, Missouri thereby adopts and puts into effect the principle of governmental regulation of the trust, a principle much discussed and by many regarded as inevitable in the development of modern industrial life, but nevertheless a principle as yet nowhere actually applied in its entirety.

Economic students are disposed to concede that trusts and combinations of capital as we know them today have come to stay. What are we going to do about it? What is Missouri going to do?

THE ANTI-SUFFRAGETTES.

The demand for universal suffrage for women has made but slow progress. Can the reason for this lie in the indifference of women themselves as to their right to vote? The great body of men probably have no objection to granting to women the right to vote; they are indifferent in the matter; they are willing that woman should vote if she wants to, but they await the word of woman herself before taking definite action in the matter.

Women appear to be very indifferent as to their right to vote. Although the agitation for universal suffrage has been going on for a long time, only a very small proportion of the women of the world, or of civilized countries, have even manifested the slightest interest in the subject. The woman advocate of woman's suffrage is enthusiastic enough, it is granted, but numerically she is insignificant.

It is interesting to know, also, that there are in the United States alone, nine women's organizations whose sole purpose is to fight the advance of suffrage for women. The nine organizations represent a membership of some 15,000 women and include in their ranks many of the most intelligent and prominent club women of the day. These organizations declare that woman does not want the ballot and to the question as to whether woman is interested in the matter, one of them submits the following interesting answer:

> We submit that the answer to this question is to be found in the action of women in regard to school suffrage, which is now given to women in twenty-two states of the Union. In these states, with the exception of Massachusetts, the average vote of women for the whole state has been less than 4 per cent. In many states the right has been almost entirely neglected, whole townships and even counties failing to register a single woman voter. In Chicago the first election under the school suffrage law was held in 1894. Great excitement prevailed among certain classes of women, and the novelty of the situation made a strong appeal to many. At that election 28,815 women registered, of whom about 80 per cent voted. At the next election, 1896, with no special effort on the part of the anti-suffragists, but simply as a result of natural causes, the vote fell off to 5,636 registered, of whom only 50 per cent voted. At the third election, 1898, the number of registered was 1,488, of whom only about 1,000 voted. Since that time the number of women voting has remained about stationary.
> Of the four states which have woman suffrage in full, three, Wyoming, Utah and Idaho, are so sparsely settled, but two or three inhabitants to the square mile, that the problems of municipal government, as they are presented in great cities, do not exist in them. Wyoming has had full suffrage for more than a generation. The result has been that there has been no greater advance in morals and civilization than ordinarily follows the change from pioneer life to that of settled communities.

The argument here advanced against suffrage for woman is so powerful that it must avail to prevent universal suffrage until such time as it is disproved by an active interest in the subject on the part of women. Until women themselves evince a decided desire for the ballot, it is quite improbable that men will so much as give the matter serious consideration. This is the state of affairs today. The subject is one upon which most men do not think. They have, one might almost say, practically decided not to think upon it, grounding this decision upon the indifference which woman herself displays toward a matter in which she is the one principally concerned.

DISTRIBUTION OF IMMIGRANTS.

Obviously it is to the interests of the people of this country as well as to the immigrants who are coming to America by so many thousands each year that the newcomers shall be placed as soon as possible after their arrival in those localities where they are most needed and where they can most surely prosper.

Thousands come to this country with very definite ideas as to the exact locality in which they intend to settle. They have been preceeded by friends and relatives who have found a place for them and they have come over to be Americans with some idea as to how and where they will take up the new life. But tens of thousands do not have any such idea. They have simply been compelled by political or economic reasons to leave the fatherland, or they have grown dissatisfied with their lot, and attracted by stories of the opportunities in "the land of the free," they have sold their few belongings or scraped together some small savings and have started. Landed in New York they are stranded in a country as big as the continent from which they came; they do not know which way to turn or what to do.

To provide for this latter class, to find places for them to make new homes, to discover where they are needed, a "division of information" was organized by congress two years ago. This bureau or department has been very busily at work ever since and has accomplished a world of good for the friendless foreigner who purposes to make his home in this country but who has not thought how or where he is to do it. The principal task of the new department has been to let the people of this country know of its existence. It has spent most of its effort in the past two years in impressing the fact of its existence, and its purposes, upon manufacturers, farmers and employers of labor. Associations of manufacturers and individual employers of labor have been written to for information as to where labor is needed. The township correspondents of the department of agriculture, to the number of more than 35,000, were written to. These correspondents were asked for information as to farm labor desired and they were also asked to notify farmers everywhere of the character of the work being done by the bureau of information. The postoffice department was appealed to, with the result that over two million notices of the bureau of information were distributed by the rural mail carriers.

Having pretty well brought to the attention of communities and individuals the fact of its existence, the department of information is now getting from all parts of the country the information which it will compile for the benefit of immigrants, so that it will soon be that no immigrant will feel himself helplessly stranded when he lands in this country. Instead, he will be immediately taken in charge by the department of information, and if he has not decided upon some place to locate in, he will be supplied with information as to where settlers and labor are desired. He will thus, without expense and without loss of time, be enabled to choose that portion of the country for his future habitat which is best suited to his knowledge and training and where he can most easily and most happily make his home.

In a county in which immigration is so large a proportion of the annual increase in population the substantial blessings which must flow from the activities of such a department of information are hardly to be estimated.

A NOTABLE TRIO.

The year 1909 is the centenary of three famous musical composers,—Mendelssohn, whose centenary has already been celebrated, Chopin, who was born March 1, 1809, and Haydn, who died May 31, 1809.

These men are three of the world's greatest masters of music, and of the very greatest masters of music that the world has known there are scarcely three others.

Haydn was the oldest of the trio, having been born in the same year with our own Washington. Like the others he was precocious, but his really great works were not produced until manhood, and his greatest composition, the oratorio "Creation" was not given until he was 66 years of age. Chopin performed in public when he was but 9 years old and was a composer of note when he was 20. Mendelssohn wrote the wonderful "Midsummer Night's Dream" at the age of 18, and his genius reached its full flower earlier than either Chopin or Haydn.

Haydn's "Creation" was the world's first great oratorio after Handel's "Messiah," while Mendelssohn's "Elijah" ranks next to the "Messiah" in popularity. Chopin wrote a one-act comedy when in his teens, but never attempted an oratorio.

Chopin is intensely polish. What Grieg did for the Norwegian, what Liszt did for the Hungarian, what Dvorak did for the Bohemian, Chopin did for the Pole. Haydn gave Austria her national air, and Mendelssohn wrote one of the popular national airs of Germany.

Haydn and Mendelssohn were masters of a wider range of music, but Chopin was "the soul of the pianoforte." He revolutionized the art of writing for the piano and all others have simply followed in his footsteps. His "Preludes" are among the greatest works of all time, and it is asserted that "page for page they contain more of the essence of musical genius than the same number of pages by any other master."

Of these notable three, Chopin, if not the most popular, for finish, fire, strength and vitality, is first.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Some day Duluth will be the market for a great many dairy products, just as some of the towns of the southern part of the state are now the marketing point for dairy produce that goes to outside points of the state," said Peter C. Nierderhofer of the Winona Creamery and Supply company, who was at the Lenox hotel last evening.

"I have been at Virginia upon a business trip, and I was very much surprised at the interest that is being manifested in dairying in that section of the country. Plans are on foot there to start a model creamery, upon the co-operative plan, which would give all of the farmers of the community a share in the success of the undertaking.

"From what I have learned upon my present trip, there are many ideal conditions for dairying in this part of the state. This is my first trip to Virginia, so that I cannot speak with authority upon the conditions in that section of the county. But I have learned from men in Minneapolis, who are very deeply interested in the growth of the northern part of the state, that the dairying industry has been steadily growing during the past five years and that never before in the history of the county was the future of this important industry so bright.

"Duluth will be the market for the products of the farms of this county. The same conditions developed at Winona. At first the farmers were slow in taking any interest in the development of the dairy industry, but as they began to see the success of the farmers who had taken dairying up, it did not take them long to see that here was a great source of profit. Today, some of the very best farmers in the state are in the district around Winona.

"It is not necessary for me to tell you that Minnesota butter is famous all over the world. That is a very broad statement, but Minnesota butter has taken prizes at exhibitions in every part of the United States, and, if I am not mistaken, some of it has been shown at foreign exhibitions. There is a demand for Minnesota butter and dairy products. We find, even in Winona, that there is invariably more demand than we can supply. From Winona we ship butter to the Eastern market and find a ready sale for the Minnesota products at a price that allows competition with Eastern products.

"From what I have learned of conditions here, and from what I know of Duluth, I am positive that some day this city will be the marketing point for great quantities of dairy products, which will be produced in St. Louis county.

"We have gone through the experience of developing a dairy community at Winona, and once the movement gets under the proper headway you will find no trouble in arousing the interest of farmers who have heretofore been slow in taking up the dairying industry."

Talk about adaptability! One of the Japanese bellboys of the St. Louis is a great reader. He reads many and various books. When "Bill the Kid" struck town, the little Jap read up upon some of the history of the Western states, in the days when bad men and redskins with murderous glint in their eyes, were the big noise. After the Jap had secured a working idea of the conditions that prevailed in the time in which "Bill the Kid" lived and foiled the villain, he went to the show and exhibited an artistic and historical interest in the rapid firing and many stirring scenes that marked the progress of the play.

But see what progress the "front" is making. After reading the many advertisements singing the virtues of "Peer Gynt" as the best comedy of the age, the bellboy, like many other people of this city, procured a copy of the Ibsen play and began to read the story. His perusal of the modern comedy—someone said that—was interrupted frequently by calls from the desk of "front"; yet with determined mien and puzzled brow the little brown man persistently kept at the "modern comedy." Maybe he will go to see the play and maybe he won't. Those who are aware of what the bellboy is reading, and the object of his reading, are making wagers as to whether he will go to the show, and wondering if he will follow the action of the show with as clear an artistic appreciation, and as deep an understanding as that with which he followed the unfolding of the plot of "Billy the Kid?"

THE WEATHER.

Snow flurries are again predicted for tonight, with slightly colder weather. The mild, cloudy weather continued today.

A year ago today it was clear and mild.

The sun rose this morning at 7:27 and will set this afternoon at 5:18, making nine hours and fifty-one minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions.

"Rather unsettled weather prevails generally. During the past twenty-four hours barometric depressions central over the Eastern Lake region and the Puget Sound caused rain or snow in the Lake region, Ohio and Mississippi valleys, Atlantic states, Western Canada, Washington, Oregon, Southern California and the northern portions of Utah and Wyoming, besides warmer weather along the Atlantic coast and over South Dakota, New Mexico and Arizona. An increase in pressure throughout the Northwest and from the Lake Region southward over the Ohio and Mississippi valleys to the Gulf of Mexico. Occasional snow flurries and moderately low temperature may be expected in St. Louis and Douglas counties tonight and Sunday."

High Prices Stalling Industry.

Buffalo Enquirer: An explanation of the advance in the price of poultry is that the high price of grain has forced many raisers of poultry out of the business, affecting also the egg market.

Joseph A. Minst of Albany remarks that "the price of poultry cannot go much higher because the consuming public will stop eating poultry."

Possibly the key to the non-revival of business is observable right here. High prices clog industry and trade. The masses are buying no more than they must. High-priced grain makes high-priced poultry. Prices advance to the point which checks both poultry raising and poultry consumption. The one illustration may do for the whole range. Industry is limited to supplying what the people cannot get along without.

If there is any better explanation, what is it?

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

On Walking Up to Our Problems.

Problems, problems, problems. What an array of them on every hand. The fundamental problem of human existence—what we are here for and where we are going when we die, the problem of keeping soul and body together, of paying our bills, of laying up a little against old age and the possible "rainy day"; the problem of living and working with others, of home administration, of child training; the social problem, the industrial problem, the racial problem; the problems involved in international relationships and affecting the peace of the world. These are but a few of the personal and professional knotty question that are discoverable as we look about us.

Every growing life has its problems, as has every growing industry. Indeed they are a sign of growth and if they are altogether absent from your experience it may be because you have ceased to grow or have gotten into deplorable ruts. So when we find them in our way it behooves us to have settled our policy in advance concerning them. Not that we can solve any of them ahead of time, but we can maintain a certain constant attitude toward the entire problem-area of our lives.

This attitude, I would roughly define as walking straight up to them. The contrary policy is far easier and much more common. We evade problems when we can. We cross the street to get rid of them. We dodge or ignore them when we ought to walk straight up to them and take their measure of them with fearless eyes and cool brains. In all probability they will not look to us so big or formidable. A parent or a school teacher dealing with an unruly or irritating child is often tempted to avoid the issue, to temporize or compromise, when one clear steady look at the situation would lead to the clearing up of the difficulty. "I straightened out that boy's table manners in a week," said a boarding school teacher, referring to a lad who had come to him from a home where his parents had allowed things simply to drift from bad to worse.

The grapple's the thing. Walk up to your problem and after measuring it take firm hold of it. It won't be any easier to tackle it tomorrow than it is today. Waiting may complicate it still further. Moreover waiting gets on to one's nerves. You lose, while waiting, the power and the coolness you need for the grapple. There was never yet a problem that did not become somewhat simplified by the effort to solve it. The knot may still remain tough, but the threads have been loosened a little.

A problem sometimes seems to me like a game of pool. Sometimes the balls arrange themselves on the table in such a way as apparently to prevent the making of a successful shot. But as you study closely the situation you discover that one good "try" can be made. So with our problems—you can always do one thing with them. And that done something else will appear to be done and so on from play to play until perhaps the whole problem is shot through and through with light.

Quail not then, in the presence of problems, personal and professional. When Macaulay heard that there were 40,000 thieves in London remarked, "Glad of it. Shows how rich the city is." And we are not to pity ourselves or others when problems arise. They show what confidence God puts in our energy, our wisdom, our resources, our persistency, our courage.

Pa—Law suits, my son.

"Why? Do you wish to kill him?"

"Kill him! No; I want to sell him the ring."

Boston Transcript: Mother (reprovingly)—Don't you know that you should never let a man kiss you?

It Isn't So Bad.

The road is rough
And the way is long,
But it isn't so bad
If you sing a song;
And it isn't so bad,
If you try to see
The bloom of the rose
And the green of the tree.

With a patch of blue,
Above your head,
And a song bird near,
As your way you tread,
What if you are
A wee bit sad?
Some joy is left
And it isn't so bad.

And if, at the end
Of your troublous day,
There's a little child
Or a wife to say,
"You are home at last,
And we are so glad,"
There's love for your pains
And it isn't so bad.

Roosevelt and Dennis.

New York Press: "Roosevelt has a fine sense of humor," said an old-timer. "When he was police commissioner he used to go around and keep tabs on the police himself. He came upon one standing at a bar one night before a large, full-grown glass of whisky which he was about to consume. Roosevelt touched him on the shoulder.

"'What is your name?' he asked.

"'What business is that of yours?' the cop demanded. 'What's your name?'

"'My name is Roosevelt,' answered that gentleman.

"The cop drank the liquor, set down the glass, wiped his lips with the back of his hand and then turned on the commissioner.

"'If your name is Roosevelt,' said he, 'my name is Dennis.'

"If I remember, Roosevelt let him off with a reprimand after that."

DEFECTIVE PAGE

The second annual session of the "cold water circuit court" was held in the Baptist church last evening. The call of the docket disclosed the fact that some very interesting and sensational cases are to be brought up for trial before the court. Among others is that of Susan B. Anthony against Joe Knowlton for breach of promise. The defendant was not ready for trial, and the case was continued. Mitchell vs. Woodbridge was also continued, owing to the defendant's absence in Washington on important business. The only case ready for trial was that of Elliott vs. McMillam, for vicious and defamatory libel. W. B. Patton appeared for the plaintiff, and M. A. Hayes represented the defendant. It appears that Mr. Elliott, who is editor of the Society Journal, a paper having a circulation about equal to that of the Oneota Daily Bladder, had published an article to the effect that Mr. Elliott was a sort of "whited sepulcher," who, while presenting a fine exterior, was really a victim of such ills as attend a dissipated life, and as a result he was bald-headed at the early age of 24. The defense set up the correctness of the publication, and also that the plaintiff was actuated by spite, inasmuch as Elliott had gone home with his girl. Judge O. H. Simonds was unable to preserve good order in the courtroom, and sometimes displayed a degree of hilarity reprehensible in one holding the judicial office. Mr. McMillan, who was mulcted to the tune of $150,000 by the verdict of the jury, will, it is said, attempt to secure the impeachment of the judge.

John Cline of Oneota smashed one foot very badly at a camp near Split Rock on the north shore, and will probably be laid up for several peeks.

The meeting of the common council last evening was entirely occupied with a warm discussion of the waterworks system, owing to a bill from the company for hydrant rental. Alderman F. W. Eaton made a fight against payment on the ground that, according to the contract, the waterworks should throw four effective streams from hydrants at an elevation of 140 feet above the level of the lake, while the fire marshals reported that four effective streams could not be thrown on Third street. Alderman Eaton was the only member of the council to vote against payment.

Alderman Eaton has offered to deposit $1,000, against the same amount, with Bell & Eyster that the present waterworks cannot throw four effective fire streams from hydrants on Third street, the loser to pay the amount towards the purchase of a chemical engine for the use of the fire department.

Congressman Knute Nelson has notified Mayor Graves that he will do all in his power to secure the adoption of the amendments to the land laws desired by Duluth lumbermen.

THOUGHTS ON BOYS

By J. S. KIRTLEY, D. D.

Author of "The Young Man and Himself," etc.

HIS EARLY BUSINESS ADVENTURES

(Copyright, 1909, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

His first business transactions are chiefly aerial, and he deals in atmospheric values of a very warm temperature. He never becomes what he at first wants to become, for he can't get all his arrangements made for that till he has tried something else for awhile, and while he is doing that he forgets what it was he wanted to be.

He is almost certain to want to be a street car conductor, or a circus rider, or a pony expressman, or a pot hunter, or a whale catcher, or an insect catcher for the Smithsonian institution, or a gold miner, or a soldier. He is not especially brave, in fact, is seldom so; but he likes the banners and the buttons and the stripes and the guns, for the pomp and the appearance of it all. Incidentally, he would not mind being a taxidermist, or a dog fancier, or a cowboy. He is certain to be stage struck at an early day. I was. It was a four-horse stage, sometimes six-horse, that held the center of the stage of my unrealized life drama. Gatheirng and selling berries, peddling grapes, running on errands for a store—these are his commonplace employments.

His business activities are usually of a far-reaching character, and anyhow they give him vast opportunities for enjoyment, and sometimes for irritation. Because he is a boy there are some men who try to take advantage of him; also because he is a boy, he sometimes thinks he is ill-treated, when he really is not. I recall such an experience. It was in the good old days in the country when the saw mills were turned into grist mills, one day in the week, and ground up the corn for the neighborhood. They would shell a bag of corn, throw it on a bareback horse, then throw a barefoot boy on the bag of corn that was on the bareback horse, and send him off to the mill. He would meet other boys in the same business as they emerged into the main road, and with several dogs apiece, and Indian like announcement of their approach, they would sweep up the turnpike and bear down on the mill. The miller would set the bags of corn in a row, grind them up, take toll from each, and, if there was anything left after he got his part, he would throw the bag of meal on the bareback horse and the barefoot boy on the bag of meal, and that boy would get home late in the afternoon with an appetite, beside which the earth hunger of the English nation would seem an entire loss of appetite. He was ready to eat seven suppers, all at once, and then some. It was in those good old days that one day the miller imposed on me, so I thought. I don't think so now, but it had just the same effect on my feelings, as if he had, and for awhile my threefold ambition in life was to be a cabin boy on a steamboat and to give that old man a whipping. I never became a cabin boy, and the old man died, and of course I then took a different view of it and let him off.

The amount of enjoyment a boy gets out of the enterprises which he himself initiates is in itself a wholesome education; it is an anticipation of his career and a preparation for it. He must not only be allowed to do so, but encouraged in it and carefully guided. The latter is highly necessary. When my cousin and I gathered the apples that would otherwise have gone to waste in his father's orchard, and took them down to Petersburg and sold some of them and gave one-half of the gross receipts to the owner of the orchard, and divided the other half between us, it was fine business. But the business reached its most fascinating point after we had peddled all we could, and then would throw them out to the crowd of boys to see them scramble and eat. They were gifted at both. The decline of the lightning rod also opened to this scribe a temporary business which he always remembers with pleasure. The old rods on the house came down, and some that once decorated a previous building were turned over to me; and Mr. Woolly, down at the blacksmith shop, paid me well for them. The pleasure of taking that money out of my pockets and counting it at least seventeen times a day is echoing in my memory still.

But now, the note of warning must be sounded, for perils await him. Among his interesting ventures are those in which his father engages to give him financial compensation for services of greater or less insignificance. Let the boy and his father beware lest he learn to put a financial value on the higher ministries which must always be voluntary and free. Let him do much work for the mere pleasure of doing it, and of co-operating with the others and serving them. As far as possible, let every command be a summons to his nobler sense of comradeship, all work be team work, and all rewards be a gratification to his unselfishness.

He is in peril of early pessimism, as he finds that everybody feels competent to direct him and almost everybody feels justified in imposing on him, by withholding or cutting his wages, working him over time, and, in numberless ways, failing to recognize that a boy can get tired, or hungry, or irritated, or indignant.

But, worse than that, he is likely to hear obscene and profane talk, and that, too, from men for such brutality if they were not so brutal. The man who pours filth and profanity into an innocent boy's ears is worthy to be horsewhipped, and yet at the noon hour and in the office the boy may hear words that makes him blush, and he is often invited to do things that he knows would break his parents' hearts. He must not be exposed to such deadly peril. He must be so directed that his early ventures in business will be in the line of his future aclevements. It is well for him to have in mind such boys as Andrew Carnogie, who came over from Scotland with only a sovereign in his pocket, but with sovereignty in his soul, and fired a stationary engine for $2.50 a week. He can get the virtues of industry, honesty, fairness and altruism operative in his life very early.

OLD AND NEW SPAIN

IT WAS a popular and discerning American author who made the remark, "You may dwarf a man to the mere stump of what he ought to be, and yet he will put out green leaves," and so with nations, and Spain for example. More than four centuries ago, when the heroic Moor had been expelled from Andalusia before the shining lance and trenchant blade of Castillian chivlary, Spain rose to be the first power, not only of Christendom, but of the entire world, and the grandson of Ferdinand and Isabella became the most powerful monarch with whom history has dealt between Charlemagne and Napoleon. In addition to the peninsular, the most puissant of the then nations, he was dominant in Italy and sovereign of a great part of what is now France. All the Netherlands owned him for master, nearly all the Americas, then subdued to the Caucasian, were his. He had possessions in the Far East also, and fortune, with both hands running over, put upon his brow the diadem of the modern Caesars.

Charles V was the first personality of an age prodigal in the production of extraordinary men—Francis I, Henry VIII, Solymon the Magnificent, the Constable Bourbon, Cardinal Wolsey, Martin Luther, Julius II, Leo X, Clement VII, William the Silent, Andrea Doria, and many others. Don John of Austria was his son with the bar sinister, and Alexander Farnese was the son of his daughter with the bar sinister. Alva was his captain, though Bourbon, driven from France by a fatuous king and a voluptuous dowager, commanded for him in one of the greatest of his battles, and that proved decidedly the most fruitful of his victories. His army was the bravest in hte world, fashioned in hte school of Gonsalvo di Cordova, El Gran Capitan. At Lepanto Spain overthrew the Turks in one of the greatest, perhaps the very greatest, sea fights between Atcium and the destruction of the invincible Armada. Not only was the Spain of Charles' reign first in arms, but she led in statecraft, in letters, and in art. Cervantes, the nearest to Shakespeare of all profane literary geniuses, was a stout combatant at Lepanto.

Philip II inherited all his father's dominions, and all his dignites, except the imperial crown of Germany. He had at command what was easily four-fifths of the wealth of the world. His armies were invincible, and led by the first captains of the age—Don John, Farnese and Emmanuel Phillibut, the princely Savoyard, who brought France to defeat and humiliation, but whose victory was subsequently reduced to naught, and whose fame was subsequently eclipsed by Francis of Guise. Not content with his inherited power, Phillip took for his wife the queen of England, and upon her demise he had for consort a daughter of France, sister of three several kings of that realm.

At St. Quentin the power of Spain attained to the zenith. It was now that her statesmanship became stolid and fatuous. All the genius of all the world conspiring together could scarce have devised a policy of government more harmful and more degenerate thant that which cursed Spain for more than three centuries. The king was absolute, and assumed to be master of the persons, the estates, the minds, and the conscience of his subjects and yet this was Spain, the inventor of the very soul of modern parliamentary government. Descended from the Visigoths, who wrought so destructively for the overthrow of Roman civilization, there was a liberty in that land that even the crafty and the conscienceless Ferdinand himself could not subdue, and even Charles V was necessitated to humiliate himself and beg supplies from the Cortez, the first of modern parliaments.

As if fate was bent on his destruction, Philip must needs drive the Netherlands to revolt, the most opulent, and the day of his coronation, the most loyal of his subjects. Of that Batavian race that Julius Caesar himself absorbed because he could not conquer it, for more than forty years the Netherlands strove for their liberties against the bravest armies, captained by the most consummate generals of that heroic age. Our revolutionary struggle was a May day festival in comparison to that William the Silent maintained against Philip II.

England, Huguenot France, and thousands in Germany lent aid to heroic little Holland, and finally Philip put the world as a stake and sent his Armada against England, whose sovereignty he claimed as the heir of his first queen. What man with Anglo-Saxon for race but his blood stirs when reading of that scene where Elizabeth mustered her nobility, her gentry, and her yeomanry at Tilbury, and reviewed them mounted on her palfrey, like another Semiramis! Catholics were as sternly determined and as eager for the issue as Protestants, and all England was resolved to die rather than own the Spaniard for master. Farnese was on the other shore, at the head of the finest army then on the planet, waiting for hte Armada to convoy his transports to the British Isles; but the young navy of England, under Howard, Drake and Frobisher, met the enemy, defeated him, and the storm of occan did the rest. Had Farnese landed the last half of the sixteenth century, or had Napoleon landed the first half of the eighteenth century, on English soil, the history of the world would have radically differed from what it is.

After the death of Philip, Spain went from bad to worse. There appeared to remain nothing but her pride and her chivalry. A picture of the government and of the people is found in the chapters of that delightfully fascinating romance, "Gil Blas." There misrule is described in all its gloom, impotent in everything except courage and corruption. And yet Spain was grand, even in her degyet Spain was grand, even in her degradation. Even Richelieu dreaded her, as did his successor, Mazarin. England sought her alliance, and the mighty spirit of Spain survived to tame the great nations that supplanted her long after her power was undermined, just as the mother of the East quieted her child with "A Richard of England will get you" long after Richard had served as supper for worms.

And yet Spain was formidable, even in her decrepitude and her prostration. In two great wars she was prominent, and in one she saved Europe. The easiest of all coutries to overrun, she was never subdued. In the great war of the succession, Marlborough and Eugene defeated France in numerous great battles, and the kingdom of Louis the Great was rended on the Rhine border; but a grandson of Louis was maintained on the throne at Madrid by the valor and the prowess of Spanish guerillas, who came to the support of Berwick and Vendome, the commanders of the French armies in the peninsula, and lent them victory, resulting in the expulsion of the allied English and Austrians from Spain.

Nor is it too much to say that Napoleon got his fatal wound in Spain. He had put his brother on the throne, just as Louis had given the Spanish crown to his grandson; but Spain would have none of Joseph, and so she welnomed Wellington. Had Spain accepted the king the Corsican gave her, the veterans under Soult, Junot, Massena, Marmont, Lannes and Ney, who found bloody graves in Spain, might have been children of victory again in Germany, and thus saved the empire of the modern Caesar. If Spain had not aided him, Wellington could not more have expelled the French from the peninsula than Stanhope did 100 years earlier.

It is a common belief that Napoleon's marshals were great generals, and so they were, under his eye. He said at St. Helena that of all the captains under his command, Desaix and Kleber were the ablest. Both died the same day—the first in the battle at Marengo, and the second by the hands of an assassin, in Egypt. Lannes and Massena were perhaps the ablest of the others, but the first never had an independent command. Massena was victor at Zurich and the defender at Genoa. Ney was fit for nothing but a brilliant charge or a stubborn retreat, and Napoleon declared he should never have risen above the rank of general of division. Murat was only a trooper, superb for dash and enthusiasm. Davoust was a hero and victor in a battle where nothing told but stubborn courage. That same day his master, only a few miles away, gained one of his greatest battles by the exercise of his matches genius of war. Macdonald might have saved the crown at Lutzen had the other marshals supported him. There are those who think Saint Cyr, the ablest of the marshals; but he would not flatter, and the emperor distrutsed him.

But every one of them was incapable except under the eye of their master. It is sickening to read in the pages of Marbot the petty jealousies of these heroes in Spain, where they would have overthrown Wellington had they acted in concert. If Massena had caused a platoon to shoot Ney he might have saved Spain for Napoleon. The trouble was that every devil of them thought that he, and he only, was next best general to the emperor. Napoleon was never well served by his generals except when he himself was present or near by.

But there are indications that Spain "is putting out green leaves." The government is beginning to be efficient, and what is better to the purpose, it is become honest. Having lost her patrimony, Spain has gone to work for a living. It is said the capital is to be changed from Madrid to Barcelona, and that the Escurial is to be abandoned, an acropolis and a memory of the Spain that began to die with its erection and was centuries expiring. That Spain is now dead and we have a new Spain.

Barcelona is a progressive city, modern and a center of industry. As busy as the average American town, the music of her anvils and the cadence of her looms promise a renaissance of a people a sinteresting as any in history. It is a splendid race, and a land of poetry, of romance, of heroic achievements, of historic memories, reaching back before Hannibal and the Scipios. It was the most valuable province of Rome, and the first to revive the literature of Europe after the dark ages. The natural resources of Spain are exceedingly rich. The iron is equal to any in the world. If not superior, for out of it was fashioned the Toledo blade that smote against the scimetars of the Berber chivalry. Corn, wine, and oil are abundant and unsurpassed. Honor was too oft soiled with cruelty, but the Spanish grandee lives in the story of mankind as a type of nobility never surpassed by the choicest of other peoples.

It is not very edifying to an American to contemplate our "war" of 1898. There was no glory in it, except that the navy discovered that it was worthy of the admiration of all who had read of Jones, of Preble, of Decatur, of Chauncey, of Perry, of MacDonough, of Bainbridge, of Stewart, of Portor, of Hull, of Lawrence, and the others that gathered so much of glory for that arm of the service.

But Spain unloaded the Philippines on us. No doubt we shall govern them better than Spain, but what may they do for us?

That is a question no living man can answer.

THE OTHER MAN'S WIFE. By Frank Richardson. New York: Mitchell Kennerley. $1.50.

Mr. Richardson's reputation as a novelist is enhanced by the dramatic force of this story, which is remarkable for its mastery of detail, its convincing reality and sustained power. Very vividly, but simply, the characters are developed—Montague Cliftonville, the vain, egoistic matinee idol; Sir James Tremayne, the grim yet kindly "hanging judge;" the marquis of Lashbridge, suave, powerful, but not impeccable; Richard Meyville, the successful young barrister, who, with all his ability to make love superbly, has something of steel in his nature; and "the other man," Wilfred Ainslie, the hypochondriac who is so hopelessly self-centered that it is almost impossible to sympathize with him in the loss that he never realized, and which would have affected him, probably, far less than one of his imaginary maladies.

Richard Meyville and Gwendolen Ainslie did wrong—a wrong which the world has rightly agreed to regard as unpardonable. But they paid the price in suffering so intense that their love idyll—for it is an idyll—seems to be removed from the ordinary conditions of criticism and judgment, and to take its place in the series of the world's great love stories—the stories of Heloise and Abelard, of Francesca and Paolo. There are many features, however, in the novel; and the same power is shown in the handling of each. The theatrical world, the legal world, the world of Lord Lashbridge and his kind, are painted from the inside by one who knows them well and can make vivid use of his familiarity.

PEACE, POWER AND PLENTY. By Orison Swett Marden. New York: Thomas Y. Crowell & Co. $1.

"Never before in the history of mankind," says Dr. Marden, "has there been such an awakening to the great possibilities of the power of right thinking, as we are now witnessing in all civilized countries." This power of the thought-forces to mould destiny is the subject of his latest book, which contains much of great suggestive value for the every-day life. "Peace, Power, and Plenty" is a volume of eighteen chapters, each of which is as happily entitled as the whole. Among them are: "The Law of Opulence," "Health Through Right Thinking," "Mental Chemistry," "Why Grow Old?" "The Miracle of Self-Confidence," and "Good Cheer—God's Medicine." The tone throughout is optimistic, sunny, inspirational. Dr. Marden is one of the greatest of modern forces for individual uplift and success. His writings are great storage batteries of power, reservoirs of sunshine, enormously potential to recharge the flagging wills of men. And unquestionably in a class with his ablest work must be placed this dynamo for good, "Peace, Power, and Plenty."

CHECKERBERRY. By Lucretia S. McDonald. New York: Cochrane Publishing Co. $1.50.

This is a book for young and old. Rachel Berry or "Checkerberry," in her infancy is kidnaped by the designing husband of her nurse to be trained for the circus, but through a kind fate falls into the hands of dear Miss Debby, a winsome spinster lady. She knows nothing of the child's parentage, and her mission in life becomes the welfare of this little girl, who has won her heart. She transforms her large house into a home for both her and eleven other orphaned girls in whom she is interested. The book is written in fine clean-cut and unhesitating style. Mrs. McDonald's characters are delightfully interesting, from the heroine, "Checkerberry," and Miss Debby herself down to Si, a rough and precocious young vagrant.

"54-40 OR FIGHT." By Emerson Hough. Indianapolis: The Bobbs-Merrill Co. $1.50.

Those whose memory of Tyler's and Polk's administration is fresh will recall that "54-40 or Fight," was the reigning slogan of the jingoers in the Oregon boundary dispute with England. It is the "inside" history of this dispute, together with the diplomatic intrigue connected with the annexation of Texas, that the author has turned to splendid romantic advantage. From the first paragraph the reader feels the proportions of a big novel. The figure of Calhoun, powerful and fiery, is in that paragraph—Calhoun who talks "in states" and wears the tragic lustre of great achievement wrought with the very hand of death upon him. More interesting even than Calhoun is the remarkable and captivating baroness, the secret agent of England, who is the heart and center of the moving narrative. She has about her at once the fascination of Europe and the romance of America. In her are mingled with compelling truth, traits of the good woman and the bad, of the loving and the daring. The conflict between the Old World and the New is not only controlled by the almost magic influence which she wields, but is mirrored in the struggle which goes on in her own proud, ardent, resourceful soul.

Against her in the duel of the nations and the duel of the sexes is a very beau ideal of a hero. Nicholas Trist, secretary to Calhoun. This native American, with his straightforward logic, comes to represent to the baroness the personification of democratic ideals. Women are apt to prefer ideals when they are personified. Under the influence of Trist, love of the man and love of his land spring up simultaneously in her heart and gradually grow into a flaming passion. Great is the service which she is enabled to do them both—great and extraordinary. The national and the personal interests are knit together with the most cunning art, and, each depending on the other, the successive scenes acquire at once the intensity which can come only from strength of personal feeling and the impressiveness which belongs to larger issues and a people's hopes.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. By Brand Whitlock. Boston: Small, Maynard & Co. 50 cents.

This life of Abraham Lincoln, by Brand Whitlock, mayor of Toledo, and author of several novels dealing with socialogical problems, is published as one of the "Beacon Series of Biographies," and at the same time the publishers announce a reduction of the price of all the books of the Beacon series to 50 cents, with a view of popularizing thus further these little lives of eminent Americans which present all the essential facts in an authoritative and readable form. Mr. Whitlock has endeavored to present in condensed form an interesting story of the wonderful and beautiful life of the liberator of a whole race and the saviour of the republic. At this time, when the centenary of Lincoln's birth is close at hand, the little book will be read with interest.

THE BANKING AND CURRENCY PROBLEM IN THE UNITED STATES. By Victor Morawetz. New York: North American Review Publishing Co. $1.

The author takes up the problem of the national monetary commission, appointed by congress to discuss the means of providing a permanent safeguard against money stringencies and panics. No one has approached Mr. Morawetz in breadth of knowledge and depth of insight regarding this subject. He begins by pointing out that such extraordinary financial disturbances do not occur in other countries. He advances a plan for co-operation between the banks and the treasury, which includes a note-redemption fund—to be elastic, regulating the uncovered volume of notes outstanding, thus giving stability to financial institutions generally.

Wyatt Eaton 1877 C. T. Cole, sc.

An Unusually Satisfactory Likeness of Lincoln From a Pen Portrait Made by Wyatt Eaton From Photographs. The Original Reproduction in the "Century" in 1877 Was From a Wood Engraving by Timothy Cole From the Wyatt Eaton portrait. The portrait Is One of Twenty-two Reproduced in the February "Century," the Lincoln Centenary Issue.

Among the Magazines.

The February Century is a Lincoln centenary issue, with a Lincoln portrait on the cover, besides reproductions of a score or two of the more important Lincoln portraits. The leading article is an essay on "Lincoln the Leader" by Richard Watson Gilder, and there are among other Lincoln features publication for the first time of twenty-two Lincoln letters and documents in the correspondence between Lincoln and Senator Lyman Trumbull, of a letter written by John Hay picturing "Lincoln at the Helm," and of a letter by Nicolay before the war. The frontispiece is from the John Henry Brownell, is a delightful humorous story of the kind that makes the heart laugh. Unusually good verses and a fine department of humor are regular features of Gunter's.

Any one who has ever spent a week-end at a great fashionable country estate will appreciate the delicious humor of Frederic Arnold Kummer's novel "Mr. Buttles," published complete in the February Smart Set. Mr. Buttles, himself, is the butler of Everdun Towers, and conceives and carries out a scheme for organizing the upper servants into a corporation and getting the perquisite business down to fine points. Lord Everdun's magnificent home becomes thus merely a splendid hotel. Guests come and go, enjoy themselves and are politely fleeced, all unconscious of the corporate arrangement of which they are the victims. Of course complications arise, and there the naive roguery of Buttles stands out as a splendid character study. The story is far above the average of periodical literature. The delineation of Buttle's character may almost be said to suggest the best work of Dickens.

A most exciting third instalment of the new anonymous novel, "The Inner Shrine," appears in Harper's Magazine for February, and carries the reader deep into the plot of a breathlessly interesting story. The first article of this number is "Amid the Islands of the Land of Fire," by Charles Wellington Furlong, F. R. G. S., in which the author describes his journey among the islands of the archipelago of Tierra del Fuego, and his visit to the penal colony there. Madge C. Jenison contributes an interesting article on "The Tenements of Berlin," comparing them with those of New York in point of sanitary improvement and attractiveness of appearance. Prof. Lounsbury of Yale, writes of "Archaic Speech of the Uneducated," and shows how idioms and linguistic habits die hard. Shakespeare's "Pericles" is the subject of a critical commentary by Theodore Watts—Dunton, with illustrations by Edwin A. Abbey.

In the February number of Popular Mechanics, an article on "Rebuilding the Human Face," is of peculiar interest. Oftentimes a facial deformation if the facial topography is involved and the treatment covers months and years, with what results several illustrations strikingly depict. A thrilling account of the bombardment of Los Angeles at night by an airship is accompanied by a no less thrilling illustration. Confetti bombs were used, but they demonstrated effectually the part aerial craft will take in future warfare. Roy Knabenshue was the aeronaut. The harnessing of artesian wells to supply power for industrial purposes is another important feature.

The Strand Magazine for February is an excellent number and contains a variety of good things. Hall Caine continues his enthralling story of Modern Egypt, "The White Christ," in which thrilling incidents are judiciously seasoned with fascinating love episodes. Harry Lauder, the highest-priced vaudeville artist in the world, announces his life story under the title of "My Reminiscences," and tells in his own inimitable way the struggles he had in his earlier days to make both ends meet. Harry Furniss concludes his "The Comic Side of Crime" with some interesting stories, amusing and gruesome, which he cleverly illustrates.

The Popular Magazine for February more than sustains its wide reputation in the matter of attractive appearance. The striking cover by Leyendecker depicts a lively hockey game—an exciting tussle in front of the goal. The spirit of the picture is in harmony with that of Ralph D. Paine's story of college athletics, entitled "Jim Stearns, Director of Destinies."

Editors of magazines publishing novelettes have long complained of the difficulty of securing satisfactory stories of this type, owing to the fact that most writers find it just as easy and more profitable to expand a plot suitable for novelettes, into a book, too long for magazine use. Be this as it may, Lippincott's seems to have solved the problem, for in it has appeared a long series of fine complete novels, and instead of falling off the quality seems to be steadily improving. The February issue contains a powerful tale of army life by Gen. Charles King. It is entitled "Lanier of the Cavalry," and portrays army life with the same vigor and naturalness which characterized "The Colonel's Daughter," "Capt. Blake" and other famous books by this author. There is a well sustained mystery in "Lanier of the Cavalry," as well as a charming love story—two charming love stories, in fact.

We must rediscover America in order to provide for our future millions. This is the keynote of Walter Weyl's article, "New Food for New Millions," in the February number of Success Magazine. In the same number, Charles Edward Russell, in the second article of his series, "The Break-up of the Parties," tells how the Democratic party lost its grip; Glenmore Davis describes the building of a modern play, and Roland Phillips tells what modern surgery is doing in the way of the transplantation of organs. Leroy Scott's immigration narrative is called "The Little Mother," and there is advice to operatic aspirants by Mme. Melba.

"Cleveland the Man," by George F. Parker, a paper containing some intimate reminiscences of a beloved national character; "Our Navy on the Land," by George Kibble Turner, the story of the greatest waste of national funds in the history of the United States; "Work at the Rockefeller Institute," by Burton J. Hendrick, an article describing the wonderful experiments of Dr. Alexis Carrel in transplanting the organs of animals; "The Scientific Solution of the Liquor Problem," another paper of the series by Dr. Henry Smith Williams, which has attracted national attention—these and other features make the February issue of McClure's Magazine an unusually strong number.

Dr. G. Stanley Hall, so well known for his trenchant paragraphs about education, is no less wonderful in his dramatic phases than usual in an intensely interesting article in the Housekeeper for February. The title is "How Can We Make the Average Public School a Good School." The article is one of a series on Public School Conditions by well known authorities. Mrs. C. N. Williamson has stopped writing best sellers for a while and has contributed to the number a short story, "Colonel Cayley's Tea Party," it is charming. "The Pink and White Valentine," by Edith Livingston Smith, is an appealing story timely to the month.

The February Wide World Magazine is a striking number and contains a remarkable amount of interesting material "From all the corners of the earth." From the very original "map contents" we learn that the stories and articles deal with such widely separated "corners" as Montana, Hawaii, the Gold Coast, Japan, China, British Guinana, the Nicobar Islands, Arabia, New Guinea, Algeria, Arizona, WestAfrica, Labrador, and many other places. If for no other reason than rubbing up one's geography, the Wide World should be read each month. It is even a better geographical educator than philately.

The Woman's Home Companion has established a reputation for beautiful illustrations, and the February Valentine number is even richer than usual in the display of pictures by well-known artists. C. Allan Gilbert's great new painting, "David Copperfield and Agnes," is reproduced in color. There is a full-page portrait of Lincoln at the age of 15, painted especially for this magazine by Balfour Ker. The Valentine cover is painted by Howard Chandler Christy. Other illustrations are by Alice Barber Stephens, Orson Lowell, Rose Cecil O'Neill and Herman Pfeifer. The fiction in this Valentine magazine is by such popular authors as Florence Morse Kingsley, Juliet Wilbor Tompkins, Irving Bacheller and Mary Hastings.

The danger which menaces our economical future is graphically described in "The Giant Trust of the Future," an illustrated article by Earl Mayo which is offered to the readers of the February Metropolitan Magazine. It will not fail to command the attention of all Americans, who take thought of their own welfare, for it warns against the imminent control by one trust of practically all the comforts and necessities of life. "A Pivot of Imperialism," by F. L. Harding, tells in a definite manner of Malta, England's key to the Suez canal and the Far East.

"Kind hearted? Abraham Lincoln kind hearted?" says Ida M. Tarbell in the February American Magazine. Then she tells a wonderful story of Lincoln's genius for affection—how he loved people, and especially how he loved the common soldiers in the war. Until one reads this story it is impossible to realize Lincoln's marvellous understanding of the details of the life and trials of the ordinary private. Lincoln Steffens contributes to the same issue of this magazine, "Sending a State to College," in which he shows how the University of Wisconsin is really becoming what its president is trying to make it, a university that reaches anybody, anytime, anyhow.

All the latest fads and fancies are vividly portrayed on the cover of the February 10 Story Book just out, and usual stories. Harry Cooper leads the magazine with "The Purloined Heels," a very clever smuggling story, the illustrations of which are particularly apropos. "The Face on the Wall Paper," by H. Forrest, is an intense and dramatic horror story. Weird and fascinating is "The Wine of the Nile," by Sherman G. Davenport, carrying its characters from a modern setting back to the days of Cleopatra.

In the Atlantic Monthly for February the first installment of the Diary of Gideon Welles, Lincoln's secretary of the navy, gives the reader a striking picture of the president's serenity amidst the constant bickerings of his cabinet, and tells the facts of the cabinet intrigue headed by Chase and Stanton for the ousting of McClellan from the command of the Army of the Potomac. A paper by J. O. Fagan, the railroad signalman, whose "Confessions" have given the public a real knowledge of railroad problems, deals with the necessity of educating the labor unions in the knowledge of their employers' business. W. Cameron Forbes, vice governor of the Philippines, reveals a decade of American rule in the islands, giving facts and figures for the consideration of Anti-Imperialists.

The National Magazine, the sprightly Boston publication, is attracting universal attention with a series of illustrated articles, "The Story of a Great Nation." Every department of the government at Washington is being described by the chiefs of the bureaus, who are actually doing the work. The articles for February include: "The Department of Justice," by Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte; "Uncle Sam's Land Office," by Commissioner Fred Dennett of the General Land Office; "How the United States Army is Fed," by Brigadier General Henry G. Sharpe; "Bureau of American Republics," by Director John Barrett; "The District of Columbia," by Judge John J. Jenkins.

Ainslee's for February has another extraordinary collection of unusual stories. This magazine succeeds, month after month, in presenting its readers with interesting stories as far as possible removed from weariness, sterotyped fiction that has become so familiar. The complete novel in this number, "A Delegate of Destiny," is by John Kendrick Bangs, and is a good illustration of the freshness and originality of Ainslee's fiction. Of the short stories, two of these same qualities, namely "The Race," by Marie Van Vorst and "In Such a Night," by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, not only as to plot, but in the manner.

In the February World's Work Rockefeller continues his Reminiscences with "The Difficult Art of Getting," while other important articles are a further instalment of Col. Patterson's amazing big game stories', "Hunting the Rhinoceros and the Hippopotamus in Africa," Arthur W. Page's "Report to the Stockholders of the United States,"—a discussion of our natural resources; "An Era of Better Railroads," by C. M. Keys; two beautifully illustrated papers on George Grey Barnard, the sculptor; the second part of Edward Berwick's autobiography, "A Farmer Whose Son is Also a Farmer"; Lawrence Perry's

The members of the matinee musicale are greatly interested in the concluding artists' recital of the year, which will be given Monday evening at Pilgrim Congregational church with Katharine Goodson, the English pianist, as th esoloist. Miss Goodson appeared in Duluth last year and was warmly received. During her visit she was much feted, and the musical people regret that her visit here will be for but a day. Miss Goodson has recently returned from a triumphant Australian tour, in which she was enthusiastically received. The press notices from the Melbourne and Sydney papers are eulogistic in their notices of her work. The concert Monday evening will be for the members of the club and single tickets will be sold to men only. The program is as follows:

To Repeat Oratorio.

The Dubois oratorio The Last Words of Christ" which was sung in Duluth for the first time in January, will be repeated Monday evening of next week by special request. The Cathedral auditorium was filled at the first presentation, and there was much interest in the event as one of the fine performances of the winter. The oratorio was sung by the cathedral choir, assisted by Flaaten's orchestra and the soloists will be: Mrs. Leo Ball, soprano; Miss Minnie Schultz, soprano; Miss Clara Malloy, soprano; John Koneczny, tenor; and George Suffel, baritone.

Club Lecture.

Members will be admitted by their club membership tickets.

Florence Austin in Concert.

Seldom in Duluth has a concert audience in Duluth been so held under the spell of the performers as was that of last evening gathered at Flaaten's hall to hear Florence Austin, violinist, assisted by Donna Louise Riblette, soprano of this city. Miss Austin "had" her audience from the first moment of drawing her bow across the strings of the violin in the "Suite in G Minor," by Reis, to the last strain of the encore demanded at the completion of the regular program. The four movements of the concerto chosen for the opening number were played with depth of tone, and simple and dignified musicianship. The Vieuxtemps concerto in D minor was brilliantly played, the second movement, "Adagio Religioso," being one of the most beautiful bits of the evening. The lavish technique of the player was displayed in a number for the violin alone, "Les Arpeges," by Prume, and the concluding "Airs Hongrois," by Ernest. Miss Austin graciously presented two encores in response to the enthusiasm of her audience.

The accompaniments were splendidly played by Mrs. Wilma Anderson Gilman of Minneapolis, who is a solo pianist of recognized ability, and in her support of the soloist of the evening she displayed the sympathy and intelligence that are so necessary in a satisfying accompaniment.

Miss Riblette, who was the assisting artist, sang charmingly. Her first number was a song cycle "In a Brahim Garden," by Frederic Knight Logan, and the four songs of the piece were delightful. Her voice is of an especially pleasing quality and she sang with taste and feeling. In the second group of songs, "Mon Coeur Chante," by Chaminade, "Der Nussbaum," by Schumann, and "When Celia Sings," by Frank Moir, she but strengthened the impression she made in her first number.

The hall was well filled, and the concert was a delightful one.

Lecture Musicales.

Miss Posephine Carey presented a lecture-musicale last evening before the members of the Lester Park Literary club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hollister. "The Dance Form in Music" was the subject of the evening and the development of the idealized dance in music was traced. A brilliant and interesting program was played by Miss Carey in illustration. Weber's Invitation to the Waltz" opened the program and was followed by two Chopin Valses, the one in G. flat and the other in D minor being played. A Boccherini Minuet and Gavotte by Gluch-Brahms presented the classic grace of the more dignified dances. Two Mazurkas one by Gustav Schumann and the Chopin, No. 25, followed and the program was concluded with the brilliant military Polonaise by Chopin.

A few invited guests of the members were entertained.

Miss Carey and Miss Van Stone presented a program yesterday afternoon before the children of the Webster school. The dance rhythms were talked of by Miss Carey and the audience was allowed to contribute to the p rogram by counting softly the pronounced rhythms of the dance. Folk dances of the various countries were played and responsively received by the attentive audience of children. Two minuets were played, one of Beethoven and one of Mozart, the movements of the dance being particularly marked for their attention. Miss Van Stone sang a number of Jessie Gaynor's charming songs of childhood, including "I Love the Old Doll Best," "My Dear Jerusby," "Why Mr. Gobbler Changed His Tune." She also sang "Daisies" by Hawley, "Little Boy Blue" by Nevin and "Wake up Little Darkies" by Clutsam.

Concert at Y. W. C. A.

A concert will be given Tuesday evening at the rooms of the Y. W. C. A. by a number of members of the Matinee Musicale. There will be vocal numbers by Miss Bradshaw and Miss Hyland, readings by Miss Wylie and violin numbers by Miss Senta Erd.

Aged Woman Attacked.

Johnstown, Pa., Feb. 6.—Mrs. Mary Kruise, aged 80, was attacked at her home near here by a negro. Her screams frightened her assailant, who escaped, leaving his victim in a critical condition.

C. R. Kluger, the Jeweler, 1060 Virginia Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "I was so weak from kidney trouble that I could hardly walk a hundred feet. Four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cleared my complexion, cured my bacakche and the irregularities disappeared, and I can now attend to business every day, and recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to all sufferers, as it cured me after the doctors and other remedies had failed." JAPS ARE VERY CALM

Take News From Nevada With Great Equanimity.

Some Tokio Papers, However, Show Signs of Resentment.

Tokio, Feb. 6.—The passage by the lower house of the Nevada legislature of an anti-Japanese resolution was received here with remarkable indifference. The publication of the text of the resolution aroused active resentment in the columns of some of the papers. Others commenting on the resolution pointed out the fact that Nevada was a small state and did not necessarily represent the sentiment of the American people.

Foreign Minister Komura, in addressing the house of lords today, repeated verbatim the speech he made in the diet a few days ago. His remarks caused no discussion. The absence of extended commenting on the situation in the Japanese newspapers is believed to be due to the reported action of the California legislature in defeating the Drew anti-alien land bill and also to the resolution of the New York board of trade and President Roosevelt's letters and telegrams to Governor Gillett, all of which have been fully reported in the local press.

The Asahi says that notwithstanding many misunderstandings the relations of America and Japan remain unimpaired. The Hochi, one of the papers which has most bitterly denounced the action of the California legislature, congratulates Japan on the maintenance of good relations with the United States.

Notwithstanding the improved tone of the press, it is quite evident that the recent action of the California and Nevada legislatures has created a feeling among commercial men and even in the official element which is calculated to damage the position of the United States with Japan, which formerly was becoming steadily stronger.

The newspaper bulletin boards are continually surrounded by readers of the lower classes, whose serious faces and comment show the effect of the news contained in the dispatches from the United States. Even among the better classes the Japanese find it impossible to conceal their chagrin at the response of the United States to Japan's hospitality to the officers and men of the battleship fleet and other visitors from America.

Jury Still Out.

The jury in the case of Aramenta Gibbs against the Duluth Railway company was charged by Judge Dibell this morning and retired. At 3 p. m. it had not reported.

Mrs. Gibbs sued for $5,000 for injuries sustained when a rig, in which she was riding with her sister, Mrs. C. A. Chamberlain, was struck by a street car on Michigan street between Ninth and Tenth avenues west, July 30 last. She claimed that her sister, who was driving, was forced to turn onto the track to evade a heavy wagon in the roadway, and while on the track the car struck them.

It was claimed that the motorman was negligent in failing to stop the car. The company claimed that the negligence was that of Mrs. Chamberlain in turning on the track when the car was in sight. Mrs. Gibbs claims she was severely injured and is still suffering from nervous shock.

"BE A MAN" HIS SUBJECT

Charles Bayard Mitchell Will Speak at Y. M. C. A. Mass Meeting.

LOVE TOKENS BEGIN TO ARRIVE

First Valentine of 1909 Goes Through Duluth Postoffice.

"To the postmaster:

"This is a valentine. Please handle with care."

"This was the message read this morning by the postoffice clerks with much amusement. The bundle was a large one, but was very light. Some painstaking youth who wanted to be sure she received it in good shape, had taken extra precautions.

The first of the love tokens have commenced to arrive and soon the mail carriers will have another Christmas week thrust upon them.

Feb. 14 is St. Valentine's day. The show windows have been trimmed for the past week in a tempting manner, but the Duluth rush will not be on for a week or more yet, according to the postoffice authorities.

EXPLAINS UTTERANCES

President Codding Says His Talk Was in Serious Vein.

"Teachers Either Shabby or Dependent," Says One of Them.

Speaking of his utterances last evening, which gave interest to an otherwise routine session of the board of education, Dr. L. C. Codding, president of that body, said today that his little talk was made not with a desire to be disagreeable, but because he thought that there was something to the argument that the public schools are not yielding the returns they should, and that he had no hesitancy in saying that the fault was the superintendent's rather than the teachers'.

"That little talk of mine was in a serious vein and not a mere show of anger over Supt. Denfeld's remarks. I feel that if, as Mr. Denfeld says, the results of the school work are negative, the superintendent, who for twenty years or so has had direction of the schools, is as much to blame as anyone," said Dr. Codding.

"Lately, there has been a national unrest regarding the subject of education. The press, the magazines, and the reviews, are constantly asking the cause of the negative results of the public school education.

"I noticed that in a speech recently made by the superintendent of schools, that the cause of such failures was ascribed to incompetent teachers and feel that the charge is unjustified and full of possibilities for harm, for no teacher can be sure that she is free of the charge of incompetency.

"I feel that the teachers cannot be much more competent than they are, for they have no latitude or chance for originality or initiative. What they are to teach is weighed and measured for them in advance and whatever may be lacking in results must necessarily be due to the superintendent himself."

In his talk last evening, Dr. Codding read quite extensively from a recently published book on education.

Mr. Denfeld in his talk at the Commercial club spoke in favor of higher salaries for teachers. He claimed that at the present salaries many of Duluth's best teachers were resigning and it was becoming more and more difficult to fill their places. In this connection the following communication to The Herald from one of Duluth's teachers, who for obvious reasons does not wish her name used, will be of interest:

"Duluth teachers need consideration.

"A grade teacher is quite human. She enjoys neither being shabby nor dependent. With the schedule of salaries what they now are in Duluth she can scarcely fail to be one or the other.

"Below the seventh grade the maximum yearly salary is $25 less than it was in 1904. All expenses have greatly increased during that time. To take a very trivial example, it now costs 5 cents for the linen collar such as is commonly worn by women, laundered. Other expenses are in proportion.

"No worker more requires the benefit derived from good lectures, music, travel and contact with people. Her growth in the work demands it, but these things to a great extent she must forego. Food, shelter and some sort of apparel is essential.

"If Duluth seeks poor teachers, hence poor schools, the present method must succeed.

"Grade teachers in the neighboring city of Minneapolis may now get a yearly salary of $1,000, if not more, at least $325 a year more than Duluth pays for similar work.

"It is unnecessary to speak of the difference of living expenses in the two cities. Any one coming from Minneapolis to Duluth to live will testify with regard to that."

RARE DEER KILLED IN MAINE.

Kennebec Journal: Hanging in front of a store at Deering Center this week was a rare specimen of the deer family, it was spotted in a manner which old hunters said they never before saw with the like of.

It seems to be a cross between an albino and the common North American deer. Besides its peculiar marking it is a good sized animal, weighing probably 200 pounds. Albert H. Small, the court stenographer, shot this deer during his recent hunting trip in the Rangeley region, the game being secured at Middle Dam. Natives of that section who have been hunting all their lives declared it was the first deer of the sort they ever saw.

the EVENING STORY

MOTHS

By E. A. Church.

They met in the late gathering shadows of a tropical evening, underneath the fragrant masses of flowering jasmine, through which the silvery moonbeams filtered across her hair and gleaming neck, making her look like a "moon dream," as she idly sipped from the delicate stemmed glass she held in her white jeweled hand.

It was just the usual conventional mentioning of names by a mutual friend and the clasp of hands in recognition, in the well-bred manner of their world; commonplace in itself, but—the sleepy-eyed world was unconscious of its import. Material things had not changed one iota, and they were hardly conscious of change themselves, except by the thrill that possessed them at the contact, the recognition that flashed from their eyes, and the unusual sensation to them of a new interest, a more exquisite fullness which they neither analyzed nor cared to understand. They passed into the ballroom, he leaning towards her, hungrily devouring her beauty. The sensuous strains of the waltz thrilled them anew, and as she lightly leaned within his arms he whispered:

"How long have we known each other, Moon-dream?"

"I am only an earth woman, don't indulge in absurd fancies," she flashed back. "But I feel as though I had known you for centuries—had always known you."

"And I too. Oh! If we had only waited, but what matters it, we have the golden present."

"And after that?"

"There is all of the future."

"True; but above and around us always the forged, conventional fetters. What madness is this that has possessed us?"

"The meeting after aeins of separation, what was in the beginning the perfect sympathic dual. I can remember that time"—he laughed—"It was in the jungle where I found you first; you were being claimed by another "king" of the forest; fire glowed in my veins at the sight, my lips dripped with his blood lat'er. What a battle it was! And I conquered, as I will again, by Heaven! Do you remember?"

"Yes; and I crouched there, watching and waiting eternities, it seemed to me, to crawl to your side and lave your cruel wounds, and—"

"And then again in the arena of the Forum"—he interrupted—"do you remember that, also?" We both wore your colors and fought, nobly matched, to wrest those colors from the other, and I triumphantly gave them to you on the point of my lance, over his dead body; and that night you slipped away and pinned the colors on my breast, where I held you, and pressed soft kisses on your lips, and you gave me—"

"Stop! I was weak in that existence, I am strong now; what folly is this we are talking in the glare of this twentieth century light? It was that absinthe frappe," she laughed, "it always affects me so."

It was not the absinthe, you barely tasted it," he earnestly contradicted, "we both knew what it was, and is; you recognize it, so do I. Some call it 'Fate,' I call it "The imperative Force.' It started with us at the creation when there were no mistakes, and it has followed us, through countless ages of living and loving—and sinning, if you will. It will follow us and overtake us time and again through eternities to come until one shall be strong enough to save us both. But I don't want to be saved," he whimsically added, "the intoxication of this meeting is worth millions of the unconscious interludes."

"If I had not heard of you before my arrival, Mr. Linforth, I should think I was dancing with a lunatic," and she laughed amusedly.

"You know I am not mad, except with the intoxication of holding a moon dream in my arms," and he gazed at her until the crimson flooded her face.

"And have you never held another thus and whispered this madness to her?"

"Held them—yes, but not the madness, that belongs to you. Every bird loves the taste of butterflies and there are plentiful varieties of them, but only one—woman."

"Poor butterflies! I suppose you feasted on their velvety down and then cast them aside for the ants to finish?"

"Ye-e-e-s," he admitted, "but they were only the common variety, as plentiful in comparison as you are rare; or, another comparison, the common yellow kind with a brilliant South American moth."

"Aren't South American moths common?"

"No. They contain the souls of women like you, who can lead a man willingly chained, with his senses steeped in blissful content, to the very gates of hell."

"That is not complimentary," she pouted.

"It is only being classed with the commonplace that is uncomplimentary."

"I am jealous of even the commonplace," she whispered, as she nestled a little more closely towards him, "but I don't mean to have my down brushed," she added laughingly.

"We shall see," and he smiled as men do sometimes.

And thus night after night they danced the summer through, while the careless world smiled with half-closed eyes, and a husband back in a large city toiled incessantly for his god—wealth—and neglecting and forgetting all but his one aim—a massive fortune; and a wife upstairs, bent over the cot in which rested "his" boy, and devotedly watched, and bravely stifled her sighs.

It was the last night of the season, and the same waltz softly and dreamily floated out and stirred them to their depths, for it was farewell.

"You have fought valiantly, my beautiful tigress, and have resisted me with quiet strength, I have conquered before, and—"

"You shall never conquer again; it would only mean forgetfulness on your part, and—more toying with the butterflies after."

"Never again the butterflies, only you, my beautiful moth."

"Yes, but I will neither lead nor drag you down; I will be strong for both. You said 'Until one was strong enough to save us, I will save you in spite of ourselves. Go back to your wife and atone as I will go to that other home."

"You! Go back to that barren and loveless abode, cold as the tomb, when I offer you this," and sweeping her into a shaded cornerr of the oriental room, he still held her in his arms, pressing passionate kisses on her neck and lips.

"By all the weakness of the past and because I love you, I swear you shall not conquer."

"By that very love—weak as wine beside my own—I shall conquer," he taunted.

"I say never again! Release me!"

He laughed sardonically, looking hungrily down upon her exquisite beauty.

"Have you forgotten the "kings" of the forest and the "arena?" he asked triumphantly. "Once in South America I sat in my tent, and a beautiful iridescent moth fluttered in from the darkness; she saw the light at the end of my cigar and softly setteled on it, but flew away with burnt feet. I made the flame brighter and she came again and nestled on the cigar; this time she drooped one of her brilliant wings and scorched it; then she could not fly away, and I fed her on honey until—"

"You forgot to feed her, then she died, of course. I shall neither taste the honey nor scorch my wings. I am wiser than the moth."

"You shall eat the honey, though, and I will feed it to you, and there will be no forgetting, only love."

"Never again! Goodnight and goodbye," she added, with quivering lips, "I leave for home in the morning."

"And I will see you six weeks from today, my untamed tigress."

"Where?"

"From whatever place I call you."

"I defy you!"

"Wait until six weeks have passed —after this," and he crushed her against him, kissing her passionately.

She was white as the dead as she staggered from his embrace out into the night, and fled like a criminal thing to her room, where she lay for hours, staring at nothing but a black pall that shut out all other objects. She knew it was true—if he called her, she would come back from death; that it is were just a question of her eternal damnation she would welcome it—but she would save him in spite of himself.

"Home—and only a week gone. The intolerable length of it, and this dull, throbbing pain about my heart; this torture of unrest and longing. The long wakeful nights, or, sleeping to feel his kisses, and waking with the fright of his spoken name upon my lips; I cannot endure it! If he should call me now, I would go, it it dragged us both down to the nethermost depths. God! God! Don't let him call until I have strength to resist."

The sleepless nights full of torture, and the interminable days wore on until the end of six weeks, She paced the floor on that day like a restless animal, until the leters were handed her—then with shaking hands she read the summons:

"My mate of primeval times! My Lady of the Lists. My untamed tigress! Your 'king' of the forest calls you. Come to the depths of the cypress grove in the park, where moonlight, the waves and 'Love' await you. Come!"

She paced through the long hours of the day, or sat in stony apathy with clinched hands, and depeated over and over—"Love awaits you, come!" Over and over until it became a refrain—"Love awaits you! Love awaits you!" like the rhythmic time of the wheels as they strike the jointed rails. She need not dress for dinner as her husband was away from home, but as the hour of the summons aproached, she rose and made an elaborate toilet of purest white. Then she knelt before the tograph, and held it to her breast and moaned, then dropped it on the coals, and with hands tightly clinched, watched it curl and shrivel up, and stifling a scream, she rang for her maid:

"Marie, fix me a dose of chloral; double the quantity—or stop! Bring it to me, I will mix it."

"If madam will pardon me, it is bad to take so much chloral; cannot madam be induced—"

"There, Marie, do as I tell you, and you need not wait up tonight. I will call you if I need you. Goodnight."

"Goodnight, madam. I hope you will rest well."

The man waited in the shadows, confident, but wondering; waited long after the appointed hour had passed, and as he still waited, a huge white night moth fluttered towards him and nestled on his bosom; a shudder passed over him as he brushed it off and he hurriedly left the park and driving to his hotel, asked over the telephone for Mrs. Elton. At the reply he reeled, white and haggard, and in a dazed, uncomprehending way, whispered—"Died an hour ago."

ENGLISH DEER PARKS.

London Daily Graphic: "A park without a deer," wrote Richard Jeffries, "is like a wall without pictures," and it is something to know that in England there are 400 parks containing deer; that they average many hundreds and some of them thousands of acres, and that Yorkshire, Gloucestershire, Staffordshire, Northants and Sussex have more enclosed land given up to deer than any other counties.

There is something peculiarly national about our deer parks, for soon after the Conquest the barons began to enclose parks within the forests and to include within them all the wild animals that thus could be secured. Of these the 2,500 acres of park at Eridge is the only one mentioned in Domesday Book as containing deer then as it does now.

In that now scarce book Shirley's "English Deer Parks" forty-eight parks are mentioned which no longer contain deer; but since that book was published in 1867 several parks have been stocked which did not then contain deer, and there are others in which the deer have been given up.

COW FARMING IN CALCUTTA.

Daily Consular and Trade Reports: There is a splendid opening near Calcutta for at least two real up to date dairy farms. The Europeans of Calcutta depend on one dairy farm for milk and butter, and this farm is a day's run by rail from the city. Compared with the native milk and any other butter obtainable here the product of this farm is first-class, but compared with the products of American dairy farms it is third class. The custom of leading a cow from customer to customer and milking in plain view still prevails to some extent in Calcutta.

COLLEGE NICKNAMES.

Some of the colleges have a great dislike to the way in which they are referred to commonly in connection with athletics. For instance, Wesleyan men don't like to be called "Methodists," as they appear sometimes, says the New Yor kSun.

At the Naval academy there is a strong prejudice against being called "Annapolis." The navy men aren't particularly fond of "midshipmen." They believe the proper name for their institution is "the navy."

Columbia has a great distaste for the name of "Columbians" for their representatives in athletics or other public appearances. At the University of Chicago there is a dislike of the name "Chicago University," sometimes applied.

Although not so strongly opposed to it, students at Pennsylvania do not like the full title "University of Pennsylvania" as well as plain "Pennsylvania." "Penn" is preferred to either. "Maroons" for Chicago men, "Gophers" for Minnesota, "Badgers" for Wisconsin students, "Cornhuskers" for Nebraska, "Wolverines" for Michigan, "Illini" for the men at Illinois—all are names that are popular at those colleges and are used by the men there in speaking of their own teams. Indeed to a man unacquainted with nicknames the average statement regarding a conference college is puzzling because of the almost entire lack of straightout names.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS' PAGE

When the Twins Ran Away.

BY MAUD WALKER.

RACHEL and Roy were twin sister and brother. Rachel was eight years old. And, of course, you all know how old Roy was, since I have told you he was Rachel's twin.

They lived in a great city where there were no trees nor flowers, no lakes nor creeks, no woods nor meadows, no country lanes nor rambling farmhouses. But they knew all about the beauties of the country, for every summer they went to the mountains, where it was cool and open and lonely. And how Rachel and Roy did love the country! All day long they would run about on the mountainside, gathering ferns from the banks of the mountain brooks, sometimes fishing in the lake, near which was their summer home, and often climbing trees that seemed of ordinary height until they had reached the top.

But during the winter Rachel and Roy lived in the great city where all was bustle and confusion. Their father was a business man and went from home very early in the morning. Their mother was a society woman, and her social, church and club duties kept her from home much of the time. And Rachel and Roy were kept in the schoolroom, at the very back and top of their big city house, all during the forenoon and a part of the afternoon. They were too young to be sent to boarding-school, so had a governess at home to teach them till they should be of an age to be sent away.

Thus you will see that Rachel and Roy were very much alone at times, and when not engaged with their governess would read story books.

One evening while it was snowing without, Rachel and Roy sat in the cozy corner of the nursery reading a fairy story. Roy, who was the listener, interrupted Rachel's reading: "Say, sister, why do not some of the fairies come to us here in our nursery? I should love to see one; sure enough, wouldn't you?"

"Yes, it would be glorious," declared Rachel.

Then she began to think over all the fairy stories she had ever read, and at last said: "Do you know, Roy, that not one of the fairies I have read about ever came to rich children? They come to those who need them. And we are rich, you know. So, there's no use in our expecting fairies to come to us while we live in such splendor. Why, Cousin Sally said the other day that papa is one of the richest men in the city and that mamma is a pillar of the church and a social leader. I asked her how she came to know so much about our papa and mamma, and she said she had heard their servants saying all that. And I suppose she is right, for we have such a beautiful home, and papa is always at business and mamma is always attending to her church or club, or going to parties."

"And giving parties," said Roy. "My—oh! she gives some swell ones, too, doesn't she? Do you remember nurse let us peep over the banister one time when mamma was having a big party?"

"Yes, and that's why our papa and mamma have no time to be with us," said Rachel. "If they were poorer, we'd live in the same rooms with them. Governess says when she was a little girl she and her five brothers and sisters lived in a five-room cottage, and that they all ate in the dining-room together. There was no nursery nor schoolroom in their house. And the children lived right in the same rooms with their papa and mamma. Wasn't that lovely?"

"Yes, but what did they do for a schoolroom?" asked Roy. "They surely had to have a governess after they were big enough to learn lessons. And before that, they had to have a nursery and a nurse."

Rachel shook her head. "No, governess told me all about it. The children were nursed by their own mamma—that is, governess said it this way: 'My mother cared for all her own children and saw to their wants herself. And every night she tucked us in bed with her own loving hands. And when we got old enough we attended the public school.' So, you see, that was how they lived in her family."

"It must have been very nice," said Roy, his fancy leading him to a pretty family scene, where parents and children were together.

"Yes, I think having too much money is not so nice," declared Rachel. "If papa were not a very wealthy man and we had to live in a five-room cottage, we'd all be together much of the time. And we'd have no room for so many servants, and mamma would have to stay at home to look after us. And maybe we'd get to attend the public school. Wouldn't that be great sport? Oh, what games we'd play with all the other children! I wish we weren't quite so rich." And Rachel sighed wearily. "Why, to be a bit poorer would make us quite as happy as being out in the country, for we'd be as free as then."

"Why not try to find a place where the papa and mamma are not so rich?" suggested Roy. "We might go and stay with them for several days. And then, if we did not like it so well as we do our own home, we could return. Mamma is so busy she would not miss us. And we so seldom see our papa that he would never know we were out of the house." Rachel meditated seriously for a few minutes. "I like that idea, Roy," she agreed. "And we might go at once, while governess is gone. You know she went an hour ago to do some shopping, and won't return before dark. It's now 4 o'clock. I heard the strokes in the hall just a minute ago."

"Well, let's start," said Roy, rising to make ready. "Shall we take anything with us—any clothes?"

"Oh, no; only wear our cloaks," said Rachel.

Then the dear, lonely, little twins, who were anxious to leave a rich home to find simpler comforts, where close companionship might be enjoyed, put on their wraps hurriedly and departed by the side door which was used only by the upper servants. In going out this way they avoided the footman in the front hall and the under servants in the lower hall. Thus they passed to the street without being observed by any one.

Once on the pavement the children turned toward the suburbs. They knew that they would find simple homes in that direction, for often they had gone automobiling with their mother about the outskirts of the city, and had seen little two-story houses with gardens in front and children playing about in them. And there they knew homely comfort must reign.

"It's cold," said Rachel, holding her pretty ermine muff over her nose. "But I like it out in the cold; don't you, Roy?"

"Very much," replied Roy, sniffing the fresh frosty air. "Wish we could be out in it every day."

After walking many blocks they reached a little side street into which they turned. They had seen groups of merry children playing about in the snow which had not yet been cleaned away as in the better streets. And here the houses were small, consisting of two and three low stories. Some were built of wood and had pretty green shutters at the windows, and some had roomy porches across the front.

"Here are places where the people must live like our governess' family did when she was little like us," said Rachel.

"Yes, just see the children about in the yards playing snowball," said Roy. "Shall we go into the house where the two boys and two girls are playing on the porch?"

"Yes, it is a little house, and the children seem to be so happy," said Rachel. So they turned into the small yard that stretched in front of the neat frame cottage that had taken their fancy. As they entered the children, who were busy molding a snow man beside one of the porch pillars, stopped their work and stood looking at the small strangers. As the twins approached the larger of the boys came forward, nodding his head and saying, "Hello, kids."

His language was new to Rachel and Roy, for they had not yet come in contact with the real children of the world, had been reared so carefully and taught to speak only the most correct English. But of course they knew they were being addressed and both bowed respectfully and said: "Good evening. May we come in?"

"Sure," came the larger boy's response. And then the children gathered about the two beautifully dressed, most proper children, their curiosity apparent. One of the girls, about eight years old, stepped close to Rachel, saying: "My, but you are a stylish little girl. Where do you live? Do you go to the Humboldt school? I do, but I've never seen you there. Come, do you want to play at being my new chum?"

"Oh, it would be very nice, indeed," replied Rachel. Then she told the little girl that she did not go to school, but had her own governess at home. "Oh! I knew you were rich," declared the little girl. "I wish I were rich; it is so lovely to have everything one wants."

"But if you are rich you can't have what you want," explained Rachel. "And that's the reason my brother and I have come here to live for a few days with poor people, where we may eat at the same table with the papa and mamma and go to school with all the other children. It is very lonely being rich."

The other children had gathered about to hear what Rachel was saying, and were much surprised that being rich did not make her supremely happy. "Why, you can do as you please, can't you, when you are rich?" asked one of the boys, questioning Roy.

Roy shook his head sadly. "No," he said, "sister and I have only a few playmates and they are just like ourselves. They never run out in the snow and play as you do. They have to behave very nicely, for, like my sister and me, they are always under the eyes of their governess. Why, we eat at the table with our teacher, and she has a room right between ours and watches over us when we sleep. We never have the fun you poorer children have. Only in the summer when we go to the mountains for a while do we get away from our governess. And even then a servant must go with us everywhere to take care of us. And after we are a bit older we shall be sent to a boarding school, and it will be the same there as it is at home—no poor children to play with, and we'll have to be dressed up all day long."

"Come, children, don't stay out in the cold any longer," said a sweet, motherly voice at the open door, and Rachel and Roy looked up to see a kindly faced woman smiling down at them. "Why, who are the little strangers?" she asked of her own boys and girls.

It took only a few words from Rachel and Roy to explain that they had run away from their lonely but grand home in the fashionable avenue a few blocks away.

"Well, my dear little runaways, come in and have some supper with us and we'll talk over this matter," said the dear mother, who was so simple and sweet. And what a joy it was to sit at the table with the family, the jolly father who told stories to the children and the dear, gentle mother who saw that all their wants were attended to.

After the meal was over the good mother said to Rachel and Roy: "Now I shall go to your home with you, my dear little ones, and explain to your mother where you have been and your reason for running away from home."

At first, Rachel and Roy wished they might stay longer, but when the good mother explained that they must go home to save their parents any anxiety, they agreed that she was right. So the three set out, and soon were ringing the front door bell at the twins' home. You may believe the butler opened the door for them very quickly, saying to an excited footman: "Go tell Madame that Miss Rachel and Master Roy have returned."

"Oh, has mamma come home?" Rachel asked of the old butler.

"Yes, miss, and the whole household is astir over your disappearance. Your mother has 'phoned to your father and the police. She thought you both had been kidnapped, miss.'"

Just at this minute the much-excited mother of our twins appeared in the hall and soon had her little ones folded to her breast. Then, seeing the sweet-faced woman with them, she turned to her and said:

"Ah, I know I am indebted to you for the safe return of my little ones. Come, tell me where you found them. I can never repay you for your more than kindness to us."

And seated in the magnificent parlor the mother of the twins and the good mother from the little cottage—where Rachel and Roy had tasted sweet domesticity for the first time in their short lives—had a real heart-to-heart talk, and after an hour's close conversation Rachel and Roy—who had been sent to their rooms—were called to their mother. "My darlings," she sobbed, pressing her cheek against the faces of her children, "your mother never realized the loneliness of your precious lives till this hour. But from this day on you shall go to play each evening with the little children at whose house you supped so happily tonight. And more than that, you shall always have luncheon with me and dessert with both papa and mamma at dinnertime. I have learned a lesson tonight which I shall never forget, and the learning of it will be the means of drawing me closer to my children."

"And we'll be so happy that we'll forget we are rich, won't we mamma?" cried Roy.

LESSON NO. 46—THE TEDDY BEARS PLAYING SEE-SAW.

Little Gracie and Her New Found "Granny."

BY ANNIE JAMES.

SAY, Mamma, why can't I have a granny?"

The question was asked by little Gracie Donivan, of her mother.

The two were sitting beside the cheerful grate-fire discussing the events of the afternoon. Gracie had attended a birthday party given by her friend, Nellie Thompson, and there she had seen Nellie's dear old grandmother, whom the Thompson children called "granny." And as the dear old "granny" had told the children many interesting stories during the party it had occurred to Gracie that it would be nice for her to have a "granny," for the fact is, Gracie did not understand the exact relationship of a "granny." She knew what grandmothers and grandfathers were, but she had never before met with a "granny." So, the question to her mother.

"Why, darling, a grandmother is often called granny," explained Mrs. Donivan. "Your own grandmothers are both living, as you know, and they are your grannies, dear."

"But they are not real, sure-enough grannies," declared Gracie. "My grandmamma Donivan is always so tall and fine and talks so grand, and wears a diamond brooch and a black silk gown and real lace. And she never romps with me or tells me stories. She says I should not ask questions, when I begin to want her to tell me about things. And she says children's noise makes her nervous. No, Mamma, my grandmamma Donivan could never be a real, sure-enough granny, such as little Nellie's granny is. And my Grandmamma Ball is so very ill much of the time that she doesn't like to have me around, and she says I muss up her work basket, and that I don't keep my fingernails clean, and that my hair ought to be braided tightly instead of being curled and tangled. So Grandmamma Ball could never, never be a real, sure-enough granny either, for real grannies don't look at your fingernails nor your tangled hair, nor they don't mind your mussing their work baskets, for they are sort of like children themselves. Nellie's granny is—only she's very old and sweet. And when she smiles into your face you think of taffy, she's so nice. Oh, I'd love a granny like her."

"Well, my love, you will know some day that old people cannot all be like Nellie's granny, for when they have lived so many years, suffered so many disappointments, so much grief, so much sickness, and ever so many such hard things that come with time, they forget their own childhood days, and thus forgetting, cannot understand the desires of the little folk growing up about them." So explained little Gracie's mother to her.

"You're very, very good and kind, and I want you for my granny."

But Gracie shook her head, saying: "I don't know anything about what makes grandmothers different to grannies, Mamma, but I do know I want a granny. I want my grandmothers, too, for they are very dear and good; but most of all, I want a dear old granny that tells stories and doesn't mind noise, dirty fingers and tangled hair."

Then Bridget, the cook, knocked at the door to ask permission to show her old mother over the house. "Sure, an' Mrs. Donivan, it's such a foine house that you've got that I'd be ather showing it to me old mither what's come in to spend the day with me. You know she's from the country—fifteen mile away, an' seeing your foine house will rest her a bit, I'm thinkin'. She's that tired, mum."

"Certainly, Bridget, show your mother over the house," consented Mrs. Donivan, glad to grant so simple a request from her good-hearted and worthy servant.

"May I go with Bridget?" asked little Gracie, eager for any variety in the home life.

"Certainly, dear," smiled Mrs. Donivan. "And now I shall run across the street to chat a minute with Mrs. Brown. She's been quite ill of late, and I must go in and help cheer her up."

Then the house was left to Bridget, her old mother and little Gracie. And as the three walked about the rooms of the pretentious home Gracie watched with pleasure the happy expression on the old lady's face. "Ah, how beautiful," she would exclaim. "An' may I lay my hand on that sofy?" she asked, admiring a beautiful sofa in the reception hall.

"Come, sit on it, beside me," cried Gracie, liking the pleasant-faced old lady. "Come, sit on it. It's very nice and soft. And do you know any stories? I love stories, I do."

The old lady sat down beside Gracie, smoothing her frayed frock with her workworn hands, a smile of unexpected pleasure brightening her countenance. "Yes, dearie, I know many, many, stories, but they are all of auld Ireland. Ah, an' there we had the foine times when I was a little one like yerself, sure. Ah! but it is nice to have a dear little one like yer innocent self about. I pray the time may come when bright little grandchildren will be about me knee, a-beggin' for stories."

"Oh, come mother!" laughed Bridget. "But if you're goin' to sit here on the sofy like a foine lady I'll be goin back to the kitchen to look after me fowl what's in the oven." And Bridget hurried out of the room.

Then Gracie took hold of the old, wrinkled hands and looked tenderly into the sweet aged face. "Won't you be my granny?" she asked in a soft whisper. "I have grandmammas—two of 'em, but I have no real sure-enough granny. You are just the kind of granny I want. Will you be mine?"

Tears gushed from the eyes of the dear sympathetic old Irish woman, and impulsively she stooped and embraced the beautiful little lady-girl at her side. "Ah, you are an angel, darlint," she said. "But it's not fittin' fer the loiks of me to be your granny. I'm too old and plain."

"You're not," declared Gracie. "When you smile it looks just lovely, and you're very, very good and kind. And I want you for my granny. Please do not say no."

"Then I'll be your granny, my little one, if yer own dear mither will permit such," smiled the good, old woman. "And now, shall I tell you a story of me own childhood, when I lived in dear auld Ireland? Them was the foine days, me darlint."

"Oh, yes, a story, a story," cried Gracie. "Ah, I knew you would be a sure-enough granny! Oh, I'm so happy to have found you! And I'll love you always and always, and I'll go to see you in your home, and you'll come to see me here, and while others may be my grandmothers, only you shall ever be my granny."

And half an hour later Mrs. Donivan crept softly to the reception hall to take a peep at Gracie and her new-found "granny" who were still sitting, hand in hand, on the sofa, the "granny" relating a most interesting story while Gracie listened. "Bless them," whispered Mrs. Donivan, and silently stole away. "Gracie has at last found a 'granny.'"

The Exciting Experience of Robert and Rover.

BY WILLIAM WALLACE, JR.

WHEN Robert was six years old his papa gave him a fine big Newfoundland puppy. And the puppy was called Rover, the name going well with Robert. And from the day of his arrival Rover was made Robert's chum.

And so three years had passed away, boy and dog becoming more and more attached to each other. Every summer during vacation Robert had his four-footed chum with him hourly, going hunting in the big woods and swimming in the pond. And during the long school term Rover always met his comrade master at the corner on his return from school, and the two would have a romp before going about their evening chores.

I say their chores, for Rover assisted Robert with his work. Robert would run to the grocery and meat market for his mother and Rover would carry the basket in which the purchases were to be put. In this way the two chums got along admirably helping each other.

One day after school Robert called to Rover, saying: "Old fellow, let's go to the pond and skate awhile. I think it's all O. K. today. Yesterday the ice thawed some, but it froze again last night, and I'm sure the skating will be fine."

Rover understood what Robert said, and knowing the condition of the ice, looked undecided, for once he had seen two boys on the pond when the ice was in its present state and one of them had gone through to his death, and it required the combined efforts of a man and Rover to save the other boy. So Rover, remembering the past sad incident, sat still and made no show of consent to his master's suggestion.

Robert whistled and started off toward the pond. "Come on, old chum," he called. "It'll be fine on the ice this evening, and as we've done our chores we don't have to be in a hurry to come home."

But still Rover sat on the step leading to the woodshed, looking imploringly at his master, as if to say: "Please, Robert, do not go on the ice today. I fear an accident." But Robert, not able to read the wish in the old doggie's heart, ran down the hill toward the pond, his skates over his shoulder.

For a moment Rover watched his young master. Then, feeling that he must stand by him in anything he might do, the old doggie trotted off after him. Together they reached the pond, a small, but very deep, body of water, with a shining surface of ice.

"Ah, ain't she as smooth as glass, old fellow?" cried Robert. "Well, just let's have a turn."

Hereupon, Robert sat down and fastened on his skates. Then he went boldly on the ice, Rover remaining on the bank, whining after him in a pleading way.

"Say, what's the matter with you, old doggie?" asked Robert, turning around to speak to Rover. "You don't seem happy this evening. Are you cold—or hungry? Well, come. Run up and down the pond with me for a few minutes and you'll get warm and forget your hunger—if you are hungry. But you had your customary big dinner, old fellow, and it isn't time for supper. Ah, the ice is fine! Now, just watch me cut the pigeonwing. Heigh-ho! Is there anything as fine as skating?"

But just as Robert said this he felt a sudden movement of the ice under his feet, accompanied by a cracking noise, which portended danger.

Only for a moment was Robert warned. Then the ice beneath him gave way and he felt a cold sensation. He had fallen into the water and was floundering about like a frightened fish when on dry land.

But the very instant that Robert fell through the broken ice Rover was on the pond and near to the spot where his master was struggling, and did not wait commands from the excited and frightened boy. Watching his opportunity, the old doggie braced himself for a pull and stretching forward his big head, grasped Robert's coat and began to drag the wearer out.

It was no small task to get Robert out of the water, for whenever he attempted to climb upon the ragged edge of ice his weight would cause it to break away, sometimes endangering Rover's safety. But the dog was wise and seemed on the watch for just such accidents, and would move cautiously backward, dragging his young master with him.

After much difficulty and strenuous work on Rover's part, and much struggle and suffering from cold on Robert's part, the former succeeded in rescuing the latter from the pond, and dragged him upon the bank. Here Robert dropped from exhaustion and cold, unable to move. For a moment only did Rover look upon his master, and understanding his condition, turned and ran up the bank towards Robert's home as fast as he could go. When he reached the house he made his presence known by scratching on the door for admittance, and when Robert's mother opened the door he caught her dress in his mouth and began to pull her towards the pond. "Come—Robert is freezing and exhausted," he tried to say, and Robert's mother knew at once that something dreadful had happened to her little son. Calling to the house maid to fetch her a shawl, and to the hired man to accompany her, she followed the hurrying Rover, who, seeing that she understood him, let go of her dress and ran ahead to show the way.

Stretching forward his big head, Rover grasped Robert's coat and dragged him out.

Within a few minutes Rover and Robert's mother, accompanied by the hired man, came to the suffering little fellow's relief. The big hired man took off his own heavy coat and wrapped it about the boy; then took him in his arms and quickly bore him to the house. There, rubbed till his young body was aglow with warmth and blood, the now happy fellow was put to bed, where he lay sipping hot tea. And all the while old Rover watched the process of caring for his beloved master, his eyes full of gratitude to the dear mother who knew so well how to prevent any serious result to her little son from the very unpleasant accident he had met with in the pond.

"If it hadn't been for Rover I would have drowned, Mamma," said Robert between sips of hot tea. "I tell you, he is the dearest and bravest doggie in the world, and I love him as though he were human. You should have seen how bravely he struggled to get me out of the pond, often getting in danger himself. Once I thought sure he was going to lose his hold on the ice and go under with me. But he knew better than I did, and he kept a cool head all the time."

And Rover, sitting beside the bed, seemed to understand his dear Robert's words, and blinked his eyes and wagged his tail, as if to say, "Thank you, Robert, for your kind words about me, only a poor dog."

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES, DEVOTEE OF PRISON REFORM AND THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Like Mr. Roosevelt is Planning to Do, Not a Few of Our Ex-Presidents Turned Travelers, Van Buren Being the Pioneer in This Form of Ex-Presidential Activity—Grant's World-Encircling Trip the Wonder of His Day and Generation—John Quincy Adams and Andrew Johnson Went to Congress—Washington, Jackson and Jefferson Continued to Direct the Policies of Their Party.

By JOHN S. HARWOOD.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT has planned to begin his career as the only living ex-president of the United States with a trip unparalleled in American history. Several other former chief executives of this nation traveled extensively on being freed from the cares of state, but none went hunting in African jungles.

Martin Van Buren was the first ex-president to travel much abroad It was so many years after he left the White House, however, that he had lost somewhat of his official prestige, and moved from one European city to another much more quietly than some Americans who never have held office.

In striking contrast was the world-encircling tour of Ulysses Grant. It was almost imperial. Monarchs feted him in their palaces. The greatest thinkers of the world did him homage. He came to them in the full blaze of fame, the hero of many battles, who afterward had ruled over his countrymen for two successive terms.

No one knows fully what Mr. Roosevelt intends to do after his trip. Possessed with so much strenuousness, he is not at all likely to follow the example of such ex-presidents as Madison and Monroe. When Madison retired from the White House he returned to his ancestral estate at Montpelier, Va., where he devoted the last nineteen years of his life chiefly to agriculture.

Doubtless Theodore Roosevelt looks forward to a career like that of Jefferson or Jackson, who, even after they had retired to private life, still remained the leaders of their parties. Or, should he have the desire still to remain in the official saddle, he may, like John Quincy Adams, go back to Washington as a legislator. Then there is the example of Grover Cleveland, who, after four years of retirement, again became the standard bearer of his party and took hold of the nation's helm.

Not all ex-presidents, however, have increased their popularity by re-entering politics. Such was the case with Grant. Merely as an American citizen, traveling abroad he won the esteem of foreigners as well as his own countrymen He carried himself with an ease and dignity which he never lost in the most august presence and which he always tempered with kindness on meeting those below his own station. But when his name was presented as a candidate for a third term it aroused bitter criticism, although his friends always insisted that he did not sanction a renomination.

Grant's Great World Journey.

Grant started on his historic journey around the world soon after the end of his second term. The fame of no man in the country equaled his. In Europe he was treated with all the deference due royalty. He was the guest of Queen Victoria in England, MacMahon and Greevy in France, the emperors of Germany, Austria and Russia, the kings of Belgium, Italy, Holland, Sweden and Spain, Pope Leo XIII, the duke of Wellington, Prince Bismarck, Lord Lyrton, Gambetta, King Thebau of Burmah, Prince Kung of China, the emperor of Siam, the mikado and most of the other notable personages of Europe and Asia. Leaving Philadelphia May 17, 1877, he arrived at San Francisco Sept. 20, 1879. His journey across the continent proved the climax, being one continuous ovation. Everyone appeared proud of him and of his wonderful tour.

After his friends who sought his third renomination had been overwhelmed in the convention that named James A. Garfield, Grant went into Wall street, which proved his Waterloo. He became a partner of Ferdinand Ward in a brokerage house that collapsed with the failure of Ward. In the crash Grant's fortune was wiped out At this time also the cancer, from which he died, appeared, having been hastened, some think, by the depleting effect of the disaster upon his vitality.

From finance Grant turned to authorship, with phenomenal success. The pensaved his family from threatened poverty. Royalties from his books amounted to $400,000.

A luncheon in his office with William Dean Howells and Mark Twain led to the making of this fortune. Grant spoke of his financial embarrassments, saying he cared not for himself, but his family, whom he feared he soon would have to leave.

"Write your memoirs," exclaimed Mark Twain. "Everybody is interested in you. They will go off like hot cakes."

"Memoirs!" replied Grant. "I am no writer. My sentences would bore the public to death."

"But look at me," said Mark Twain, "I am no writer, either."

Meanwhile Grant tried in every way to clear himself of financial entanglements. He went so far as to sell the gifts bestowed upon him in his journey around the world. Then at last he decided to take Mark Twain's advice. The humorist first heard the news at the theater, and the very next morning visited "The General," as the former commander of the Union armies was best known by his friends, and learned that Grant had finished three chapters, for each of which he was to receive $500. He was about to sign a contract for the serial rights, but Mr. Clemens persuaded him that the royalties offered were too low.

Frederick D. Grant, on hearing Mark Twain's opinion, also besought his father to demand higher terms from the publishers, who as a result offered a contract much more favorable.

"No," said Gen. Grant, "If the business is to be as profitable as these people seem to think, then it should go to the firm of Charles L. Webster & Co., of which my friend, Clemens, is a member."

To the writing of his memoirs Grant devoted his last energies with the same unflinching courage which characterized him as a military hero. He fought death till the while. He stuck to the struggle until he was too weak to guide the pen. He wrote the last sentence four days before his death, July 23, 1885, at Mount McGregor, eleven miles north of Saratoga, N. Y. On August, 8, 1885, his body was buried in Riverside Drive, New York city, after a civic and military procession never before equaled in size, statliness and the number of distinguished men who participated.

The Pioneer Presidential Traveler.

Far differently closed the life of Martin Van Buren, the pioneer of former presidential travelers. Van Buren, on ending his first term, became desirous of serving another. In 1844, four years after he was defeated for re-election by William H. Harrison, he again sought the nomination of the Democratic party. His opposition to the annexation of Texas, however, caused a motion to be introduced requiring him to obtain a two-thirds vote. Although the majority of the delegates were pledged to him, the support of the two-thirds could not be obtained, with the result that James Knox Polk was nominated and elected. Van Buren again entered the political arena in 1848, when he ran for president on the "Free-Soilers" ticked, a new rival of the regular Democratic ticket, headed by Louis Cass. As a result of this split Gen. Zachary Taylor was elected by the Whigs.

Van Buren retired to his estate at Kinderhook, N. Y., his birthplace. He was wealthy, and at his luxurious country place, Lindenwold, he entertained the social and literary lions of the age. He died at Kinderhook, July 24, 1862.

Millard Fillmore, the thirteenth president, who was lifted to the White House by the death of Zachary Taylor, made a European tour two years after his term expired. Despite his efforts to remain out of public view, he nevertheless became the recipient of much attention. Oxford offered him the degree of D. C. L., which he respectfully declined. It was while he was in Rome that he learned that he had been nominated for president on the Native American ticket. Defeated for election, Mr. Fillmore took this verdict as final, and thereafter made no effort to re-enter politics. Having married Mrs. Caroline McIntosh of Albany, a woman of wealth, he retired to a home in Buffalo, where in his youth he had begun the practice of law. He spent his first days as a student.

Franklin Pierce, who followed Fillmore, traveled extensively abroad, but in such a quiet way that he avoided formal society to a great degree. As he grew older Pierce became more reserved. His life had been saddened by the death of his two sons, and also of his wife, who died a few years after he left official life.

Of his few friends, Nathaniel Hawthorne enjoyed his closest confidence and wrote his biography, one of the most graceful and convincing of the "New England Wizard's" writings. The two men were traveling together when the author died, May 19, 1864. Another close friend of Pierce was Ethan, his horse, whom the former president used to say was more sympathetic than many of his human friends. Once when traveling alone in a buggy behind Ethan, Pierce noticed a coming thunder storm and said:

"Ethan, we must jog along or the rain will catch us." Without another word or a slap of whip or rein, Ethan broke into a run, and Pierce always maintained that the horse understood what he had said. Pierce was the third youngest president; Grant, second; Roosevelt, first.

Washington, like Jefferson and Jackson, could not withdraw from leadership in national affairs after giving up the presidency. As the result of the treatment by France of Pinckney, Marshall and Gerry, whom President Adams sent as special envoys to negotiate a treaty, there arose a cry for war. Washington, when petitioned to act as commander, determined to make all necessary preparations. This led to an unfortunate controversy between Washington and Adams, which increased the factional strife that finally resulted in the overthrow of the Federal party. Washington wanted Hamilton as the ranking major general. Adams insisted upon Knox for this office, but finally submitted to Washington's will.

Because of the bitter opposition to Adams and the ever-widening split in the Federal party, Washington was besought to run for the presidency a third time. He declined, believing that in the election each party should fight for the principles involved, and in no way be biased by the personality of a candidate.

In the period of less than three years that he was an ex-president, Washington lived at Mount Vernon, where he sought to devote his last days to his family and his slaves. He was fond of plantation life, but had come to feel that slavery was wrong. Some time before his withdrawal from the presidency he had decided never to buy another slave, and frequently expressed the wish that slavery might be abolished. He thought it wisest, however, not to liberate his own slaves, but to make them comfortable and happy, which he did.

His fondness for plantation life really hastened his death. While going from one part of the estate to another during a winter storm to see that all was well, he caught cold and died the same day, Dec. 14, 1799. His letters up to the last week of his life show that, while he never interfered with those in official power, he never ceased to take a most active interest in political affairs.

Jefferson's Busy Life as Ex-President.

In education as well as politics Thomas Jefferson interested himself in his seventeen years of ex-presidential life. Retireing to his plantation at Monticello, Va., he determined upon the establishment of a university in the Virginia hills. A story is still told that a meeting was held at Charlottesville in 1818 for the purpose of reviving a moribund school. As those present were about to depart without accomplishingg anything, an old man rode up on a horse and said: "I will help you put this through, no matter how much it costs me."

The old man was Jefferson in his seventy-fifth year, and he kept his word. He organized a subscription fund, gave to it liberally himself, induced Madison and Monroe to help, the plans for the buildings, framed the statutes relating to it, its code of government and courses of study. Such was the origin of the University of Virginia, which opened its doors in 1825. It is said that Jefferson used to watch the construction of the college building with a spyglass from Monticello, five miles away. He lived to see his dreams realized and died one year after the institution began its illustrious career.

To the last Jefferson devoted every spare hour to study. His knowledge was commonly regarded as universal. It was once said that he "could calculate an eclipse, survey an estate, tie an artery, plan a building, try a law suit, break a horse, dance a minuet, and play the violin." Buffon once wrote him, "I should have consulted you before publishing my natural history. Then I should have been sure of my facts."

In spite of all these varied avocations Jefferson kept close tab on national affairs. Madison, his old secretary of state, constantly sought his advice, and Monroe also looked to his leadership.

Like Jefferson, Andrew Jackson quitted the storms of presidential life for a country home, although still helping to guide his party from afar. At the Hermitage, his Tennessee seat, he lived the true life of a democrat, receiving his rural neighbors with the same cordiality as "the big guns from Washington." Much of his youthful temper had become mellowed by old age, his mind being made still more tranquil by the election of his friend, Van Buren, as his successor. In his retreat his advice constantly was sought by Van Buren and other party leaders.

His strength, however, became more and more exhausted by fighting an enemy more formidable than any he met in New Orleans or in Indian wars. He became a victim of consumption, from which he finally died on June 8, 1845, eight years after he left official life. In spite of his increasing weakness, he seemed to keep as strong a grip on political affairs. Always in

BIG PLANS FOR MAKING THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

Policy That Will Make City of Washington a Dream of Beauty.

Washington, Feb. 6.—"On the fourth of March, 1921, there will not be a single private structure between the United States capitol and the treasury and from the south side of Pennsylvania avenue ot the Potomac river. All of this great area will be a park, a government reservation, a continuous lawn, dotted here and there with government buildings and wound about with roadways and drives. Washington will then be entering upon its existence as a city of magnificent realities, in contradistinction to its undeniable municipal position during so much of the past, as 'the city of magnificent distances.'"

One of the leaders of congress, one of the really big men of the house of representatives made this statement to a newspaper man the other day. He was commenting upon the coming inaugural festivities and upon the disappointment that is felt by nine out of ten of the ordinary folks—first time visitors to the national capital—upon their first glimpse of that historic thoroughfare, Pennsylvania avenue.

Now, come to think of it, 1921 isn't so very far away—just twelve ordinary years—a three time trip around the presidential quadrennial event. In that time much can and will be accomplished, and many visitors to the coming festivities upon the occasion of the induction into office of William Howard Taft and John Schoolcraft Sherman, will ive to marvel, twelve years hence, at the changes that have come over things in Washington, the national capital, destined some day to be the foremost city of the civilized world.

Last year congress appropriated $2,500,000 to buy five blocks between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets and Pennsylvania avenue and the Mall. Thus a start has been made. The $2,500,000 got but the five blocks within these boundaries and a further appropriation of $1,000,000 or more will be necessary. But it is generally considered that in authorizing the purchase of this initial tract, congress took the first step in the policy that, extended through the near future, will make this Washington of l'Enfant's and the man after whom it was named, a dream of beauty.

It is estimated by men with a knowledge of local real estate values that it will take at least $50,000,000 to carry out the project outlined above, having ing the government acquire all the land from the capitol to the treasury —a measured mile—and from the south side of Pennsylvania avenue to the river. The district commissioners estimated that about $25,000,000 would do the trick, but it turns out that they were too conservative by at least one-half. But whatever the proposition will cost, it is generally realized now that this land must be acquired and that now is the time to do it, or at least to make a sizeable beginning. For property is appreciating, not depreciating, in value all the time and the land can be bought now cheaper than at any time in the future.

It was a mistake, and is now recognized as such, that this particular area was not taken in hand years ago. But many mistakes have been made with respect to Washington by the congress of the United States and this probably the most expensive one of the lot. People who live in the national capital and who take pride in everything connected with its past, its present and its future, are anxious that inaugural visitors who gaze upon Pennsylvania see it first as it is today, and then, through the eye of the imaginaiton, as it will be on that inaugural occasion of 1921. Perhaps if everyone of the many thousands of visitors would do this, se ne members of congress who now look with disfavor upon the Mall purchase, on the ground that their constituents wouldn't stand for what they are pleased to term "such extravagance," would have their eyes opened by these very constituents themselves. Local people think it is a consumuation devoutly to be wished and look upon the coming inauguration as one of the means to a desirable end, when all is said and done, an inevitable ned.

IMPROVEMENT IN FIELD GUN

Invention of a French Colonel That Is of Great Value.

Paris, Feb. 6.—One of the principal points to which the attention of the French military authorities is now directed, is how to increase the efficiency of the artillery in face of the numerical superiority of the German batteries. In the recent parliamentary debates, the most weighty argument brought against additional guns was the difficulty that there would be in finding men to serve them. Col. Deport, a wel known expert, has just invented an improvement in the field gun of 75 millimetres (3-inch) that will enable the battery to be worked by five men instead of six. This would result in freeing 2,400 men, or enough to serve twenty-four new batteries. His system consists in employing the recoil to open the breechblock, which then shuts automatically on the cartridge being introduced. There is also an ingenious contrivance for obviating the necessity of lowering the gun, the total weight is reduced by 600 weight, for the gun and almost as much for the ammunition wagon. The last consideration renders Col. Deport's new model particularly fit to use in the artillery attached to independent cavalry divisions.

WOMAN ROBBED IN NOVEL STYLE

Three People Conspire to Get Possession of $2,500.

London, Feb. 6.—An astonishing story of the trapping and robbing of a foreigner in London, which reads like an American melodrama, was told at Old Street police court yesterday. A Russian Jew, who spent several years in America and had married there, had saved money and his wife had some, and when they left America two months ago, intending to go to Russia, they had nearly $2,500 in Russian and English notes and gold. That was kept by the wife in a bag hung round her neck, inside her clothes. On arrival in this country they resided in Old Street district, and came into contact with a man and wife who claimed relationship by marriage. They eventually shared the same house, and another man was introduced as also related.

It was these three who were alleged to have conspired together to get possession of the money, and the method pursued was extraordinary. When the husband was out a few days ago, the three persons implicated, represented to the wife that he had been knocked down by a train. She, greatly alarmed, would have gone anywhere, and was taken by one of the men to a railway station. She asked where they were going, and was told her husband had been taken to Manchester. She did not know where Manchester was, but entered a train with the man, and after a long journey found herself in another city.

There she was put into a cab, and they drove about till late the same night, and called at several places, but could not find her husband. Then she was driven to a hotel and told they would have to wait till morning. They passed the night in the same room, she sitting in a chair, and the man lying on the bed in his clothes. While they were in the room, the man forcibly took away the bag of money and some jewelry. She was told she should have it back in the morning. On hearing the wife's story, the husband wanted to go to the police, but on a promise that the money should be given back, he temporised and waited, and eventually received $750, for which he gave a receipt. Then, having rescued his wife, he left the house and subsequently took advice.

Hoarse coughs and stuffy colds that may develop into pneumonia over night are quickly cured by Foley's Honey and Tar, and it soothes inflamed membrances, heals the lungs, and expels the cold from the system. Sold by all druggists.

MYSTERIOUS TRAGEDY.

Paris, Feb. 6.—A mysterious tragedy has occurred in an express train running between Paris and Chagny. In the train was Lieut. Duplat of the Republican Guards, and his little daughter aged 2½ years. When the train reached Beaune, the officer left his compartment, and entering another, asked a passenger for the loan of a pencil. Returning to his daughter, he wrote the following message on a sheet of paper:

"My dear Marie, I am unworthy of you. But I love you dearly. I have kissed baby before taking this step. Pray for me, for I love you. What has led me to do this is lack of employment."

After writing these words, the lieutenant, wrapped the child in a warm covering, kissed her, and entering another compartment, which was empty, lay down on the seat, and blew out his brains with his army revolver. In his pocket was his will, dated Nov. 1906, and a paper giving the address of a brother offier in Paris.

Lieut. Duplat was a popular officer. The motive which he gave for committing suicide is not taken seriously. His family can give no reason for his rash act.

A Common Cold.

We claim that if catching cold could be avoided some of the most dangerous and fatal diseases would never be heard of. A cold often forms a culture bed for germs of infectious diseases. Consumption, pneumonia, diphtheria and scarlet fever, four of the most dangerous and fatal diseases, are of this class. The culture bed formed by the cold favors the development of the germs of these diseases, that would not otherwise find lodgment. There is little danger, however, of any of these diseases being contracted when a good expectorant cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It cleans out these culture beds that favor the development of the germs of these diseases. That is why this remedy has proved so universally successful in preventing pneumonia. It not only cures your cold quickly but minimizes the risk of contracting these dangerous diseases. For sale by all druggists.

The leading place in the Engineering Magazine for February is given to J. B. Van Brussel's profusely illustrated description of three of the largest mechanical irrigation stations on the Nile. The most prominent features of these installations are the very large application of centrifugal pumps for heavy duty and the use of steel conduits for carrying the water through the porous desert sand. Another illustrated feature of importance is the first article of a series by O. M. Becker on the nature and characteristics of the new steels as revealed by the study of specimens under the microscope. Reginald Pelham Bolton completes his illustrated review of means and methods for heating the feed water of steam boilers with a consideration of exhaust-steam heating.

An article by Dr. Perley Spaulding, also illustrated, gives a biographical history of botanical work that has been accomplished at St. Louis. Prof. William H. Four copies of Lincoln's famous Gettysburg speech exist in the handwriting of the author. Three of them are familar in fac simile reproduction, but one has never until now been so reproduced. This is the copy made by the president on his return to Washington from the battlefield, and given to his military secretary, Maj. John Hay, at whose instance it was written down. It is the speech as actually delivered, and differs from the text written before the event, and held in Mr. Lincoln's hand, but not read, at the dedication of the grounds. This priceless manuscript is now in the possession of Mrs. John Hay, who owns also the equally famous second inaugural address. This, too, has never hitherto been reproduced in fac simile. The reproduction of these two invaluable manuscripts in Putnam's Magazine for February, by courtesy of the owner, is a matter of national interest. The documents accompany a budget of recollections of Lincoln by Gen. James Grant Wilson.

Fiction that's "different," delicately sprinkled with realism, reflecting life grim and laughable, without fear of its black depths, is the promise of Young's Magazine for 1909 and the February number is a characteristic issue. "Lady Much Afraid" the novelette, is by Inez Thompson, touching lightly on the heartless immorality of society, like a Pinero play, with its smart drawing rooms, its gay society people and epigrammatic repartee. Against this brilliant, highly-colored background, Barbara stands out vividly, lovely, daring, intense in love and in hate, with a reckless strain of vicious blood that threatens to wreck her future. In "The Tie That Binds," Helen Hicks Bowen has written an astonishingly frank story of a "soul union," between a very up-to-date girl and a shockinly modern man, that is as funny as it is audacious.

The United States is now about the only civilized country in the world that has not yet established a system of postal savings depositories. England, France, Austria, Russia, Italy, Belgium, Holland, the Netherlands, Hawaii, Bulgaria, Egypt, Canada and other countries have such systems in successful operation. Germany has no government service of this kind, but instead, the municipalities conduct postal savings banks.

In England and Wales there are 9,672,200 depositors in postal savings banks (over a quarter of the whole population), and their balances average $70.72 each.

In Japan there are over 8,000,000 depositors, with balances amounting to over $46,000,000, or $5.77 each.

Since 1871 our various postmasters general have uniformly recommended the adoption of a similar system in the United States. Our present efficient postmaster general, George von L. Meyer, is, with exceptional enthusiasm and vigor, urging the passage of senate bill 6,484. Quoting its exact language, this bill provides for the establishment of "postal savings depositories for depositing savings at interest with the security of the government for payment thereof and for other purposes."

Its provisions, in brief, are as follows:

1. Each United States postoffice which is authorized to issue money orders becomes a postal savings depository.

2. The postmaster general may, at first, establish these depositories only in the money-order offices of the first, second and third classes, and extend the system from time to time.

3. Accounts may be opened for any person over 10 years of age by depositing at least $1, after which amounts as small as 10 cents will be accepted. The limit of deposits accepted on any account in any one month is $100.

4. Not over $500 in all will be accepted on any one account, and interest at 2 per cent a year will be paid.

5. The postmaster general deposits these funds in national banks nearest the point of their receipt, at the rate of not less than 2¼ per cent interest.

There are over 65,000 postoffices in this country; 40,000 of these have the authority to issue money orders, and are, therefore, embraced in the provisions of senate bill 6,484. There are 6,821 presidential postoffices to which the postmaster general may at first restrict the savings feature. Even this number is five times as great as the number of savings banks in the United States, which is 1,415. The postoffices have the advantage of being distributed fairly well throughout the country, whereas, on the contrary, about three-quarters of the savings banks of the United States are in the Eastern and Middle states. It is a rather striking fact that 98 4-10 per cent of the deposits in our savings banks are in fourteen states (the six New England states, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania Maryland, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa and California), whereas in the remaining thirty-two states and all territories there are only 1 8-10 per cent of the deposits of all the savings banks of the country.

This is conclusive evidence that the highly prosperous Western and Southern states have, at present, comparatively little opportunity to reach savings banks and thus they lose an incentive to economy which the proposed postal savings system would supply. The experience of all other countries has proved that it is beneficial to the people to have postal savings depositories within easy access so that their savings may earn interest and be absolutely secure. In times of prosperity this plan, by encouraging saving, helps to make better and more substantial citizens, the stimulus to habits of economy and thrift, reducing the tendency to dissipation and vice. Again, in times of business depression, the faith of the people in their government tends to prevent panic which would be more likely to seize them if their money were deposited elsewhere; for many have an undefined feeling of distrust of banks, which they view in the light of private enterprises, liable to be mismanaged or to fail.

The report of the postmaster general for 1907 says:

"More than 7,000,000 of immigrants landed in this country during the past ten years, and it has been demonstrated that in the aggregate immense sums of money have been hoarded or sent away by these people."

The easy reach of government savings depositories will empty the proverbial "stocking," where, for lack of such banks, money is hidden at a loss of interest and at the risk of theft or fire. Taking another view of postal depositories, there is no easier, safer or more independent provision for old age, sickness or the ever threatening "rainy day" than the gradual accumulation of savings.

The opposition to the postal savings measure comes principally from the officials of savings banks on the ground that they should not be hampered by the competition of the United States government. Let us consider whether this is a fair argument. In the first place, these savings banks officials do not deny that the great mass of our people will receive a substantial benefit by having the proposed additional facility for saving small sums placed within their easy reach. How can they then reconcile their opposition with the benevolent character of their own institutions? These savings banks are conducted, in most part, by directors who serve without pay and entirely for the benefit of the public.

How can there then be a logical objection on their part on the ground of government competition to greater extension of facilities bound to bring further benefits to the self-same public? Setting aside the attitude of benevolence, we feel that the fear of this competition of the postal savings in the postal depository becomes substantial, the depositor will no longer be satisfied with the 2 per cent interest rate and will, quite naturally, transfer his account to the savings banks that pay 3½ and 4 per cent. Thus the postal depository will really be the feeder and not the competitor of the bank. By bringing to government safe-keeping small sums, now kept in the house or on the person, the postal savings depository will increase the total of savings materially and thus benefit not only the national banks in which the government will deposit the monies, but also the savings banks to which the deposits will flow for the reason above stated. Regarding the further argument that the proposed ostal savings measure will put our government in the banking business, Senator Carter of Montana made the following statement on May 7, 1908:

By no rational construction can the postal depository system provided by the pending bill be regarded as a banking business. Deposits are limited as to aggregate amount and calendar months. No payments are made on check, but only on the application of the depositor under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the postmaster general. Exchange is neither bought nor sold, bills arenot discounted and money is not loaned.

We may add that this postal savings plan would not be a new departure in our government policy, for the post offices are already handling money orders and other business of the people.

Summing up briefly:

1. The postal savings depositories would bring within easy access of our people in all parts of the country the opportunity to deposit their small savings with absolute safety and thus encourage thrift, prudence and economy. No private enterprise has ever attempted to, nor possibly could undertake such a vast plan.

2. Through the absolute confidence of the people in the government, panics may be prevented, savings increased and the amount of money sent abroad by our immigrants reduced by the establishment of postal savings depositories.

3. It would be a simple development of the money order system now in use in our postoffices and could not fairly be construed as a new departure in the principle, on the part of the government.

4. There would be little expense connected with the plan because the existing machinery of the post offices would be used.

5. The government would keep the monies in the districts in which they were saved, thus causing no disturbance in balances nor the much feared concentration of funds at a central point.

6. On account of the smaller interest rate the postal depository will be a feeder rather than a competitor of the savings bank.

7. The experience of nearly all other civilized countries proves that the plan is a practical success wherever established.

This bill (S6484) is now before the United States senate. A wire or letter to your senator and congressman will help make it a law.

SOCIALISM AND THE MIDDLE CLASS

"Ninety-seven per cent of men who embark in business fail in their lifetime," is the verified statement of commercial agencies.

This statement, which is self explanatory, opens up a subject that is to my mind, of exceeding importance to all persons who are battling for an existence in this material world. If it be true that but 3 per cent of persons, who engage in busines life, attain success in their ventures, then it becomes self evident to every man, who gives this subject any thought, that the lot of the small business man is not at all "a heaven upon earth," that his pathway is not strewn with roses, but rather that there are many thorns and thistles that must be brushed away.

When we take up the daily newspapers of any city and glance over the "business chance" and "for sale" columns, as well as the bankruptcy notices and kindred itmes, it does not require much effort to read also, between the lines, the life tragedies that are being daily enacted under our very eyes. We are blind only because we never give such items serious thought.

The average wage worker aspires becoming independent of his employer some day. Some day he hopes to become his own master—perhaps a master over other men. He endeavors to save something out of his earnings to place it away until he has accumulated what he considers a sufficient amount to enable him to embark on his prospective venture. He economizes, he stints himself to the utmost (especially the family man) to provide and build up a secure foundation for the prospective heirs—his children. Wife perhaps also helps along. Both are building castles in the air, and the babes stir them on. In the heyday of life all is serene. They plod and toil and are happy in their simplicity. What perhaps would prove an intolerable condition to the one, sharing responsibilities together, they find happiness in this mutual thought. By and by the amount sought for has been found—the goal has been reached. Now for the new departure. Oh, how happy the feeling! Life to them at last will open up new opportunities. Ah, how many of us that have so felt, so acted, yes and so hoped! How many have aspired? How many have succeeded? How apt the saying, "Man proposes, God disposes." So it is with the average man. He aims high. He intends, as did the original builders of the Tower of Babel, to mount skyhigh. True, some reach the top notch of the ladder of commercial fame, but at what cost? At what sacrifice to truth, mortality and all the real virtues? The pathway which the victor treads is strewn with innumerable victims. The cost measured, not in dollars but in human blood and suffering, is awful to contemplate. Can a business man tell the truth? Perhaps, that is providing his material interest is not bound up in the reply.

The writer speaks from personal knowledge—that the average business man must lie, must steal, must adulterate, must give false measure if he wishes to save himself from possible bankruptcy. Success in the commercial sphere is generally measured, not by honest, open and above board tactics, but by all that is worst in man's makeup. Honesty in business is merely a policy very seldom expedient to follow. Private business corrupts the morals, stultifies all that is best in man, makes each of the participants slaves to their needs and consequently victims to the environment.

The wage worker, who reads this article and may be inclined to doubt the accuracy of my remarks, need only ask the average business man to what chances there are for another competitor in his particular line. The answer won't be long in coming and will be of a nature that may open the eyes even of the unbeliever.

The middle class is practically bankrupt today—the average storekeeper is merely a factor for the jobber and manufacturer. He pays the rent, the gas and other incidental bills. His name may be on the sign in front of the store, but the goods on the shelves and in the cases are owned by his creditors. Should business be placed on a cash basis, fully 90 per cent of the small business men would be wiped off the commercial map. The wage worker who owns a steady job has less anxiety, less worry, and is more secure all round than the petty, so-called independent, business man. Competition for bread—for that is all that most of us are in business for—develops within man the worst side of his nature. The hypocritical "How do you do?" that we greet each other with as we chance to meet in the highways and byways—lacking feeling and minus sincerity—demonstrates the superficial life that we are living. Why should not each of us try to help improve the conditions that surround us? Surely we all can do our mite. Working as a unit with a common purpose—race consciousness—a real spirit of brotherhood will necessarily bring us to a realization of the interdependence of the human race. Socialism is the daughter of discontent and will be the mother of human soldidarity.

HYDRAULICS NOW FOR YUKON

Capital Follows the Prospector---Many Low Grade Placer and Mineral Propositions Being Brought Into the Working List.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 6.—Yukon territory never stood in a more favorable position than it does today. Its eleven years of production aggregate $150,000,000 and it is expected that the new dredge and hydraulic equipment now being installed or in operation will give to the world in the next ten years more than that sum from this territory. The year 1908 has seen a wonderful advance in methods. While the old-time individual miner is largely crowded to the outskirts his invaluable efforts in pioneering are unrelaxed.

Capital has now come to the aid of the prospector and many low grade placer and mineral propositions are being brought into the working list. While quartz enterprises are in their infancy the region has some of the finest quartz fields in the world. In the Whitehorse end many tons of copper is being mined and the time is approaching when this output will be greatly multiplied.

The year 1908 has seen its greatest visible operations in the neighborhood af Dawson in the way of hydraulic and dredge mining. No less than eighteen dredges are at work in the territory and three to six more are expected to arrive this year. The type of dredges now being brought here cost laid down and ready for operation not less than $150,000 The gravels which they are working are, on the whole, lower grade than were operated by the old-time individual miners, but are yielding splendid returns.

Some of the dredges paid for themselves in half a season or less, and it is said that the Bear Creek dredge on the Klondike river paid for itself almost within the first month.

The dredges on the Guggenheim properties on Bonanza and Hunker worked steadil ythrough the season, driven by electricity from the power station on the Twelve Mile river, thirty miles distant.

Other rich dredging properties are Walker's Fork, where Russell King's companies have two fine gold ships; the lower Forty-mile, where the Consolidated Gold Dredging Company of Alaska has two; the Stewart River company, recently organized, which has one dredge ordered and may order others for this year, and the Yukon Basin company, headed by Former Governor Ogilvie, with one dredge, and having 120 miles or more of submerged ground. The Consolidated company in the Forty-mile district will have new machines this year.

The dredging success has turned many other eyes this way and numerous rich streams in the Klondike and Forty-mile districts and in the Circle, Fairbanks and other Yukon fields are being investigated by agents of investors.

Several large power schemes are being formulated for the various properties. The rich adjacent coal fields as well as the water power are being brought into the service and millions will be expended in getting their energy. Thirty or forty concerns have hydraulic plants within fifty miles of Dawson and are workin gso inexpensively that they are getting profit from a vast area the old-time miners could not work at an advantage. The Guggenheims alone have invested $12,000,000 near Dawson and will invest several millions more.

SUPERIOR & GLOBE COMPANY

per. On the Old Dominion property this vein has proven very productive of copper down to water level, the limit of development in depth, and the ore taken out has ben for the most part high grade. We understand that the Old Dominion management holds a high opinion of the value of the company's locations on this fault and in all probability will during the current year install a power plant with pumps and hoisting machinery of adequate capacity for the development of the property at a considerable depth.

The Superior & Globe board of directors is composed of men who are prominent in the mining and financial affairs of the Lake district, Michigan, and with ample funds at their disposal for the development of the company's property here, the outlook for the success of the enterprse is very encouraging.

amount of lateral openings have been made. Some copper ground is revealed, but with the exception of the copper measure on the thirteenth level nothing more than stretches of badly shattered ground with occasional bunches or pockets of copper is disclosed. The outlook is anything but encouraging. Fathoms of untouched ground remain and further exploratory operations continue with unabated vigor. Six machine drills are in service and a small tonnage of copper bearing rock is obtained. The boiler capacity at the mine was recently increased and a new air compressor is on its foundation ready to go into commission on short notice. The company is just about meeting operating expenses with the earnings from the stamp mill, railroad and stone. The continued good showing made by the Isle Royale company on the southern extension of the Isle Royale lode is attracting attention to htis lode on the Atlantic property, and exploratory operations are quite likely in the near future, though nothing definite has yet been planned. A second lot of rock will shortly be put through the stamp mill.

Copper Range.

The Copper Range Consolidated company is actively engaged in diamond drill explorations on adjoining canal lands, held under option. Three drill outfits are in service. The Atlantic lode, the first of the known lodes traversing these lands, will be reached by the drills early in March, barring unexpected delays. The Globe shaft is now permanently abandoned.

The Champion.

In the Champion mine good ground is being opened south of shaft E, the southermost shaft opened upon the Baltic lode. Four drifts driving out of this shaft are well under the line of a proposed new shaft, which, when put down later, will pass through ground opened ready for stoping and of a copper content equal to the general average now mined in both Champion and Baltic mines to the north.

country offers much of promise. Pickands, Mather & Co.'s Hemlock mine is located there, and exploratory operations conducted by that and other concerns the past year or two apparently indicate that more properties will be brought to the producing stage. The search for ore in the Crystal Falls district, itself, will be prosecuted actively the coming summer. Work of the kind has been retarded for years because of the excessive royalties demanded by the fee owners of some well-located tracts, but notwithstanding that this attitude is still adhered to, it is the expectation that more diamond drills will be in operation this year than at any previous time in the history of the district. The developments of the past few years have shown that the largest bodies of ore are found at great depth, and because of this the explorers have changed their tactics and are boring deep into the formation, hopeful that small leads at the surface will develop into big things below. The Steel corporation has a drill at work at the South Mastodan property. No ore has yet been found, but as the entire quarter-section will be probed in systematic manner there is still a prospect of important discoveries.

A large portion of the lands in the Crystal Falls district is owned by lumbering and other corporations which ask royalties considered altogether too high by the mining interests, and for that reason many a promising tract is still to be exploited for possible mineral wealth. Some royalties demanded are as much as 75 cents a ton for non-Bessomer ore, which price is practically prohibitive, and which explains the backwardness of the development of portions of the district. The mining companies are willing to pay 25 cents to 35 cents in the case of properties within the proved formation, and not much more than 10 or 15 cents a ton in the case of tracts in virgin territory. Low royalties prevail in the Iron River and Stambaugh fields, which also are located at the western end of the Menominee, and largely on that account the exploitation of the country has been far advanced the past two or three years, no less than ten mining concerns now being interested there, in addition to a number of individual prospectors.

New Find at Iron River.

A recent important find in the Iron River district has been the discovery of ore at the McFarland property, northeast of the Mineral Mining company's new James mine. A local syndicate is exploring the tract. A churn drill has been operated for a number of months. The ledge was struck at a depth of 108 feet, and at latest advices fifty feet of 53 per cent ore had been passed through. There is every reason to believe the deposit of sufficient dimensions to warrant the development of the property.

Pickands, Mather & Co. of Cleveland have started exploratory work on a tract north, adjoining the Huron Mining company's Groveland mine, in the central portion of the Menominee range. The property has previously been prospected, both by test-pitting and diamond-drilling, but it is held worthy of continued effort. Some of the old test pits will be sunk deeper.

It is the intention of the Corrigan, McKinney & Co. of Cleveland to operate their Colby and Ironton mines, on the Gogebic range, practically to full capacity this year. Upwards of a thousand men will be employed at the two properties, it is stated. Important new ore bodies are being opened at great depth.

Railroad facilities are being provided at the Buffalo & Susquehanna company's Portland property at Michigamme, Marquette range, and stripping operations will be started the present month. Some 30,000 cubic yards of overburden will be removed, a contract for this work, as well as for the mining of 100,000 tons of ore, having been awarded recently.

before bringing the injunction suit, and in consideration of which they offered to deed their ands to the company. The deeds to the company were not only to include all the land, but all water rights improvements, etc. Judge Hunt seems to have held very justly that it would not be equity to grant the injunction under the circumstances and place the "smoke farmers" in a position to compel the company to buy them out at their own price. The court very justly held that the farmers have a remedy at law, and if they prove their damages the company is able to respond and pay any judgment obtained. Judge Hunt found from the evidence that some arsenic was still escaping from the big smelter chimney and he will, on Feb. 15, hear further testimony to ascertain if it is not possible to introduce additional means to prevent the escape of the poison, thus forstalling the action of President Roosevelt and his "experts," who have been instructed to investigate the same matter. The Amalgamated company is eager to assist the court in this investigation, for if any method can be found by which the cause of complaint can be removed or lessened, the company is anxious to adopt it.

Heinze's Trial.

The announcement by United States District Attorney Stimson of New York, that the case against F. Augustus Heinze, the former "young mining Napoleon" of Butte, who met his Waterloo in Wall street when he went to New York to teach the crowd there something about financiering, would not be taken up before March, after dates for his trial on charges of over-certification had been set several times, comes as a curious coincidence to reports that have long been current in Butte to the effect that Heinze would never be tried at all. Shortly after the failure of his New York bank and his indictment on the felony charges, his friends in Butte said the matter would never come to trial, as a well known United States official and Republican politician of national reputation had been retained by Heinze and that as the result of it the government would not prosecute Heinze. It was recently published in Eastern papers that Heinze's troubles had practically been adjusted and that he would soon be able to return to the West and start life over. It is also stated now that the government banking expert, on whose evidence was chiefly responsible for the conviction of Banker Morse, who got a sentence of fifteen years in prison, had left the government employ and was now engaged with a corporation that is not unfriendly to Heinze. Of course, all these matters are only matters of coincidence. It has all the time been maintained by Heinze and his counsel that he was only technically guilty, because of the neglect of a bank clerk to obey instructions and secure the certificates issued by Heinze by the deposit of Heinze securities, in tme.

North Butte Extension.

It seems that the newly-organized North Butte Extension Development company has more trouble. A. M. Andrews and R. J. Harner of New York, members of the re-organization committee and of the new board of directors, have resigned, and the firm of Dudley A. Tyng & Co., which assisted in the re-organization and new flotation, have drawn out of the affair. It is announced that new financial interests are coming in, but the Butte end of the company knows nothing about it and fears the worst again. It has been announced that the new company has paid $30,000 on the property, but the fact is that only $5,000 has been paid, and among the Butte stockholders there is much dissatisfaction and uneasiness again. Somehow or other, the new interests in the company don't seem to be making good.

British-Butte.

The British-Butte Mining company, which has not been able to get approval of its applications for patents on its group of placer claims west of Butte, has won a partial victory before the land office of the interior department, and the special agents who heard the contests have recommended that patents be issued on two of the claims—the Jessie and Tillie—and that the applications for four other claims—the Missouri, Raymond, Helen and Rosalba—be cancelled because not sufficient work was done on them and not sufficient money expended for improvements. The company claims, however, that sufficient work has since been done and that all that will be necessary will be to readvertise and make new applications. The government contested the applications, charging that they were not made in good faith, but for the purpose of acquiring a large acreage of land, and that the applications were made in pursuance to a fraudulent scheme of the company to obtain a large tract of land. It was generally understood in Butte that the ground was located as quartz lode ground, and the development into a placer proposition was rather accidental, and brought about by curious circumstances. When the government contested the applications for patent, the company's representatives charged the register and receiver of the land office with bias and prejudice, and the interior department at Washington sent two special agents to Butte to hear the case. The big gold dredging machine of the company was started up Saturday, Jan. 30, and Col. M. H. De Hora of London, president and manager of the company, with his usual spectacular methods, had the governor of the state press the button that started the dredge, and had a brass band to furnish music. He also ran a special train from Butte to the ground to convey a number of invited guests. Col. De Hora is confident that the company will "make good," and that the dredge will work satisfactorily and save the fine gold in the gravel, but other mining men who have been watching proceedings are awaiting results before venturing to express opinions. The first month of operations ought to tell the story. The company has 5,000,000 shares of stock, and it will require very substantial earnings to reach the shareholders. The company also has an indebtedness of about $120,000.

The Corbin District.

The Corbin mining district has become the center of mining stock company organizations and a new one makes its appearance almost weekly. Many of them are organized on options, or leases and bonds, on which meagre asset a heavy capitalization is based and stock is offered the public. A number of similar schemes were floated in the Butte district during the height of the copper boom several years ago and thousands of honest and innocent investors were defrauded because the option companies never "made good" did not acquire title to property, and when they could sell no more stock went out of business and forfeited their bonds. To prevent "mining operations" of that kind in future a bill is pending before the Montana legislature making it a felony for any one to sell stock of a company in the state when the company does not own property, unless it is particularly announced as a leasing company. The Butte district a number of companies, fathered not only by Montana men, but put on the market and the p ublic led to believe that they owned the property on which they were organized, only to learn differently later.

Calumet-Corbin.

The Calumet-Corbin Mining company has been organized in Michigan to operate and develop the old Minnesota mine near Wickes, in the Corbin district, and its stock has already been offered on the Boston curb. The company is capitalized for $1,500,000 in shares at $10 par, but only $2,000 have been paid on the property. Another payment will be due next fall, and the company and its promoters will not be out much if, in the meanwhile, the property does not meet expectations or hopes. All the new companies make representations of the similarities of the Corbin veins with those of the Butte district, but there really is not much similarity. There are properties in the Corbin district that do not need to depend on any claim of relationship to the Butte mines, for they are being developed into good mines, the property of the Boston & Corbin company, being an instance. It is claimed that the promoters of the Minnesota deal stand to make $70,000 profit if the company succeeds in interesting the public sufficiently to take its stock and provide the money with which to pay the option.

WHEN THEY CEASED TO BE PRESIDENT

favor of the annexation of Texas, he encouraged Houston to go to Texas; and in 1844, a year before his death, his preference aided Polk in obtaining the nomination.

At the very last Jackson joined the church, as he had promised his wife, whose picture he always carried in a locket and whose Bible he read every day. In striking contrast with the Jackson of Old Hickory fame he trembled and wept as he answered the minister's questions, declaring that he had put his whole trust in God.

Two Ex-Presidents Who Stayed in the Political Saddle.

John Quincy Adams and Andrew Johnson continued in the political saddle, even though they stepped down from the presidency to subordinate offices. For this reason the twenty-nine years of the younger Adams constituted the most active period of his life. He immediately sought re-election, but was defeated by Andrew Jackson in the election of 1828. Adams then went back to his home in Braintree, Mass., where it is said he announced to his friends that he had abandoned politics for literature. From youth fond of poetry, he again devoted himself to writing verse and editing the works of his father.

Yet the charm of books could not prevail against the opportunity for office; and when his neighbors came to him in 1830 and asked him to run for congress he accepted the nomination. Because of his resistence to secret societies and his independence from party politics, he held the support of his district, and was returned again and again to the lower house up to the time of his death. It may be truthfully said of him that he died in the harness.

Already warned by a paralytic shock in 1846, when he was out walking, he insisted on returning to his seat in congress as soon as he was again able to go about. His re-entrance into the house was made most impressive by the ovation given him by both his political friends and foes. With one accord every member present rose to his feet and cheered for the man who would not let illness down him.

On Monday, Feb. 21, 1848, he had just written a few verses for some one who wanted his autograph, when he was seen to fall over the arm of his chair. Immediately the proceedings of the house broke up. The speaker, who was about to comment on a resolution at thanks to a list of generals for their service in the Mexican war, was cut short by the cry, "Adams is dead!" The former president was found to be unconscious, and was carried to an adjoining room, where he died two days later. On the day that he still lingered on the verge of the grave the house assembled, and then, learning that Adams was still alive, his fellow members with one accord and with hardly a whisper, adjourned.

Although active in politics during the last years of his life, Adams found time to write several books and keep up a voluminous journal. His biggest achievement in verse was "Dermot MacMorrogh." He left it to his son, Charles Francis Adams of Boston, to complete and edit the "Life and Works of John Adams." Through his long congressional life, John Quincy Adams persistently fought what he termed "the encroachments of the slave power."

Johnson, the third accidental president, lived six years after quitting the White House. Failing to obtain a nomination by the Democrats for re-election, he went back to Tennessee and sought to obtain the United States senatirship from that state, but was defeated. Then he sought a seat in the house, but failed again.

After the vicissitudes which he underwent as president, Johnson was not to be daunted by these rebuffs. He kept up the fight, and in January, 1875, he was elected to the United States senate. Only three months after he took his seat, at the extra session called that year by President Grant, he died at the home of his daughter near Carter's Station, Tenn.

Like Fillmore, John Adams quit public life as soon as he lost his political grip. A candidate for re-election in 1800 on the Federal ticket, he was defeated because of a split in party resulting from his unpopular foreign policy. Failing of the cordial support of Gen. Hamilton, the favorite leader of the Federal party, he received eight electoral votes less than Thomas Jefferson. He thereupon became practically a recluse, retiring to Braintree, Mass., his birthplace, where he devoted much of his attention to the cultivation of his large estate. Personally, however, he took a deep interest in national affairs, and spoke of his most vehement political enemies without bitterness.

By an extraordinary freak of fate he died on July 4, 1826, the same day as Jefferson, which was also the fiftieth anniversary of the day when both signed the Declaration of Independence. He had been invited to a public dinner that day, and had dictated a message. On realizing that he was dying, he said, "Jefferson survives me." But Jefferson had died four hours earlier.

Another president who died on July 4, and who left the White House and politics at the same time, was James Monroe. He had served two terms, which, because of the prosperity of the country and his good diplomacy, was spoken of by contemporary historians as "the era of good feeling." Apparently content with the peaceful fruits of his administration, Monroe, at the age of 67, retired from Washington to his hold, Oakhill, in Loudoun county, Va. On a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Samuel L. Gouverneur of New York(in 1831, he died at her home. Amid the ever increasing swarms of immigrants who are settling in that part o fthe city, this historic building has lon gstood a mecca for patriotic tourists.

The Civil Conflict Engrossed Two Ex-Presidents.

Only for a time did John Tyler quit the political arena after becoming an ex-president. Having withdrawn from the candidacy for re-election after forcing the Democratic convention to nominate James K. Polk, an advocate of his favorite measure, the annexation of Texas, Tyler returned to Virginia and lived in retirement until the first rumblings of the Civil war. Fearing the disruption of the Union, he was instrumental in calling a peace convention in January, 1861. Over this he presided in the effort to avert war. When the strugle became inevitable, the former advocate of peace voted for secession in the Virginia state convention. He was elected to the provisional congress of the Confederate states, and in November, 1861, to the Confederate house of representatives. He died two months afterward.

On a work defending his policy as president, James Buchanan labored for many years after leaving Washington with the roar of war already resounding upon the outskirts of the Union, where the Confederates had captured Federal troops and arms. Before he had turned over the reins of state to Lincoln, and while he was still blaming the North for disrupting the South, seven states had broken away.

To Wheatland, Pa., his native state, Buchanan retired. While armies swept through bordering states, and finally the conflict was carried into Pennsylvania, where the fearful climax was enacted at Gettysburg, Buchanan fought with his critics. Firmly did he maintain that he was powerless to prevent secession. Not only did he devote his time to "Mr. Buchanan's Administration," which appeared in 1866 and explained in detail the tremendous obstacles with which he said he had to cope in order to prevent war as long as he did, but he carried on an extensive correspondence with both his supporters and adversaries. Among those who attacked him most bitterly were Gen. Scott and William H. Seward.

Believing that his would be of more service to his country as a private citizen, Rutherford B. Hayes kept out of politics during the last twelve years of his life, although taking an active part in public affairs. Among the public movements in which he took a deep interest was the National Prison Reform association, of which he was the president. At a meeting of this organization in Atlanta, Ga., in 1886, Hayes was greeted by the governor of that state as the man to whom the country owed more than to any other for the "re-establishment of peace and harmony between the North and the South."

Like most other ex-presidents, who quitted office for private life, Hayes loved the country and lived amid rural scenes. His home was in Fremont, a little town in Northwestern Ohio. His house was a mile from the village center, surrounded by broad acres over which he delighted to walk and ride. Not a little of his time he devoted to horses, chickens, ducks and geese. "Old Whitey," the horse that carried him through the Civil war, was his favorite. He regarded the trees on his grounds with an almost paternal fondness, knowing the individual history of each one—when it was planted and whether its growth has been favored or thwarted by the elements.

The scope of his interests is shown by the many honors and positions of trust of which he was made the recipient. Harvard, Yale, Johns Hopkins and Kenyon college granted him the degree of LL. D. Of the Loyal Legion he was senior vice commander, as well as the commander of the Ohio commandery of the same order. He was also first president of the Society of the Army of West Virginia; trustee of the J. F. Slater educational fund; trustee of the Peabody educational fund; a member of the national conference of Corrections and Charities; trustee of the Western Reserve university at Cleveland; trustee of the Wesleyan university at Delaware, Ohio; trustee of Mount Union college at Alliance, Ohio, and of many other charitable and educational institutions. He died in Fremont, Jan. 17, 1893.

Chester A. Arthur, Benjamin Harrison and Grover Cleveland resumed the practice of law after being relieved from the cares of the chief executive. Arthur was prevented from actively practising his profession by illness. He hardly had opened up offices in New York upon his return from Washington in the spring of 1885, when his health gave way. Of a sensitive nature, he did not want the public to know of his illness, and although he gave up regular attendance at his office, he occasionally attended public meetings. During his last days, despite his efforts to appear well, he spent most of his time in his library. Yet so little did the public know of his nearness to the grave that his death on Nov. 18, 1886, came as a surprise.

Harrison went back to a lawyer's office in Indianapolis, where he first practiced his profession. He accepted his defeat for re-election in 1892 as final, and thereupon retired permanently from party politics. His only re-entrance into national affairs was when he became a member of the board of arbitration for Venezuela which settled the historic boundary dispute between Great Britain and the South American republic.

Unlike Franklin Pierce, Harrison became less reserved after his presidential term. He used to spend his vacations out of doors, and was most devoted to his grandchildren, the McKees. He became a familiar figure at Cape May, where the beach crowds often saw him romping in the surf with the McKee children.

It has been said that Cleveland, on his defeat in 1888, immediately determined upon running for president a third time. Although he re-entered the practice of law in New York city in 1889 as a member of Bangs, Stetson, Tracy & McVeagh, he still had time to prepare lenghty and studied addresses in various parts of the country. Little by little the probability of his renomination became more evident, until the momentum of his candidacy became so powerful that at the national Democratic convention in Chicago in 1892 he received more than two-thirds of the first ballot.

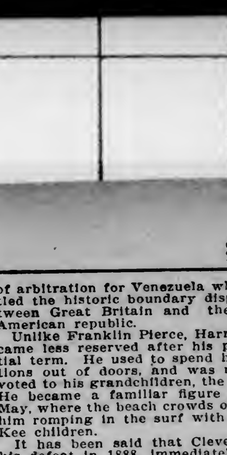

Upon his second retirement from the White House Cleveland sought a quiet life amid the classic shades of Princeton, N. J., making his home in a spacious Colonial mansion surrounded with broad lawns. Although still interested in various financial enterprises, as for example, the Equitable Life, of which he was president of the board of trustees, and consequently took occasional business trips to New York, he devoted most of his time to "family and fish," as Joseph Jefferson once jokingly put it. The Rip Van Winkle actor was a frequent companion of the ex-president on fishing and duck-shooting trips.

Cleveland took a neighborly interest in Princeton university, with which he was officially connected. He also strongly advocated the educational work of Tuskogee as one of the chief solutions of the negro problem.

Of the twenty-six presidents of the United States five died in office. Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley were struck down by assassins. William Henry Harrison died only thirty-one days after his inauguration. Zachary Taylor's death occurred sixteen months after he became president, James K. Polk died three months after he retired from Washington to Nashville, Tenn.

Stomach Cases and Torpid Livers

Give Way Before the Peculiar Purifying Power of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

A Trial Package Sent Fre.

The foul gases of the stomach and the torpid action of the liver are easy victims for charcoal to overcome.

This great natural cleaner and absorbent will most certainly be relished by a system afflicted with gaseous or sluggish tendencies.

Charcoal has long been known as a great absorbent of gas. A panful of charcoal will positively purify a room filled with foul odors and decay. Its absorbing ratio is one hundred times greater than its own volume.

The ancients gave charcoal for many human ills sucessfully. The North American Indians used it for snake bite, poison from eating wild herbs and cured what they called "stomach bad medicine" with it.

Willow charcoal seems to be the best product for human use, and no doubt the peculiar curative property of the willow is represented in a chemical quality in its charcoal.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are pure willow and sweet honey blended by tremendous power and compression into a very palatable lozenge. Two or three lozenges eaten after meals will prevent the process of digestion from producing noxious gases. They will vivify a lazy liver and aid every organ which is most likely to be overcome through its contact with impurities.

They cleanse the stomach and intestines, bring purity and sweetness out of fermentation and decay and aid digestion by allaying gas. They will aid you and your stomach. The beneficial effects are made evident after each meal when you use charcoal as Stuart prepares it. To allay gas at night they are excellent and one arises in the morning without that terrible nauseating bad breath which destroys appetite and renders one miserable.

All druggists sell Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, price twenty-five cents, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

THEY CLASH OVER OFFICE

Courts to Settle Who Is Sheriff of Koochiching County.

McIntosh Refuses to Surrender Job to Man Recently Appointed.

International Falls, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—The courts will have to decide who is sheriff of Koochiching county, owing to the peculiar mixup that has developed. Patrick Walsh was sheriff last year and secured the nomination and election at the polls for another term, but died the day after election. Hugh McIntosh, a county commissioner of Northome resigned his place on the board and was appointed sheriff "till his sucessor should be elected and qualify." When the new board of county commissioners met in January they strove to get together to appoint a new sheriff in place of McIntosh. They could not agree at their first meeting, so the retiring board of commissioners held a special meeting and reappointed McIntosh. The new board ignored this action, and finally, last week agreed to appoint Henry Forrer of Little Fork, as sheriff. Now Sheriff McIntosh refuses to vacate the office, he holding that by virtue of his appointment by the old board he is entitled to officiate until his successor is elected.

Forrer returned Tuesday from St. Paul, where he employed counsel to oust McIntosh from office.

The business men have been unaware of this and as a result have lost several hundred dollars. Their present system is so arranged that as soon as a customer becomes delinquent in his payments all of the association members are notified and he will be unable to get credit until his previous debt is settled.

The following were elected officers of the association: President, J. E. Tapley; vice president, C. M. Taylor; treasurer, George Blitch; secretary, R. H. McDonald.

Little Falls, Minn., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—While cutting down a large tree and at work with his son, Joseph Kutchinski, 73 years of age, of Rike Creek, about six miles from here, was killed Wednesday. Mr. Kutchinski and his son had been working clearing off some land, and during Wednesday morning started to cut an elm tree of large dimensions. When the tree was ready to fall, young Kutchinski warned his father to go beyond the reach of the falling tree. As he was making for a place of safety, the tree swung heavily to the ground, crushing the body. It was at first thought that the injuries were not of a serious nature, but later in the day it was deemed advisable to summon a doctor. A call for a physician reached the city at about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, but before the doctor had left the city limits a second team was met, bearing the news that the aged man had died from the injuries sustained.

TAR-AND-FEATHER AFFAIR IS PUBLIC

Tangles Growing Out of Wisconsin Outrage Are Being Unraveled.

Kendall, Wis., Feb. 6.—The tangles growing out of the tar-and-feather outrage on William Tatro at the home of Isaac Thompson in the town of Clifton, where he was employed, are being slowly unraveled.

Ann and Stanford Thompson, to whom the old people deeded the farm, sold it to ex-Sheriff Millard of Sparta. George Thompson, the son who was given no part of the property, procured an injunction from Court Commissioner Button of Sparta restraining the parties to the sale of the farm. While Attorneys Higbee of La Crosse and Richards of Sparta, for the defendants, and Graves of Sparta, for George Thompson, were arguing this before Judge Luenk at La Crosse, the interested parties got together and reached a settlement without the aid of court or attorneys.

Now the Isaac Thompson household will mave to Sparta, and ex-Sheriff Millard will move from Sparta to the Thompson place. This leaves pending the civil action of Tatro against his Clifton assailants for $10,000 damages, the action of Ann Thompson against her uncle, Frank Thompson of Kendall, and the action of Tatro against C. D. Richardson, former village president of Kendall. Unless settled in the meantime, these matters will be heard at the March term of circuit court in this county.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—There will be an unusual number of applications considered at this term of the circuit court.. There will be 104 petitions presented, of which ninety are new ones.

The disposal of these petitions is expected to occupy two full days, and next Monday and Feb. 15 have been set aside for this purpose. Commissioner Becker is now preparing the papers, and one of the United States attorneys of this district probably will conduct the examination before Judge Streeter.

A number of cases of illegal citizenship have been disposed of by the naturalization commissioner since he last was in Houghton. In one of these cases, Judge Stone of Marquette cancelled the certificate of a present Houghton county resident who was shown to have obtained his second papers through fraud.

The naturalization commissioner is the busiest man in ten counties. There are a large number of cases of alleged fraud and other irregularities, which he should investigate, but at present the new business is more than he can care for. The state of affairs probably will continue until the department is granted more men.

ALLEGE MOTIVE FOR THE CRIME

Evidence Mrs. Wright Held Insurance Policies on Girl's Life.

Devils Lake, N. D., Feb. 6.—(Special to The Herald.)—In the trial in the district court here of Mary Wright, charged with the murder of her stepdaughter, Beulah, or "Babe" Cox, near Edmore, in this county, last August, the state has placed before the jury a strong motive for the crime for wrich the defendant is accused in the testimony of Coroner Gilbertson. That official testified that before the stepmother of the girl had been charged with the murder she told him about the insurance policies which are in evidence, one being for $250, one for $750, one for $75, and one for $25, on the life of Beulah Cox, or Wright, in favor of Mrs. Wright.

Mr. Wonderlitch, at whose house the girl spent the evening before her death, testified that the girl sang, danced, and was in the best of spirits.

Others also testified that the girl seemed always happy, and they knew no reason why she could commit suicide.

Dr. Silver's testimony was most important. He assisted Drs. Cox, McIntosh and Flynn, at a post-mortem three days after the girl's death. He testified, in effect, that the girl's death was caused by strangulation, or suffocation. He further stated that, in his opinion, the marks on the girl's face were caused by carbolic acid applied with a rag, rather than poured on.

Dr. Silver further testified that the scratches on the face of the girl were made by finger nails.

Henry King, one of the owners of the farm on which the girl and Mrs. Wright worked, testified that he saw "Babe" Wright on the morning of the day of her death. King swore he took particular notice of the girl while she was in bed that morning, because Mrs. Wright told him that Beulah was not well. He saw her several times on the morning of her death, because he had to go into the room in which she was sleeping to get his coat, and again for his hat.

The state has concluded its side and the defense is introducing evidence today to combat the state. Mrs. Wright will probably take the stand today and the case will probably be concluded and submitted early next week.

HEPBURN RECOUNT IS ENDED; HE SUBMITS.

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 6.—The Hepburn-Jamison contest was called off at Centerville yesterday afternoon. The recount has been abandoned in Appanoose county. This action followed the loss of twenty-four ballots for Congressman Hepburn at the end of the re-count of eight precincts. BILL PROVIDES FOR HOSPITAL

Anti-Tuberculosis Movement Carried Before State Legislature.

A bill, allowing the construction of a tuberculosis hospital in any county in the state, will probably be introduced into the present session of the legislature. Dr. E. L. Tuohy left yesterday for St. Paul with the bill, which was drafted by Attorney William J. Stevenson.

The measure was really fostered by the state board of health, but it comes from this district because of the impetus given the anti-tuberculosis movement here, and the enthusiasm with which the workers are carrying the movement forward.

The bill provides for the construction and maintenance of a tuberculosis sanitarium in any county, or allows two or more counties to unite in building and maintaining such an institution. The sanitarium is to be under the management of a board of trustees and a superintendent, who shall be secretary of the board. It provides that the members of the board shall serve without compensation.

The board may levy taxes each year for the maintenance of the sanitarium and any resident of the county may apply for treatment. The bill provides that charges may be made in case the patient is able to pay. Otherwise, the treatment will be free.

HOW FRENCH WOMEN DEVELOP THE BUST

Mme. Dorothy De La Revere, French Expert on Feminine Beauty, Tells American Women How to Perfectly Develop the Bust.

"The number of undeveloped women in America is astonishing," says Mme. Dorothy De La Revere.

"I am here in America to teach your beautiful faced women that the face does not attract so much as the form, and I am ready to tell any woman who will write me, how the French society women and leading actresses develop their breasts and fill out the hollows of the neck; by what is admitted by authorities to be the only scientific, certain method known.

"It is the refreshing firmness" and delightful fulness of the feminine form that captivates, and it is woman who is most fully deeveloped who monopolizes the endearments of the opposite sex.

"If your bust lacks development or firmness, I will tell you how to beautify it. I will not charge anything for this advice—it is free. I am only too glad to tell the secret, so that you cannot fail to succeed within a few weeks' time, for I am sure it will make you healthier, happier and more sought after. All that I ask is that you send me 4 cents to pay postage and I will reply at once personally."

We suggest to our lady readers that they write to this French expert on this matter which we here in America know very little about. Any lady can write to her and should enclose four cents in postage. Address her, Madame Dorothy De Le Revere, Suite 1549 Byron street, Chicago, Ill.

WHEAT HAS FIRM TONE

Demand is Good During the Short Session in America.

May Flax is Steady at the Close in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 6.—Wheat was in good demand during the short session in the American markets today and the closing prices were higher than yesterday's. Lighter world's shipments are predicted for the week and the foreign market had a strong tone, which contributed to the firmness on this side of the Atlantic.

Liverpool closed ½d to ⅝d higher, Berlin ½c higher, Antwerp unchanged and Budapest ½c lower.

The May option closed ½c higher in Duluth, ⅝@¾c higher in Chicago, ½@⅝c higher in Minneapolis, ½c higher in New York, ⅝@½c higher in St. Louis, ⅝c higher in Kansas City and 1c higher in Winnipeg. The July option closed ½c higher in Duluth and ½c higher in Chicago and Minneapolis, ¼c higher in New York, ⅜@½c higher in Kansas City and ⅝c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ¼c lower in Chicago, and ⅛d higher in Liverpool. May oats closed ¼c lower in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat—The effect of the disappointing cables in America yesterday was offset by the fact of light American shipments as given by Bradstreet's, and the market here was steady at the opening and ¼d higher. During the morning, prices further gained ⅛d to ½d with an active trade. Shorts were nervous and covered freely owing to the decreasing stocks, good continental demand for white cargoes, firmness of spot, strength in country markets and prediction of lighter world's shipments than expected earlier. At the close the market was firm and ½d to ⅝d higher than yesterday, the advance in a way being checked by the cehaper La Plata shipments.

"Corn was steady at the start and unchanged. Later there was an advance of ½d in sympathy with the firmness in wheat and firmer American offerings."

Car receipts at Duluth were 40, against 71 last year, and at Minneapolis, 304, against 191 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 344, against 262 last year. Chicago received 12, against 13 last year. Winnipeg received 116, against 116 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 546,000 bu, last year, 437,000 bu. Shipments, 191,000 bu, last year, 437,000 bu. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 150,000 bu.

Wheat was quiet in the Duluth market during the day. May wheat opened ⅛c higher at $1.08⅞, declined to $1.08⅜, rallied to $1.09¼@⅞ and closed at $1.09¼, a gain of ½c over yesterday. July wheat was inactive, and closed at $1.09¾, a gain of ½c over yesterday.

Durum wheat closed ¼c higher and cash spring wheat was selling at the May price for No. 1 northern.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Firm Owing to Support by Leading Bulls.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—The wheat market was firm during early trading today, owing to support by leading bulls, which offset the effect of a material increase in receipts in the Northwest. The demand was based, to a large extent, on an advance of ½d to ⅝d at Liverpool. Prices at the start were unchanged to ⅜c higher, May opening at $1.09⅜ to $1.10. After selling at $1.09½ May again rallied to around $1.10.

The market became quite strong during the final hour on buying brought out by a report from Minneapolis to the effect that farmers' reserves in the Northwest are only 12½c per cent above local requirements. May advanced to $1.10⅝. The close was strong at almost the top with May up at ⅝@¾c at $1.10¼@⅜.

Sentiment in the corn pit was bearish, owing to reports of increased offerings of corn from Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. Cash houses led in the selling movement. May opened unchanged to a shade higher at 63¾@63⅝c to 63¾c and sold off to 63⅝c.

The market continued easy the entire day, the low point for May being 63½c. The close was steady with May ¼c lower at 63⅞@⅝c.

Oats were quiet and easy, the heaviness of corn having some effect. May opened ¼c lower at 51⅞c, sold at 51⅞@52c and then reacted to 51¾c.

Provisions were rather weak, owing to selling of lard and ribs by local packers. Prices at the opening were a shade to 5c lower.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 6.—Barrett & Zimmerman report: The market is slow in recovering from the dullness following the recent storm, and the attendance of buyers continues light. Big draft horses more at recent standstill prices. In fact, all classes show no improvement in value over the lower quotations of the past ten days. A number of contractors have paid visits to the market recently and all were expecting to have all the work they could handle the coming summer. Several loads of good rugged mules are billed to arrive on the market Monday. The market is over supplied with good farm mares and horses, which move $5.00@10.00 lower.

TREND WAS DOWNWARD

Stocks Moved Narrowly at Opening and Started to Decline.

Depression Continued to Close, Which Was Heavy and Dull.

New York, Feb. 6.—First transactions in stocks today showed prices but little changed from last night. Dealings were in light volume. Erie first preferred rose a point. A large number of stocks sold at unchanged prices from last night and beyond that small fractional gains and lossses were mixed.

Prices moved narrowly and with some slight irregularity until near 11 o'clock, when the general trend became downward, St. Louis Southwestern improved 1 and the preferred 1¼, but the other Gould stocks were depressed. Sloss-Sheffield Steel gained 2¼.

The market closed heavy and dull. The downward shift established losses in Lackawanna of 10, Delaware & Hudson 2, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Wheeling & Lake Erie, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred, General Electric and Mackay companies 1½, Denver & Rio Grande 1¼, and Southern Pacific, Texas & Pacific, Wisconsin Central, Rock Island preferred and American Ice 1.

UNPLATTED ACREAGE SELLS AT $1,000 AN ACRE

S. H. Jones Purchases Four-Fifths Interest in Property Near Glen Avon for $16,000—Some Handsome Residences Planned for This Year.

An interest in one of the most valuable unplatted forties in the city changed hands this week, in the sale by Joseph Sellwood to Stephen H. Jones, of an undivided four-fifths interest in the south one-half of the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 14, town 50 north, range 14 west. The tract involved consists of twenty acres and the price of $16,000 paid, places a valuation of $1,000 an acre on it.

The tract is right in the settled district on the Woodland car line. The three other forties of the quarter section have already been platted into Willard's addition, the Clover Hill division, and the Motor Line division. The northeast forty lies directly between Glen Avon addition and Willard's addition, and the Woodland car line runs through it. It is thought to be only a matter of a very short time when the entire forty will be platted, giving another division on the Woodland line, which is fast being built up.

Real estate men continue to complain of the delay of the boom, while watching with glowing eyes the small signs of awakening, which have come to their notice during the past few weeks. The sales of Superior street property have been at good, stiff prices. New buildings are in course of planning, wholesale houses are talking of new buildings, and Eastern owners are keeping their fingers on the pulse of Duluth with more persistence than they ever have before.

Out in the East end, where the real home-building boom will hold sway during the coming season, the houses which were begun last fall are fast being put in shape for occupancy. Builders are seeing more signs of the awakening than real estate men. They are busy figuring on contracts for individual homes and flat buildings, and every week sees several new contracts let to give idle carpenters, masons and painters work for the season.

During the next week the contract will be let for one of the finest houses to be erected in the East end during the coming summer. It will be for Henry Meyers and will be located on the corner of First street and Twenty-fifth avenue east. It will be built entirely of local stone on the exterior and the interior partition work, etc., will be of concrete. Bray & Nystrom are taking the bids, and the cost will be approximately $50,000.

Bray & Nystrom let the contract this week for the new home for M. J. Gochey on the corner of Sixth street and Twenty-sixth avenue east. Berglund & Olson were the successful bidders and the amount of the contract is about $9,000. The house will be of stone, frame and stucco. D. R. Black & Co. were awarded the contract for the plumbing and heating work.

Z. T. Mullen og Washington, D. C., a heavy owner of Duluth real estate, has great faith in the city. He has been adding to his holdings constantly in recent years, and has been paying good prices for property that he realizes will increase greatly in value during the next few years.

His latest move is indicative of his faith in the city. Out on Second street, between First and Second avenues east, a frame building which has stood there for a good many years is being moved back on the lot to allow the construction for Mr. Mullen of a two-story frame flat building.

To the ordinary man the construction of a frame flat building in Duluth at this time is something to be looked at askance. It would be, were not Mr. Mullen's motives to be considered. He believes Second street property is too valuable in all its length from courthouse to courthouse, to be given over to anything but permanent business blocks, and the time is not far distant, he believes, when Second street will be one of the busiest streets in the city.

The frame flat building is to be erected with an eye looking far into the future. When Second street "arrives," Mr. Mullen's property will not be occupied by a permanent flat building, when it would be more valuable for business purposes. The building to be erected now may easily be moved at any time. Mr. Mullen has plenty of less central property on which to move it.

Though the new building will be temporary in respect to its original location, it will be permanent, substantial and modern in itself. It will be two stories in height and will consist of four flats. Everything will be modern, comfortable, and up-to-date, and the building will be an acceptable acquisition in a central district, which is now none too well supplied with apartment houses.

One by one the pieces of property on Superior street in the down-town district, which are not firmly held and not permanently improved, are coming into hands which are stronger and which are more likely to result in improvement. The valuations on Superior street property are going up steadily, and the number of deals successfully pulled through during the past few weeks is something of a surprise to real estate men.

Negotiations are now on for a sale on First avenue west between Superior street and First street, which is important. Several other deals in the business district are known to be in the air, and the next few weeks will see more activity than for some time past.

• • •

The week was a slow one in the building inspector's office no large permits being taken out. Following are the permits, involving $1,000 expenditure or more:

Wincent Milejczak, frame dwelling on the north side of Wicklow street between Grand Forks and Winnipeg avenues, $2,000.

Christ Nelson, repairs to frame store on the east side of Central avenue, between Roosevelt stret and Nicollet street, $1,000.

R. J. Smith, frame dwelling on the east side of Fifty-ninth avenue west, between Main and Nicollet streets, $1,500.

H. C. Fulton, additional story on brick building on the south side of First street, between Lake avenue and First avenue west, $2,000.

A. L. Ordean, construction of brick garage, on the north side of Superior street, $2,500.

Andrew Nord, frame dwelling on the south side of Grand avenue, between Thirty-ninth and Fortieth avenues west, $1,000.

George Barrett, frame dwelling on the north side of Fifth street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues west, $1,000.

J. M. Giddings & Co. have taken a twenty-year lease of the building they now occupy. It will be remodeled and the entire building used by the firm.

The Merchant's hotel, 310-316 East Superior street, formerly conducted by P. J. Whalen, has been purchased by Wick-Carlson company. The deal was negotiated by George Harris, through the office of the Harris Realty company.

PART BRICK AND PART STUCCO HOME COSTING $6,000 TO BUILD IN DULUTH

ANTHONY PUCK ARCH'T.

FIRST FLOOR

SECOND FLOOR.

Here is an interesting design for a home of part brick and part stucco construction, with rubble tone foundation, and stained shingles and exterior wood finish. Much of the exterior beauty of the design depends on the choice of colors in the selection of materials. There is a true domestic character to the design which is pleasing in any home.

In the plans are seen an unusual and most attractive arrangement. The rooms are all large and of good proportions. The feature of the living room is the wide fireplace and the deep tiled hearth. The diningroom is a most pleasant room and is directly connected by a serving pantry to the kitchen. The kitchen is well equipped with pantries and closets and necessary space for fixtures. A large kitchen entry has space for a refrigerator and shelves next to the basement stairway, and is convenient of access from the front part of the house. The arrangement of the stairway is good and would make an attractive appearance in the hall. Inconspicuous is the kitchen connection to the stairway.

The second story plan is most compactly laid out. It has three light, corner bedrooms, ample closet space, bathroom and a sun room. The sun room is open to the stairway hall The stairway leads to the attic, which could be finished off into two or three spare rooms.

A home according to the above design and as above described, with a good grade of finish, heating and plumbing, could be built in Duluth or vicinity for $6,000.

ANTHONY PUCK, Architect.
Duluth, Minn.

WHO WILL PAY FOR IT?

Lake Shore Park Scheme All Right, But Too Expensive.

City's Debt Too Large to Buy Business Property for Parks.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Some months ago a landscape gardner, employed by C. A. Congdon of this city, called my attention to the possibility of making a beautiful park on the lake front of Minnesota Point, between the canal and the railroads on the north.

There is no doubt but this can be done, but a very pertinent question is: Who is going to pay for it? It is very easy to spend money (especially somebody else's), in beautifying the city, but I would like to call the attention of Duluthians to a few facts.

It is fast approaching the time when we will again have a howl about high rents. Moving day is looming up. Those who pay rent must remember that they have to bear their share of the city's burden, whether it is for police service, fire service, school service, or for parks, and if possible the owners of property will add it to the expense account. I would advise those who are not posted on the city's bonded indebtedness to get busy and learn what they owe.

I would consider that Duluth today is in the same position in regard to securing this property and making a park out of it as a man is who owns a modest home with a $5,000 mortgage on it; and who invests $5,000 in an automobile, instead of paying off the mortgage.

A great many of the people of today have forgotten that we sometimes have hard times when 95 per cent of men go broke. We have just passed through a period of great prosperity in this country and I predict that before very many years roll by, long before the city could have a park scheme of that kind paid for, we will see a period of great depression, during which people will manage to get along without a great many luxuries, which today they consider necessities. One reason Duluth suffered so in our depression of 1892 to 1898 was because of our overwhelming debt, and the city today is carrying a burden which it will be wise to lighten instead of increasing, for parks.

The city, at a gerat expense, has just completed an aerial bridge for the purpose of allowing thousands to get to a good "breathing spot," Minnesota Point. I would suggest that this is a good enough "breathing spot" for the people of Duluth for the present, without the city's encumbering a heavy debt for a "breathing spot" to be within 200 or 400 feet from Superior street.

By the way, it looks as though this bridge may be a white elephant and that in the distant future it will be necessary to have a tunnel at that point. I think it would be far wiser for the city t osave its pennies for a tunnel proposition than for park purposes.

We have had some dreamers suggest a boulevard on Park Point. The same question comes up again—who is going to pay for it? There is one thing to be remembered in regard to "breathing spots," in Duluth, as we have about nine months of winter, or cold weather, I would advise going slow on taking business property for parks. There is not a city in the world today where the business property is so limited and always will be limited, as in the city of Duluth. I speak from experience of having visited city after city, not only here but in Europe, and I claim it will be utter foolishness to take this section of the city for park purposes. There is plenty of room in outlying districts for parks without such a sacrifice as this would be.

Duluth, Feb. 6, 1909. T. W. WAHL.
